In Plowden 37, and 167, and 467, ſeveral caſes are cited as authorities under theſe rules of conſtruction; as, that the biſhop of Norwich in one act ſhall mean all biſhops; that the warden of the Fleet ſhall mean all goalers; that juſtices of a diviſion mean all juſtices of the county at large, that guardian in ſocage after the heir's attaining fourteen, ſhall be a bailiff in account; that executors ſhall include adminiſtrators, and tenant for years a tenant for one year or any leſs time; with ſeveral other inſtances to the like purpoſe.

In the firſt place, though the general rule be true enough, that where it is clear the perſon or thing expreſſed is put by way of example, the judges muſt fill up the catalogue; yet we ought to be ſure, from the words and meaning of the act itſelf, that the thing or perſon is really inſerted as an example.

This is a very inaccurate way of penning a law; and the inſtances of this ſort are ſcarce ever to be found, except in ſome of the old acts of parliament. And wherever this rule is to take place, the act muſt be general, and the thing expreſſed muſt be particular; ſuch as thoſe caſes of the warden of the Fleet and the biſhop of Norwich: whereas the act before us is equally general in all its parts, and requires no addition or ſupply to give it the full effect. Therefore if this way of arguing can be maintained by either of the rules, it muſt fall under the ſecond, which is, that where the words of a ſtatute enact a thing, it enacts all other things in like degree.

In all caſes that fall within this rule, there muſt be a perfect reſemblance between the perſons or things expreſſed and thoſe implied. Thus for inſtance, adminiſtrators are the ſame thing with executors; tenant for half a year and tenant for years have both terms for a chattel intereſt, differing only in the duration of the term; and ſo of the reſt, which I need not repeat one by one: and in all theſe caſes, the perſons or things to be implied are in all reſpects the objects of the law as much as thoſe expreſſed. Does not every body ſee from hence, that you muſt firſt examine the law before you can apply the rule of conſtruction? For the law muſt not be bent by the conſtruction, but that muſt be adapted to the ſpirit and ſenſe of the law. The fundamental rule then, by which all others are to be tried, is laid down in Wimbiſh and Tailbois, Plowden 57, 58. according to which the beſt guide is to follow the intent of the ſtatutes. Again, according to Plowden, p. 205 and 231. the conſtruction is to be collected out of the words according to the true intent and meaning of the act, and the intent of the makers may be collected from the cauſe or neceſſity of making the act, or by foreign circumſtances.

Let us try the preſent caſe by theſe rules; and let the juſtice of the peace ſtand for a moment in this act as a magiſtrate at large; and then compare him as he is here deſcribed with the conſervator.

The juſtice here is a magiſtrate intruſted with the execution of many laws, liable to actions for involuntary errors, and actually diſcouraged by vexatious ſuits; in reſpect of which perilous ſituation he is intended to be rendered more ſafe in the execution of his office.—He is beſides a magiſtrate, who acts by warrant directed to conſtables and other officers, namely, known officers who are bound to execute his warrants.

Now take the conſervator.—He is intruſted with the execution of no laws, if the word law is underſtood to mean ſtatutes, as I apprehend it is.—He is liable to no actions, becauſe he never acts; the keeping of the peace being ſo completely transferred to and ſo engroſſed by the juſtice, that the name of conſervator is almoſt forgot. He is far from being diſcouraged by actions. No man ever heard of an action brought againſt a conſervator as ſuch; unleſs you will call a conſtable a conſervator, which will not ſerve the preſent purpoſe, becauſe theſe perſons can hardly be deemed juſtices within the act.—Again, how does it appear, that the conſervator could either grant a warrant like the preſent, or command a conſtable to execute it? Theſe powers are at leaſt very doubtful; but I think I may take it for granted, that the conſervator could not command a meſſenger of the king's chamber.

Did then this act of parliament refer to magiſtrates of known authority and daily employment, or to antiquated powers and perſons known to have exiſted by hiſtorical tradition only? Did it mean to redreſs real grievances, or thoſe that were never felt? Ad ea, quæ frequenter accidunt, jura adaptantur.

From this compariſon it may appear, how little there is to drag the conſervator into the law, who hardly correſponds with the juſtice of the peace in any one point of the deſcription. But further, it is unfortunate for the conſervators upon this queſtion, that one half of them are the objects of the ſtatute by name, as conſtable, &c. and yet not one of their acts as conſervators is within the proviſion.

And now give me leave to aſk one queſtion. Will the ſecretary of ſtate be claſſed with the higher or the lower conſervator? If with the higher, ſuch as the king, the chancellor, &c. he is too much above the juſtice to be within the equity. If with the lower, he is too much below him. And as to the ſheriff and the coroner, they cannot be within the law; becauſe they never grant ſuch warrants as theſe. So that at laſt, upon conſidering all the conſervators, there is not one that does not ſtand moſt evidently excluded, unleſs the ſecretary of ſtate him ſhall be excepted.

But if there wanted arguments to confute this pretenſion, the conſtruction that has prevailed upon the ſeventh of James the firſt, would decide the point. That is an act of like kind to relieve juſtices of the peace, mayors, conſtables, and certain other officers, in troubleſome actions brought againſt them for the legal execution of their offices; who are enabled by that act to plead the general iſſue. Now that law has been taken ſo ſtrictly, that neither church-wardens, nor overſeers, were held to be within the equity of the word conſtables, although they were clearly officers, and acted under the juſtice's warrants. Why? Becauſe that act, being made to change the courſe of the common law, could not be extended beyond the letter. If then that privilege of giving the ſpecial matter in evidence upon the general iſſue is contrary to the common law, how much more ſubſtantially is this act an innovation of the common law, which indemnifies the officer upon the production of the warrant, and deprives the ſubject of his right of action?

It is impoſſible, that two acts of parliament can be more nearly allied or connected with one another, than that of 24 George II. and the 7th of James I. The objects in both are the ſame, and the remedies are ſimilar in both, each of them changing the common law for the benefit of the parties concerned. The one, in truth, is the ſequel or ſecond part of the other. The firſt not being an adequate remedy in caſe of the ſeveral perſons therein mentioned, the ſecond is added to complete the work, and to make them as ſecure as they ought to be made from the nature of the caſe. If by a contrary conſtruction any perſon ſhould be admitted into the laſt that are not included in that firſt, the perſon, whoever he is, will be without the privilege of pleading the general iſſue, and giving the ſpecial matter in evidence, which the latter would have certainly given by expreſs words, if the parliament could have imagined he was not comprized in the firſt.

Upon the whole, we are all of opinion, that neither ſecretary of ſtate, nor the meſſenger, are within the meaning of this act of parliament.

Third Queſtion.

But if they were within the general equity, yet it behoved the meſſenger to ſhew, that they have acted in obedience to the warrant; for it is upon that condition, that they are intitled to the exemption of the act. When the legiſlature excuſed the officer from the perilous taſk of judging, they compelled him to an implicit obedience; which was but reaſonable: ſo that now he muſt follow the dictates of his warrant, being no longer obliged to inquire, whether his ſuperior had or had not any juriſdiction. The late deciſion of the court of King's Bench in the caſe of general (a) warrants was ruled upon this ground, and rightly determined.

This part of the caſe is clear, and ſhall be diſpatched in very few words.

Firſt, the defendants did not take with them a conſtable, which is a flat objection. They had no buſineſs to diſpute either the propriety or the legality of this direction in the execution of the warrant; nor have their counſel any right to diſpute it here in their behalf. They can have no other plea under this act of parliament, than ignorance and obedience.

Secondly, they did not bring the papers to the earl of Halifax, to be examined according to the tenor of the warrant, but to Mr. Lovell Stanhope. This command ought to have been literally purſued; nor is it any excuſe to ſay now, as they do in their plea, that Mr. L. Stanhope was an aſſiſtant to the earl of Halifax. If he is a magiſtrate, he can have no aſſiſtant, nor deputy, to execute any part of that employment. The right is perſonal to himſelf, and a truſt that he can no more delegate to another, than a juſtice of the peace can transfer his commiſſion to his clerk.

I ſhall ſay no more upon this head. But I cannot help obſerving, that the ſecretary of ſtate, who has not been many years intruſted with this authority, has already eaſed himſelf of every part of it, except the ſigning and ſealing the warrant. The law clerk, as he is called, examines both perſons and papers. He backs or diſcharges. This is not right. I could wiſh for the future, that the ſecretary would diſcharge this part of his office in his own perſon.

Fourth and laſt Queſtion.

The queſtion that ariſes upon the ſpecial verdict being now diſpatched, I come in my laſt place to the point, which is made by the juſtification; for the defendants, having failed in the attempt made to protect themſelves by the ſtat. of the 24th of Geo. II. are under a neceſſity to maintain the legality of the warrants, under which they have acted, and to ſhew that the ſecretary of ſtate in the inſtance now before us, had a juriſdiction to ſeize the defendants papers. If he had no ſuch juriſdiction, the law is clear, that the officers are as much reſponſible for the treſpaſs as their ſuperior.

This, though it is not the moſt difficult, is the moſt intereſting queſtion in the cauſe; becauſe if this point ſhould be determined in favour of the juriſdiction, the ſecret cabinets and bureaus of every ſubject in this kingdom will be thrown open to the ſearch and inſpection of a meſſenger, whenever the ſecretary of ſtate ſhall think fit to charge, or even to ſuſpect, a perſon to be the author, printer, or publiſher of a ſeditious libel.

The meſſenger, under this warrant, is commanded to ſeize the perſon deſcribed, and to bring him with his papers to be examined before the ſecretary of ſtate. In conſequence of this, the houſe muſt be ſearched; the lock and doors of every room, box, or trunk muſt be broken open; all the papers and books without exception, if the warrant be executed according to its tenor, muſt be ſeized and carried away; for it is obſervable, that nothing is left either to the diſcretion or to the humanity of the officer.

This power ſo aſſumed by the ſecretary of ſtate is an execution upon all the party's papers, in the firſt inſtance. His houſe is rifled; his moſt valuable ſecrets are taken out of his poſſeſſion, before the paper for which he is charged is found to be criminal by any competent juriſdiction, and before he is convicted either of writing, publiſhing, or being concerned in the paper.

This power, ſo claimed by the ſecretary of ſtate, is not ſupported by one ſingle citation from any law book extant. It is claimed by no other magiſtrate in this kingdom but himſelf: the great executive hand of criminal juſtice, the lord chief juſtice of the court of King's-Bench, chief juſtice Scroggs excepted, never having aſſumed this authority.

---

* Money and others againſt Leach, Mich. 6 Geo. 3. Ante 307.

The arguments, which the defendants counſel have thought fit to urge in ſupport of this practice, are of this kind.

That ſuch warrants have iſſued frequently ſince the Revolution, which practice has been found by the ſpecial verdict; though I muſt obſerve, that the defendants have no right to avail themſelves of that finding, becauſe no ſuch practice is averred in their juſtification.

That the caſe of the warrants bears a reſemblance to the caſe of ſearch for ſtolen goods.

They ſay too, that they have been executed without reſiſtance upon many printers, bookſellers, and authors, who have quietly ſubmitted to the authority; that no action hath hitherto been brought to try the right; and that although they have been often read upon the returns of habeas corpus, yet no court of juſtice has ever declared them illegal.

And it is further inſiſted, that this power is eſſential to government, and the only means of quieting clamours and ſedition.

Theſe arguments, if they can be called arguments, ſhall be all taken notice of; becauſe upon this queſtion I am deſirous of removing every colour or plauſibility.

Before I ſtate the queſtion, it will be neceſſary to deſcribe the power claimed by this warrant in its full extent.

If honeſtly exerted, it is a power to ſeize that man's papers, who is charged upon oath to be the author or publiſher of a ſeditious libel; if oppreſſively, it acts againſt every man, who is ſo deſcribed in the warrant, though he be innocent.

It is executed againſt the party, before he is heard or even ſummoned; and the information, as well as the informers, is unknown.

It is executed by meſſengers with or without a conſtable (for it can never be pretended, that ſuch is neceſſary in point of law) in the preſence or the abſence of the party, as the meſſengers ſhall think fit, and without a witneſs to teſtify what paſſes at the time of the tranſaction; ſo that when the papers are gone, as the only witneſſes are the treſpaſſers, the party injured is left without proof.

If this injury falls upon an innocent perſon, he is as deſtitute of remedy as the guilty: and the whole tranſaction is ſo guarded againſt diſcovery, that if the officer ſhould be diſpoſed to carry off a bank-bill, he may do it with impunity, ſince there is no man capable of proving either the taker or the thing taken.

It muſt not be here forgot, that no ſubject whatſoever is privileged from this ſearch; becauſe both houſes of parliament have reſolved, that there is no privilege in the caſe of a ſeditious libel.

Nor is there pretence to ſay, that the word 'papers' here mentioned ought in point of law to be reſtrained to the libellous papers only. The word is general, and there is nothing in the warrant to confine it; nay, I am able to affirm, that it has been upon a late occaſion executed in its utmoſt latitude: for in the caſe of Wilkes againſt Wood, when the meſſengers heſitated about taking all the manuſcripts, and ſent to the ſecretary of ſtate for more expreſs orders for that purpoſe, the anſwer was, that all muſt be taken, manuſcripts and all. Accordingly, all was taken, and Mr. Wilkes's private pocket-book filled up the mouth of the ſack.

I was likewiſe told in the ſame cauſe by one of the moſt experienced meſſengers, that he held himſelf bound by his oath to pay an implicit obedience to the commands of the ſecretary of ſtate: that in common caſes he was content to ſeize the printed impreſſions of the papers mentioned in the warrant; but when he received directions to ſearch further, or to make a more general ſeizure, his rule was to ſweep all. The practice has been correſpondent to the warrant.

Such is the power, and therefore one ſhould naturally expect that the law to warrant it ſhould be clear in proportion as the power is exorbitant.

If it is law, it will be found in our books. If it is not to be found there, it is not law.

The great end, for which men entered into ſociety, was to ſecure their property. That right is preſerved ſacred and incommunicable in all inſtances, where it has not been taken away or abridged by ſome public law for the good of the whole. The caſes where this right of property is ſet aſide by poſitive law, are various. Diſtreſſes, executions, forfeitures, taxes, &c. are all of this deſcription; wherein every man by common conſent gives up that right, for the ſake of juſtice and the general good. By the laws of England, every invaſion of private property, be it ever ſo minute, is a treſpaſs. No man can ſet his foot upon my ground without my licence, but he is liable to an action, though the damage be nothing; which is proved by every declaration in treſpaſs, where the defendant is called upon to anſwer for bruiſing the graſs and even treading upon the ſoil. If he admits the fact, he is bound to ſhew by way of juſtification, that ſome poſitive law has empowered or excuſed him. The juſtification is ſubmitted to the judges, who are to look into the books; and if ſuch a juſtification can be maintained by the text of the ſtatute law, or by the principles of common law. If no ſuch excuſe can be found or produced, the ſilence of the books is an authority againſt the defendant, and the plaintiff muſt have judgment.

According to this reaſoning, it is now incumbent upon the defendants to ſhew the law, by which this ſeizure is warranted. If that cannot be done, it is a treſpaſs.

Papers are the owner's goods and chattels: they are his deareſt property; and are ſo far from enduring a ſeizure, that they will hardly bear an inſpection; and though the eye cannot by the laws of England be guilty of a treſpaſs, yet where private papers are removed and carried away, the ſecret nature of thoſe goods will be an aggravation of the treſpaſs, and demand more conſiderable damages in that reſpect. Where is the written law that gives any magiſtrate ſuch a power? I can ſafely anſwer, there is none; and therefore it is too much for us without ſuch authority to pronounce a practice legal, which would be ſubverſive of all the comforts of ſociety.

But though it cannot be maintained by any direct law, yet it bears a reſemblance, as was urged, to the known caſe of ſearch and ſeizure for ſtolen goods.

I anſwer, that the difference is apparent. In the one, I am permitted to ſeize my own goods, which are placed in the hands of a public officer, till the felon's conviction ſhall intitle me to reſtitution. In the other, the party's own property is ſeized before and without conviction, and he has no power to reclaim his goods, even after his innocence is cleared by acquittal.

The caſe of ſearching for ſtolen goods crept into the law by imperceptible practice. It is the only caſe of the kind that is to be met with. No leſs a perſon than my lord Coke denied its legality; and therefore if the two caſes reſembled each other more than they do, we have no right, without an act of parliament, to adopt a new practice in the criminal law, which was never yet allowed from all antiquity. 4 Inſt. 176.

Obſerve too the caution with which the law proceeds in this ſingular caſe.—There muſt be a full charge upon oath of a theft committed.—The owner muſt ſwear that the goods are lodged in ſuch a place.—He muſt attend at the execution of the warrant to ſhew them to the officer, who muſt ſee that they anſwer the deſcription.—And, laſtly, the owner muſt abide the event at his peril: for if the goods are not found, he is a treſpaſſer; and the officer, being an innocent perſon, will be always a ready and convenient witneſs againſt him.

On the contrary, in the caſe before us nothing is deſcribed, nor diſtinguiſhed: no charge is requiſite to prove, that the party has any criminal papers in his cuſtody: no perſon preſent to ſeparate or ſelect: no perſon to prove in the owner's behalf the officer's miſbehaviour.—To ſay the truth, he cannot eaſily miſbehave, unleſs he pilfers; for he cannot take more than all.

If it ſhould be ſaid, that the ſame law which has with ſo much circumſpection guarded the caſe of ſtolen goods from miſchief, would likewiſe in this caſe protect the ſubject, by adding proper checks; would require proofs before-hand; would call up the ſervant to ſtand by and overlook; would require him to take an exact inventory, and deliver a copy: my anſwer is, that all theſe precautions would have been long ſince eſtabliſhed by law, if the power itſelf had been legal; and that the want of them is an undeniable argument againſt the legality of the thing.

What would the parliament ſay, if the judges ſhould take upon themſelves to mould an unlawful power into a convenient authority, by new reſtrictions? That would be, not judgment, but legiſlation.

I come now to the practice ſince the Revolution, which has been ſtrongly urged, with this emphatical addition, that an uſage tolerated from the æra of liberty, and continued downwards to this time through the beſt ages of the conſtitution, muſt neceſſarily have a legal commencement. Now, though that pretence can have no place in the queſtion made by this plea, becauſe no ſuch practice is there alledged; yet I will permit the defendant for the preſent to borrow a fact from the ſpecial verdict, for the ſake of giving it an anſwer.

If the practice began then, it began too late to be law now. If it was more ancient, the Revolution is not to anſwer for it; and I could have wiſhed, that upon this occaſion the Revolution had not been conſidered as the only baſis of our liberty.

The Revolution reſtored this conſtitution to its firſt principles. It did no more. It did not enlarge the liberty of the ſubject; but gave it a better ſecurity. It neither widened nor contracted the foundation, but repaired, and perhaps added a buttreſs or two to the fabric; and if any miniſter of ſtate has ſince deviated from the principles at that time recognized, all that I can ſay is, that, ſo far from being ſanctified, they are condemned by the Revolution.

With reſpect to the practice itſelf, if it goes no higher, every lawyer will tell you, it is much too modern to be evidence of the common law: and if it ſhould be added, that theſe warrants ought to acquire ſome ſtrength by the ſilence of thoſe courts, which have heard them read ſo often upon returns without cenſure or animadverſion, I am able to borrow my anſwer to that pretence from the court of King's-Bench, which lately declared with great unanimity in the caſe of general warrants, that as no objection was taken to them upon the returns, and the matter paſſed ſub ſilentio, the precedents were of no weight. I moſt heartily concur in that opinion: and the reaſon is more pertinent here, becauſe the court had no authority in the preſent caſe to determine againſt the ſeizure of papers, which was not before them; whereas in the other they might, if they had thought fit, have declared the warrant void, and diſcharged the priſoner ex officio.

This is the firſt inſtance I have met with, where the ancient immemorable law of the land, in a public matter, was attempted to be proved by the practice of a private office.

The names and rights of public magiſtrates, their power and forms of proceedings as they are ſettled by law, have been long ſince written, and are to be found in books and records. Private cuſtoms indeed are ſtill to be ſought from private tradition. But whoever conceived a notion, that any part of the public law could be buried in the obſcure practice of a particular perſon?

To ſearch ſeize and carry away all the papers of the ſubject upon the firſt warrant: that ſuch a right ſhould have exiſted from the time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, and never yet have found a place in any book of law; is incredible. But if ſo ſtrange a thing could be ſuppoſed, I do not ſee, how we could declare the law upon ſuch evidence.

But ſtill it is inſiſted, that there has been a general ſubmiſſion, and no action brought to try the right.

I anſwer, there has been a ſubmiſſion of guilt and poverty to power and the terror of puniſhment. But it would be ſtrange doctrine to aſſert that all the people of this land are bound to acknowledge that to be univerſal law, which a few criminal bookſellers have been afraid to diſput.

The defendants upon this occaſion have ſtopped ſhort at the Revolution. But I think it would be material to go further back, in order to ſee, how far the ſearch and ſeizure of papers have been countenanced in the antecedent reigns.

Firſt, I find no trace of ſuch a warrant as the preſent before that period, except a very few that were produced the other day in the reign of king Charles II.

But there did exiſt a ſearch-warrant, which took its riſe from a decree of the Star-Chamber. The decree is found at the end of the 3d volume of Ruſhworth's Collections. It was made in the year 1636, and recites an older decree upon the ſubject in the 28th of Elizabeth, by which probably the ſame power of ſearch was given.

By this decree the meſſenger of the preſs was empowered to ſearch in all places, where books were printing, in order to ſee if the printer had a licence; and if upon ſuch ſearch he found any books which he ſuſpected to be libellous againſt the church or ſtate, he was to ſeize them, and carry them before the proper magiſtrate.

It was very evident, that the Star-Chamber, how ſoon after the invention of printing I know not, took to itſelf the juriſdiction over public libels, which ſoon grew to be the peculiar buſineſs of that court. Not that the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall wanted the power of holding pleas in thoſe caſes; but the attorney-general for good reaſons choſe rather to proceed there; which is the reaſon, why we have no caſes of libels in the King's-Bench before the Reſtoration.

The Star-Chamber from this juriſdiction preſently uſurped a general ſuperintendance over the preſs, and exerciſed a legiſlative power in all matters relating to the ſubject. They appointed licencers; they prohibited books; they inflicted penalties; and they dignified one of their officers with the name of the meſſenger of the preſs, and among other things enacted this warrant of ſearch.

After that court was aboliſhed, the preſs became free, but enjoyed its liberty not above two or three years; for the long parliament thought fit to reſtrain it again by ordinance. Whilſt the preſs is free, I am afraid it will always be licentious, and all governments have an averſion to libels. This parliament, therefore, did by ordinance reſtore the Star-Chamber practice; they recalled the licences, and ſent forth again the meſſenger. It was againſt the ordinance, that Milton wrote that famous pamphlet called Areopagitica. Upon the Reſtoration, the preſs was free once more, till the 13th and 14th of Charles II. when the licenſing act paſſed, which for the firſt time gave the ſecretary of ſtate a power to iſſue ſearch warrants: but theſe warrants were neither ſo oppreſſive, nor ſo inconvenient as the preſent. The right to enquire into the licence was the pretence of making the ſearches; and if during the ſearch any ſuſpected libels were found, they and they only could be ſeized.

This act expired the 32d year of that reign, or thereabouts. It was revived again in the 1ſt year of king James II. and remained in force till the 5th of king William, after one of his parliaments had continued it for a year beyond its expiration.

I do very much ſuſpect, that the preſent warrant took its riſe from theſe ſearch-warrants, that I have been deſcribing; nothing being eaſier to account for than this engraftment; the difference between them being no more than this, that the apprehenſion of the perſon in the firſt was to follow the ſeizure of papers, but the ſeizure of papers in the latter was to follow the apprehenſion of the perſon. The ſame evidence would ſerve equally for both purpoſes. If it was charged for printing or publiſhing, that was ſufficient for either of the warrants. Only this material difference muſt always be obſerved between them, that the ſearch-warrant only carried off the criminal papers, whereas this ſeizes all.

When the licenſing act expired at the cloſe of king Charles II.'s reign, the twelve judges were aſſembled at the king's command, to diſcover whether the preſs might not be as effectually reſtrained by the common law, as it had been by that ſtatute.

I cannot help obſerving in this place, that if the ſecretary of ſtate was ſtill inveſted with a power of iſſuing this warrant, there was no occaſion for the application to the judges: for though he could not iſſue the general ſearch-warrant, yet upon the leaſt rumour of a libel he might have done more, and ſeized every thing. But that was not thought of, and therefore the judges met and reſolved:

Firſt, that it was criminal at common law, not only to write public ſeditious papers and falſe news; but likewiſe to publiſh any news without a licence from the king, though it was true and innocent.

Secondly, that libels were ſeizable. This is to be found in the State Trials; and becauſe it is a curioſity, I will recite the paſſages at large.

Vol. II. p. 1038. The trial of Harris for a libel. Scroggs ch. juſtice.

'Becauſe my brethren ſhall be ſatisfied with the opinion of all the judges of England what this offence is, which they would inſinuate, as if the mere ſelling of books was no offence; 'tis not long ſince that all the judges met by the king's commandment, as they did ſome time before: and they both times declared unanimouſly, that all perſons, that do write, or print, or ſell any pamphlet that is either ſcandalous to public or private perſons, ſuch books may be ſeized, and the perſons puniſhed by law; that all books which are ſcandalous to the government may be ſeized, and all perſons ſo expounding may be puniſhed: and further, that all writers of news, though not ſcandalous, ſeditious, nor reflective upon the government or ſtate; yet if they are writers, as they are few others of falſe news, they are indictable and puniſhable upon that account.'

It ſeems the chief juſtice was a little incorrect in his report; for it ſhould ſeem as if he meant to puniſh only the writer of falſe news. But he is more accurate afterwards in the trial of Carre for a libel. State Trials, vol. III. p. 57, 58.

Sir G. Jefferies recorder.

'All the judges of England having met together to know, whether any perſon whatſoever may expoſe to the public knowledge any matter of intelligence, or any matter whatſoever that concerns the public, they give it in as their reſolution, that no perſon whatſoever could expoſe to the public knowledge any thing that concerned the affairs of the public, without licence from the king, or from ſuch perſons as he thought fit to intruſt with that power.'

Then Scroggs takes up the ſubject, and ſays,

'The words I remember are theſe. When by the king's command we were to give in our opinion, what was to be done in point of regulation of the preſs, we did all ſubſcribe, that to print or publiſh any new books or pamphlets or any news whatſoever is illegal; that it is a manifeſt intent to the breach of the peace, and they may be proceeded againſt by law for an illegal thing. Suppoſe now that this thing is not ſcandalous, what then? If there had been no reflection in this book at all, yet it is illicitè done, and the author ought to be convicted for it.'

Theſe are the opinions of all the twelve judges of England; a great and reverend authority.

Can the twelve judges extrajudicially make a thing law to bind the kingdom by a declaration, that ſuch is their opinion?—I ſay no.—It is a matter of impeachment for any judge to affirm it. There muſt be an antecedent principle or authority, from whence this opinion may be fairly collected; otherwiſe the opinion is null, and nothing but ignorance can excuſe the judge that ſubſcribed it. Out of this doctrine ſprang the famous general ſearch-warrant, that was condemned by the houſe of commons; and it was not unreaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the form of it was ſettled by the twelve judges that ſubſcribed the opinion.

The deduction from the opinion to the warrant is obvious. If you can ſeize a libel, you may ſearch for it: if ſearch is legal, a warrant to authorize that ſearch is likewiſe legal: if any magiſtrate can iſſue ſuch a warrant, the chief juſtice of the King's-Bench may clearly do it.

It falls here naturally in my way to aſk, whether there be any authority beſides this opinion of theſe twelve judges to ſay, that libels may be ſeized? If they may, I am afraid, that all the inconveniences of a general ſeizure will follow upon a right allowed to ſeize a part. The ſearch in ſuch caſes will be general, and every houſe will fall under the power of a ſecretary of ſtate to be rummaged before proper conviction.—Conſider for a while how the law of libels now ſtands.

Lord chief juſtice Holt and the court of King's-Bench have reſolved in the King and Bear *, that he who writes a libel, though he neither compoſes it nor publiſhes, is criminal.

In the 5th Report, 125. lord Coke cites it in the Star-Chamber, that if a libel concerns a public perſon, he that hath it in his cuſtody ought immediately to deliver it to a magiſtrate, that the author may be found out.

In the caſe of Lake and Hutton, Hobart 252. it is obſerved, that a libel, though the contents are true, is not to be juſtified; but the right way is to diſcover it to ſome magiſtrate or other, that they may have cognizance of the cauſe.

In 1ſt. Ventris 31. it is ſaid, that the having a libel, and not diſcovering it to a magiſtrate, was only puniſhable in the Star-Chamber, unleſs the party maliciouſly publiſh it. But the court corrected this doctrine in the King and Bear, where it ſaid, though he never publiſhed it, yet his having it in readineſs for that purpoſe, if any occaſion ſhould happen, is highly criminal: and though he might deſign to keep it private, yet after his death it might fall into ſuch hands as might be injurious to the government; and therefore men ought not to be allowed to have ſuch evil inſtruments in their keeping. Carthew 409. In Salkeld's Report of the ſame caſe, Holt chief juſtice ſays, if a libel be publickly known, a written copy of it is evidence of a publication. Salk. 418.

If all this be law, and I have no right at preſent to deny it, whenever a favourite libel is publiſhed (and theſe compoſitions are apt to be favourites) the whole kingdom in a month or two becomes criminal, and it would be difficult to find one innocent jury amongſt ſo many millions of offenders.

I can find no other authority to juſtify the ſeizure of a libel, than that of Scroggs and his brethren.

If the power of ſearch is to follow the right of ſeizure, every body ſees the conſequence. He that has it or has had it in his cuſtody; he that has publiſhed, copied, or maliciouſly reported it, may fairly be under a reaſonable ſuſpicion of having the thing in his cuſtody, and conſequently become the object of the ſearch-warrant. If libels may be ſeized, it ought to be laid down with preciſion, when, where, upon what charge, againſt whom, by what magiſtrate, and in what ſtage of the proſecution. All theſe particulars muſt be explained and proved to be law, before this general propoſition can be eſtabliſhed.

As therefore no authority in our books can be produced to ſupport ſuch a doctrine, and ſo many Star-Chamber decrees, ordinances, and acts have been thought neceſſary to eſtabliſh a power of ſearch, I cannot be perſuaded, that ſuch a power can be juſtified by the common law.

I have now done with the argument, which has endeavoured to ſupport this warrant by the practice ſince the Revolution.

It is then ſaid, that it is neceſſary for the ends of government to lodge ſuch a power with a ſtate officer; and that it is better to prevent the publication before than to puniſh the offender afterwards. I anſwer, if the legiſlation be of that opinion, they will revive the licenſing act. But if they have not done that, I conceive they are not of that opinion. And with reſpect to the argument of ſtate neceſſity, or a diſtinction that has been aimed at between ſtate-offences and others, the common law does not underſtand that kind of reaſoning, nor do our books take notice of any ſuch diſtinctions.

---

* Reported Carth 407. 1 L. Raym. 414. 12. Mod. 299. 2 Salk. 417. 646.

Serjeant Aſhley was committed to the Tower in the 3d of Charles I. by the houſe of lords only for aſſerting in argument, that there was a law of ſtate different from the common law; and the ſhip-money judges were impeached for holding, firſt, that ſtate-neceſſity would juſtify the raiſing money without conſent of parliament; and ſecondly, that the king was judge of that neceſſity.

If the king himſelf has no power to declare when the law ought to be violated for reaſon of ſtate, I am ſure we his judges have no ſuch prerogative.

Laſtly, it is urged as an argument of utility, that ſuch a ſearch is a means of detecting offenders by diſcovering evidence. I wiſh ſome caſes had been ſhewn, where the law forceth evidence out of the owner's cuſtody by proceſs. There is no proceſs againſt papers in civil cauſes. It has been often tried, but never prevailed. Nay, where the adverſary has by force or fraud got poſſeſſion of your own proper evidence, there is no way to get it back but by action.

In the criminal law ſuch a proceeding was never heard of; and yet there are ſome crimes, ſuch for inſtance as murder, rape, robbery, and houſe-breaking, to ſay nothing of forgery and perjury, that are more atrocious than libelling. But our law has provided no paper-ſearch in theſe caſes to help forward the conviction.

Whether this proceedeth from the gentleneſs of the law towards criminals, or from a conſideration that ſuch a power would be more pernicious to the innocent than uſeful to the public, I will not ſay.

It is very certain, that the law obligeth no man to accuſe himſelf; becauſe the neceſſary means of compelling ſelf-accuſation, falling upon the innocent as well as the guilty, would be both cruel and unjuſt; and it ſhould ſeem, that ſearch for evidence is diſallowed upon the ſame principle. There too the innocent would be confounded with the guilty.

Obſerve the wiſdom as well as mercy of the law. The ſtrongeſt evidence before a trial, being only ex parte, is but ſuſpicion; it is not proof. Weak evidence is a ground of ſuſpicion, though in a lower degree; and if ſuſpicion at large ſhould be a ground of ſearch, eſpecially in the caſe of libels, whoſe houſe would be ſafe?

If, however, a right of ſearch for the ſake of diſcovering evidence ought in any caſe to be allowed, this crime above all others ought to be excepted, as wanting ſuch a diſcovery leſs than any other. It is committed in open day-light, and in the face of the world; every act of publication makes new proof; and the ſolicitor of the Treaſury, if he pleaſes, may be the witneſs himſelf.

The meſſenger of the preſs, by the very conſtitution of his office, is directed to purchaſe every libel that comes forth, in order to be a witneſs.

Nay, if the vengeance of government requires a production of the author, it is hardly poſſible for him to eſcape the impeachment of the printer, who is ſure to ſeal his own pardon by his diſcovery. But ſuppoſe he ſhould happen to be obſtinate, yet the publication is ſtopped, and the offence puniſhed. By this means the law is ſatisfied, and the public ſecured.

I have now taken notice of every thing that has been urged upon the preſent point; and upon the whole we are all of opinion, that the warrant to ſeize and carry away the party's papers in the caſe of a ſeditious libel, is illegal and void.

Before I conclude, I deſire not to be underſtood as an advocate for libels. All civilized governments have puniſhed calumny with ſeverity; and with reaſon; for theſe compoſitions debauch the manners of the people; they excite a ſpirit of diſobedience, and enervate the authority of government; they provoke and excite the paſſions of the people againſt their rulers, and the rulers oftentimes againſt the people.

After this deſcription, I ſhall hardly be conſidered as a favourer of theſe pernicious productions. I will always ſet my face againſt them, when they come before me; and ſhall recommend it moſt warmly to the jury always to convict when the proof is clear. They will do well to conſider, that unjuſt acquittals bring an odium upon the preſs itſelf, the conſequence whereof may be fatal to liberty; for if kings and great men cannot obtain juſtice at their hands by the ordinary courſe of law, they may at laſt be provoked to reſtrain that preſs, which the juries of their country refuſe to regulate. When licentiouſneſs is tolerated, liberty is in the utmoſt danger; becauſe tyranny, bad as it is, is better than anarchy; and the worſt of governments is more tolerable than no government at all.

[A great change of the king's miniſters happened in the July before the judgment in the preceding caſe; particularly the marquis of Rockingham was placed at the head of the Treaſury. The judgment was ſoon followed with a reſolution of the houſe of commons, declaring the ſeizure of papers in the caſe of a libel to be illegal. Journ. Com. 22 April, 1766. At the ſame time the commons paſſed a reſolution condemning general warrants in the caſe of libels. The latter reſolution was afterwards extended by a further vote, which included a declaration, that general warrants were univerſally illegal, except in caſes provided for by act of parliament. Journ. Com. 25 April, 1766.—All theſe reſolutions were in conſequence of Mr. Wilkes's complaint of a breach of privilege above two years before. Journ. Com. 15 November 1763. Two prior attempts were made to obtain a vote in condemnation of general warrants and the ſeizure of papers, one in 1764, the other in 1765. Journ. Com. 14 and 17 February 1764. 29 January, 1765. and Almon's Deb. Com. But they both had miſcarried, and one of the reaſons aſſigned for ſo long reſiſting ſuch interpoſition of the houſe was the pendency of ſuits in the courts of law. This objection was in part removed by the ſolemn judgment of the Common Pleas againſt the ſeizure of papers, and the acquieſcence in it. Whether the queſtion of general warrants ever received the ſame full and pointed deciſion in any of the courts, it is not in our power at preſent to inform the reader. The point aroſe on the trial of an action by Mr. Wilkes againſt Mr. Wood, which is the firſt caſe in Mr. Loft's Reports; and lord Camden in his charge to the jury appears to have explicitly avowed his own opinion of the illegality of general warrants; but what was done afterwards is not ſtated. How a regular judgment of the point was avoided, in the caſe of error in the King's Bench between Money and Leach, by conceding that the warrant was not purſued, we have obſerved in a former note. Ante 312. As to the action, in which Mr. Wilkes finally recovered large damages from the earl of Halifax, it was not tried till after the declaratory vote of the Commons, which moſt probably prevented all argument on the ſubject.]

No. V. Proceedings in the Caſe of John Wilkes, Eſquire, on two Informations for Libels, King's-Bench, Michaelmas Term 1764, to Hilary Term 1770, incluſive.

[This caſe is wholly extracted from Sir James Burrow's Reports. 4 Burr. 2527.]

Wedneſday 7th February 1770.

AS this cauſe, in the ſeveral branches of it, came ſeveral times before the court, it ſeemed better to reſerve a general account of it till a final concluſion of the whole, than to report the particular parts of it disjointedly, in order of time as they were reſpectively argued and determined.

In Michaelmas Term 1764, the fourth year of his preſent majeſty king George the third, ſir Fletcher Norton, then his majeſty's ſolicitor-general, (the office of attorney-general being then vacant,) exhibited an information againſt Mr. Wilkes, for having publiſhed, and cauſed to be printed and publiſhed a ſeditious and ſcandalous libel (the North Briton, No. 45.).

And ſoon after, he exhibited another information againſt him, (the office of attorney-general ſtill remaining vacant,) for having printed and publiſhed, and cauſed to be printed and publiſhed, an obſcene and impious libel (an Eſſay on Woman, &c.).

Mr. Wilkes having pleaded 'not guilty' to both theſe informations, and the records being made up and ſealed, and the cauſes * ready for trial, the counſel for the crown thought it expedient to amend them, by ſtriking out the word 'purport,' and in its place inſerting the word 'tenor.' The propoſed amendments were in all thoſe parts of the information where the charge was that the libel printed and publiſhed by Mr. Wilkes contained matters 'to the purport and effect following, to wit:' which the counſel for the crown thought it adviſeable to alter into words importing that ſuch libel contained matters 'to the tenor and effect following, to wit.'

Sir Fletcher Norton (then become himſelf attorney-general) directed Mr. Barlow, clerk in court for the crown, to apply to a judge for ſuch an order; apprehending it (as he afterwards publickly declared) to be a matter of courſe.

Mr. Barlow, in purſuance of theſe directions, applied to lord Mansfield, for a ſummons to ſhew cauſe 'why ſuch amendment ſhould not be made.' And his lordſhip iſſued a ſummons in each cauſe, dated 18th of Feb. 1764, for the defendant's clerk in court, agent, attorney or ſolicitor, to attend him at his houſe in Bloomſbury-ſquare on Monday the 20th of February at eight o'clock in the morning; to ſhew cauſe why the information ſhould not be amended, by ſtriking out the word 'purport,' in the ſeveral places where it is mentioned in the ſaid information, and inſerting inſtead thereof the word 'tenor.' N. B. The ſummons in the cauſe relating to the ſeditious libel excepted the firſt place—'except in the firſt place.'

On notice of this ſummons, Mr. Philips, agent and ſolicitor for Mr. Wilkes, and Mr. Hughes his clerk in court, and attorney for him upon the record, both attended his lordſhip, at his own houſe, upon the ſaid 20th of February 1764, accordingly, (being now vacation-time, and no court ſitting;) and did not object to the propoſed amendment: on the contrary, Mr. Hughes, upon being aſked as a fair practicer, candidly acknowledged 'that it was amendable;' and Mr. Philips acquieſced in it, though he ſaid he could not conſent to it. Lord Mansfield having, in the preſence of theſe gentlemen, conſulted and produced many precedents, and being fully ſatisfied 'that the amendment might be made, and that it 'might be made by a ſingle judge at his houſe or chambers,' told Mr. Philips 'that there was no need of his conſent;' and immediately made the following order—'Upon hearing the clerks in court on both ſides, I do 'order that the information in this cauſe be amended; by ſtriking out the 'word purport in the ſeveral places where it is mentioned, in the ſaid in'formation, and by inſerting inſtead thereof the word tenor. Dated this '20th day of February 1764.'

The orders in both cauſes were exactly alike; only that the words 'except in the firſt place' were added in that of the information for the ſeditious libel.

Mr. Wilkes was at this time in France; whither he had voluntarily retired ſome time before, and from whence he did not return till towards the election of members for the new parliament (into which he was afterwards choſen.)

The trial came on at the appointed time, and proceeded in the uſual manner; Mr. Wilkes's counſel and agents making no objection thereto, nor declining to enter into his defence. Verdicts were found againſt him, upon both informations: after which, judgment was duly ſigned againſt him, in each cauſe; and writs of capias were awarded and iſſued againſt him, as in ordinary caſes of convictions upon informations for miſdemeanours. —Upon his non-appearance, the proceedings were carried on to proclamation and exigents: and upon his not appearing on the fifth time of being exacted, he was, by the judgment of the coroners of the county of Middleſex, according to the law and cuſtom of the realm, outlawed.

On Wedneſday the 20th of April 1768, (being the firſt day of Eaſter Term 1768,) ſoon after the ſitting of the court, and before any proceſs had iſſued on this outlawry, Mr. Wilkes voluntarily made his perſonal appearance in it; accompanied by three or four friends, who probably meant to become his bail, in caſe of his being now admitted to bail.

He opened with a ſpeech, which is already in * print, and therefore needs not be here repeated. He took notice, in it, that the record was altered, before the trial, by lord Mansfield's order: ſo that he was tried upon altered facts. This he particularly complained of, as being unconſtitutional and illegal; and was adviſed, he ſaid, that it rendered both the verdicts abſolutely void.

Mr. Attorney-general (Mr. De Grey) prayed that Mr. Wilkes might ſtand committed; as he had been convicted of printing and publiſhing one of theſe libels, and of publiſhing the other; and had now avowed himſelf to be the perſon ſo convicted.

Mr. Serjeant Glynn, of counſel for Mr. Wilkes, oppoſed this. He ſaid, he had ſeveral objections to the outlawry; and that, till laſt night, they had expected a fiat for a writ of error: but that, laſt night, Mr. Attorney-general declined granting one, becauſe he doubted 'whether it belonged 'to his office to grant it,' or 'whether it ought not to be granted by the 'lord chief juſtice.' He ſaid, Mr. Attorney-general did not refuſe his fiat, from any doubt about the propriety of the application for it, or the ſufficiency of the objections to the outlawry; but merely from a doubt 'to whom it belonged to allow the writ of error.' He ſaid, he would propoſe ſome errors, which he hoped would ſatisfy the court that a writ of error ought to be granted. They were of two ſorts: firſt, errors in fact; 2dly, errors in law.

1ſt. An error in fact was, 'that Mr. Wilkes was abſent and out of the 'kingdom, at the time of the award of the writ of exigent.'

2dly. Three errors in law. Firſt, 'that the ſheriff has returned no pro'clamations.' It is only ſaid, 'that he has obeyed the writ;' whereas he ought to have returned particulars; that the court might judge of them. Secondly, it is not ſtated in the return of the exigent, 'that Mr. Wilkes 'was exacted in the county of Middleſex:' nor is it ſaid to be 'at a county'court.' It is only ſaid to be 'at his county court at the Three Tons 'in Brook-ſtreet near Holborne in the county of Middleſex:' which is no allegation 'that Brook-ſtreet is in the county of Middleſex.'' And though it is ſaid 'at my county-court,' yet he might be ſheriff of two counties. He cited 2 Roll's Abr. 802. Title 'utlagaire, error utlagarie.' Thirdly, no judgment of the coroner is here ſtated; but only a mere fact, 'that he was outlawed by the coroner.' In ſupport of which objection, he cited 1 Brown's Entries 361. as in point. He therefore prayed that his lordſhip would grant Mr. Wilkes an allowance of his writ of error, in order to his getting this erroneous outlawry reverſed. He ſaid, it was improper at this time to enter into any litigation about the validity of the convictions upon which theſe judgments are founded. Mr. Wilkes's preſent circumſtances under the outlawry are more penal than the convictions themſelves. Therefore it is incumbent upon him, firſt to get rid of the outlawry. And he prayed that Mr. Wilkes might be, in the mean time, admitted to bail.

Mr. Recorder of London (Eyre) on the ſame ſide, enforced what the ſerjeant had urged; and obſerved, that by 4, 5 W. and M. c. 18. § 4. Mr. Wilkes was not compellable to appear in perſon; but might have appeared by attorney, and reverſed the outlawry without bail (unleſs otherwiſe ordered by the court). He therefore propoſed, that he ſhould either appear by attorney, to reverſe it; or give bail to proſecute a writ of error. And he cited Earbury's caſe in this court, in Eaſter and Trinity Terms 1723. 9 G. I *.

Mr. Mansfield, on the ſame ſide, argued that Mr. Wilkes was clearly intitled to be admitted to bail, under this ſtatute. The convictions can not at this time be proceeded upon; as the ſentence of outlawry is ſtanding out againſt him. He has done all that is in his power to do. He appears in court, and ſubmits to the laws of his country. He has ſhewn errors of weight, in the outlawry; and has uſed all methods to obtain a writ of error to be allowed; and prays to be admitted to bail by the court, as he muſt have been by the ſheriff, if he had been taken upon a capias utlegatum.

Mr. Davenport, on the ſame ſide, ſpoke to the ſame effect.

Mr. Attorney-general explained the fact, and the reaſon of his declining to grant the fiat for a writ or error. He ſaid, that upon the application made to him on the part of the defendant, he directed an attend-

* They were tried on the 21ſt of Feb. 1764.

* It was printed in the public papers of the next Day, 21ſt of April 1768.

* That caſe was an outlawry for non-appearance, I have a note of it, of my own taking. And there is a report of it in Forteſcue Aland 37 and another in 8 Mod. 177. very bad in the 1ſt edition, but much mended in the late edition of that book.

ance: which was accordingly had. That he thought the errors ſpecified to him, to be a ſufficient foundation for a fiat, in caſe the party had been in cuſtody: but he could not find any precedent for an attorney-general's granting a fiat when the party was not in cuſtody. The writ of error was not tendered to him, he ſaid, till laſt night: and the court was to ſit, this morning. He was ready to liſten to any method that could have been ſhewn to be proper: but none was propoſed. He added, that he thought Mr. Wilkes could not be intitled to his writ of error, till he ſhould be in cuſtody. He obſerved, that this was not an outlawry for non-appearance; but an outlawry upon and after conviction.

Lord Mansfield.—Here are two motions made, upon the defendant's appearing perſonally in court: one, for committing him; the other, for bailing him.

I am of opinion againſt both theſe motions.

He ought to be brought in regularly, upon a return of the capias by the ſheriff.* I have no doubt but that we might take notice of him, upon his voluntary appearance as the perſon outlawed; and commit or bail him: but we are not abſolutely bound to do it, without ſome reaſon to excuſe the going out of the regular courſe.

If the defendant could ſhew that the attorney-general refuſed to take him up and bring him into court, in order to prevent his having this advantage; or if the attorney-general had in fact uſed all methods to take him up, and he had concealed himſelf and abſconded, and afterwards had come in thus voluntarily, in order to ſurprize; upon either of theſe, or any other extraordinary ground, we ſhould be bound to interpoſe, and overlook the impropriety of the defendant's coming, inſtead of being brought, into court.

But the real cauſe of this irregularity is the ſtrongeſt argument why we ſhould not give way to a new mode, liable to miſconſtruction, and carrying a bad appearance. It is notorious, that the defendant has appeared very publicly: why was he not apprehended?

The outlawry muſt certainly be diſpoſed of, before you can come at any thing elſe: the judgment upon the convictions can not, at preſent, be proceeded upon.

I could wiſh this gentleman had been better adviſed than to have come thus prematurely, with a written ſpeech, to juſtify the crimes of which he ſtands convicted; and to arraign an order made by me.

I am very happy in having this opportunity of explaining my conduct in making the amendment that has been mentioned. If I was wrong, I ſhould think it more honourable to acknowledge and rectify any error that I ſhould have committed, than to juſtify and defend it. The application to me was, to amend the word "purport" into "tenor." Mr. Hughes, the clerk in court for the defendant, agreed it to be amendable. I recollected a caſe of the like kind, of an amendment of an information juſt before trial: and, looking for it, I found a collection of ſuch caſes. After reading one or two, Mr. Philips, attorney and agent for the defendant, was perfectly ſatisfied, and deſired me not to give myſelf any further trouble; but ſaid "he could not conſent to it." I ſaid, "I did not want a conſent:" I thought myſelf bound to order the amendment; and did ſo. I had made ſome ſuch orders before; and I have made ſeveral ſuch orders ſince; even in quo warranto informations. In this caſe, it made no alteration in the defendant's defence. His counſel never objected to it, nor took any notice of it. I think it right and uſual, and as of courſe: not but that I am open to conviction, and ready to hear what can be ſaid to ſhew that it was wrong.

Mr. juſtice Yates.---If this amendment was wrong, it will ſtill be open to the conſideration of the court; although the proper opportunity of objecting to it was at the trial. In the caſe of the king againſt Charleſworth, an information for forging a warrant of attorney 'to acknowledge ſatiſ-'faction upon a judgment' was amended, without coſts (the proſecutor having been admitted a pauper), and without giving the defendant leave to plead de novo. 2 Stra. 871.

As to the two preſent oppoſite motions, one for committing, the other for bailing the defendant; the ſame anſwer ſerves for both: 'the court can take no notice of any thing but what comes judicially before them.' We can not take cognizance of this matter, in the method in which it now comes before us: we can not take judicial notice 'that this is the perſon 'convicted or outlawed.' Mr. Browne's caſe in Dyer 192. is clear and ſtrong, as to the outlawry. And as to committing him upon the convictions, that can't be done whilſt the outlawry is ſubſiſting: the outlawry muſt firſt be diſpoſed of, before we proceed upon the convictions. The judgment of outlawry ſuſpends all proceedings upon them. The judgments on the convictions would probably be fine and impriſonment. But it would be manifeſt oppreſſion to ſet a fine upon him, when all his effects ſtand forfeited to the king already: and he is already liable to impriſonment upon the outlawry; from which he can never be freed whilſt that ſtands in force. There cannot be two different judgments for the ſame offence: there cannot be judgment of outlawry, and judgment for the miſdemeanour likewiſe. In the caſe of the king and queen againſt Tippin, 1 W. and M. Salk. 494. the defendant was outlawed upon an information for a miſdemeanour, and fined 5000*l.* It was moved, on his behalf, that he could not be fined upon the outlawry; becauſe, in miſdemeanour, the outlawry does not enure as a conviction for the offence, (as it does in caſes of treaſon and felony), but as a conviction of the contempt for not anſwering; which contempt is puniſhed by the forfeiture of his goods and chattels: and if he might be fined now, he muſt be fined again, upon the principal judgment. And the * firſt was held to be irregular: for, the outlawry in theſe caſes is not a conviction; as appears by Fleta 42. 'Quamvis quis pro contumacia et fuga 'utlagetur, non propter hoc convictus eſt de facto principali.' And there is a caſe in Bro. Abr. title 'Utlagary,' pl. 26. where a man was outlawed of felony, and taken by a capias utlagatum, and detained in the King's Bench; and divers bills were brought againſt him in cuſtody of the Marſhal: and the court would not ſuffer it. For, his body lands and goods are the king's; and therefore the plaintiff can not have the effect of his ſuit againſt him before the outlawry: but if he obtains a pardon, the plaintiff ſhall be anſwered. If the defendant in the preſent caſe had come in by proceſs, his identity would have appeared. If he had come in by record, he might have applied to be bailed, either upon the ſtatute of 4, 5 W. and M. c. 18. (if that ſtatute can be ſhewn to be applicable to an outlawry on a miſdemeanour), or under the plenary power of the court upon the circumſtances of his caſe. But that ſtatute ſeems only applicable to civil caſes. I mention this, only for the conſideration of the counſel, when it ſhall come before the court. By the 5th ſection, the ſheriff may 'take ſecurity of the defendant taken upon a ca-'pias utlagatum, in caſes where bail is required, in double the ſum for which 'bail is required.' But how can the ſheriff, under the directions of this ſtatute, take bail in double the ſum, in a criminal caſe? How can the ſheriff know what the fine will be? Or why ſhould the ſum of the fine be doubled? The ſtatute ſeems to relate only to civil caſes, and to mean 'double the 'debt.'

The defendant ought, in my opinion, to have come hither in a regular way: but as the matter now ſtands, upon this voluntary appearance, without return of proceſs or any matter of record whatſoever, the court can neither commit him nor bail him.

Mr. juſtice Aſton.---I think there is but one queſtion: and I ſhall keep to that. It is, 'whether he ſhall be committed.' The attorney-general prays us to commit a man as an outlaw, againſt whom he himſelf would not iſſue proceſs of outlawry; though there does not appear to be any particular circumſtances to prevent his iſſuing ſuch proceſs. The officers of the crown might have exerciſed their power by proper proceſs: and then he would have been in cuſtody. But they have not choſen to do ſo: and he remains as much at his liberty, as he was before he came into court. The motion to commit him ſeems unneceſſary: and I ſhall not, at preſent, take notice of any other queſtion; he not being at all in cuſtody.

Mr. juſtice Willes.---There has been, for ſome time, a judgment of outlawry againſt the defendant, who is not an abſconding perſon. The attorney-general has not thought proper to iſſue proceſs againſt him upon it. And now he comes into court gratis, voluntarily, not by any return of proceſs, or any matter of record. We can not take any notice at all of him; nor can we know, judicially, 'that he is the man.' I don't ſee why the attorney-general ſhould demand of the court to commit the defendant upon this outlawry, when he himſelf has long ſuffered him to go at large, without any attempt to take him up; or even iſſuing proceſs againſt him.

Nothing was taken by either of the two motions; namely, the attorney-general's, 'that the defendant might be committed,' or his own counſel's, 'that he might be bailed.'

On Wedneſday the 27th of April 1768, (a week after the former tranſaction,) Mr. Wilkes having this morning ſurrendered himſelf to the ſheriff of Middleſex upon a capias utlagatum which had been ſince the laſt motion iſſued againſt him, and being now in the ſheriff's cuſtody, was brought into court by the ſaid ſheriff, upon the return of a habeas corpus directed to him for that purpoſe. In the mean time, Mr. Attorney-general had granted his fiat for a writ of error: which he did immediately upon receiving an aſſurance that Mr. Wilkes was in actual cuſtody upon the capias utlagatum. The return to the habeas corpus being read in court, it appeared that the defendant was charged with two outlawries; viz. one on each conviction for the reſpective miſdemeanours before mentioned. A writ of error in each cauſe was delivered into court.

The outlawries, the writs of error, and the aſſignment of errors, were exactly alike in both cauſes: it will therefore be ſufficient to ſpecify only one of each ſort.

The material part of the outlawry, on which the queſtion turned, was this. The ſheriff returned the writ of exigent executed and indorſed as follows---'By virtue of this writ to me directed, at my county court 'held at the houſe known by the ſign of the Three Tuns in Brook ſtreet near 'Holborn in the county of Middleſex, the 12th day of July in the fourth 'year of the reign of our preſent ſovereign lord George the third now king 'of Great Britain, &c. the within named John Wilkes was the firſt time 'exacted, and did not appear.' It goes on in the ſame manner, till the quinto exactus; viz. 'at my county court held at the ſame place the 9th day 'of Auguſt in the year aforeſaid, the ſaid John Wilkes was a ſecond time 'exacted, and did not appear:' and ſo, in the ſame words, only changing the days, to the 5th incluſive. Therefore by the judgment of Edward Umfreville, eſq; and Thomas Philips, gent. his majeſty's coroners of the county of Middleſex, the ſaid John Wilkes, according to the laws and cuſtoms of this realm, is outlawed.

Writ of error.

The writ of error was verbatim as follows---Of Eaſter Term 1768, 8 G. III. Our lord the king hath ſent to his juſtices appointed to hold pleas before him his writ cloſed in theſe words (that is to ſay) George the third by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c. To our juſtices appointed to hold pleas before us greeting. Foraſmuch as in the record and proceſs, as alſo in the publication of an outlawry againſt John Wilkes late of Weſtminſter, in the county of Middleſex, eſq; on a certain information againſt the ſaid John Wilkes, for printing and publiſhing a certain libel or compoſition, intitled An Eſſay on Woman; whereof the ſaid John Wilkes is impeached, and thereupon by a jury of the county is convicted, as it is ſaid; manifeſt error hath intervened, to the great damage of the ſaid John Wilkes, as by his complaint we are informed: We, willing that the ſaid error (if any be) be duly amended, and full and ſpeedy juſtice done to the ſaid John Wilkes in this behalf, do command you, that if the ſaid outlawry be returned before us as hath been ſaid; then inſpecting the ſaid record and proceſs, you cauſe further to be done therein for annulling the ſaid outlawry as of right, and according to the law and cuſtom of England, ſhall be meet to be done. Witneſs ourſelf at Weſtminſter, the twenty-ſeventh day of April, in the eighth year of our reign.

---

* I ſuſpect this word 'firſt' to be an error of the preſs; and that it ſhould be 'fine.'

Aſſignment of error.

And hereupon the ſaid John Wilkes comes in his proper perſon, and ſays, that in the record and proceſs, and alſo in the publication of the aforeſaid outlawry, there is manifeſt error in this, that there is no ſufficient information filed or exhibited againſt the ſaid John Wilkes, whereon to ground the proceſs of the outlawry aforeſaid: by reaſon whereof, the ſaid outlawry is void and of no effect or force whatſoever. There is alſo error in this, that no public proclamation whatſoever is mentioned to have been made at any open county court, or at any general quarter-ſeſſions of the peace whatſoever, or at the door of any pariſh church where the ſaid John Wilkes was an inhabitant, according to the exigency of the ſaid writ of capias cum proclamatione: therefore in that, there is manifeſt error. There is alſo error in this, that it is not ſhewn, nor does it appear by the return of the ſheriff of Middleſex, that the ſheriff of Middleſex did cauſe to be exacted the ſaid John Wilkes in the ſaid county of Middleſex, from county court to county court, until he was outlawed according to the law and cuſtom of England, as the ſaid ſheriff by the ſaid writ of exigent is commanded; and that it is not ſhewn nor does it appear by the return of the ſheriff of Middleſex, that the ſaid John Wilkes was a firſt, ſecond, third, fourth and fifth time exacted at the county court of the county of Middleſex, as by the law of the land he ought to have been before he was outlawed: therefore in that, there is manifeſt error.---There is alſo error in this, that in the record and proceſs aforeſaid, and in the publication of the outlawry aforeſaid, it is no where expreſsly ſhewn that the place called Brook-ſtreet (if any ſuch there be) where the ſeveral county courts are ſuppoſed to have been held, at which the ſaid John Wilkes is ſaid to have been exacted, is in the county of Middleſex, or in any or what other county. Therefore in that, there is manifeſt error. There is alſo error in this, that it does not appear that any judgment of outlawry was given or pronounced againſt the ſaid John Wilkes; or, if any ſuch judgment was given or pronounced, in what form the ſame was ſo given or pronounced; as it ought to have done, in order that the legality and propriety of the ſaid judgment might have been ſeen and examined: but in the record and proceſs aforeſaid, and in the publication of the outlawry aforeſaid, reference and relation only are had to ſome judgment not ſhewn or expreſſed, but ſuppoſed to have been before given againſt the ſaid John Wilkes. Therefore in that, there is manifeſt error. Wherefore the ſaid John Wilkes prays that the outlawry aforeſaid, for the errors aforeſaid, and other errors appearing in the record and proceſs aforeſaid, may be reverſed and held for nothing; and that he may be reſtored to the common law, and to all which he hath loſt by occaſion of the outlawry aforeſaid, &c.---And William De Grey, eſq; now attorney-general of our preſent ſovereign lord the king, preſent here in court in his proper perſon, having heard the matters aforeſaid above aſſigned for error, for our ſaid lord the king ſaith, that neither in the record and proceſs aforeſaid, nor in the publication of the aforeſaid outlawry, is there any error: and he prays that the court of our ſaid lord the king now here may proceed to the examination as well of the record and proceſs aforeſaid, as of the matters aforeſaid above aſſigned for error; and that the outlawry aforeſaid may in all things be affirmed.

Joinder in error.

Lord Mansfield.---Let the writs of error be allowed.

His lordſhip then aſked the attorney-general, ‘ to what priſon he prayed that the defendant might be committed.’

Mr. Attorney-General anſwered---‘ To the Marſhal.’

Lord Mansfield.---Let him be committed to the Marſhal.

Mr. ſerjeant Glynn moved, that he might be admitted to bail, on 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. * which, he ſaid, extended to caſes of miſdemeanour. He was ſupported by Mr. Recorder of London, Mr. Mansfield, and Mr. Davenport.

* Vide § 4.

They urged the ſpirit, ſcope and deſign of this ſtatute, as well as the words of it, as arguments to prove that it extended to miſdemeanours; and that the preamble and enacting part of it do, both of them, apply to Mr. Wilkes's caſe: and they ſaid, that even if the words were doubtful, the conſtruction of them ought to be ſuch as would be moſt favourable to liberty. But theſe words are expreſs; they include all cauſes, except treaſon and felony. ‘ For the more eaſy and ſpeedy reverſing of outlawries ‘ in the court of King's Bench, be it enacted, that no perſon or perſons ‘ whatſoever, who are or ſhall be outlawed in the ſaid court, for any cauſe, ‘ matter or thing whatſoever, (treaſon and felony only excepted), ſhall be ‘ compelled to come in perſon into, or appear in perſon in the ſaid court, ‘ to reverſe ſuch outlawry; but ſhall or may appear by attorney and re‘ verſe the ſame, except where ſpecial bail ſhall be ordered by the ſaid ‘ court.’ Caſes of miſdemeanour are within the ſame miſchief as civil caſes: and it extends to outlawries after conviction of miſdemeanours, as well as to outlawries upon meſne proceſs. If the queſtion ſhould take a long time in diſcuſſing, the defendant may be actually puniſhed by an impriſonment upon the outlawry, though it ſhould be at laſt reverſed; or ſtill more unjuſtly, in caſe it ſhould afterwards appear that no puniſhment ought to be inflicted upon the convictions themſelves. In civil caſes, a pardon is of courſe, upon paying the debts and coſts: but a defendant outlawed upon meſne proceſs for a miſdemeanour has no ſuch opportunity of getting rid of the outlawry. He ought to have an opportunity of putting himſelf in a condition of being amenable to the juſtice of his country. Though ſome of the expreſſions in this ſtatute may ſeem more applicable to civil caſes, yet there are general words ſufficient to take in criminal miſdemeanours. They mentioned ſir John Read's caſe, and that of Matthias Earbury in 1723.

Mr. Attorney-General (Mr. De Grey), ſir Fletcher Norton, and Mr. Morton, on the other ſide, argued that this ſtatute relates only to civil caſes; and not to criminal miſdemeanours. The expreſſions of it relate to civil property. It can relate only to ſuch caſes where a defendant can appear by attorney. The preamble * ſays, ‘ Whereas divers ‘ perſons are proſecuted in the ſaid court of King's Bench, to ‘ outlawries for debts, treſpaſſes, or other miſdemeanours; and there is ‘ no reverſing ſuch outlawries but by the perſonal appearance of the per‘ ſons outlawed: ſo that the perſons arreſted upon ſuch outlawries, if ‘ poor, lie in priſon till their deaths; but if able, it coſts them very dear, ‘ to reverſe the ſame outlawries.’ The former of theſe words relate to property: the latter, to actions for malicious proſecutions and ſuch like. The whole relates only to civil ſuits. And as to Earbury's caſe, they ſaid it was neither a direct determination, nor any authority in the preſent caſe.

* Vide § 2.

Serjeant Glynn replied, that ‘ treſpaſſes’ include all other actions not ariſing ex contractu: and ‘ miſdemeanours’ muſt mean offences. ‘ All ‘ cauſes, matters, and things,’ certainly include criminal offences and miſdemeanours. And the ſtatute ſpeaks of outlawries in general. It is not reaſonable, that the defendant ſhould undergo the penalty of a contempt for withdrawing from juſtice, when the very validity of the outlawry itſelf is in queſtion. And Earbury's caſe, though it was not an outlawry after conviction (as this is), yet clearly proves ‘ that this act ‘ does relate to miſdemeanours:’ for, the judges were all of that opinion.

Lord Mansfield.—God forbid that the defendant ſhould not be allowed the benefit of every advantage he is intitled to by law!

It is to be conſidered, how he is in cuſtody.

After conviction, if he had been preſent in court, he might have been committed: if not preſent, he might have been taken by a capias.

It is, indeed, in the diſcretion of the court, to bail a perſon ſo circumſtanced.

But diſcretion, when applied to a court of juſtice, means ſound diſcretion guided by law. It muſt be governed by rule, not by humour: it muſt not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful; but legal and regular.

This defendant was not preſent, when convicted. He afterwards withdrew from juſtice, and was outlawed: and a capias utlagatum has now iſſued; and he is in cuſtody upon it.

If a perſon convicted be taken upon a capias pro fine, he is liable to be committed, unleſs the proſecutor conſents to his being bailed. This is the common courſe of proceeding: though it is uſual to admit to bail, upon the proſecutor's conſenting to it. In the caſe of the journeymen Taylors, and again in that of the Weavers, the defendants were by conſent bailed, and by conſent were not to appear till called upon. But I do not remember any caſe where ſuch a perſon has been bailed without conſent. When a perſon ſo convicted is committed, ſuch commitment ſhall be taken into conſideration by the court when they come to pronounce their ſentence upon him, and ſhall go as part of his puniſhment.

Here, the defendant is in cuſtody under the conviction: for, he is in cuſtody upon the capias utlagatum, which iſſued upon his conviction.

Now, whatever doubts there may be about what is within the act of parliament of the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. it is moſt certain that a perſon convicted of a miſdemeanour is not within it; becauſe his caſe is not a bailable caſe. Nothing therefore can be clearer, than that ſuch a perſon is not within an act of parliament that relates only to bailable caſes. This act relates to caſes where no ſpecial bail is required, and to caſes where ſpecial bail is required *: and the ſheriff is directed what to do in either caſe. Where the caſe is bailable, the defendant is to be diſcharged upon the ſecurity-bond. But even in civil actions, he could not be bailed, where he was not bailable: he is only to be put into the ſame condition as if he had not been outlawed at all. If the outlawry was after judgment in debt, or any other civil action, and the defendant was not bailable before the outlawry, the act did not make ſuch defendant bailable, who was not ſo before the outlawry. I am clear, that this caſe is not within the act.

* Vide § 5.

Mr. juſtice Yates was alſo clear in the ſame opinion. It is ſaid, ‘ that ‘ miſdemeanours of all kinds are within the words of this act, as well ‘ as within the ſcope and meaning of it.’ But miſdemeanours are here * connected with debts and treſpaſſes; which are deſcriptions of civil actions: and ſo may the word ‘ miſdemeanour’ be. This act might, in the general words of the preamble, have a view to actions of conſpiracy, deceit, or popular actions upon penal ſtatutes; (on which an outlawry was given by 21 Ja. I. c. 4.) And taking the whole of the act together, there can be no doubt about it: for, it muſt be conſtrued of thoſe caſes where the clauſes of the act are practicable; which, in the preſent caſe, they are not. A conviction in a criminal caſe can not be within this act. The ſheriff is directed by it, ‘ to take ſecurity of the ‘ perſon outlawed, in the penalty of double the ſum for which ſpecial bail ‘ is required.’ But the ſheriff cannot take bail of a perſon after his being convicted of a crime. The ſheriff cannot form his own idea of the offence, or ſettle a ſum wherein he ſhould take the bail of ſuch a perſon: nor can he require bail in double the fine, or any thing more than what the fine ſhall be fixed at; which is uncertain and future. The concluding words of the ſecurity-bond, ‘ and to do and perform ſuch things as ſhall be re‘ quired by the ſaid court,’ mean putting in bail to a new action, pleading within a limited time, putting the plaintiff in the ſame condition, and ſuch like matters. And it ſhould be conſidered, how the law ſtood in civil caſes, before this act of parliament; and that no bail could then be taken on a capias utlagatum. Vide 13 C. 2. ſtat. II. c. 2. § 4.

* Vide § 2.

What I have been ſaying, may throw ſome light upon this act of parliament. But I confine my opinion to its being an outlawry after conviction in a criminal caſe: which can not be a caſe within this act of parliament.

If a defendant is taken upon a capias pro fine (or pro redemptione,) it is an execution; and no ſheriff can take bail of him: it is a favour, if the court does it. By 5 E. III. c. 12. no pardon for an outlawry ſhall be granted, till the chancellor is certified that the plaintiff is ſatisfied of his damages. In a criminal caſe, if the party be convicted, and a capias ad ſatisfaciendum iſſues, and he is taken upon it, he is in execution, to make ſatisfaction; and the ſheriff can never foretel, before the court have given the final judgment, what that ſatisfaction is to be, on which he ſhould admit the defendant to bail, on the capias utlagatum: he has nothing to direct himſelf by. No clauſe of this act can be put in execution, on an outlawry upon a conviction in a criminal caſe. Therefore I am of opinion, that the preſent caſe is not within it.

Mr. juſtice Aſton.---I am of the ſame opinion. I think this act of parliament relates only to civil actions: this is evidently the true ſpirit of it. It cannot be imagined, that the act can mean to allow of a defendant's appearing by attorney, in caſes where the defendant is obliged to appear perſonally, and can not appear by attorney at all: neither can it extend to taking bail in caſes not bailable. But ſurely it can not extend to caſes of criminal miſdemeanours, after conviction; becauſe in ſuch caſes, a defendant is not intitled to be bailed at all. Outlawries after conviction are very different from the caſe of outlawries for non-appearance upon meſne proceſs. After conviction, there is no caſe where it has been holden that the defendant has a right to be admitted to bail. In an outlawry after conviction for miſdemeanour, no ſheriff could take bail: and conſequently this act could not have any ſuch caſe in view, or be meant to extend to it.

Mr. juſtice Willes.---It is clear that the defendant has no right to demand being admitted to bail. This is an outlawry after conviction. If it ſhould be granted that he is intitled to be bailed upon the outlawry, yet as he ſtands convicted of the crime, he muſt be committed upon the conviction. This ſtatute is indeed as obſcure a one as any in the ſtatute-book: it is difficult to aſcertain its true meaning. Therefore I do not chuſe to give any direct opinion about its extent; unleſs it ſhould become abſolutely neceſſary for me to do ſo. As the preſent caſe ariſes upon an outlawry after conviction, it is clearly not a caſe within this act of parliament. In treaſon and felony, outlawries were convictions of the fact: and therefore they are particularly excepted out of this act. But outlawries in caſes of miſdemeanour are not convictions of the fact: yet after actual conviction of a miſdemeanour, the defendant is not intitled to bail; whether he be or be not outlawed. Even in a civil action, a perſon outlawed after judgment could not have a pardon, till payment of the debt. In the preſent caſe, it would be merely nugatory, to diſcharge the defendant upon giving bail to proſecute his writ of error upon the outlawry, when we muſt immediately commit him upon the conviction. How can the ſheriff know, at the time of the defendant's being taken upon the capias utlagatum, whether the court will at all admit of ſpecial bail, or not? Or if they ſhould, how ſhall the ſheriff know in what ſum it ſhall be? Or, if he ſhould be fined, what will be the amount of his fine? Clearly, an outlawry after conviction of a miſdemeanour is not within this act; whatever elſe may be within it.

The court having thus declared their unanimous opinion, ‘ that Mr. ‘ Wilkes, under his preſent circumſtances of ſtanding convicted of a cri- ‘ minal miſdemeanour, had no right to demand being admitted to bail, ‘ under this act of parliament;’

His counſel moved that he might be bailed, upon the foot of the general diſcretion which the court would exerciſe, of bailing or committing a perſon convicted of a miſdemeanour, according to the particular circumſtances of his caſe: which they alledged to be ſufficient, in this gentleman's caſe, to induce the court to permit him to remain at large, under proper bail. Public juſtice was not intended, they ſaid, nor at all likely to be evaded. He had always been amenable to juſtice: he now ſurrendered voluntarily. Indeed, little care had ever been taken to apprehend him. He always appeared publickly upon the huſtings, both in London and Middleſex; and he is member of parliament for the latter county.

Lord Mansfield.---I have ſaid, ‘ that I knew no caſe where a perſon ‘ convicted of a miſdemeanour has been admitted to bail without conſent ‘ of the proſecutor.’ If any gentleman knows any ſuch caſe, I ſhould be glad to be informed of it: I know of none. We can not therefore do it, if the attorney-general does not conſent. For, we muſt act alike in all caſes of like nature: and what we do now, ought to be agreeable to former precedents, and will become a precedent in future caſes of a like kind.

The court declining to bail him without the conſent of the attorney-general as proſecuting for the crown, he was committed to the Marſhal.

His counſel then moved for a rule to bring him up to-morrow, to aſſign errors. Which was granted.

There were two rules. The former was this. ‘ The defendant being ‘ brought here into court, in cuſtody of the ſheriff of the county of Mid- ‘ dleſex, by virtue of a writ of capias utlagatum; it is ordered, upon the ‘ motion of Mr. Attorney-general, that the ſaid defendant be now com- ‘ mitted to the cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea of this court, to ‘ be by him kept in ſafe cuſtody until he ſhall be from thence diſcharged ‘ by due courſe of law. And the ſaid defendant now here in court pro- ‘ ducing a writ of error, and praying oyer of the record, it is ordered by ‘ this court, that the ſaid writ of error be allowed. On the motion of ‘ Mr. Attorney-general.’

The other rule, ‘ that the Marſhal or his deputy bring the defendant ‘ up to-morrow, to aſſign errors,’ was a diſtinct rule; and was taken up on the motion of one of the defendant's counſel.

On Wedneſday the 4th of May, 1768, (a week after making the laſt mentioned rule), the defendant having aſſigned errors upon the record of the outlawry, and the crown having joined in error; (all which was, by conſent on both ſides, privately tranſacted between the agents, without actually bringing Mr. Wilkes into court;)

Mr. Davenport moved to make the joinder in error a concilium: and Saturday next was agreed upon as the day on which it was to be argued.

Accordingly, on Saturday the 7th of May, 1768, it was argued by ſerjeant Glynn on the part of the defendant, and Mr. Thurlow on the part of the crown. It was very well argued on both ſides: but it would draw this report out into an inſufferable length, if the particulars of it ſhould be here inſerted.

The great and capital error that the ſerjeant inſiſted upon, was the inſufficiency of the return in not ſhewing that the defendant had been five times exacted from county-court to county-court, till he was outlawed, as the law directs, and the writ requires. He argued that this ought to appear certainly and preciſely upon the ſheriff's return; that outlawries are odious; and that the court will intend nothing in ſupport of ſo cruel a proceeding, but, on the contrary, liſten to the leaſt objection of error in it. And here, the firſt exaction does not appear to have been made in the county of Middleſex; nor any of the ſubſequent ones, which are ſaid to have been at the ſame place with the firſt. The words ‘ near ‘ Holborn, in the county of Middleſex,’ do not import its being in the county. Beſides, the time and place of the ſecond, third, fourth and fifth exactions ought to have been particularly ſpecified and deſcribed; and not by reference only to the firſt. Moreover, the ſheriff ought to have ſtated the proclamations explicitly and particularly, and the particular manner and circumſtances of them. He alſo made a queſtion, ‘ Whether ‘ an outlawry lies upon an information.’ And he concluded with an objection to the information, as not being properly exhibited; being exhibited by his majeſty's ſolicitor-general, without taking any notice of the vacancy of the office of attorney-general: whereas the attorney-general is the known and proper officer of the crown for this purpoſe; and the ſolicitor-general has no ſuch right.

He cited a great number of caſes and precedents, in ſupport of his objections.

Mr. Thurlow defended the regularity of the whole proceeding, by reaſon, argument, and practice: and he alſo cited a great number of caſes and precedents, to ſupport his arguments and allegations.

To which Mr. ſerjeant Glynn having replied; and the counſel for the defendant having declared, ‘ that they did not deſire a ſecond argument;’

The court ſaid, that the very great number and variety of authorities and precedents that had been produced and very ably urged on both ſides, deſerved and would require their mature conſideration; and directed copies of the records cited on both ſides to be laid before them; or at leaſt one copy of each record, which they would deliver over from one to another.

On Saturday the 14th of May, 1768, (a week after the before-mentioned argument,) after lord Mansfield and Mr. juſtice Yates were gone,

Mr. Davenport moved for a rule to bring the defendant up on Monday, in order to be bailed: but he had no affidavit of any particular circumſtances to induce the court to grant ſuch a rule.

Mr. juſtice Aſton did not ſee, he ſaid, how the court could bail him, without any particular circumſtances being laid before them, when they had already and ſo lately determined, after a full hearing of counſel on both ſides, ‘ that he was in execution upon the outlawry after conviction of ‘ miſdemeanours, and was not admiſſable to bail.’ He would not therefore, after two of the four judges were gone away, make ſuch a rule as was prayed: but Mr. Davenport might move it again, if he pleaſed, on Monday morning at the ſitting of the court; and that would allow time enough for the defendant's being brought up the ſame day, to be bailed, if the court ſhould think it a reaſonable motion.

Mr. juſtice Willes was of the ſame ſentiments with Mr. juſtice Aſton; and agreed to Mr. Davenport's having leave to move it at the ſitting of the court on Monday.

Upon Monday the 16th of May 1768, the court being then full,

Mr. Davenport accordingly renewed his motion. He could only urge, that there were but two grounds of impriſonment: one, for ſecurity; the other, for puniſhment. The former failed in the preſent caſe; becauſe Mr. Wilkes had always voluntarily ſurrendered: the latter failed, becauſe it was premature; for, the caſe was not yet ripe for judgment upon the conviction; and the validity of the outlawry was at preſent doubtful.

Mr. Davenport, upon being aſked by lord Mansfield, ‘ Whether he had giv- ‘ en notice to the attorney-general of this motion,’ owned that he had not.

Lord Mansfield---However, it cannot prevail; becauſe the defendant is in cuſtody after conviction: which is a cuſtody in execution. It is not a cuſtody for ſecurity only; but goes in part of the puniſhment, and will be taken into conſideration, upon the final judgment: and ſo we told you before. It was ſo in Lookup's caſe, and in the caſe of a Welch clergyman.

A defendant in execution upon an outlawry after conviction of a miſdemeanour, in crown proſecutions, can not be admitted to bail without the conſent of the attorney-general.

If the court had been of opinion, upon the laſt argument, to reverſe the outlawry, yet the defendant muſt have continued in cuſtody upon the conviction.

Errors upon outlawries have ſeldom been ſolemnly argued. This writ of error has been ſolemnly and exceedingly well argued: and the matter deſerves to be ſeriouſly conſidered. What is determined upon ſolemn argument eſtabliſhes the law, and makes a precedent for future caſes: which is not the caſe of queſtions agreed by conſent of parties, or never litigated. This will be a precedent.

The court, in all caſes (without regarding who is the particular defendant), leans to the reverſal of outlawries; becauſe the puniſhment of the outlawry is often greater than the puniſhment of the offence itſelf. Here, the defendant had the merit of coming in voluntarily; not being brought in by proceſs and in cuſtody. But the court can not make errors; nor reverſe for errors which do not exiſt, or which they can not ſee: they muſt be ſatisfied, that there are errors. If the court had been ſatiſfied on any one error aſſigned, they would have reverſed the outlawry for that error. We did, ſeveral of us, when we came into court, ſeem to think that the want of proclamations was a flaw: but my brother Yates doubted 'Whether proclamations were at all neceſſary in ſuch a proceeding 'as this.' I wiſh that the precedents and acts of parliament may be looked into, to ſee 'whether proceſs of outlawry will lie upon informations 'for miſdemeanours;' as well as to ſee 'whether proclamations are neceſſary 'or not, upon proceſs of outlawry after convictions for miſdemeanours.' I deſire that the counſel will apply themſelves to ſearch into this point, 'Whether proceſs of outlawry will at all lie upon informations for miſ'demeanours.' And, as many precedents have been already cited and produced, I deſire alſo that the precedents may be left with us, for our peruſal and conſideration.

Mr. juſtice Yates.---I ſhould have thought that what was ſaid by the court upon the former argument, would have been ſufficient to have ſpared the preſent motion. The matter was then largely and very well argued; and the court explained their ſentiments very fully at that time: their opinion was, 'that the defendant being in execution, he could not 'be bailed, without conſent of the attorney-general on the part of the 'crown.' To bail him upon the mere aſſignment of errors, would be prejudging upon the errors: it would preſuppoſe 'that they were fatal.' He is at preſent in execution; and can not be taken out of execution, without conſent of the attorney-general on behalf of the crown.

But ſince this matter is again brought upon the tapis, it gives me an opportunity of ſuggeſting my own doubts. If proclamations are neceſſary, I ſhould think this return to be clearly bad: but if proclamations are not neceſſary, it is then immaterial when, or where, or how they were made. As to what has been ſaid about the expreſſion, 'at my county'court,' not being determinate, becauſe he might be ſheriff of two counties --- there are two authorities which either were not mentioned at the bar, or at leaſt were not fully ſtated. One of them is 1 Ventris 108. where an outlawry was reverſed, for that the proclamations were returned to be 'ad comitatum meum tent. apud 'ſuch a place in comp. prædict.;' and not ſaid, 'pro comitatu:' 'for, anciently one ſheriff had two or three counties, and might hold the court in one county for another. The other of theſe caſes is in 2 Roll's Reports 52. Robert Alder's caſe; who was outlawed for murder: and it was moved for error, that the ſheriff returned, 'ad 'comitatum meum tentum apud D. in le county de Northumberland;' and did not ſay, 'Comitat. meum Northumbriæ tentum, &c.' And this was holden to be error, by the court; according to the caſe in 6 H. IV. where it is returned, 'ad com. meum Somerſett tentum.' And therefore it was holden erroneous: for, one may be ſheriff of Surrey and Suſſex, and alſo of Huntingdonſhire and Cambridgeſhire. But this is not poſſible in the caſe of the ſheriff of Middleſex. The ſheriffs of London have been immemorially the ſheriff of Middleſex: therefore he could not have two counties. But I ſhould always incline to favour errors aſſigned in outlawry; becauſe it is more juſt and right, that judgment ſhould be given upon the conviction for the offence. Therefore, my doubt being againſt the errors aſſigned, I ſhould be unwilling that more regard ſhould be paid to it, than it ſhall appear ſtrictly to deſerve: and I would not have propoſed it, if I had not thought it incumbent upon me to communicate it, ſince it has occurred to me, and ſeems to me to have more weight than perhaps it might appear to others to have.

But my lord's doubt is a very material one---'Whether the offence 'charged in the information is ſuch a crime as will warrant an out'lawry.'

The 18 Ed. III. Stat. 1. c. 1. * has negative words in it, in the printed edition of the ſtatutes; though it is ſaid not to be ſo in the parliament-roll. At common-law, outlawry lies only for treaſon and felony, as I apprehend. Therefore the court will be glad of hearing the arguments at the bar, to aſſiſt their inquiry in this doubt.

Mr. juſtice Aſton.---The opinion of the world ought not to weigh at all with the court in forming their opinion upon the validity of the errors aſſigned upon this outlawry. If one flat deciſive objection had clearly appeared, the court would have immediately given their opinion, upon the firſt argument. I was not ſatisfied, myſelf, that the minor objections had ſufficient force in them: and as to the greater ones, the counſel for the defendant ſeemed to me to be too ſanguine and too much attached to their own opinions, when they declined the offer of a further argument, when the court wiſhed to be further informed by hearing it argued again. But this doubt which my lord has mentioned, 'Whether proceſs of out'lawry will lie for the crimes charged in theſe informations,' is a very material one, and ought to be well conſidered. It may be neceſſary to look into Bracton and other books; and the ſtatutes of 18 E. III. St. 1. c. 1. and St. 2. c. 5. and 1 E. I. c. 20. and a caſe in the year-book of 35 H. VI. f. 6. pl. 9. 'that proceſs of outlawry did not lie; becauſe the 'action was not for a tort ſuppoſed to be done vi et armis.' It may be a doubt, 'Whether proceſs of outlawry lies on informations of this kind, 'for offences which though expreſſed to be done vi et armis, are not really 'done with actual force.' The 18 Ed. III. Stat. 2. c. 5. ſays, 'that no 'exigent ſhall go, where a man is indicted of treſpaſs, if it be not againſt 'the peace, or of things contained in 18 E. III. Stat. 1.' And though the words, 'nemy des autres,' are not to be found in the parliament-roll, yet they are in ſeveral manuſcript copies. Theſe things deſerve to be maturely conſidered.

It is proper alſo to inquire into the practice and precedents; and to ſee whether they have been uniform and concomitant. Treſpaſſes in parks may be effectually done, without actual force.

The court will not keep back their opinion, without having ſufficient ground for doubting, and a neceſſity of taking time to ſatisfy their doubts: on the other hand, they will not give their opinions over-haſtily and prematurely, merely to gratify the humours or paſſions of mankind.

Mr. juſtice Willes concurred that the defendant was not bailable; being in execution upon the outlawry after conviction. He thought, with Mr. juſtice Aſton, that the defendant's counſel were in the wrong when they declined a ſecond argument, which might have given the court further light. He expreſſed his inclination towards the reverſal of outlawries, on account of the ſeverity of the judgment upon them, which ſometimes exceeded what would be the puniſhment upon the conviction itſelf.

For the reaſons above particularized,
Mr. Davenport took nothing by this motion.

On Wedneſday the 8th of June 1768, (being the ſixth day of Trinity term, 8 G. III.) Mr. Attorney-general and other counſel for the crown were further heard. But the counſel for the defendant reſted their caſe upon the former argument.

Lord Mansfield expreſſed himſelf to the following effect.

Great pains have been taken, and great ſearches have been made, ſince the laſt argument; not only (as I ſee now) by Mr. Attorney-general and thoſe he has employed, but by ſome of us; I ſay, 'ſome of us;' becauſe I cannot, with truth, aſſume the merit to myſelf: the load of other buſineſs which lay upon me, made it impoſſible. But from the able aſſiſtance of thoſe who have taken the trouble to make ſearches and to collect materials, I think I am now thoroughly maſter of a ſubject which I am not at all aſhamed to ſay I knew very little of before: and I never give a judicial opinion upon any point, until I think I am maſter of every material argument and authority relative to it. It is not only a juſtice due to the crown and the party, in every criminal cauſe where doubts ariſe, to weigh well the grounds and reaſons of the judgment; but it is of great conſequence, to explain them with accuracy and preciſion, in open court; eſpecially if the queſtions be of a general tendency, and upon topics never before fully conſidered and ſettled; that the criminal law of the land may be certain and known.

Outlawry is a very important part of that law. Yet it is no wonder, that the forms and method of proceeding are ſo little attended to, and ſo little underſtood: for, this is perhaps the firſt occaſion where any queſtion of law, upon a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry in a criminal caſe, ever underwent a ſerious litigation.

Outlawry in civil actions is conſidered as in the nature of civil proceſs, to compel an appearance to the ſuit; or, if after judgment, to procure ſatisfaction. The forfeiture, though nominally to the king, yet in truth goes to the plaintiff, towards payment of his demand. If the outlaw appears, pays all the coſts, puts in ſufficient bail, and does every thing he can to put the plaintiff in as good a condition as he would have been in originally; or if, after judgment, the outlaw pays the debt and coſts; the court reverſes the outlawry upon motion, without any writ of error. The form of the reverſal always is, 'For the errors aſſigned and other errors 'appearing upon the record:' although there is, in truth, no error at all.

Flight, in criminal caſes, is itſelf a crime. If an innocent man flies for treaſon or felony, he forfeits all his goods and chattels. Outlawry, in a capital caſe, is as a conviction for the crime: and many men who never were tried have been executed upon the outlawry.

In miſdemeanours, outlawry is generally a more ſevere puniſhment than would be inflicted for the crime of which the outlaw ſtands accuſed or convicted. It is a forfeiture of his goods and chattels, and all the profits of his real eſtate; and perpetual impriſonment, with many incapacities. If it is erroneous, it cannot be reverſed without a writ of error.

Till the third of queen Ann, a writ of error in any criminal caſe was held to be merely ex gratia. Lord-keeper lays it down * 'that 'a writ of error in a criminal matter was ex gratia regis, in 'all caſes;' and ſaid †, 'He had a collection of ſeveral caſes 'out of the old books of the law, that were given him by 'lord chief juſtice Hales, which ſhew that writs of error in 'criminal caſes are not grantable ex debito juſtitiæ, but ex gra'tia regis: and in ſuch a caſe, a man ought to make applica'tion to the king; and he will then refer it to his counſel; 'and if they certify that there is error, the king will not deny a writ of 'error.' It never was granted, except when the king, from juſtice, where there really was error, or from favour, though there was no error, was willing the outlawry ſhould be reverſed. After a writ of error granted, the attorney-general never made any oppoſition: becauſe, either he had certified 'there was error,' and then he could not argue againſt his own certificate; or the crown meant to ſhew favour, and then he had orders 'not to oppoſe.' The king, who alone was concerned as the proſecutor, and who had the abſolute power of pardon, being willing that the outlawry ſhould be reverſed, this court reverſed upon very ſlight and trivial objections, which could not have prevailed, if any oppoſition had been made, or if the precedent had been of conſequence. The form of reverſal, 'for the errors aſſigned and other errors appearing upon record,' delivered the court from the neceſſity of ſpecifying any; and they might think themſelves well warranted to reverſe, upon the tacit or expreſs conſent of the king, where he alone was concerned to oppoſe; though there really was no error at all: and, as the king had the power to refuſe a writ of error, the precedent was of no conſequence.

---

* Vid. alſo Stat. 2. c. 5.

* 1 Vernon 170. Crawle v. Crawle.

† Vid. 1 Vern. 175. in the Rioters caſe.

* v. the Ailſbury Caſe.

But in the third of queen Ann *, ten of the judges were of opinion, 'that in all caſes under treaſon and felony, a writ of 'error was not merely of grace; but ought to be granted.' Price and Smith were of a contrary opinion, 'that a writ of error was of grace only, 'in all criminal caſes.' The ten did not mean 'that it was a writ of 'courſe;' but that, 'where there was probable error, it ought not to be denied.'

It cannot iſſue now, without a fiat from the attorney-general; who always examines whether it be ſought merely for delay, or upon a probable error.

‡ 9 Geo. 1.

In the caſe of the king againſt Earbury, ‡ the opinion of the court was taken, before the attorney-general granted his fiat for a writ of error. In the preſent caſe, the attorney-general refuſed his fiat, while the defendant was out of cuſtody.

This opinion in the third of queen Ann has made a great alteration as to outlawries in criminal caſes under treaſon and felony. In a miſdemeanour, if there be probable cauſe, it ought not to be denied. This court would order the attorney-general to grant his fiat. But be the error ever ſo manifeſt in treaſon or felony, the king's pleaſure to deny the writ is concluſive. Lord Muſkerry, the ſon and heir of the earl of Clancarty, petitioned for a writ of error, to reverſe his father's outlawry, becauſe his father was a priſoner in the Tower of London during the whole time of the proceedings againſt him. The fact was verified beyond doubt, by entries from the books of the Tower, and by the affidavit of the ducheſs of Marlborough. The late lord chief juſtice Willes, then attorney-general, reported the writ to be merely of grace: and, upon political reaſons, it was abſolutely refuſed; and the outlawry ſtands.

A writ of error being as a matter of right, where there is error in the outlawry; ſince the third of queen Ann, in all crimes under treaſon and felony, 'What is an error?' became an important queſtion: which was of no conſequence, before. Since that time, this court has not given way to trivial objections, though admitted by the attorney-general. In 1708, lord Griffin was brought into this court upon an outlawry for high treaſon: and upon the prayer of the ſolicitor-general, (there being then no attorney-general,) a rule was made for his execution. He was reprieved, from time to time, till his death. His grandſon and heir, from the grace and favour of king George the firſt, obtained a writ of error. Sir Philip Yorke, then attorney-general, came into court, and ſaid he had a ſign manual, 'to confeſs the errors and conſent to the reverſal.' The court told him, 'His confeſſing an error in law would not do: they muſt 'judge it to be an error; and their judgment would be a precedent. But 'the plaintiff in error might aſſign an error in fact; which, by proper 'authority, he might confeſs.' Accordingly, the plaintiff aſſigned an error in fact, viz. 'that the place of his grandfather's reſidence was in 'the county of Northampton; whereas he had been outlawed in London.' The attorney-general confeſſed the fact: whereupon, the outlawry was reverſed §. Since the third of queen Ann, no queſtion of law has been litigated, upon a writ of error to reverſe an outlawry; no criminal outlawry has been reverſed upon a trivial objection: no caſe, ſince that time, has been found, of either kind.

§ Hill. 13°. G. 1.

Outlawry is an eſſential part of the criminal law. The rules and method of proceeding are wiſely calculated to prevent ignorance and ſurprize. The conſequences are made ſevere, becauſe the offence is heinous; and it imports the ſtate, that no man ſhould fly from the laws and juſtice of his country. This court is bound to pronounce the law as they think it is; always leaning to the favourable ſide, where they doubt: for, ſo ſays the law. It is as much a breach of duty to reverſe a good, as it would be to affirm a bad outlawry. The miſchief goes farther than an unrighteous ſentence in the particular caſe. For, to reverſe without an error, is to aboliſh that part of the law. And therefore ſerjeant Glynn admitted that criminal outlawries were not to be reverſed of courſe: an error muſt be found.

In a matter where the conſequence may be ſo penal to the defendant in this particular caſe; where the grounds of the judgment muſt be ſo important to a very eſſential part of the criminal law, never before brought adverſely in queſtion, and therefore lying under great obſcurity and confuſion; I feel myſelf extremely obliged (and I think the publick obliged) to thoſe who, in the ſhort time taken for conſideration, have ſearched the ſubject to the bottom. From the materials with which I have been furniſhed, I think myſelf ſufficiently inſtructed, to form an opinion: and I will declare the grounds and reaſons of that opinion which I have formed, to this great and numerous audience, with as much accuracy and preciſion as I can, to prevent miſapprehenſion.

There are two ſorts of error which have been aſſigned and argued.

1ſt, The firſt ſort are errors which give riſe to queſtions of law, and to real arguments.

2d, The ſecond are criticiſms upon words and ſyllables in the return.

Of the firſt ſort, two are aſſigned.---

That there is no ſufficient information filed or exhibited againſt the defendant, whereon to ground the proceſs of outlawry.

That no public proclamation whatſoever is mentioned to have been made at any open court, or at any general quarter-ſeſſions of the peace whatſoever; or at the doors of any pariſh church where the ſaid defendant was an inhabitant; according to the exigency of the ſaid writ of capias cum proclamatione.

Under the firſt error aſſigned, three objections have been made.---

1ſt, That the information is by the ſolicitor-general, and not the attorney-general.

2d, That an outlawry does not lie upon an information.

3d, That though it may lie upon an information, yet it does not lie for ſuch an offence as is proſecuted in either of theſe caſes.

Firſt---The information is by the ſolicitor-general.

If this objection is founded, it will equally hold upon a motion in arreſt of judgment. But, I believe, none of us, from the beginning, ever entertained the leaſt doubt concerning it. An information for a miſdemeanour is the king's ſuit. The title of the cauſe is, 'The king againſt 'the defendant:' the oath, at the trial, to the jurors and the witneſſes, is 'between the king and the defendant.' As a ſubject ſues by attorney, ſo does the king; with a little variation of form, from decency: inſtead of ſaying, 'The king ſues by ---,' it is ſaid, 'ſues for the king;' and yet, 'Coram domino rege venit * dominus rex per attornatum 'ſuum, et inde producit ſectam,' was held to be good. (Hale chief juſtice ſaid, it was but an unmannerly way of declaring for the king). The attorney is anſwerable, if he acts without authority; and upon complaint by the party whoſe name he has falſly uſed, the court would puniſh him, and ſet aſide the proceedings: but while the principal avows him, neither the adverſe party nor the court can diſpute his authority. The coroner of this court proſecutes informations for the king, as his attorney. The form of the proclamation at criminal trials is a ſtrong proof that anciently the king's ſerjeant might proſecute for the king. When there did not exiſt ſuch an officer as ſolicitor-general, the king's ſerjeant or his attorney, or other that would ſue for the king, ſhould be received to aver againſt the teſtimony of the parties impriſonment, where the outlawry was pronounced at the king's ſuit †. There are many entries in Raſtal ‡, which ſhew that at the common law others than the attorney-general have ſued for the king; or, in other words, the king has ſued by others as his attornies. Serjeant Glynn cited a manuſcript treatiſe concerning the Star-Chamber; of which Mr. Filmer has a copy: the original is in the Muſeum §. The author's name is preſerved in a note written in this preſent-book, at the beginning, by the lord keeper Finch, as follows---'This treatiſe was compiled by William Hudſon of 'Gray's-Inn, eſq; one very much practiced and of great experience in the Star-Chamber, and my very affectionate friend. His 'ſon and heir, Mr. Chriſtopher Hudſon, (whoſe hand-writing this book 'is,) after his father's death, gave it to me. 19 December 1635. J. Finch.'

* 2 Lev. 82. 3 Keble 127. Raſtal's Entr. 655. b.

† Vid. 5. Ed. 3. c. 13

‡ Title Debt. 192 b pl. 4. Title Eſcheat 114 b pl 3. Title Quare impedit, 527 b pl. 1.

§ Harleian Catalogue, No. 226. vol. i.

The whole paſſage ſhould be taken together; and is in theſe * words---'It remaineth that I ſhall, in the next place, treat 'of the king's ordinary ſuits: which are of two ſorts;--- 'either by his attorney, informing of himſelf, or by other mens relations, and by the king's almoner; the one being in criminal cauſes, 'the other in civil. For the king's attorney, I have known it much 'queſtioned, Whether any other of the king's counſel may not inform 'for the king, as well as the attorney-general. And it is true, that 'in Eaſter term, 8 H. VIII. it is ordered that the king's ſolicitor ſhall 'not proſecute any further the merchants of the Stiliard, till it were 'otherwiſe ordered by the council: and the ſame term, the ſolicitor was 'commanded to ſue out proceſs againſt ſome which acquitted 'one Blaſe of a rape. So that it ſeemeth, that others of the 'king's counſel did proſecute cauſes for the king, as well as the king's 'attorney. But in 1 & 2 James the firſt, it was reſolved by the court, 'that it belongeth to the place of the attorney. And ſerjeant Heale, 'the king's ſerjeant, putting in a bill againſt ſir John Luſon, was denied 'that privilege. For, if a bill be put in by the king's counſel as 'for the king, there are no coſts to be paid to the defendant, nor fees 'for the proſecution: but in this caſe, ſerjeant Heale's bill was diſmiſſed 'with 30*l.* coſts; it continuing in proſecution not above two terms.' It is aſtoniſhing how any other law-officer of the king could claim, as an official right, to be the king's attorney in all ſuits which he ſhould think fit to bring in the king's name. The very conſtitution of an attorney-general is deciſive againſt it. He might ſtop every ſuit brought by another. And therefore the council did very right, as between the king's law-officers, to overrule ſerjeant Heale: but they did not mean, that the king himſelf, for ſpecial reaſons, might not appoint another to act as his attorney. In that reign, afterwards, Yelverton was ſuſpended, and the ſolicitor appointed to act. Suppoſe the attorney-general perſonally the defendant: there muſt be another to ſue for the king. Suppoſe the attorney-general out of the realm; or under a diſability from ſickneſs: ſuppoſe the office of attorney-general vacant. When it is, the buſineſs (which cannot ſtand ſtill) muſt devolve upon another of the king's counſel: and there is nothing ſo certain, as that the whole buſineſs and authority of the attorney devolves upon the ſolicitor-general. I am ſatisfied, that if the matter was traced, the two precedents in Eaſter term, 8 Henry VIII. mentioned by Mr. Hudſon, were during the vacancy of the attorney's office. It is impoſſible the council could, in the ſame term, order the ſolicitor-general to ſtop one public proſecution and commence another, if there had been an attorney-general. As far back as the memory of the vacancies of the attorney's office has led to a ſearch, precedents have been found of informations filed by the ſolicitor-general, in Chancery, and on the law-ſide of the Exchequer. In this court, the information againſt the earl of Devonſhire † was proſecuted by the ſolicitor general: and though the enormity of the fine ſet, and the revolution of government which immediately followed, made this caſe the ſubject of much animadverſion and juſt cenſure; 'the ſolicitor-general 'having proſecuted,' was never objected. There are precedents of replying, demurring, taking iſſue, praying judgment or award of execution, by the ſolicitor-general, during the vacancy of the other office. We all know, from our own experience, that upon every vacancy which we remember of the attorney's place, his office has been executed by the ſolicitor-general. But it is ſaid, 'The information ought to have ſug-'geſted that the office of attorney was vacant.' Many of the precedents do not ſuggeſt it: and there can be no occaſion. The attorney-general is a great officer of the law and of this court. The court take notice when the office is vacant; and by whom it is filled, when full. They give credit to the ſolicitor-general, when he ſues as attorney for the king, 'that he has authority.' He does it at his peril. In this caſe, before the defendant pleaded, the ſolicitor-general was made attorney, and in that capacity brought into court the information he had filed as ſolicitor. If an objection could lie to his authority as ſolicitor, the only queſtion would be, ‘ From what time the information ſhould be conſidered as commenced: from the filing by the ſolicitor; or the bringing into court by the attorney.’ And that could be of no conſequence, but in reſpect of the time when the defendant ought to plead. But he has pleaded to the information brought in by the attorney-general; and been tried. In every light and in every view, this objection is groundleſs: nothing has been offered to ſupport it, but ſerjeant Heale's caſe. Upon ſo plain a point, I certainly ſhould not have ſaid ſo much, but that the objection alſo goes in arreſt of judgment, and therefore may be argued again. The counſel are apprized of my reaſons: and if they ſhould think their objection tenable, I am open to conviction.

* Fol. 84. and 85.

Fo. 85.

† 3 Jac. 2.

Second objection under the firſt error aſſigned---‘ That an outlawry does not lie upon an information.

The counſel for the defendant ſupported this objection, two ways. Firſt, they ſaid, The books were ſilent on this head: and the ſtatute of additions mentions only that ‘ in original writs of perſonal actions, appeals, and indictments, in which the exigent ſhall be awarded, &c. &c. [*]’ But an information is not therein mentioned. Secondly, They ſaid, that from the nature of the proceſs in an information, the exigent was not awardable. For, the proceeding by information in this court is ſimilar to the Star-Chamber precedents: and in ſuch proceedings, they did not award a capias, but a ſubpœna. That here, the antecedent proceſs is by ſummons of attachment, not by capias: and conſequently, if there is no capias to introduce the proceſs of exigent, it can not lie in this caſe. Serjeant Glynn admitted, as a point beyond all doubt, ‘ that informations of this kind were competent, in this court, at the common-law.’ No lawyer ever doubted of it: no lawyer would ſeriouſly argue againſt it. So that ſir Bartholomew Shower had no opportunity to deliver the argument he has printed [†]. Informations here neither derive their being, nor the form of proceeding upon them, from the Star-Chamber; but from the common-law of the land, and the uſage and practice of this court where they are exhibited. Although informations are not mentioned in the ſtatute of additions, yet the ſame requiſites of certainty and preciſion muſt be in an information, as in an indictment [‡]. Preſentment is not mentioned in this ſtatute. And yet, on a preſentment before the coroner, ‘ that French was felo de ſe,’ (which was certified into the King's Bench,) ‘ and that certain of French's goods were in the poſſeſſion of J. S.’ proceſs iſſued againſt J. S. until he was outlawed. And upon error brought ‘ for that there was not any addition given to the ſaid J. S. in the preſentment upon which he was outlawed,’ it was at firſt doubted ‘ whether upon that preſentment proceſs of outlawry did lie:’ and Ive, clerk of the Crown-office, ſaid to the court, ‘ that ſuch proceſs in ſuch caſe did lie: and that he could ſhew five hundred precedents of it.’ And, ſecondly, it was moved, ‘ if this outlawry ought to be reverſed for default of addition.’ But it was agreed by the whole court, that as to this purpoſe, the preſentment ſhould be accounted in law as an indictment [§]. To an information in nature of a quo warranto, to ſhew by what authority the defendant claimed to be a burgeſs of Grampound, the defendant pleaded in abatement, for want of proper addition; the information ſtyling him ‘ labourer,’ whereas he was clothier; and this plea was moved to be ſet aſide, on the ground, ‘ that an addition was not neceſſary.’ The court refuſed to ſet it aſide on that ground: but they found another, the want of a proper affidavit to verify the plea [||]. There ſeems as good ground to ſay, upon the foot of precedents and conſtruction of the ſtatute of additions, ‘ that proceſs of outlawry lies, and addition is requiſite in an information,’ as in the preſentment in French's caſe. As to the other argument from the nature of the proceſs---there was no authority or precedent cited or produced, to prove the aſſertion. On the contrary, there are many precedents where the proceſs was by capias; and the exigent followed: ſome, as in the preſent caſe; though moſt are before conviction. But ‘ that a capias does lie, in proceſs upon theſe informations,’ I take to be as old as their exiſtence. If not, how could there have been ſuch a number of outlawries upon informations; and ſome, of ancient date? All theſe records are ſo many authorities to ſupport this proceſs; which are not, after ſo great a length of unqueſtioned uſage, to be now impeached [*]. And it is obſervable on the 18 Edw. III. ſt. 1. that it not only clearly relates to a proceeding before judgment; but it gives the exigent, if the party is not brought in on an attachment or diſtreſs. However, there is no need to reſort to that kind of reaſoning; when uſage ſupports the capias, in the preſent caſe, as the common proceſs upon theſe occaſions.

Third objection under the firſt error aſſigned---‘ That outlawry does not lie, from the nature of the offence.’

This objection was ſlightly touched by Mr. ſerjeant Glynn; but ſtruck us, at firſt, as a point fit to be conſidered: and I mentioned to the bar, ‘ that it might be proper to look into it.’ The doubt was, ‘ whether the offence charged in either of theſe informations was ſuch as rendered the perſon accuſed of ſuch crime liable to the proceſs of outlawry, either at common-law, or by any ſtatute. In Coke Littleton 128 b. it is ſaid, ‘ that in the reign of king Alfred, and till a good while after the Conqueſt, no man could be outlawed but for felony; the puniſhment whereof was death: but after, in Bracton's time and ſomewhat before, proceſs of outlawry was ordained to lie in all actions that were quare vi et armis, which Bracton calls Delicta, for there the king ſhall have a fine.’ The 18 Edw. III. ſt. 1. declares the caſes and offences for which the exigent ſhall be awarded, if the party cannot be found or brought in by attachment or diſtreſs; and not againſt any other. Alſo, the 18 Ed. III. ſt. 2. c. 5. ſays---‘ No exigent ſhall from henceforth go out, where a man is indicted of treſpaſs; unleſs it be againſt the peace, or of things which be contained in the declaration made in that caſe at the laſt parliament.’ But upon full conſideration, I am very well ſatisfied that the counſel for the defendant judged right in laying no ſtreſs upon this objection. The offences laid in theſe informations, and the proceedings upon them, are at the common-law. The ſtatutes giving proceſs of outlawry in certain caſes, and reſtricting its iſſuing in others but under certain circumſtances, do not affect the preſent queſtion: the proceſs is warranted, in the preſent caſe, by the common-law, or not at all. Actual force or violence does not appear to be the criterion upon which the proceſs of outlawry was founded. The greatneſs of the crime, and the ſeverity of the puniſhment, ſeem to be the material circumſtances originally attended to, in founding this proceſs; according to the paſſage I have juſt cited from Coke, as to the earlieſt times: for, felony does not imply or convey the idea of actual outrage; grand larceny being in its definition, as well as practice, different. And Hawkins confirms this notion, by ſaying, ‘ that this proceſs probably lay for all crimes of a [†] higher nature than treſpaſs vi et armis.’ The extenſion of this proceſs is ſuppoſed by lord Coke, in the paſſage I quoted, (and what he ſays, is repeated, without examination, by a variety of authors), to have been ſomewhat before Bracton's time. The eſtabliſhing that period, for a ſuppoſed ordinance concerning outlawries, ſtrongly authenticates the teſtimony of that cotemporary writer, touching the caſes in which, and under what circumſtances this proceſs lay. Lord Coke ſaw, that it was impoſſible to ſay, ‘ that outlawry did not lie for any crime under felony:’ univerſal practice ſhewed the contrary. So he ſuppoſes a poſitive ſtatute made about Bracton's time. There does not appear any particular ordinance for extending this proceſs: and there is no authority for the ſuppoſition. But Bracton (who wrote in the reign of Henry the IIId) ſays [‡], ‘ that it lay in omni tranſgreſſione quæ fit contra pacem;’ and afterwards, ‘ pro omni tranſgreſſione, licet minimâ, ubi quis ad pacem domini regis vocatus, venire recuſaverit, et hoc propter contumaciam.’ That this neceſſary ingredient, ‘ contra pacem,’ did not mean poſitive force in the committing of the offence, appears from the reaſon given why it lay for felony, 2 Ro. Abr. 805. ‘ Outlawry lay for felony; becauſe it was contra pacem.’ For, that could not mean (as I have already ſaid) more than its being an offence in its nature againſt the laws of ſociety, and a diſturbance of that good order and government which keeps a ſtate in unity and peace The crime of larceny, in its very nature, is ſecret and fraudulent, unleſs it be done with open violence; and then it is diſtinguiſhed by the aggravated name of robbery. Beſides, in the caſe of writs quare vi et armis, (in which caſes this proceſs is given,) it is acknowledged to be on account of the ſuppoſed, not the actual force. And ſo is the ſame place in 2 Ro. Abr. 805. and the 35 H. VI. (a) and (b) and many other books. In fact, therefore, it appears from Bracton, ‘ that every offence committed againſt the peace ſubjected the delinquent to the proceſs of outlawry.’ And the caſes ſhew, that the peace of the king is broke by diſorders without force. And indeed ſome of the greateſt crimes are without force. If force was the criterion on which this proceſs of exigent was founded at common-law, why was that proceſs given by the [§] firſt ſtatute of Edward the third, in the caſe of riots, &c.? Or what occaſion had there been for the [||] ſubſequent ſtatute of Edward the third to ſay---‘ From henceforth, it ſhall not iſſue in treſpaſs, unleſs it is againſt the peace,’ if the practice had not been, upon indictments, though not ſo alledged, for proceſs of exigent to iſſue? And that ſeems to be the true reaſon of the laſt reſtrictive ſtatute. I do not find it ever was denied, but that upon a preſentment or indictment for the king, proceſs of outlawry lay: and ſo it is expreſsly ſaid to be agreed, in Brooke, title ‘ exigent;’ which cites 8 H. VI [§]. But a number of outlawries have been found, in crimes laid to be contra pacem, without vi et armis, and which could not be committed with force; and this error never aſſigned: which, alone, is deciſive. I think, Mr. Attorney-general produced one as far back as the fifth of Edward the fourth.

The ſecond error aſſigned is as to the proclamations.

The return ſays---‘ I have cauſed public proclamation to be made, in manner and form as I am within commanded..’ This is certainly too looſe: the proclamations are not ſufficiently ſet out, for the court to judge whether they were properly made or not. I thought this error fatal. But Mr. Thurlow ſatisfied me, ‘ that it was unneceſſary to make any proclamation at all.’ The ſtatutes which require proclamations do not extend to this caſe: and they are not required by the common-law. Indeed, this error was in a manner dropped and given up by ſerjeant Glynn, upon his reply: he did not contend, ‘ that they were neceſſary.’ The preſent record, drawn in the Crown-Office and ſettled by the king's counſel, ſhews under what obſcurity and perplexity this matter lies: the reſult of ignorance in the practicers; and productive of a ſhameful confuſion in the precedents of the office. They have not diſtinguiſhed between civil and criminal outlawries: they have not diſtinguiſhed between the manner of proceeding to outlaw in criminal caſes, before and after conviction. All is jumbled together: whatever is required in any caſe, they have applied to all. Circumſtances are unneceſſarily required, and defectively returned; becauſe former miſtakes are copied as precedents, without examination, But, as the proclamations, in this caſe, were nugatory and ſuperfluous, the imperfection of the return is of no conſequence: it is no error.

Of the ſecond ſort of errors, critical and verbal, two are aſſigned: which were argued.

1*ſt*. For that it is not ſhewn, nor does it appear by the return of the ſheriff of Middleſex, ‘ that the defendant was a firſt, ſecond, third, fourth, and fifth time exacted at the county-court of the county of Middleſex;’ as, by the law of the land, he ought to have been, before he was outlawed.

Under this error thus aſſigned, two objections were made: as to the firſt exaction; and as to the ſubſequent.

First,

[*] Vid. 1. H. 5. c. 5. § 1.

[†] 1 Shower 106. Rex. v. Berchet et al. Prynn's Caſe, 5 Mod. 459.

[‡] 2 Hawkins P. C. 260, 261.

[§] Frenche's Caſe, Mich. 26 Eliz. 2. Leonard 200.

[||] The King againſt Pardew, H. 15. G. 2. 1741.

[*] 5 Mod. 463, 464.

[†] 2 Hawkins P. C. l. 2. c. 27. p. 302.

[‡] Lib. 3. p. 127 b.

[§] 18 Edw. 3. ſt. 1.

[||] 18 Edw. 3. ſt. 2. c. 5.

[§] Vide Bro. Abr. Title Exigent and Capias, pl. 29 and Title Proceſs, pl. 16.

Firſt, As to the firſt.---The return is by two men, ſheriff of Middleſex: ‘ At my county-court, held, &c.’ So that two men, making one officer, that is, ſheriff of the county of Middleſex, ſay, ‘ At my court held in the ‘ county of Middleſex.’ To raiſe a doubt, it is neceſſary to go out of the record, into hiſtory and law. We know from thence, that the ſame man might be ſheriff of two counties. Till the thirteenth of Elizabeth, one perſon was ſheriff of Somerſet and Dorſetſhire; and ſo of Suſſex and Surrey; of Oxford and Berks; of Nottingham and Leiceſterſhire: and to this day, the ſame perſon is ſheriff of Cambridge and Huntingdonſhire. Such a ſheriff might by law hold in either, the county-court of the other. 6 H. VII. 15 b In the caſe of the ſheriff of Somerſet, who was then alſo ſheriff of Dorſetſhire, ‘ my court in the county of Somerſet’ was adjudged uncertain. 11 H. VII. 10 a, in a like caſe, Rede Fairfax and Huſſey inclined to think it certain enough; and adjourned the conſideration. But here it is impoſſible to raiſe a doubt. Unleſs the ſheriff of Middleſex may hold the court of another county in Middleſex, ‘ At my county-court,’ can only be the county-court of Middleſex. Two men, ſheriff of Middleſex, never were nor could be ſheriff of any other county. The error is not aſſigned, for want of any technical form of words; but ‘ that it is not ſhewn, nor ‘ does it appear by the return:’ whereas I am of opinion it is ſhewn, and does appear by the return, that the county-court was of Middleſex, and could not poſſibly be the court of any other county.

Secondly---As to the ſubſequent exactions---The objection is, ‘ that it ‘ is not ſhewn, nor does it appear, where the court was held, at which he ‘ was exacted.’ The return, having ſpecified the place where the court was held at which he was firſt exacted, ſtates ſeverally the ſubſequent exactions, ‘ at my court held at the ſame place.’ So that the whole doubt is, ‘ whether the ſame place includes the deſcription of the place referred to:’ which can not be a doubt, in any language of the world. For, in truth, the doubt can be no other than ‘ whether the ſame place means the ſame ‘ place, that is, the place before deſcribed.’

Second critical error. The only other error aſſigned and argued, is---

‘ It is no where expreſsly ſhewn, that the place called Brook-ſtreet, ‘ where the ſeveral county-courts are ſuppoſed to have been held, is in ‘ the county of Middleſex.’ The return ſays---‘ At the houſe known ‘ by the ſign of the Three Tuns in Brook-ſtreet, near Holborn, in the county ‘ of Middleſex.’ The counſel for the defendant contend, that the true conſtruction ought to be, to apply ‘ in the county of Middleſex,’ to Holborn, and not to Brook-ſtreet; and ſo make a ſtop, at Brook-ſtreet. It is impoſſible for me to doubt whether ‘ near Holborn,’ is not part of the deſcription of Brook-ſtreet. It could be added for no other reaſon: it could anſwer no end, to ſay, ‘ near Holborn,’ but as part of the name or deſcription of this Brook-ſtreet, in contradiſtinction to ſome other Brook-ſtreet. It is immaterial, what county Holborn is in: but the ſheriff was bound to ſhew that Brook-ſtreet was in Middleſex. There is no law in this: it is a queſtion of conſtruction. All men can judge of it; and would treat with contempt the judgment of this ſovereign court, if it could be founded upon ſo pitiful a prevarication. It is not permitted to me to ſay ‘ I doubt of the conſtruction,’ unleſs I do doubt; how much ſoever I may wiſh that this outlawry ſhould not ſtand. I am of opinion, that, according to the letter, ſenſe, and grammatical conſtruction of the ſentence, the court was held in ‘ Brook-ſtreet near Holborn; and that ‘ Brook-ſtreet ‘ near Holborn’ lies in the county of Middleſex: and I am perſuaded, there is no man who can think otherwiſe.

Theſe are the errors which have been objected: and this the manner and form in which they are aſſigned. For the reaſons I have given, I can not allow any of them. It was our duty, as well as our inclination, ſedulouſly to conſider whether upon any other ground, or in any other light, we could find an informality which we might allow with ſatisfaction to our own minds, and avow to the world.

But here, let me pauſe——

It is fit to take ſome notice of the various terrors hung out; the numerous crouds which have attended and now attend in and about the Hall, out of all reach of hearing what paſſes in court; and the tumults which, in other places, have ſhamefully inſulted all order and government. Audacious addreſſes in print dictate to us, from thoſe they call the people, the judgment to be given now, and afterwards upon the conviction. Reaſons of policy are urged, from danger to the kingdom, by commotions and general confuſion.

Give me leave to take the opportunity of this great and reſpectable audience, to let the whole world know, all ſuch attempts are vain. Unleſs we have been able to find an error which will bear us out, to reverſe the outlawry; it muſt be affirmed. The conſtitution does not allow reaſons of ſtate to influence our judgments: God forbid it ſhould! We muſt not regard political conſequences, how formidable ſoever they might be: if rebellion was the certain conſequence, we are bound to ſay, ‘ Fiat juſtitia, ‘ ruat cœlum.’ The conſtitution truſts the king with reaſons of ſtate and policy; he may ſtop proſecutions; he may pardon offences; it is his, to judge whether the law or the criminal ſhould yield. We have no election. None of us encouraged or approved the commiſſion of either of the crimes of which the defendant is convicted: none of us had any hand in his being proſecuted. As to myſelf, I took no part (in another place,) in the addreſſes for that proſecution. We did not adviſe or aſſiſt the defendant to fly from juſtice: it was his own act; and he muſt take the conſequences. None of us have been conſulted or had any thing to do with the preſent proſecution. It is not in our power to ſtop it: it was not in our power to bring it on. We can not pardon. We are to ſay, what we take the law to be: if we do not ſpeak our real opinions, we prevaricate with God and our own conſciences.

I paſs over many anonymous letters I have received. Thoſe in print are public: and ſome of them have been brought judicially before the court. Whoever the writers are, they take the wrong way. I will do my duty, unawed. What am I to fear? That mendax infamia from the preſs, which daily coins falſe facts and falſe motives? The lies of calumny carry no terror to me. I truſt, that my temper of mind, and the colour and conduct of my life, have given me a ſuit of armour againſt theſe arrows. If, during this king's reign, I have ever ſupported his government, and aſſiſted his meaſures; I have done it without any other reward, than the conſciouſneſs of doing what I thought right. If I have ever oppoſed, I have done it upon the points themſelves; without mixing in party or faction, and without any collateral views. I honour the king; and reſpect the people: but, many things acquired by the favour of either, are, in my account, objects not worth ambition. I wiſh popularity: but, it is that popularity which follows; not that which is run after. It is that popularity which, ſooner or later, never fails to do juſtice to the purſuit of noble ends, by noble means. I will not do that which my conſcience tells me is wrong, upon this occaſion, to gain the huzzas of thouſands, or the daily praiſe of all the papers which come from the preſs: I will not avoid doing what I think is right, though it ſhould draw on me the whole artillery of libels; all that falſehood and malice can invent, or the credulity of a deluded populace can ſwallow. I can ſay, with a great magiſtrate, upon an occaſion and under circumſtances not unlike, ‘ Ego hoc animo ſemper fui, ut ‘ invidiam virtute partam, gloriam, non invidiam, putarem.’

The threats go further than abuſe: perſonal violence is denounced. I do not believe it: it is not the genius of the worſt men of this country, in the worſt of times. But I have ſet my mind at reſt. The laſt end that can happen to any man, never comes too ſoon, if he falls in ſupport of the law and liberty of his country (for, liberty is ſynonimous to law and government). Such a ſhock, too, might be productive of public good: it might awake the better part of the kingdom out of that lethargy which ſeems to have benumbed them; and bring the mad part back to their ſenſes, as men intoxicated are ſometimes ſtunned into ſobriety.

Once for all, let it be underſtood, ‘ that no endeavours of this kind will ‘ influence any man who at preſent ſits here.’ If they had any effect, it would be contrary to their intent: leaning againſt their impreſſion, might give a bias the other way. But I hope, and I know, that I have fortitude enough to reſiſt even that weakneſs. No libels, no threats, nothing that has happened, nothing that can happen, will weigh a feather againſt allowing the defendant, upon this and every other queſtion, not only the whole advantage he is entitled to from ſubſtantial law and juſtice; but every benefit from the moſt critical nicety of form, which any other defendant could claim under the like objection. The only effect I feel, is an anxiety to be able to explain the grounds upon which we proceed; ſo as to ſatisfy all mankind, ‘ that a flaw of form given way to in this ‘ caſe, could not have been got over in any other.’

From the precedents we have ſeen, it appears, that a ſeries of judgments have required a technical form of words, in the deſcription of the county-court at which an outlaw is exacted: that after the words ‘ at my county-court,’ ſhould be added the name of the county; and after the word ‘ held,’ ſhould be added---‘ for the county of ——— (naming it). Whereas here, the ſheriff ſays, ‘ at my county court,’ without adding---‘ of Middleſex:’ and he ſays---‘ held at the houſe, &c.’ without adding the words, ‘ for the county ‘ of Middleſex,’ after the word ‘ held.’

As to the firſt expreſſion, the caſes begin as far back as the ſeventh of James the firſt. As to the ſecond expreſſion, they begin about the 18th of Charles the ſecond.

If we are compelled by authority, to look upon either expreſſion as technically neceſſary, it is ſufficient upon this occaſion; becauſe, here, both are wanting.

If an outlawry be returned in this manner---“ Ad com. meum ‘ tent. apud Ciceſtriam in comitatu Suſſex, &c.’ it is erroneous; becauſe it is not ſaid “ ad com. meum Suſſex tentum, &c.’* Alder was outlawed for murder; and it was moved for error, that the ſheriff returned---‘ ad com. meum tentum apud D. in ‘ the county of Northumberland,’ and did not ſay, ‘ ad com. ‘ meum Northumbriæ tentum, &c:’ and this was holden to be error †. Among the errors for which, the reporter ſays, the outlawry was reverſed, the ſecond is--- not ſaid ‘ Suffolciæ,’ after ‘ com. meum:’ and this, he ſays, had been a common exception ‡. Three copies have been left with us, from the records: and they are, ‘ ad com. meum § Middleſex tent. &c;’ agreeable to the judgments I have mentioned. Winnington aſſigned error of outlawry: and one, ſaid to be allowed, was, ‘ that the court is ſaid to be held at the county of Hereford;’ and doth not ſay---‘ for the county.’‖ An outlawry was reverſed, becauſe ſaid---‘ ad com. meum, &c.’ and not ſaid ‘ pro ‘ comitatu.’* This term, ſeveral outlawries were reverſed, for want of ‘ pro com.’ or ‘ nec eorum aliquis,’ or ‘ per judicium coronatorum.’† One who was outlawed for the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, now brought a writ of error in his hand to the bar; praying ‘ that it might be read and allowed.’ The outlawry was reverſed. Among the errors aſſigned, one was, ‘ that it did not appear the court was held pro comitatu.’ The other was clearly a fatal objection ‡. After ſtating the caſe, ſir Bartholomew Shower ſays---‘ ſhe brings a writ of error, to reverſe the outlawry: and the error which I aſſigned ‘ ore tenus, was the uſual fault, in not ſaying the county-court ‘ was held pro comitatu.’ The outlawry was reverſed. § This is a very ſtrong authority, to ſhew that in the third of W. & M. it was ſettled ‘ that the words pro comitatu were technically ‘ neceſſary.’ A record of an outlawry has been found, agreeable to this form, eſtabliſhed as neceſſary; and ſays---‘ ad com. ‘ meum tent. pro com. Middleſex, apud le Cheſhire-cheeſe in ‘ Gray's-inn-lane in com. prædict.’*

No caſe, report, or record has been found, ſince the third of queen Ann, which can be of any uſe, either way, upon this point, or any of the errors aſſigned.

The authorities I have ſtated ſtand, to this day, uncontradicted. They are many; and have prevailed above a century. I think, they begun againſt law and reaſon. The former authorities were otherwiſe: the precedent in Dalton is otherwiſe. There is no reaſon for requiring theſe words: there is ſufficient certainty, without them. It is impoſſible to doubt, upon this record, but that the county-court at which the defendant was exacted, was the court of and held for the county of Middleſex. But, this is a criminal caſe, highly penal. Outlaws have had the benefit of this exception, for a great length of time. Can we refuſe it to the defendant? We can not: though I am clearly of opinion, ‘ there was not a colour originally, to hold theſe words to be neceſſary.’

---

* P. 7 Jac. 2. Ro. Abr. 802. Whiting's Caſe.

† Mich. 16 Jac. Alder's Caſe, 2 Roll's Reports 52.

‡ Tr. 13 C. 2. 1 Keble 50, 51. Rex v. Siclemore.

§ Rex v. Hallet, H. 22, 23, C. 2. rotulo 16. Rex v Preſton, H. 22, 23 C. 2. rotulo 17. Rex v. Vernatt. H. 1. 2 J. 2. rotulo 9.

‖ M 18 C. 2. Rex v. Tufton. 2 Keble 128.

* H. 22, 23. C. 2. 1 Vent. 108. anonymous.

† E. 31 Car. 2. 2 Shower 60.

‡ H. 1 J. 2. 3 Mod. 89. anonymous; (S. C. as Rex v Vernatt. left with us from the record.

§ M. 3 W. & M. 1 Show. 309. Rex v. Lady Oneby alias Truder.

* Tr. 9 W. 3. 1697. rotulo 1. Rex v. Bell.

The objection to the blunder between the peace ‘ of the ‘ now,’ and ‘ the * late king,’ after conviction, has not much more ſolidity in it: yet the houſe of lords thought themſelves bound by precedents. And ſo muſt we, had the flaw been diſcovered before judgment. I can not ſay, ‘ that it does not appear upon this re‑ ‘ cord, that the court was of and held for the county of Middleſex:’ becauſe I am clearly of opinion, ‘ that, moſt manifeſtly, it does.’ But I can ſay, that a ſeries of authorities, unimpeached and uncontradicted, from the 7th of James I. as to one expreſſion, and from the 18th of Charles II. as to the other, have ſaid ‘ ſuch words are formally neceſſary:’ I can ſay, that ſuch authority, though begun without law reaſon or common ſenſe, ought to avail the defendant. It would be dangerous, to ſay that any exception allowed ſo long, ſhould now be over-ruled. The exception certainly would not have prevailed, had it been oppoſed at firſt: but, before the third of queen Ann, there being no oppoſition after a writ of error was granted, the court conſidered the crown as conſenting to the reverſal upon any pretence, how ſlight ſoever. Though that is not the caſe now, the neceſſity of the form of words muſt not be canvaſſed; ſince it has been ſo often adjudged neceſſary. The officers of the crown are in fault, for not attending to the form preſcribed, and copying the precedent of the king v. Bell.

* Vide Lookup's caſe.

There can no miſchief or incertainty ariſe from this determination: becauſe, it being once known ‘ what form of words is neceſſary,’ it is eaſy to follow it. But great ſuſpicion and incertainty muſt follow, from this court's allowing a formal exception one day, and diſallowing it another.

I beg to be underſtood, that I ground my opinion ſingly upon the authority of the caſes adjudged; which, as they are on the favourable ſide, in a criminal caſe highly penal, I think ought not to be departed from: and therefore I am bound to ſay that, for want of theſe technical words, the outlawry ought to be reverſed.

The other three judges ſpoke ſeriatim. But, as their arguments tended to ſupport and illuſtrate the ſame doctrine which his lordſhip had laid down; and as they did not differ, in any part, from the opinion given by his lordſhip; I omit, for the ſake of brevity, reporting particularly what they ſaid.

> A rule was accordingly made (in each cauſe) ‘ that the outlawry ‘ be reverſed.’

On the ſame 8th of June 1768,

> Rules were made, for the proſecutor to ſhew cauſe (upon Tueſday then next) why the judgment ſhould not be arreſted; and why the verdict ſhould not be ſet aſide.
>
> And alſo a rule for now remanding the defendant to the cuſtody of the Marſhal, and for bringing him into court again upon Tueſday next.

Accordingly, on Tueſday the 14th of June 1768, the two following points were argued, very ſtrenuouſly and very copiouſly on both ſides: namely, ‘ whether the informations could be exhibited by the ſolicitor‑ ‘ general;’ and ‘ whether the amendment could be made by a ſingle judge ‘ out of court, in the manner before ſpecified.’ The former was objected to, as a ground for arreſting the judgment: the latter, as a ground for a new trial.

Lord Mansfield, as to the motion in arreſt of judgment, adhered to the opinion he had before given, ‘ that the informations were well exhibited by the ſolicitor-general.

As to the motion for a new trial on account of the amendment, he declared his ſatisfaction at the motion's having been made, and the matter ſo fully diſcuſſed and underſtood.

Matters of practice, he obſerved, are not to be known from books. What paſſes at a judge's chambers is matter of tradition: it reſts in memory. In caſes of this kind, judges muſt inquire of their officers. This is done in court, every day, when the practice is diſputed or doubted. It is in its nature official. The officers are better acquainted with it, than the judges. For his own part, neither his education, nor his walk in life before he came into this court, ever led him into any knowledge of the practice of orders made by judges in the vacation. The making this order for the amendment appeared to him to be right, and to be a matter of courſe. It came to him as a matter of courſe, and recommended as ſuch from a gentleman of great experience, who (he knew) would as ſoon have cut off his right hand, as have deceived him by repreſenting this as a thing of courſe, when it was not ſo. Accordingly, he iſſued a ſummons, ‘ to ‘ ſhew cauſe why the amendment ſhould not be made.’ A ſummons always iſſues, before a judge makes an order. A ſummons, therefore, went out, of courſe. Upon the attendance, his lordſhip aſked Mr. Hughes (an old and experienced officer), the defendant's clerk in court, ‘ whether there ‘ was any doubt but that this was amendable.’ He, very rightly, and as was his duty, admitted ‘ that it was amendable, and that he could not ſay ‘ otherwiſe.’ His lordſhip then took down a book in which were entered ſome caſes where informations were amended by a judge's order, juſt before trial; and after reading one or two, Mr. Philips, the defendant's attorney, deſired him not to give himſelf any further trouble. Mr. Philips ſaid indeed, ‘ that he could not conſent to it.’ But he did not object to it, nor contradict it; nor was it objected to, at the trial. The counſel ſaw that there could be no objection made to the order.

Mr. juſtice Blackſtone, in his third volume *, gives the riſe and hiſtory of amendments, very ſhortly and in few words. He ſhews how it ſtood, before the reign of Edward I. in whoſe time, (probably about his 13th year) Britton's treatiſe was publiſhed, in the king's name and by the king's authority: which ſeems intended to give a check to the unwarrantable practices of ſome judges who had made falſe entries on the rolls, to cover their own miſbehaviour. And about the 18th year of his reign, almoſt all the judges, even the moſt able and upright, were proſecuted by him; and ſome of them very heavily fined; and one of the cauſes aſſigned for it, was eraſing and altering records: particularly, ſir Ralph Hengham was fined 800 marks at leaſt, (ſome ſay 7000.) for altering, out of mere compaſſion, a fine ſet upon a very poor man, from 13*s.* 4*d* to 6*s.* 8*d.* Upon this, the judges grew ſo ſtrict, that after inrollment they would not amend their judgments, even to ſet them right. They were ſo alarmed by this ſeverity, that through a fear of being ſaid to do wrong, they heſitated at doing that which was right; and becauſe criminal and clandeſtine alterations, to make a record ſpeak a falſity, were forbidden, they conceived that they might not judicially and publickly amend it, to make it agreeable to truth. But declarations and pleas might always be amended at any time: it was only inrollments that were prohibited by Britton. There never was any diſtinction (as to amendments at the common law) between criminal and civil cauſes; that is, before the † 8 H. VI. of Jeofails. The judges adhered to ſuch ſtrictneſs, that juſtice was entangled in the net of form. The legiſlature was therefore forced to interpoſe; and no leſs than twelve ſtatutes of amendment were made, to remedy theſe opprobrious niceties.

* Book 3. c, 25. p. 407.

† 8 H. 6. c. 12.

The fundamental queſtion here is, ‘ whether an information may be ‘ amended, at common law, at the deſire of the crown, after plea pleaded.’

Numberleſs precedents are produced, from the time of queen Elizabeth, and all through the reigns of James I. and Charles I. and many ſide-bar rules, which ſhew that it was of courſe: for, if it were not of courſe, it would have been moved in court, as every thing not of courſe is.

So long ago as 6 W. III. lord chief juſtice Holt treats it as a known thing, a thing of courſe. 1 Salk. 47. The king againſt Harris. A motion was made, to amend an information for perjury; and oppoſed, becauſe the defendant had pleaded. Et per Holt chief juſtice ‘ as to ‘ amendment after plea pleaded, there is no great matter in that. After a ‘ record has been ſealed up, I have known it amended, even ‘ juſt as it was going to be tried.’ In 12 W. III. * Sir Bartholomew Shower moved to amend an information of forgery, in ten places: and, though oppoſed, the motion was granted, becauſe it made no alteration of the fact; and that, without coſts or imparlance. In the caſe of the king againſt Charleſworth, 2 Stra. 871. the information was for forging a warrant of attorney to acknowledge ſatisfaction upon a judgment of Eaſter term: and, after iſſue joined, the record appearing to be of Hilary term, the information was amended, without coſts (the proſecutor having been admitted a pauper), and without giving the defendant leave to plead de novo. And Hil. 10. Ann. the queen againſt Simmonds was there cited: where the title of an act ſet forth in an information was amended. And there is no authority to the contrary. There can be no doubt therefore of its being amendable; upon the authority of a ſeries of precedents, without any objection, and all theſe printed caſes uncontradicted.

* 1 Salk. 50. anon.

And why ſhould it not be amended? If it had not been amended, the attorney-general would have dropped this information, if he thought there was a ſlip in it; and have brought another. And this would have been more inconvenient to the defendant, and have harraſſed him more: he would have no benefit, and more vexation. This amendment avoids delays, and ſaves expences: it ſaves the defendant the expence of bringing his witneſſes up again. The attorney-general pays no coſts. The defendant never aſked leave to plead again, or to have the trial put off: nor was there any cauſe for it. The defence was not at all varied. The ſubſtance of the charge was not at all altered: it remained the very ſame. The true merits of the cauſe ſtood the very ſame. There is no difference at all, but that the proſecutor muſt prove more. The nature of the paper was the ſame: every objection was equally open to the defendant, and he had the further advantage of any verbal ſlip in ſetting out the libel upon the record.

But it is objected, ‘ that it could not be done out of court.’

Anſwer. It might be done by the court: it might be done at the ſide-bar. And a great deal that may be done in court, is done by judges at chambers, in term-time: in vacation, a great deal more is done by them at chambers; becauſe it can be done no where elſe. Moſt of the precedents of amendments before trial are in the vacation. Lord chief juſtice Lee amended a record of an information, ſent up from York; the miſtake being there diſcovered during the aſſizes: and the record ſo amended was returned, and immediately tried. I am obliged to a gentleman at the bar, who ſent me a caſe of the king againſt King, 19th of March 1746, where Mr. juſtice Foſter ordered the word ‘ diviſion’ to be ſtruck out, and ‘ pariſh’ to be inſerted; though it was ſtrenuouſly oppoſed, and the defendant muſt have been acquitted, if it had ſtood unamended. Mr. juſtice Foſter had applied himſelf particularly to the crown-law; was a ſtrict adherer to legal forms; and had more experience in buſineſs proper to be done out of court, than any other judge.

‘ Whether it was a neceſſary amendment, or not,’ I give no opinion, nor form any.

There is a great difference between amending indictments, and amending informations. Indictments are found upon the oaths of a jury; and ought only to be amended by themſelves: but informations are as declarations in the king's ſuit. An officer of the crown has the right of framing them originally; and may, with leave, amend, in like manner as any plaintiff may do. If the amendment can give occaſion to a new defence, the defendant has leave to change his plea: if it can make no alteration as to the defence, he don't want it. In this caſe, the defendant could not poſſibly plead any other plea.

I am fully ſatisfied, that none of the defendant's counſel or agents ever thought there was the leaſt colour of objection to the order for amendment: but, long after the trial, it occurred to others, that by calling it 'an alteration of the record,' inſtead of 'an order to amend the information,' they who derive all their knowledge and law from libels in the news-papers, might be bewildered and miſled.

Mr. juſtice Yates took notice of a difference which there ſeemed to him to be, between the attorney-general and the maſter of the crown-office: the attorney-general is the officer of the king; the maſter of the crown-office, the officer of the public. Informations exhibited by the king's attorney-general are conſidered as the king's own proſecutions, and are called 'declarations for the king:' therefore no coſts are paid upon them. In the other informations, coſts are often payable.

He ſaid, he was greatly confirmed in his opinion, upon the caſe now before the court, and had the greater reaſon to think it a right one, as his brother Glynn had not, by all his arguments, been able to ſhake it.

He agreed that the ſtatute-power of amending does not extend to criminal proceedings: but in common-law amendments, there is no difference between criminal and civil proceedings. And he cited, and repeated (in part) the caſe of the queen againſt Tutchin, in 6 Mod. 268 to 287.† He cited alſo, to the ſame purport, the caſe of Bondfield qui tam &c. v. Milner, in this court, M. 1 G. III.

† Vide 6. Mod. 274, 282, 283.

The queſtion therefore turns upon what is a common-law amendment.

Many caſes have been cited, of common-law amendments. But there is one, which has not been mentioned: it is the king againſt Goffe, in 1 Lev. 189. It was moved to amend an information of perjury. And it was ruled, that they ſhould give notice of the things to be amended, to the defendant; and he to ſhew cauſe why it ſhould not be amended: for, the court ſaid, 'it might be amended.' The caſe of the king againſt Charleſworth was a very ſtrong one: for, the defendant muſt have been acquitted; and yet that amendment was made without payment of coſts, and without liberty to plead de novo.

Indictments, being upon oath, can not be amended. But informations may be amended; becauſe they are declarations for the king. 2 Viner 394. Title 'amendment and Jeofails,' pl. 12. 12 Mod. 229. The king againſt Lewis. 6 Mod, 281. 1 Stra. 185. Rex v. Nixon.

It is clear, therefore, that informations may be amended, at common-law.

As to their being amended by a judge at chambers---it is, moſt certainly, the practice. Non conſtat 'when it begun:' but it ſeems to have been exerciſed time out of mind; and that the buſineſs of the court could not be done without it. The buſineſs done at chambers is the moſt irkſome part of the office of a judge: but it is greatly for the benefit of the ſubject, and tends to the advancement and expedition of juſtice. It ariſes from the overflowing of the buſineſs of the court; which can not be all tranſacted in court. The order of a judge is ſubject to an appeal to the court: but if acquieſced under, it is as valid as any act of the court. It is common, to apply to the court, 'to diſcharge a judge's order:' but the very courſe of applying to the court, 'to diſcharge the order of a judge, made at chambers,' ſupports the proceeding; and ſhews that the order is valid as to its effect, if it be not diſcharged. Indeed, if it becomes neceſſary to inforce it by attachment, there muſt be a motion 'to make it a rule of court.' The validity of a judge's order can be impeached only two ways: either by appealing to the court, to ſet it aſide; or, if made in vacation, by applying in the next term, to ſet aſide the proceedings that have been had under it. Now, this order was made in vacation. The defendant might have declined going to trial, and might have moved, in the next term, 'to ſet aſide the verdict.' But he acquieſced, and went to trial.

The materiality of this amendment is not in any degree equal to many of thoſe that were made in the caſes that have been cited. The defence was, indeed, made eaſier thereby: for, the word 'tenor' imports a literal copy. It could not vary the nature of the defence: the proof lay upon the crown. If the defendant had had any objection to the alteration, he ſhould have made no defence at the trial: that would have been a conſiſtent conduct. But as he did make a defence, he has acquieſced in it. And yet, if he had made no defence at the trial, the verdict nevertheleſs would have ſtood: for, it could not have been ſet aſide, unleſs the order was a bad one; which it now clearly appears, 'that it was not.' Therefore it ought to be ſupported by the court.

This is a motion for a new trial, after a ſeries of proceedings upon it. The court have indeed ſpontaneouſly relaxed their own rule, in order to give an opportunity of having this matter fully and fairly argued and conſidered: which I am glad of; but I hope, it will not be made a precedent.

Mr. juſtice Aſton.---I entirely concur with my lord and my brother Yates, in diſcharging theſe rules. I think, the importance of this caſe does not conſiſt in the nature of it; but in the noiſe and clamour that it has occaſioned, and the miſrepreſentations that have been thrown out to the public, of the conduct of the judges in the courſe of the proceedings in it; who have been very unjuſtly charged with being induced to it by partial motives.

In the caſe of the queen and Norton, reported in lord Forteſcue's Reports 232, the court agreed that it is a general rule, 'to amend informations at any time, even juſt before trial:' but then it muſt not make the information different. And, to be ſure, it ought not: for, it would make a different defence. In the caſe of Ruſh and Seymour, 10 Mod. 88. it is ſaid, 'that ſtatutes of amendment extend only to pleadings of record; and that pleadings, while in paper, are amendable by common-law; and that it is a motion that the court can not refuſe: but they may refuſe it, if the party deſiring it refuſe to pay coſts, or the amendment deſired ſhould amount to a new plea.' And as to the practice, it was almoſt of courſe, where the amendment made no alteration in the defence. Where it altered the defence, then it was upon terms. There is nothing that I ever looked upon as ſo plain.

Then as to doing it at chambers---the practice of the court has been always ſo. The buſineſs done at chambers is become an immenſe load upon the judges, and is exceedingly troubleſome to them: but it is the practice, the cuſtom of the court; and therefore, the law of the land. And what has been done by the judge at chambers, in the preſent caſe, has been rightly done: if it had not, I ſhould have had no ſcruple in overturning it. But here is not the leaſt colour for that: the order is juſtified by a vaſt number of precedents. I am glad, that it has been thus fully diſcuſſed; to convince the great number of perſons that I ſee attending here, that judges have acted in this caſe, as they do in all others; and that there is no ſort of ground for the ſcandalous intimations that have been induſtriouſly propagated, of their having been influenced by partial or improper motives.

Mr. juſtice Willes concurred in both points.

He declared himſelf to be clearly of opinion, that during the vacancy of the office of the king's attorney-general (which was the preſent caſe), the power of the attorney-general devolves upon the ſolicitor-general for the time being. Conſequently, this information was regularly and properly exhibited.

As to the order for the amendment of the information---he held it to be juſtified by an uninterrupted ſeries of precedents, from the time of W. III. at leaſt. And as the order was right, he ſaw no ground for the obloquy that had been thrown upon the noble perſon who made it. It makes no alteration in the charge: it makes no alteration in the defence. No objection was made to it: no advantage was taken of it. It was acquieſced in: and the cauſe went on to trial. It is authorized by ſeveral caſes, and by a great number of precedents for many years backward. He grounded his opinion, he ſaid, upon the chain and ſeries of precedents for near a century paſt.

He concurred therefore with his lordſhip and his brothers, that both rules be diſcharged.

The court unanimouſly ordered both theſe rules to be diſcharged.

Serjeant Glynn thereupon moved, that the preſent proceedings might be entered upon record, that the defendant might have opportunity of applying to another juriſdiction.

The court told him, they could not go out of the uſual and ordinary method and courſe of proceeding: every thing muſt be done in this caſe, in the ſame manner as in all other proceedings of the like kind.

Mr. Attorney-general then moved for lord Mansfield's report of the evidence (the cauſes having been tried before his lordſhip; at niſi prius).

Whereupon, after the records of the convictions had been read,
Lord Mansfield reported the evidence in each cauſe.

The attorney-general and the ſerjeant made their reſpective obſervations upon the evidence reported.

Mr. Wilkes then applied for the ſentence of the court.

The court told him, it was neceſſary to take ſome time to conſider of it: the conſtant courſe is ſo. They promiſed to do it without delay; and to give Mr. Wilkes notice, when they were ready: but, at preſent, they had not had the leaſt conference together about the puniſhment; nor could they, without great impropriety, have had any, before they had heard all the arguments.

Serjeant Glynn then hinted at his client's being bailed in the mean time.

But the court told him, he knew that could not be.

The defendant was remanded to the cuſtody of the Marſhal.

On Friday the 17th of June 1768,
The court declared their intention of giving final judgment to-morrow; and ordered that the defendant ſhould be brought up accordingly.

On Saturday the 18th of June 1768,
Mr. juſtice Yates (as ſecond judge) pronounced the ſentence of the court in each cauſe; viz.

> On the information for the North Briton, No. 45. a fine of 500*l.* and impriſonment for ten calendar months, and till the fine be paid: on the other information, 500*l.* fine; and impriſonment for twelve calendar months after the expiration of the former ten; and to find ſecurity for his good behaviour for ſeven years, himſelf in 1000*l.* and two ſureties in 500*l.* each; and to be remanded, till the fine ſhould be paid and ſuch ſecurity given.

Mr. Wilkes deſired, that his former impriſonment might be conſidered in the puniſhment now inflicted upon him.

The court aſſured him ‘ that it had been ſo; and that they had fully ‘ conſidered all circumſtances, both for him and againſt him.

Serjeant Glynn then deſired, that Mr. Wilkes might have the benefit of a writ of error to the houſe of lords.

Lord Mansfield anſwered, that this court could not give any particular directions about that matter: he muſt apply to the attorney-general. And he added, that if Mr. Attorney-general would take his advice, he ſhould grant it the moment it was applied for.

Mr. Attorney-general ſaid, he certainly ſhould grant it immediately.

Mr. Wilkes then deſired, that it might be put into ſuch a method, as that he might have the advantage of objecting, in the houſe of lords, to the alterations made in the record by lord Mansfield at his lordſhip's own houſe.

Lord Mansfield told him, that the court could not alter the law.

Mr. Wilkes replied, that he did not wiſh the law to be altered.

Lord Mansfield.---It is impoſſible to alter it in any particular caſe: the ſame courſe muſt be taken in this caſe as is uſual in others of the like kind. The defendant's counſel would adviſe him, his lordſhip ſaid, what were the proper ſteps for him to take, in order to have the opinion of the houſe of lords.

The defendant was remanded.

The rules were drawn up in theſe words——

† (18th June 1768.)

† Saturday next after fifteen days from the day of the Holy Trinity, in the eighth year of king George the third.

Middleſex, the king againſt John Wilkes, Eſq.

The defendant being brought here into court in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea of this court, by virtue of a rule of this court, and being convicted of certain treſpaſſes contempts and grand miſdemeanours, in printing and publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous libel, intitled ‘ the North Briton, No. 45.’ whereof he is impeached, it is ordered that he the ſaid defendant, for his offences aforeſaid, do pay a fine to our ſovereign lord the king, of five hundred pounds of lawful money of Great Britain: and it is further ordered, that he the ſaid defendant be impriſoned in the cuſtody of the ſaid Marſhal for the ſpace of ten calendar months now next enſuing. And it is laſtly ordered, that the ſaid defendant be now remanded to the cuſtody of the ſaid Marſhal, to be by him kept in ſafe cuſtody, in execution of the judgment aforeſaid, and until he ſhall have paid the ſaid fine.

On the motion of Mr. Attorney-general.

By the court.

The ſame againſt the ſame.

The defendant being brought here into court, in cuſtody of the Marſhal of the Marſhalſea of this court, by virtue of a rule of this court; and being convicted of certain treſpaſſes contempts and grand miſdemeanours, in printing and publiſhing an obſcene and impious libel, intitled ‘ An Eſſay on Woman,’ and other impious libels in the information in that behalf ſpecified, whereof he is impeached; and having alſo been convicted of certain other treſpaſſes contempts and miſdemeanours, for printing and publiſhing a certain other libel, intitled ‘ the North Briton, No. 45.’ for which he hath this day been ſentenced, and ordered by this court to pay a fine of five hundred pounds, and to be impriſoned in the cuſtody of the ſaid Marſhal for the ſpace of ten calendar months; it is now ordered by this court, that the ſaid defendant, for his treſpaſſes contempts and miſdemeanours firſt abovementioned, in printing and publiſhing the ſaid obſcene and impious libels, do pay a further fine to our ſovereign lord the king, of five hundred pounds of lawful money of Great Britain; and that the ſaid defendant be further impriſoned in the cuſtody of the ſaid Marſhal, for the ſpace of twelve calendar months, to be computed from and after the determination of his aforeſaid impriſonment for printing and publiſhing the ſaid other libel intitled ‘ the North Briton, No. 45.’ And it is further ordered, that he the ſaid defendant ſhall give ſecurity for his good behaviour for the ſpace of ſeven years, to be computed from and after the end and expiration of the ſaid twelve calendar months to be computed as aforeſaid; to wit, himſelf, the ſaid defendant, in the ſum of one thouſand pounds, with two ſufficient ſureties, in five hundred pounds each. And it is laſtly ordered, that he the ſaid defendant be now remanded to the cuſtody of the ſaid Marſhal, to be by him kept in ſafe cuſtody, in execution of this judgment, and until he ſhall have paid the ſaid fine and given ſuch ſecurity as aforeſaid.

On the motion of Mr. Attorney-general.

By the court.

Afterwards, a writ of error was brought, returnable in parliament, upon each judgment: and both judgments were affirmed, as follows—

Die Lunæ 16° January 1769.

Counſel having been fully heard to argue the errors aſſigned in theſe cauſes, the following queſtions were put to the judges—

‘ Whether an information filed by the king's ſolicitor-general, during ‘ the vacancy of the office of the king's attorney-general, is good in law.’

‘ Whether, in ſuch a caſe, it is neceſſary in point of law, to aver upon ‘ the record, that the attorney-general's office was vacant.’

Upon the ſecond record—

‘ Whether a judgment of impriſonment againſt a defendant, to com- ‘ mence from and after the determination of an impriſonment to which he was ‘ before ſentenced for another offence, is good in law.’

Whereupon the lord chief juſtice of the court of Common Pleas, having conferred with the reſt of the judges preſent, delivered their unanimous opinion upon the ſaid queſtions, with their reaſons.

To the firſt queſtion—that an information filed &c. is good in law.

To the ſecond—that in ſuch a caſe, it is not neceſſary.

To the third—that a judgment of impriſonment &c. is good in law.

Then ordered and adjudged that the judgments of the court of King's Bench be affirmed.

On Wedneſday the 7th of February 1770,

Mr. Davenport moved that the defendant might be brought up, either into court within this term, or before a judge at chambers after the end of it, to enter into the recognizance required of him by the abovementioned rule of court: for, his impriſonment will end upon a day which does not fall within any term; namely, upon Eaſter Tueſday next.

The court told him, they had thought of this already; and they conceived the beſt method would be, to make a rule for his entering into the recognizance before the Marſhal, or ſome other juſtice of the peace for the county of Surrey.

And accordingly, they ordered ſuch a rule to be drawn up: which was done, in theſe words—

Ordered, that at the expiration of the impriſonment of the defendant, by virtue of the judgment of this court pronounced againſt him in this cauſe on Saturday next after fifteen days from the day of the Holy Trinity in the eighth year of the reign of his preſent majeſty, the ſecurity required by the ſaid judgment to be given by him the ſaid defendant for his good behaviour for the ſpace of ſeven years, to wit, himſelf the ſaid defendant in the ſum of 1000*l.* with two ſufficient ſureties in 500*l.* each, may be taken by and before any juſtice of the peace of and for the county of Surrey.

No. VI. The Caſe of Braſs Croſby, Eſq. Lord-Mayor of London, on a Commitment by the Houſe of Commons. Court of Common-Pleas, Eaſter Term, 11 Geo. III. 1771.

[This caſe is from Mr. Serjeant Wilſon's Reports, 3 Wilſ. 188 The hiſtory of the tranſaction of which this caſe was a branch, with the proceedings of the houſe of commons, the reader may poſſeſs himſelf of, by reſorting to the Annual Regiſter for 1771, and Mr. Almon's Debates of the commons in the ſame year. Upon refuſal of the court of Common-Pleas to diſcharge the Lord-Mayor, the court of Exchequer was moved for a habeas corpus; and the caſe was argued by counſel on a like return to that court: but the application there alſo failed of ſucceſs, and the Lord-Mayor was remanded.]

THE lieutenant of the Tower of London was commanded to have before the juſtices of the bench here, the body of Braſs Croſby, eſq. lord-mayor of London, by him detained in the king's priſon, in the Tower of London, by whatſoever name he was called, together with the day, and cauſe of his caption and detention, on Monday next, after three weeks from Eaſter-day; that the ſaid juſtices ſeeing the cauſe, might do that which of right, and according to the law and cuſtom of England, ought to be done; and further, to do and receive what the ſame juſtices here ſhould then conſider in that behalf. And now here, at this day, (to wit) Monday * next, after three weeks from Eaſter-day, in this term cometh the ſaid Braſs Croſby, in his proper perſon, under the cuſtody of Charles Rainſford, eſq. deputy-lieutenant of the Tower of London, brought to the bar here; and the ſaid deputy-lieutenant then here returneth, that before the coming of the ſaid writ, (to wit) on the 27th day of March laſt, the ſaid Braſs Croſby was committed to the Tower of London, by virtue of a certain warrant under the hand of ſir Fletcher Norton, knight, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, which follows in theſe words: ‘ Whereas the houſe of commons have this ‘ day adjudged, that Braſs Croſby, eſq. lord-mayor of London, a member of ‘ this houſe, having ſigned a warrant for the commitment of the meſſenger of ‘ the houſe, for having executed the warrant of the ſpeaker, iſſued under the order ‘ of the houſe, and held the ſaid meſſenger to bail, is guilty of a breach of privilege ‘ of the houſe; and whereas the ſaid houſe hath this day ordered, that the ſaid ‘ Braſs Croſby, eſq. lord-mayor of London, and a member of this houſe, ‘ be for his ſaid offence committed to the Tower of London: theſe are there- ‘ fore to require you to receive into your cuſtody the body of the ſaid Braſs Croſ- ‘ by, eſq. and him ſafely keep during the pleaſure of the ſaid houſe, for which ‘ this ſhall be your ſufficient warrant. Given under my hand, the twenty-fifth ‘ day of March, one thouſand ſeven hundred and ſeventy-one.’ And that this was the cauſe of the caption and detention of the ſaid Braſs Croſby in the priſon aforeſaid; the body of which ſaid Braſs Croſby he hath here ready, as by the ſaid writ he was commanded, &c. Whereupon, the premiſes being ſeen, and fully examined and underſtood by the juſtices here, it ſeemeth to the ſaid juſtices here, that the aforeſaid cauſe of commitment of the ſaid Braſs Croſby, eſq. to the king's priſon of the Tower of London aforeſaid, in the return above ſpecified, is good and ſufficient in law to detain the ſaid Braſs Croſby, eſq. in the priſon aforeſaid: therefore the ſaid Braſs Croſby, Eſq. is by the court here remanded to the Tower of London, &c.

* April 22, 1771.

The argument for the diſcharge of the priſoner.

Serjeants Glynn and Jephſon argued, that it appeared by the return of this habeas corpus, that the cauſe of commitment of the lord-mayor to the Tower of London was inſufficient in law for the detention of him there; and therefore this court ought to diſcharge him out of the cuſtody of the lieutenant of the Tower of London.

Here follows the ſubſtance of ſerjeant Glynn's argument, after the writ and return were filed.

Serjeant Glynn.—The queſtion now before the court, is, whether it does not appear by the return of this writ, that the lord-mayor ought to be diſcharged; and it is a very important and conſtitutional queſtion indeed.

The return ſtates, that the impriſonment of his lordſhip is by virtue of a certain warrant under the hand of ſir Fletcher Norton, knight, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, reciting, that whereas the houſe had adjudged, that his lordſhip having ſigned a warrant for the commitment of a meſſenger of the houſe, for having executed the warrant of the ſpeaker, iſſued under the order of the houſe, and held that meſſenger to bail, is guilty of a breach of privilege of the houſe; and alſo reciting, that the houſe had ordered, that his lordſhip, a member of the houſe, ſhould for his ſaid offence be committed. So that it appears what that breach of privilege is.

When any perſon is brought to this bar by the king's writ of habeas corpus, the judges muſt look into, ſee and conſider the cauſe of his detention, and are bound to do that which of right, and according to the law and cuſtom of England, ought to be done.

Acts done by the higheſt authority are ſubject to the inquiry of the courts in Weſtminſter-hall; whoſe juriſdiction extends not only to inquire into, controul and correct the acts of inferior, but alſo of co-ordinate and ſuperior powers.

A breach of privilege of the houſe of commons is ſtated, and alſo in what manner, and by what fact their privilege was broken; therefore this court muſt determine, whether the fact charged is by law a contempt or breach of privilege. When it is returned, that a perſon was committed by any other court in this Hall, for a contempt generally, without ſpecifying the fact or nature of the contempt, this court cannot inquire into the matter, but muſt remand the priſoner. Every court of juſtice of record in the Hall, muſt neceſſarily have abſolute power to enforce obedience to their own orders, or juſtice could not poſſibly be adminiſtered to the king's ſubjects. The houſe of commons is not a court of juſtice of record, for it cannot adminiſter an oath: it has a certain limited juriſdiction; and this court muſt judge, whether it has not tranſgreſſed, and gone beyond the bounds of its juriſdiction, and muſt pronounce upon it. If the king doth exerciſe any power which is not conformable to law, this court will remedy it. The old writ de homine replegiando did not comprehend the mandates of the king; but the habeas corpus extends to them, and to all acts of power not conformable to law. If the court of Chancery, which is a ſuperior court in civil cauſes, ſhould exceed its juriſdiction, and interfere by injunction in criminal caſes, the inferior court would determine againſt the court of Chancery, and would diſcharge any one from impriſonment whom that court ſhould commit for diſobedience to ſuch injunction.

This court muſt inquire, whether the houſe of commons has not exceeded its lawful juriſdiction. The lord-mayor is charged with a contempt. The queſtion is, whether he is guilty of a contempt; that is to ſay, whether the fact charged upon him amounts by law to a contempt. The houſe of commons makes an order for committing a printer, and that order expreſſes who ſhall take him into cuſtody, namely, the ſerjeant, or deputy ſerjeant at arms of the houſe. The printer is taken into cuſtody by a meſſenger, within the city of London; he complains to the lord-mayor; who examines into his complaint, proceeds judicially, and according to law; and after ſuch examination, according to the beſt of his judgment, is of opinion, that the warrant of ſir Fletcher Norton does not juſtify the taking the printer into cuſtody by a meſſenger of the houſe, in the city of London. How does this interfere with the lawful juriſdiction of the houſe of commons; and how does it exceed the lawful juriſdiction of the lord-mayor, within the city of London? The juriſdiction of the houſe muſt be limited to ſome particular objects: the claim of an unlimited power in this country is abſurd, and deſtroys itſelf. In the great queſtion, in Aſhby and White, about the Aylſbury men, we find, that in a conference between the lords and commons, it was agreed, that the commons cannot, by any vote or reſolution of their own, aſſume or acquire any new juriſdiction or privilege. Here is a warrant under the hand of ſir Fletcher Norton, ſpeaker. Sir Fletcher Norton has no perſonal authority to commit whom he pleaſes. The ſpeaker, as ſuch, has no official authority. Whatever authority he can have, muſt be merely as the inſtrument of the houſe of commons: his act can be valid only by the order of the houſe. But that the warrant is made contrary to the order of the houſe, appears to this court by the return of the habeas corpus; conſequently, the ſpeaker having no authority of his own, and the warrant being contrary to the order, the ſame is invalid. The meſſenger executed the warrant in the city: the ſpeaker had no authority to impower him to execute it in the city of London. The houſe of commons have not an unlimited juriſdiction; the lord-mayor was therefore obliged to examine, whether the act of power exerted by them within the city, was within their juriſdiction. The printer had been charged with printing the ſpeeches of ſome members of the houſe, for which he was ordered to be taken into cuſtody. The lord-mayor thought the houſe of commons had no right to order the printer to be taken into cuſtody by their meſſenger in the city of London, and that the printer ought not to be committed for the act with which he was charged. There is nothing to be pretended in favour of this proceeding of the houſe of commons, but their aſſumed tranſcendent power. Now it would totally deſtroy all the benefit, and the very end of the habeas corpus, if the tranſcendency of any power whatever could blind the eyes of a court of juſtice, and prevent their inquiry into its acts. Such a deciſion by judges ſworn to adminiſter faithfully the laws, would be fatal to every thing that is worth preſerving in our boaſted conſtitution, and would leave the unhappy ſubjects of this country in a ſtate much worſe than a ſtate of ſavage nature. The great chief juſtice Holt was clearly of opinion, and held it for good law, that if it appeared upon the face of the return of a habeas corpus, that what the houſe of commons called a contempt, was not by law a contempt, the perſon committed for it muſt be diſcharged; that the privileges of the houſe of commons are part of the law of the land, and therefore the courts here muſt take notice of them incidentally: and though this was the opinion of a ſingle judge againſt three others, yet it was agreed to and ſupported by the houſe of lords, who, in thoſe days, remembered that they were the hereditary guardians of the people. Again—Holt held, that the order of the houſe of commons forbidding any one to ſeek or purſue a legal remedy remedy againſt their orders, was illegal and naught; and boldly ſaid ſo: and accordingly he was of opinion, that the perſons com-

2 Ld. Raym. 938.

2 Ld. Raym. 1112. mitted for contempt of that order ought to have been diſcharged; though the three other judges were of a contrary opinion; and the perſons were remanded to Newgate. Upon petition to the queen, a writ of error was allowed, and brought; and before it was argued, the parliament for good reaſons was diſſolved: but I will venture to ſay, if it had been argued, there would have been judgment given by the houſe of lords according to Holt's opinion. If the lex et conſuetudo parliamenti, of which we hear ſo much and know ſo little, be indeed a part of the law of the land, the judges are bound to take notice of it, and to decide upon it, as they do upon every other part of the law. It has been ſaid, that lord chief juſtice Holt was ſingle in his opinion; nevertheleſs, I may venture to ſay, that his opinion, in the judgment of every honeſt and unprejudiced mind, will not be found light in the ſcale, againſt that of the three other judges. He was ſingle: but he had truth and integrity with him, as well as the ſtrongeſt arguments on his ſide, which the conference with the lords demonſtrated; arguments which have never yet been, and which cannot now be anſwered. The other three judges differing in opinion from him, there was a writ of error (as I ſaid before) granted, returnable in parliament; and if the temper of the times would have permitted it to have been proceeded in, and the parliament had not been then diſſolved, it may eaſily be collected, from the arguments above referred to, that it would have had from the lords a moſt ſolemn and juſt deciſion.

Lord chief juſtice De Grey.—Brother Glynn, that writ of error, you mention, was never brought before the lords.

Serjeant Glynn.—It is true, my lord, it was never brought directly in queſtion before them; becauſe doubts were ſtarted, whether it was a writ of right, or of favour, which might be refuſed by the particular officer. This occaſioned a petition to the queen, who in anſwer to the petition ſaid, ſhe was come to a reſolution to grant a writ of error, becauſe ſhe was deſirous to have the matter of law ſettled, for the good of her ſubjects: but unhappily for us, the particular circumſtances of thoſe times prevented it; and the parliament was diſſolved.

Lord chief juſtice De Grey.—In all caſes, except treaſon and felony, I think a writ of error is grantable of right. The two houſes addreſſed the queen for different purpoſes. The lords ſaid, it was time enough to decide upon the writ of error, when it came before them.

Serjeant Glynn.—My lord, it is for that reaſon I ſaid, I collect it from other arguments which make it very reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the ſubject would have had ſatisfaction and redreſs from the deciſion of the houſe of lords.

The queſtion at preſent is, whether this court has not power to examine into the juriſdiction of the houſe of commons? I ſubmit it, with deference to the court, that you have lawful power to enquire, whether the houſe of commons had any juriſdiction in this caſe, and that their privileges are not to be ſuppoſed ſo tranſcendent and myſtical, as to exclude all enquiry. My lord, I deny that the mayor's act is a breach of privilege of the houſe of commons. The lord-mayor was in full poſſeſſion of juriſdiction in the caſe; he was obliged to decide upon the queſtion before him; he was obliged to form an opinion upon a caſe within his juriſdiction. Shall his opinion be adjudged a contempt? Is this the law of the land; that when different courts, having juriſdiction of the ſame nature, differ in their deciſions, they are guilty of contempts one againſt the other, and may be puniſhed for ſuch contempts? It is no contempt in me, a private man, to have an opinion different from the greateſt authorities in this kingdom. It was the lord-mayor's opinion upon the caſe before him; he was bound by his oath to act purſuant to that opinion; it was his bounden duty to act accordingly: he would have been perjured, if, out of reſpect for any perſons, he had not obeyed the call of his conſcience. It was no crime for him to entertain the opinion. Entertaining it, he was bound to declare it, and it was his duty to act in conſequence of it. The conſcientious act of a magiſtrate, within the limits of his juriſdiction, can never be a contempt, or puniſhable. Unleſs a magiſtrate acts wrong from corrupt motives, he cannot be puniſhed. But ſuppoſe for a moment, the lord-mayor did not act from his opinion, but from ſome corrupt motive, it is not the houſe of commons, but a jury, that muſt judge of it. The duty of a magiſtrate differs widely from that of an officer. From the latter, a full and ready obedience is required to be paid to the orders of the court whoſe officer and miniſter he is; and ſuch orders, rightly purſued and executed by him, are his ſufficient juſtification: but the magiſtrate is bound by his oath, and has an opinion and judgment of his own which he muſt follow; and he is anſwerable to the law, and cannot be juſtified for the breach of his oath and the law, by any order or reſolution of the greateſt authority.

Your lordſhips are now called upon to ſay, whether the lord-mayor of London, in a caſe where he had indiſputable juriſdiction, acting by his opinion, and according to his oath, is guilty of a contempt of the houſe of commons, and can by law be impriſoned.

Serjeant Jephſon.—My lords, as I ſhall not have an opportunity of anſwering any argument from the bench, nor can poſſibly know the objections your lordſhips may have to diſcharging the lord-mayor out of cuſtody, I ſhall endeavour to anticipate and anſwer ſuch objections againſt diſcharging him, as occur to me, and may poſſibly be made by the court.

The queſtion is, whether ſufficient cauſe appears to the court upon the return of this writ, to impriſon the lord-mayor? If no legal cauſe appears for detaining him in cuſtody, he muſt be diſcharged.

I ſhall conſider the nature, the return, and the conſequence of the writ of habeas corpus. It is a prerogative writ of right, to inquire into the cauſe of the impriſonment of any of the king's ſubjects. If a legal cauſe of detention doth not appear upon the return of the writ, the ſubject muſt be diſcharged, and ſet at liberty: therefore, if a legal cauſe does not appear upon the return of this writ, the lord-mayor muſt be diſcharged out of cuſtody. This poſition cannot be denied.

It appears from the caſes of ſir William Thickneſſe, 4 Inſt. 434. Sir William Chauncey, 12 Rep. 83. and from Buſhel's caſe, Vaugh. 135, &c. that the cauſe of impriſonment ought to be as ſpecifically returned to thoſe who judge upon the writ of habeas corpus, as it did to thoſe who firſt committed the party. Again, Bethell's Caſe, 1 Salk. 348. where the commitment is not to the legal and immediate officer, it is naught.

Again, Search's caſe, 1 Leon. 70, where the queen had taken a perſon into her protection, who, notwithſtanding, was arreſted; and the perſon arreſting committed, and on a habeas corpus was diſcharged. See again Doctor Alphonſo's caſe, 2 Bulſt. 259. where the return was bad, no cauſe being therein ſhewed; alſo Thomas Barkham's caſe, Cro. Car. 507. the like caſe, ibid. 579. 1 Roll. Rep. 192. 218. Apſley's caſe, and Ruſwell's caſe, ibid. 245. Codde's caſe. The determination in all the caſes the ſame: if the legal charge is not returned, the perſon muſt be diſcharged. The court muſt judge of the cauſe of commitment returned: If not, why ſhould the writ command the return of the cauſe? The cauſe is returned, that the court may judge, whether the perſon is intitled to his liberty, or not. It is no objection in this caſe, to ſay, that the houſe of commons having a power to commit, therefore this court muſt not judge of the cauſe of commitment returned; for this would prove too much; becauſe it would go to every other court having juriſdiction to commit. Suppoſe the court of King's Bench, which is equal, and perhaps ſuperior in ſome reſpect to this court, ſhould commit a perſon; and the perſon committed ſhould be brought here by habeas corpus; this court would certainly take notice, and inquire into the cauſe returned; and if this court thought it not a ſufficient cauſe, would diſcharge the perſon; otherwiſe, how would the end of bringing the writ of habeas corpus be anſwered?

It is no objection in this caſe, to ſay, that the court cannot examine the cauſe as ſtated in the return, becauſe the court would then determine upon the privileges of the houſe of commons: the court muſt, and doth frequently determine upon the privileges of parliament, when they come incidentally before them. See the earl of Banbury's caſe, 2 Ld. Raym. 1247. Salk. 512. 2 Stra. 987. 8. This court made no ſort of heſitation to determine in Wilkes's caſe, upon the privilege of parliament. 2 Wilſon 151. Why then ſhould they not now enter into this queſtion, touching the privilege of parliament? In lord Shafteſbury's and Mr. Murray's caſes, the returns were general, for contempts of the houſe, without ſtating the particular facts; but the facts of the ſuppoſed contempt in this caſe appear, which we contend cannot by any legal conſtruction amount to a contempt, and therefore that the lord-mayor muſt be diſcharged. The houſe of commons having determined it to be a contempt, does not alter the caſe: a fact does not become a contempt by being recited to be ſuch. The court muſt conſider, whether the warrant for my lord-mayor's commitment is the warrant of the ſpeaker as ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, as ſir Fletcher Norton may act in a double capacity.

Lord chief juſtice De Grey.—Sir Fletcher Norton ſigns himſelf ſpeaker.

Serjeant Jephſon.—His ſigning himſelf ſpeaker will not help the warrant, if the cauſe is not ſufficient; and the court may rather ſuppoſe the miſtake committed by ſir Fletcher Norton in his private capacity, than by the houſe of commons. Suppoſe ſome future ſpeaker, of ſome future houſe of commons, ſhould recite in his warrant, that the houſe of commons had adjudged it a breach of privilege, and contempt, to ſue out a ſtatute of bankrupt againſt one of their members, which by act of parliament any one is permitted to do; and ſhould in conſequence commit a perſon for ſuch legal act: if the perſon was brought by writ of habeas corpus before this court, would not the court take cognizance of the commitment? Would they not determine it no breach of privilege? Are acts of parliament of leſs force than ſuch a recital in a ſpeaker's warrant? Suppoſe a perſon is committed by a ſimilar warrant, for proceeding according to act of parliament againſt a member of the houſe in an action of debt; ſhall he have no remedy from the law, which led him into the ſuppoſed tranſgreſſion? Suppoſe a juſtice of peace ſhould commit a member of the houſe of commons for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, and the ſpeaker's warrant ſhould recite it to be a contempt; will this court ſay, they can take no cognizance of ſuch a commitment by the houſe of commons? Suppoſe all the officers of this court ſhould be recited in the ſpeaker's warrant to be in contempt, for executing the proceſs of this court, will this court give no remedy; and muſt this and every other court of juſtice be annihilated, whenever the ſpeaker's warrant declares all its officers in contempt? How is it poſſible to diſtinguiſh the preſent caſe from thoſe I have mentioned, if you muſt not examine the cauſe returned, but ſay it is ſufficient if a contempt is charged? Serjeant Hawkins, in his 2 vol. 110. gives us clear enough his thoughts upon this ſubject. He ſays there, (among other things) that if a ſubject ſhould be committed by either of the houſes of parliament, it cannot be imagined that the law, which favours nothing more than the liberty of the ſubject, ſhould give us a remedy againſt commitments by the king himſelf, appearing to be illegal, and give us no manner of redreſs againſt a commitment by our fellow-ſubjects, equally appearing to be unwarranted.

I think I have now ſufficiently cleared this caſe from all the objections that can be brought againſt its being inquired into. The queſtion therefore is, whether on the return there appears ſufficient cauſe of detention? Three cauſes are mentioned, and all urged as breaches of privilege. 1. For diſcharging a printer; 2. for having ſigned a warrant for the commitment of the meſſenger; and, 3. for holding him to bail.

To make the lord-mayor guilty of the firſt ſuppoſed contempt, it ought ſurely to appear to the court, that Miller the printer was in the legal cuſtody of the meſſenger. Now, Miller never was in the legal cuſtody of the meſſenger; for the warrant to take up Miller was directed to the ſerjeant at arms of the houſe of commons, or his deputy, and not to the meſſenger; ſo that Miller was in the illegal cuſtody of the meſſenger, therefore the lord-mayor did right.—Miller was ordered into the cuſtody of the ſerjeant at arms, or his deputy; but the contrary appears upon the return, in the recital of the order: for that intimates, that he was taken into cuſtody by the meſſenger, by virtue of the warrant of the ſpeaker of the houſe, iſſued under the order of the houſe. Miller was taken into cuſtody by the meſſenger in the city of London, neither the ſerjeant at arms or his deputy being preſent. The meſſenger, I ſay, was guilty of falſe impriſonment, having no warrant directed to himſelf, nor acting in aid and aſſiſtance of the ſerjeant at arms, or his deputy, to whom the warrant to take up Miller was directed, for neither of them were preſent; ſo that if an action of falſe impriſonment was to be brought againſt the meſſenger, he could not juſtify what he has done: and if he cannot juſtify in an action of falſe impriſonment, how could he juſtify before the lord-mayor? As for the other ſuppoſed contempt, of ſigning a warrant againſt the meſſenger, and holding him to bail; the meſſenger had been guilty of an aſſault and falſe impriſonment, in taking Miller the printer into cuſtody, in the city of London, without any legal warrant or authority: what contempt is it to ſign a warrant againſt the meſſenger?

Gould, juſtice.—The meſſenger was committed for having executed a warrant of the ſpeaker.

In the return, it is a warrant for the commitment of the meſſenger.

Serjeant Jephſon.—That does not appear; your lordſhips cannot know that; for the return only ſays, for ſigning a warrant againſt the meſſenger. For theſe reaſons, I pray the lord-mayor may be diſcharged out of the cuſtody of the lieutenant of the Tower of London.

Opinion of the court.

Lord chief juſtice De Grey.—If either myſelf, or any of my brothers on the bench, had any doubt in this caſe, we ſhould certainly have taken ſome time to conſider, before we had given our opinions; but the caſe ſeems ſo very clear to us all, that we have no reaſon for delay.

The writ by which the lord-mayor is now brought before us, is a habeas corpus at common law, for it is not ſigned per ſtatutum. It is called a prerogative writ for the king; or a remedial writ: and this writ was properly adviſed by the counſel for his lordſhip, becauſe all the judges (including Holt) agreed, that ſuch a writ as the preſent caſe required, is not within the ſtatute. This is a writ by which the ſubject has a right of remedy to be diſcharged out of cuſtody, if he hath been committed, and is detained contrary to law; therefore the court muſt conſider, whether the authority committing, is a legal authority. If the commitment is made by thoſe who have authority to commit, this court cannot diſcharge or bail the party committed; nor can this court admit to bail, one charged or committed in execution. Whether the authority committing the lord-mayor, is a legal authority or not, muſt be adjudged by the return of the writ now before the court. The return ſtates the commitment to be by the houſe of commons, for a breach of privilege, which is alſo ſtated in the return; and this breach of privilege or contempt is, as the counſel has truly deſcribed it, threefold; diſcharging a printer in cuſtody of a meſſenger by order of the houſe of commons; ſigning a warrant for the commitment of the meſſenger, and holding him to bail; that is, treating a meſſenger of the houſe of commons as acting criminally in the execution of the orders of that houſe. In order to ſee whether that houſe has authority to commit, ſee Co. 4 Inſt. 23. Such an aſſembly muſt certainly have ſuch authority; and it is legal, becauſe neceſſary. Lord Coke ſays they have a judicial power; each member has a judicial ſeat in the houſe: he ſpeaks of matters of judicature of the houſe of commons, 4 Inſt. 23. The houſe of commons, without doubt, have power to commit perſons examined at their bar touching elections, when they prevaricate or ſpeak falſly; ſo they have for breaches of privilege; ſo they have in many other caſes. Thomas Long gave the mayor of Weſtbury 4*l.* to be elected a burgeſs: he was elected, and the mayor was fined and impriſoned, and Long removed. Arthur Hall, a member, was ſent to the Tower, for publiſhing the conferences of the houſe. 4 Inſt. 23. This power of committing muſt be inherent in the houſe of commons, from the very nature of its inſtitution, and therefore is part of the law of the land. They certainly always could commit in many caſes. In matters of elections, they can commit ſheriffs, mayors, officers, witneſſes, &c. and it is now agreed that they can commit generally for all contempts. All contempts are either puniſhable in the court contemned, or in ſome higher court. Now the parliament has no ſuperior court; therefore the contempts againſt either houſe can only be puniſhed by themſelves. The ſtat. 1 Jac. I. cap. 13. ſect. 3. ſufficiently proves that they have power to puniſh: it is in theſe words: viz. 'Provided always, that this act, or any thing therein con-'tained, ſhall not extend to the diminiſhing of any puniſhment to be 'hereafter by cenſure in parliament inflicted upon any perſon which 'hereafter ſhall make, or procure to be made, any ſuch arreſt as is afore-'ſaid.' So that it is moſt clear, the legiſlature have recognized this power of the houſe of commons. In the caſe of the Ayleſbury men, the counſel admitted, lord chief juſtice Holt owned, and the houſe of lords acknowledged, that the houſe of commons had power to commit for contempt and breach of privilege. Indeed, it ſeems, they muſt have power to commit for any crime, becauſe they have power to impeach for any crime. When the houſe of commons adjudge any thing to be a contempt, or a breach of privilege, their adjudication is a conviction, and their commitment in conſequence, is execution; and no court can diſcharge or bail a perſon that is in execution by the judgment of any other court. The houſe of commons therefore having an authority to commit, and that commitment being an execution, the queſtion is, what can this court do? It can do nothing when a perſon is in execution by the judgment of a court having a competent juriſdiction: in ſuch caſe, this court is not a court of appeal.

It is objected, 1. That the houſe of commons are miſtaken, for that they have not this power, this authority; 2. That ſuppoſing they have, yet in this caſe they have not uſed it rightly and properly; and 3. That the execution of their orders was irregular. In order to judge, I will conſider the practice of the courts in common and ordinary caſes. I do not find any caſe where the courts have taken cognizance of ſuch execution, or of commitments of this kind: there is no precedent of Weſtminſter-hall interfering in ſuch a caſe. In ſir J. Paſton's caſe, 13 Rep. there is a caſe cited from the year-book, where it is held that every court ſhall determine of the privilege of that court: beſides, the rule is, that the court of remedy muſt judge by the ſame as the court which commits. Now this court cannot take cognizance of a commitment by the houſe of commons, becauſe it cannot judge by the ſame law; for the law by which the commons judge of their privileges is unknown to us. If the court of Common-Pleas ſhould commit a perſon for a contempt, the court of King's-Bench would not inquire into the legality or particular cauſe of commitment, if a contempt was returned; yet in ſome caſes the court of King's-Bench is a court of inquiry, but in this caſe is only co-ordinate with this court. In the caſe of Chambers, Cro. Car. 168. Chambers was brought up by habeas corpus out of the Fleet; and it was returned, that he was committed by virtue of a decree in the Star-Chamber, by reaſon of certain words he uſed at the council-table, &c. for which he was cenſured to be committed to the Fleet, till he made his ſubmiſſion at the council-table, and paid a fine of 2000 l. and at the bar he prayed to be delivered, becauſe the ſentence was not warranted by any law or ſtatute: for the ſtatute 3 Hen. VII. which is the foundation of the court of Star-Chamber, doth not give them any authority to puniſh for words only. But all the court informed him, that the court of Star-Chamber was not erected by the ſtat. 3 Hen. VII. but was a court many years before, and one of the moſt high and honourable courts of juſtice; and to deliver one who was committed by the decree of one of the courts of juſtice, was not the uſage of this court; and therefore he was remanded. The courts of B. R. or C. B. never diſcharged any perſon committed for contempt, in not anſwering in the court of Chancery, if the return was for a contempt. If the Admiralty court commits for a contempt, or one be taken up and committed on an excommunicato capiendo, this court never diſcharges the perſons committed. Formerly, when many abuſes were committed, and the people could not obtain a remedy, the ſubject was not contented with the ancient habeas corpus, but did not complain of the courts for refuſing them what they could not by law grant them: inſtead of that, they ſought redreſs by petition to the throne. In chief juſtice Wilmot's time, a perſon was brought by habeas corpus before this court, who had been committed by the court of Chancery of Durham. That court being competent, and having juriſdiction, the man was not diſcharged, but recommitted. How then can we do any thing in the preſent caſe, when the law by which the lord-mayor is committed, is different from the law by which he ſeeks to be relieved? He is committed by the law of parliament, and yet he would have redreſs from the common law. The law of parliament is only known to parliament-men, by experience in the houſe. Lord Coke ſays, every man looks for it, but few can find it. The houſe of commons only know how to act within their own limits. We are not a court of appeal. We do not know certainly the juriſdiction of the houſe of commons. We cannot judge of the laws and privileges of the houſe, becauſe we have no knowledge of thoſe laws and privileges. We cannot judge of the contempts thereof: we cannot judge of the puniſhment thereof.

I wiſh we had ſome code of the law of parliament; but till we have ſuch a code, it is impoſſible we ſhould be able to judge of it. Perhaps a contempt in the houſe of commons, in the Chancery, in this court, and in the court of Durham, may be very different; therefore we cannot judge of it, but every court muſt be ſole judge of its own contempts. Beſides, as the court cannot go out of the return of this writ, how can we enquire into the truth of the fact, as to the nature of the contempt? We have no means of trying whether the lord-mayor did right or wrong. This court cannot ſummon a jury to try the matter. We cannot examine into the fact. Here are no parties in litigation before the court. We cannot call in any body. We cannot hear any witneſſes, or depoſitions of witneſſes. We cannot iſſue any proceſs. We are even now hearing ex parte, and without any counſel on the contrary ſide. Again, if we could determine upon the contempts of any other court, ſo might the other courts of Weſtminſter-Hall; and what confuſion would then enſue! none of us knowing the law by which perſons are committed by the houſe of commons. If three perſons were committed for the ſame breach of privilege, and applied ſeverally to different courts, one court perhaps would bail, another court diſcharge, a third re-commit.

Two objections have been made, which I own have great weight; becauſe they hold forth, if purſued to all poſſible caſes, conſequences of moſt important miſchief. 1*ſt*, It is ſaid, that if the rights and privileges of parliament are legal rights, for that very reaſon the court muſt take notice of them, becauſe they are legal. And 2*dly*, If the law of parliament is part of the law of the land, the judges muſt take cognizance of one part of the law of the land, as well as of the other. But theſe objections will not prevail. There are two ſorts of privileges which ought never to be confounded; perſonal privilege, and the privilege belonging to the whole collective body of that aſſembly. For inſtance, it is the privilege of every individual member, not to be arreſted. If he was arreſted, before the ſtat. 12 & 13 W. III. the method in Weſtminſter-Hall was, to diſcharge him by writ of privilege under the great ſeal, which was in the nature of a ſuperſedeas to the proceedings; and as ſoon as it came into the court of B. R. and was pleaded there, then it became a record, and the pleading concluded, ſi curia domini regis placitum prædictum cognoſcere velit aut debeat. The ſtat. 11 & 12 W. III. has altered this, and there is now no occaſion to plead the privilege of a member of parliament. 2 Stran. 985. Holiday & al' verſus colonel Pitt. There is a great difference between matters of privilege coming incidentally before the court, and being the point itſelf directly before the court. In the firſt caſe, the court will take notice of them, becauſe it is neceſſary, in order to prevent a failure of juſtice. As in lord Banbury's caſe, where the court of King's-Bench determined againſt the determination of the houſe of lords: but in that caſe they conſidered the legality and validity of the letters patent, without regarding the other right of a ſeat in the houſe of lords, with which the court did not concern themſelves. The counſel at the bar have not cited one caſe where any court of this Hall ever determined a matter of privilege which did not come incidentally before them. If a queſtion is to be determined in this court touching a deſcent, whereby property is to be determined, and which depends upon legitimacy; that is, whether the father and mother were married lawfully; this court muſt determine by the biſhop's certificate. But in ſome caſes, where legitimacy of marriage does not come in queſtion, but cohabitation only for a great length of time, which is evidence of a marriage, comes in queſtion, this court will determine according to the verdict of a jury, although the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall go by a different rule from the ſpiritual courts. But the preſent caſe differs much from thoſe which the court will determine; becauſe it does not come incidentally before us, but is brought before us directly, and is the whole point in queſtion; and to determine it, we muſt ſuperſede the judgment and determination of the houſe of commons, and a commitment in execution of that judgment.

Another objection has been made, which likewiſe holds out to us, if purſued in all its poſſible caſes, ſome dreadful conſequences; and that is, the abuſes which may be made by juriſdictions from which there is no appeal, and for which abuſes there is no remedy: but this is unavoidable; and it is better to leave ſome courts to the obligation of their oaths. In the caſe of a commitment by this court or the King's-Bench, there is no appeal. Suppoſe the court of B. R. ſets an exceſſive fine upon a man for a miſdemeanour, there is no remedy, no appeal to any other court. We muſt depend upon the diſcretion of ſome courts. A man not long ago was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, by this court of Common-Pleas, for a contempt. Some may think this very hard, to be done without a trial by jury; but it is neceſſary. Suppoſe the courts ſhould abuſe their juriſdiction, there can be no remedy for this: it would be a public grievance; and redreſs muſt be ſought from the legiſlature. The laws can never be a prohibition to the houſes of parliament; becauſe, by law, there is nothing ſuperior to them. Suppoſe they alſo, as well as the courts of law, ſhould abuſe the powers which the conſtitution has given them, there is no redreſs; it would be a public grievance. The conſtitution has provided checks to prevent its happening; it muſt be left at large; it was wiſe to leave it at large: ſome perſons, ſome courts, muſt be truſted with diſcretionary powers; and though it is poſſible, it is in the higheſt degree improbable, that ſuch abuſes ſhould ever happen; and the very ſuppoſal is anſwered by ſerjeant Hawkins, in the place cited at the bar. As for the caſe of the Chancery committing for crimes, that is a different thing, becauſe the Chancery has no criminal juriſdiction; but if that court commits for contempts, the perſons committed will not be diſcharged by any other court. Many authorities may be drawn from the reign of Charles, but thoſe were in times of conteſt. At preſent, when the houſe of commons commits for contempt, it is very neceſſary to ſtate what is the particular breach of privilege; but it would be a ſufficient return, to ſtate the breach of privilege generally. This doctrine is fortified by the opinion of all the judges, in the caſe of lord Shafteſbury, and I never heard this deciſion complained of till 1704. Though they were times of heat, the judges could have no motive in their deciſion, but a regard to the laws. The houſes diſputed about juriſdiction, but the judges were not concerned in the diſpute, As for the preſent caſe, I am perfectly ſatisfied, that if lord Holt himſelf were to have determined it, the lord-mayor would be remanded. In the caſe of Mr. Murray, the judges could not heſitate concerning the contempt by a man who refuſed to receive his ſentence in a proper poſture. All the judges agreed, that he muſt be remanded, becauſe he was committed by a court having competent juriſdiction. Courts of juſtice have no cognizance of the acts of the houſes of parliament, becauſe they belong ad aliud examen. I have the moſt perfect ſatisfaction in my own mind in that determination. Sir Martin Wright, who felt a generous and diſtinguiſhed warmth for the liberty of the ſubject; Mr. juſtice Deniſon, who was ſo free from connections and ambition of every kind; and Mr. juſtice Foſter, who may be truly called the magna charta of liberty of perſons, as well as fortunes; all theſe revered judges concurred in this point: I am therefore clearly and with full ſatisfaction of opinion, that the lord-mayor muſt be remanded.

Gould, juſtice.—I entirely concur in opinion with my lord chief juſtice, that this court hath no cognizance of contempts or breach of privilege of the houſe of commons: they are the only judges of their own privileges; and that they may be properly called judges, appears in 4 Inſt. 47. where my lord Coke ſays, an alien cannot be elected of the parliament, becauſe ſuch a perſon can hold no place of judicature. Much ſtreſs has been laid upon an objection, that the warrant of the ſpeaker is not conformable to the order of the houſe; and yet no ſuch thing appears upon the return, as has been pretended. The order ſays, that the lord-mayor ſhall be taken into the cuſtody of the ſerjeant or his deputy; it does not ſay, by the ſerjeant or his deputy. This court cannot know the nature and power of the proceedings of the houſe of commons: it is founded on a different law: the lex et conſuetudo parliamenti is known to parliament-men only. Trewynnard's caſe, Dier 59, 60. When matters of privilege come incidentally before the court, it is obliged to determine them to prevent a failure of juſtice. It is true this court did, in the inſtance alluded to by the counſel at the bar, determine upon the privilege of parliament in the caſe of a libel; but then that privilege was promulged and known; it exiſted in records and law-books, and was allowed by parliament itſelf. But even in that caſe, we now know that we were miſtaken; for the houſe of commons have ſince determined, that privilege does not extend to matters of libel. The caſes produced reſpecting the High-Commiſſion Court, &c. are not to the preſent purpoſe, becauſe thoſe courts had not a legal authority. The reſolution of the houſe of commons is an adjudication, and every court muſt judge of its own contempts.

Wilkes's caſe, 2 Wilſon 151.

Blackſtone, juſtice.—I concur in opinion, that we cannot diſcharge the lord-mayor. The preſent caſe is of great importance, becauſe the liberty of the ſubject is materially concerned. The houſe of commons is a ſupreme court, and they are judges of their own privileges and contempts, more eſpecially with reſpect to their own members. Here is a member committed in execution by the judgment of his own houſe. All courts, by which I mean to include the two houſes of parliament, and the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, can have no controul in matters of contempt. The ſole adjudication of contempts, and the puniſhment thereof, in any manner, belongs excluſively, and without interfering, to each reſpective court. Infinite confuſion and diſorder would follow, if courts could by writ of habeas corpus examine and determine the contempts of others. This power to commit reſults from the firſt principles of juſtice; for if they have power to decide, they ought to have power to puniſh. No other court ſhall ſcan the judgment of a ſuperior court, or the principal ſeat of juſtice. As I ſaid before, it would occaſion the utmoſt confuſion, if every court of this Hall ſhould have power to examine the commitments of the other courts of the Hall for contempts; ſo that the judgment and commitment of each reſpective court, as to contempts, muſt be final, and without controul. It is a confidence that may, with perfect ſafety and ſecurity, be repoſed in the judges, and the houſes of parliament. The legiſlature ſince the Revolution (ſee 9 & 10 W. III. c. 15.) have created many new contempts. The objections which are brought of abuſive conſequences prove too much, becauſe they are applicable to all courts of dernier reſort: et ab abuſu ad uſum non valent conſequentia, is a maxim of law as well as of logic. General convenience muſt always outweigh partial inconvenience. Even ſuppoſing (which, in my conſcience, I am far from ſuppoſing) that in the preſent caſe the houſe has abuſed its power, I know, and am ſure, that the houſe of commons are both able and well inclined to do juſtice. How prepoſterous is the preſent murmur and complaint! The houſe of commons have this power only in common with all the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall: and if any perſons may be ſafely truſted with this power, they muſt ſurely be the commons, who are choſen by the people; for their privileges and powers are the privileges and powers of the people. There is a great fallacy in my brother Glynn's whole argument, when he makes the queſtion to be, whether the houſe have acted according to their rights or not? Can any good man think of involving the judges in a conteſt with either houſe of parliament, or with one another? And yet this manner of putting the queſtion would produce ſuch a conteſt. The houſe of commons is the only judge of its own proceedings. Holt differed from the other judges in this point; but we muſt be governed by the eleven, and not by the ſingle one. It is a right inherent in all ſupreme courts. The houſe of commons have always exerciſed it. Little nice objections of particular words and forms, and ceremonies of execution, are not to be regarded in the acts of the houſe of commons. It is our duty to preſume the orders of that houſe, and their execution, are according to law. The habeas corpus in Murray's caſe was at common law. I concur intirely with my lord chief juſtice.

Nares, juſtice.—I ſhall ever entertain a moſt anxious concern for whatever regards the liberty of the ſubject. I have not the vanity to think I can add any thing to the weight of the arguments uſed by my lord chief juſtice and my brothers. I have attended with the utmoſt induſtry to every caſe and argument that has been produced, and moſt heartily and readily concur with my lord chief juſtice and my brothers.

The lord-mayor was remanded to the Tower.

No. VII. The Caſe of James Sommerſett, a Negro, on a Habeas Corpus, King's Bench, 1771 and 1772.

[The following caſe was firſt printed by the editor of this volume of State Trials ſoon after the court's determination. It is here given from the ſecond edition, which was publiſhed in the year 1775, being the ſame as the firſt, except in a ſlight alteration of one of the notes.

[In Mr. Loftt's Reports, there is a note of the arguments of all the counſel, and the judgment of the court as delivered by lord Mansfield; to which the editor begs leave to refer the Reader.]

ON the third of December 1771, affidavits were made by Thomas Walklin, Elizabeth Cade, and John Marlow, that James Sommerſett, a negro, was confined in irons on board a ſhip called the Ann and Mary, John Knowles commander, lying in the Thames, and bound for Jamaica; and lord Mansfield, on an application ſupported by theſe affidavits, allowed a writ of habeas corpus, directed to Mr. Knowles, and requiring him to return the body of Sommerſett before his lordſhip, with the cauſe of detainer.

Mr. Knowles on the 9th of December produced the body of Sommerſett before lord Mansfield, and returned for cauſe of detainer, that Sommerſett was the negro ſlave of Charles Steuart, eſq. who had delivered Sommerſett into Mr. Knowles's cuſtody, in order to carry him to Jamaica, and there ſell him as a ſlave. Affidavits were alſo made by Mr. Steuart and two other gentlemen, to prove that Mr. Steuart had purchaſed Sommerſett as a ſlave in Virginia, and had afterwards brought him into England, where he left his maſter's ſervice; and that his refuſing to return, was the occaſion of his being carried on board Mr. Knowles's ſhip.

Lord Mansfield chuſing to refer the matter to the determination of the court of King's Bench, Sommerſett with ſureties was bound in a recognizance for his appearance there on the ſecond day of the next Hillary term; and his lordſhip allowed till that day for ſettling the form of the return to the habeas corpus. Accordingly on that day Sommerſett appeared in the court of King's Bench, and then the following return was read:

'I John Knowles, commander of the veſſel called the Ann and Mary in the writ hereunto annexed, do moſt humbly certify and return to our preſent moſt ſerene ſovereign the king; that at the time herein after-mentioned of bringing the ſaid James Sommerſett from Africa, and long before, there were, and from thence hitherto there have been, and ſtill are great numbers of negro ſlaves in Africa; and that during all the time aforeſaid there hath been, and ſtill is a trade, carried on by his majeſty's ſubjects, from Africa to his majeſty's colonies or plantations of Virginia and Jamaica in America, and other colonies and plantations belonging to his majeſty in America, for the neceſſary ſupplying of the aforeſaid colonies and plantations with negro ſlaves; and that negro ſlaves, brought in the courſe of the ſaid trade from Africa to Virginia and Jamaica aforeſaid, and the ſaid other colonies and plantations in America, by the laws of Virginia and Jamaica aforeſaid and the ſaid other colonies and plantations in America, during all the time aforeſaid, have been, and are ſaleable and ſold as goods and chattels, and upon the ſale thereof have become and been, and are the ſlaves and property of the purchaſers thereof, and have been, and are ſaleable and ſold by the proprietors thereof as goods and chattels. And I do further certify and return to our ſaid lord the king, that James Sommerſett, in the ſaid writ hereunto annexed named, is a negro, and a native of Africa; and that the ſaid James Sommerſett, long before the coming of the ſaid writ to me, to wit on the tenth day of March in the year of our Lord   was a negro ſlave in Africa aforeſaid, and afterwards, to wit on the ſame day and year laſt aforeſaid, being ſuch negro ſlave, was brought in the courſe of the ſaid trade as a negro ſlave from Africa aforeſaid to Virginia aforeſaid, to be there ſold; and afterwards, to wit on the firſt day of Auguſt in the year laſt aforeſaid, the ſaid James Sommerſett, being and continuing ſuch negro ſlave, was ſold in Virginia aforeſaid to one Charles Steuart, eſq. who then was an inhabitant of Virginia aforeſaid; and that the ſaid James Sommerſett thereupon then and there became, and was the negro ſlave and property of the ſaid Charles Steuart, and hath not at any time ſince been manumitted, enfranchiſed, ſet free, or diſcharged; and that the ſaid James Sommerſett, ſo being the negro ſlave and property of him the ſaid Charles Steuart, and the ſaid Charles Steuart having occaſion to tranſact certain affairs and buſineſs of him the ſaid Charles Steuart in this kingdom, he the ſaid Charles Steuart, before the coming of the ſaid writ to me, to wit on the firſt day of October in the year of our Lord 1769, departed from America aforeſaid, on a voyage for this kingdom, for the purpoſe of tranſacting his aforeſaid affairs and buſineſs, and with an intention to return to America, as ſoon as the ſaid affairs and buſineſs of him the ſaid Charles Steuart in this kingdom ſhould be tranſacted; and afterwards, to wit on the tenth day of November in the ſame year, arrived in this kingdom, to wit in London, that is to ſay, in the pariſh of St. Mary le Bow in the ward of Cheap; and that the ſaid Charles Steuart brought the ſaid James Sommerſett, his negro ſlave and property, along with him in the ſaid voyage, from America aforeſaid to this kingdom, as the negro ſlave and property of him the ſaid Charles Steuart, to attend and ſerve him, during his ſtay and abiding in this kingdom, on the occaſion aforeſaid, and with an intent to carry the ſaid James Sommerſett back again into America, with him the ſaid Charles Steuart, when the ſaid affairs and buſineſs of the ſaid Charles Steuart ſhould be tranſacted; which ſaid affairs and buſineſs of the ſaid Charles Steuart are not yet tranſacted, and the intention of the ſaid Charles Steuart to return to America as aforeſaid hitherto hath continued, and ſtill continues. And I do further certify to our ſaid lord the king, that the ſaid James Sommerſett did accordingly attend and ſerve the ſaid Charles Steuart in this kingdom, from the time of his ſaid arrival, until the ſaid James Sommerſett's departing and abſenting himſelf from the ſervice of the ſaid Charles Steuart herein aftermentioned, to wit at London aforeſaid in the pariſh and ward aforeſaid; and that before the coming of this writ to me, to wit on the firſt day of October in the year of our Lord 1771, at London aforeſaid, to wit in the pariſh and ward aforeſaid, the ſaid James Sommerſett, without the conſent, and againſt the will of the ſaid Charles Steuart, and without any lawful authority whatſoever, departed and abſented himſelf from the ſervice of the ſaid Charles Steuart, and abſolutely refuſed to return into the ſervice of the ſaid Charles Steuart, and ſerve the ſaid Charles Steuart, during his ſtay and abiding in this kingdom, on the occaſion aforeſaid: whereupon the ſaid Charles Steuart afterwards and before the coming of this writ to me, to wit on the twenty-ſixth day of November in the year of our Lord 1771, on board the ſaid veſſel called the Ann and Mary, then and ſtill lying in the river Thames, to wit at London aforeſaid, in the pariſh and ward aforeſaid, and then and ſtill bound upon a voyage for Jamaica aforeſaid, did deliver the ſaid James Sommerſett unto me, who then was, and yet is maſter and commander of the ſaid veſſel, to be by me ſafely and ſecurely kept and carried and conveyed, in the ſaid veſſel, in the ſaid voyage to Jamaica aforeſaid, to be there ſold as the ſlave and property of the ſaid Charles Steuart; and that I did thereupon then and there, to wit at London aforeſaid in the pariſh and ward aforeſaid, receive and take, and have ever ſince kept and detained the ſaid James Sommerſett in my care and cuſtody, to be carried by me in the ſaid voyage to Jamaica aforeſaid, for the purpoſe aforeſaid. And this is the cauſe of my taking and detaining the ſaid James Sommerſett, and whoſe body I have now ready, as by the ſaid writ I am commanded.'

After the reading of the return, Mr. ſerjeant Davy, one of the counſel for Sommerſett the negro, deſired time to prepare his argument againſt the return; and on account of the importance of the caſe, the court poſtponed hearing the objections againſt the return, till the ſeventh of February, and the recognizance for the negro's appearance was continued accordingly. On that day Mr. ſerjeant Davy and Mr. ſerjeant Glynn argued againſt the return, and the further argument was poſtponed till Eaſter term; when Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Alleyne, and Mr. Hargrave, were alſo heard on the ſame ſide. Afterwards Mr. Wallace and Mr. Dunning argued in ſupport of the return, and Mr. ſerjeant Davy was heard in reply to them. The determination of the court was ſuſpended till the following Trinity term; and then the court was unanimouſly of opinion againſt the return, and ordered that Sommerſett ſhould be diſcharged.

The following argument, on the behalf of the negro, is not to be conſidered as a ſpeech actually delivered: for though the author of it, who was one of the counſel for the negro, did deliver one part of his argument in court without the aſſiſtance of notes; yet his argument, as here publiſhed, is entirely a written compoſition. This circumſtance is mentioned, leſt the author ſhould be thought to claim a merit, to which he has not the leaſt title.

Argument of Mr. Hargrave for the Negro.

THOUGH the learning and abilities of the gentlemen, with whom I am joined on this occaſion, have greatly anticipated the arguments prepared by me; yet I truſt, that the importance of the caſe will excuſe me, for diſcloſing my ideas of it, according to the plan and order, which I originally found it convenient to adopt.

Short ſtate of the caſe.

The caſe before the court, when expreſſed in few words, is this. Mr. Steuart purchaſes a negro ſlave in Virginia, where by the law of the place negroes are ſlaves, and ſaleable as other property. He comes into England, and brings the negro with him. Here the negro leaves Mr. Steuart's ſervice without his conſent; and afterwards perſons employed by him ſeize the negro, and forcibly carry him on board a ſhip bound to Jamaica, for the avowed purpoſe of tranſporting him to that iſland, and there ſelling him as a ſlave. On an application by the negro's friends, a writ of habeas corpus is granted; and in obedience to the writ he is produced before this court, and here ſues for the reſtitution of his liberty.

Importance of the caſe.

The queſtions, ariſing on this caſe, do not merely concern the unfortunate perſon, who is the ſubject of it, and ſuch as are or may be under like unhappy circumſtances. They are highly intereſting to the whole community, and cannot be decided, without having the moſt general and important conſequences; without extenſive influence on private happineſs and publick ſecurity. The right claimed by Mr. Steuart to the detention of the negro, is founded on the condition of ſlavery, in which he was before his maſter brought him into England; and if that right is here recognized, domeſtic ſlavery, with its horrid train of evils, may be lawfully imported into this country, at the diſcretion of every individual foreign and native. It will come not only from our own colonies, and thoſe of other European nations; but from Poland, Ruſſia, Spain, and Turkey, from the coaſt of Barbary, from the Weſtern and Eaſtern coaſts of Africa, from every part of the world, where it ſtill continues to torment and diſhonour the human ſpecies. It will be tranſmitted to us in all its various forms, in all the gradations of inventive cruelty: and by an univerſal reception of ſlavery, this country, ſo famous for public liberty, will become the chief ſeat of private tyranny.

Points which ariſe in the caſe.

In ſpeaking on this caſe, I ſhall arrange my obſervations under two heads. Firſt, I ſhall conſider the right, which Mr. Steuart claims in the perſon of the negro. Secondly, I ſhall examine Mr. Steuart's authority to enforce that right, if he has any, by impriſonment of the negro and tranſporting him out of this kingdom. The court's opinion in favour of the negro, on either of theſe points, will entitle him to a diſcharge from the cuſtody of Mr. Steuart.

(1ſt.) Point on the right claimed in the negro's perſon.

(1ſt.) The firſt point, concerning Mr. Steuart's right in the perſon of the negro, is the great one, and that which, depending on a variety of conſiderations, requires the peculiar attention of the court. Whatever Mr. Steuart's right may be, it ſprings out of the condition of ſlavery, in which the negro was before his arrival in England, and wholly depends on the continuance of that relation; the power of impriſoning at pleaſure here, and of tranſporting into a foreign country for ſale as a ſlave, certainly not being exerciſeable over an ordinary ſervant. Accordingly the return fairly admits ſlavery to be the ſole foundation of Mr. Steuart's claim; and this brings the queſtion, as to the preſent lawfulneſs of ſlavery in England, directly before the court. It would have been more artful to have aſſerted Mr. Steuart's claim in terms leſs explicit, and to have ſtated the ſlavery of the negro before his coming into England, merely as a ground for claiming him here, in the relation of a ſervant bound to follow wherever his maſter ſhould require his ſervice. The caſe repreſented in this diſguiſed way, though in ſubſtance the ſame, would have been leſs alarming in its firſt appearance, and might have afforded a better chance of evading the true queſtion between the parties. But this artifice, however convenient Mr. Steuart's counſel may find it in argument, has not been adopted in the return; the caſe being there ſtated as it really is, without any ſuppreſſion of facts to conceal the great extent of Mr. Steuart's claim, or any colouring of language to hide the odious features of ſlavery in the feigned relation of an ordinary ſervant.

Slavery the foundation of the claim to the negro.

General obſervations on domeſtic ſlavery.

Before I enter upon the enquiry into the preſent lawfulneſs of ſlavery in England, I think it neceſſary to make ſome general obſervations on ſlavery. I mean however always to keep in view ſlavery, not as it is in the relation of a ſubject to an abſolute prince, but only as it is in the relation of the loweſt ſpecies of ſervant to his maſter, in any ſtate, whether free or otherwiſe in its form of government. Great confuſion has enſued from diſcourſing on ſlavery, without due attention to the difference between the deſpotiſm of a ſovereign over a whole people and that of one ſubject over another. The former is foreign to the preſent caſe; and therefore when I am deſcribing ſlavery, or obſerving upon it, I deſire to be underſtood as confining myſelf to the latter; though from the connection between the two ſubjects, ſome of my obſervations may perhaps be applicable to both.

Difficulty of defining ſlavery.

Slavery has been attended in different countries with circumſtances ſo various, as to render it difficult to give a general deſcription of it. The Roman lawyer (a) calls ſlavery, a conſtitution of the law of nations, by which one is made ſubject to another contrary to nature. But this, as has been often obſerved by the commentators, is miſtaking the law, by which ſlavery is conſtituted for ſlavery itſelf, the cauſe for the effect; though it muſt be confeſſed, that the latter part of the definition obſcurely hints at the nature of ſlavery. Grotius (b) deſcribes ſlavery to be, an obligation to ſerve another for life, in conſideration of being ſupplied with the bare neceſſaries of life. Dr. Rutherford (c) rejects this definition, as implying a right to direct only the labors of the ſlave, and not his other actions. He therefore, after defining deſpotiſm to be an alienable right to direct all the actions of another, from thence concludes, that perfect ſlavery is an obligation to be ſo directed. This laſt definition may ſerve to convey a general idea of ſlavery; but like that by Grotius, and many other definitions which I have ſeen, if underſtood ſtrictly, will ſcarce ſuit any ſpecies of ſlavery, to which it is applied. Beſides, it omits one of ſlavery's ſevereſt and moſt uſual incidents; the quality, by which it involves all the iſſue in the misfortune of the parent. In truth, as I have already hinted, the variety of forms, in which ſlavery appears, makes it almoſt impoſſible to convey a juſt notion of it in the way of definition. There are however certain properties, which have accompanied ſlavery in moſt places; and by attending to theſe, we may always diſtinguiſh it, from the mild ſpecies of domeſtic ſervice ſo common and well known in our own country. I ſhall ſhortly enumerate the moſt remarkable of thoſe properties; particularly, ſuch as characterize the ſpecies of ſlavery adopted in our American colonies, being that now under the conſideration of this court. This I do, in order that a juſt conception may be formed, of the propriety with which I ſhall impute to ſlavery the moſt pernicious effects. Without ſuch a previous explanation, the moſt ſolid objections to the permiſſion of ſlavery will have the appearance of unmeaning, though ſpecious, declamation.

Properties uſually incident to ſlavery.

Slavery always imports an obligation of perpetual ſervice; an obligation, which only the conſent of the maſter can diſſolve.—It generally gives to the maſter, an arbitrary power of adminiſtering every ſort of correction, however inhuman, not immediately affecting the life or limb of the ſlave: ſometimes even theſe are left expoſed to the arbitrary will of the maſter; or they are protected by fines, and other ſlight puniſhments, too inconſiderable to reſtrain the maſter's inhumanity.---It creates an incapacity of acquiring, except for the maſter's benefit.---It allows the maſter to alienate the perſon of the ſlave, in the ſame manner as other property.---Laſtly, it deſcends from parent to child, with all its ſevere appendages.---On the moſt accurate compariſon, there will be found nothing exaggerated in this repreſentation of ſlavery. The deſcription agrees with almoſt every kind of ſlavery, formerly or now exiſting; except only that remnant of the ancient ſlavery, which ſtill lingers in ſome parts of Europe, but qualified and moderated in favour of the ſlave by the humane proviſion of modern times.

Bad effects of ſlavery.

From this view of the condition of ſlavery, it will be eaſy to derive its deſtructive conſequences.---It corrupts the morals of the maſter, by freeing him from thoſe reſtraints with reſpect to his ſlave, ſo neceſſary for controul of the human paſſions, ſo beneficial in promoting the practice and confirming the habit of virtue.---It is dangerous to the maſter; becauſe his oppreſſion excites implacable reſentment and hatred in the ſlave, and the extreme miſery of his condition continually prompts him to riſque the gratification of them, and his ſituation daily furniſhes the opportunity.---To the ſlave it communicates all the afflictions of life, without leaving for him ſcarce any of its pleaſures; and it depreſſes the excellence of his nature, by denying the ordinary means and motives of improvement.---It is dangerous to the ſtate, by its corruption of thoſe citizens on whom its proſperity depends; and by admitting within it a multitude of perſons, who, being excluded from the common benefits of the conſtitution, are intereſted in ſcheming its deſtruction.---Hence it is, that ſlavery, in whatever light we view it, may be deemed a moſt pernicious inſtitution: immediately ſo, to the unhappy perſon who ſuffers under it; finally ſo, to the maſter who triumphs in it, and to the ſtate which allows it.

Opinion of ſome modern writers in favour of the utility of ſlavery, but under many reſtrictions.

However, I muſt confeſs, that notwithſtanding the force of the reaſons againſt the allowance of domeſtic ſlavery, there are civilians of great credit, who inſiſt upon its utility; founding themſelves chiefly, on the ſuppoſed increaſe of robbers and beggars in conſequence of its diſuſe. This opinion is favoured by Puffendorf (d) and Ulricus Huberus (e). In the diſſertation on ſlavery prefixed to Potgieſſerus on the German law de ſtatu ſervorum, the opinion is examined minutely and defended. To this opinion I oppoſe thoſe ill conſequences, which I have already repreſented as almoſt neceſſarily flowing from the permiſſion of domeſtic ſlavery; the numerous teſtimonies againſt it, which are to be found in antient and modern hiſtory; and the example of thoſe European nations, which have ſuppreſſed the uſe of it, after the experience of many centuries and in the more improved ſtate of ſociety. In juſtice alſo to the writers juſt mentioned I muſt add, that though they contend for the advantages of domeſtic ſlavery, they do not ſeem to approve of it, in the form and extent in which it has generally been received, but under limitations, which would certainly render it far more tolerable. Huberus in his Eunomia Romana (f) has a remarkable paſſage, in which, after recommending a mild ſlavery, he cautiouſly diſtinguiſhes it from that cruel ſpecies, the ſubject of commerce between Africa and America. His words are, loquor de ſervitute, qualis apud civiliores populos in uſu fuit; nec enim exempla barbarorum, vel quæ nunc ab Africa in Americam fiunt hominum commercia, velim mihi quiſquam objiciat.

(a) Dig. lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 4. ſ. 1. Servitus eſt conſtitutio juris gentium, quâ quis dominio alieno contra naturam ſubjicitur.

(b) Jur. Bell. lib. 2. c. 5. ſ. 27.

(c) Inſt. Nat. L. b. 1. c. 20. p. 474.

(d) Law of Nature and Nations, b. 6. c. 3. ſ. 10.

(e) Prælect. Jur. Civ. pag. 16.

(f) See pag. 48.

Origin of ſlavery, and its general lawfulneſs conſidered.

The great origin of ſlavery is captivity in war, though ſometimes it has commenced by contract. It has been a queſtion much agitated, whether either of theſe foundations of ſlavery is conſiſtent with natural juſtice. It would be engaging in too large a field of enquiry, to attempt reaſoning on the general lawfulneſs of ſlavery. I truſt too, that the liberty, for which I am contending, doth not require ſuch a diſquiſition; and am impatient to reach that part of my argument, in which I hope to prove ſlavery reprobated by the law of England as an inconvenient thing. Here therefore I ſhall only refer to ſome of the moſt eminent writers, who have examined, how far ſlavery founded on captivity or contract is conformable to the law of nature, and ſhall juſt hint at the reaſons, which influence their ſeveral opinions. The antient writers ſuppoſe the right of killing an enemy vanquiſhed in a juſt war; and thence infer the right of enſlaving him. In this opinion, founded, as I preſume, on the idea of puniſhing the enemy for his injuſtice, they are followed by Albericus Gentilis (g), Grotius (h), Puffendorf (i), Bynkerſhoek (j), and many others. But in The Spirit of Laws (k) the right of killing is denied, except in caſe of abſolute neceſſity and for ſelf-preſervation. However, where a country is conquered, the author ſeems to admit the conqueror's right of enſlaving for a ſhort time, that is, till the conqueſt is effectually ſecured. Dr. Rutherforth (l), not ſatisfied with the right of killing a vanquiſhed enemy, infers the right of enſlaving him, from the conqueror's right to a reparation in damages for the expences of the war. I do not know, that this doctrine has been examined; but I muſt obſerve, that it ſeems only to warrant a temporary ſlavery, till reparation is obtained from the property or perſonal labour of the people conquered. The lawfulneſs of ſlavery by contract is aſſented to by Grotius and Puffendorf (m), who found themſelves on the maintenance of the ſlave, which is the conſideration moving from the maſter. But a very great writer of our own country, who is now living, controverts (n) the ſufficiency of ſuch a conſideration. Mr. Locke (o) has framed another kind of argument againſt ſlavery by contract; and the ſubſtance of it is, that a right of preſerving life is unalienable; that freedom from arbitrary power is eſſential to the exerciſe of that right; and therefore, that no man can by compact enſlave himſelf. Dr. Rutherforth (p) endeavours to anſwer Mr. Locke's objection, by inſiſting on various limitations to the deſpotiſm of the maſter; particularly, that he has no right to diſpoſe of the ſlave's life at pleaſure. But the misfortune of this reaſoning is, that though the contract cannot juſtly convey an arbitrary power over the ſlave's life, yet it generally leaves him without a ſecurity againſt the exerciſe of that or any other power. I ſhall ſay nothing of ſlavery by birth; except that the ſlavery of the child muſt be unlawful, if that of the parent cannot be juſtified; and that when ſlavery is extended to the iſſue, as it uſually is, it may be unlawful as to them, even though it is not ſo as to their parents. In reſpect to ſlavery uſed for the puniſhment of crimes againſt civil ſociety, it is founded on the ſame neceſſity, as the right of inflicting other puniſhments; never extends to the offender's iſſue; and ſeldom is permitted to be domeſtic, the objects of it being generally employed in public works, as the galley-ſlaves are in France. Conſequently this kind of ſlavery is not liable to the principal objections, which occur againſt ſlavery in general (q). Upon the whole of this controverſy concerning ſlavery, I think myſelf warranted in ſaying, that the juſtice and lawfulneſs of every ſpecies of it, as it is generally conſtituted, except the limited one founded on the commiſſion of crimes againſt civil ſociety, is at leaſt doubtful; that if in any caſe lawful, ſuch circumſtances are neceſſary to make it ſo, as ſeldom concur, and therefore render a juſt commencement of it barely poſſible; and that the oppreſſive manner in which it has generally commenced, the cruel means neceſſary to enforce its continuance, and the miſchiefs enſuing from the permiſſion of it, furniſh very ſtrong preſumptions againſt its juſtice, and at all events evince the humanity and policy of thoſe ſtates, in which the uſe of it is no longer tolerated.

Univerſality of domeſtic ſlavery amongſt the ancients.

But however reaſonable it may be to doubt the juſtice of domeſtic ſlavery, however convinced we may be of its ill effects, it muſt be confeſſed, that the practice is ancient, and has been almoſt univerſal. Its beginning may be dated from the remoteſt period, in which there are any traces of the hiſtory of mankind. It commenced in the barbarous ſtate of ſociety, and was retained, even when men were far advanced in civilization. The nations of antiquity moſt famous for countenancing the ſyſtem of domeſtic ſlavery were the Jews, the Greeks, the Romans, and the antient Germans (r); amongſt all of whom it prevailed, but in various degrees of ſeverity. By the antient Germans it was continued in the countries they over-run; and ſo was tranſmitted to the various kingdoms and ſtates, which aroſe in Europe out of the ruins of the Roman empire. At length however it fell into decline in moſt parts of Europe; and amongſt the various cauſes, which contributed to this alteration, none were probably more effectual, than experience of the diſadvantages of ſlavery; the difficulty of continuing it; and a perſuaſion that the cruelty and oppreſſion almoſt neceſſarily incident to it were irreconcileable with the pure morality of the chriſtian diſpenſation. The hiſtory of its decline in Europe has been traced by many eminent writers, particularly Bodin (s), Albericus Gentilis (t), Potgieſſerus (u), Dr. Robertſon (w), and Mr. Millar (x). It is ſufficient here to ſay, that this great change began in Spain, according to Bodin, about the end of the eighth century, and was become general before the middle of the fourteenth century. Bartolus, the moſt famed commentator on the civil law in that period, repreſents ſlavery as in diſuſe; and the ſucceeding commentators hold much the ſame language. However, they muſt be underſtood with many reſtrictions and exceptions; and not to mean, that ſlavery was completely and univerſally aboliſhed in Europe. Some modern civilians, not ſufficiently attending to this circumſtance, rather too haſtily reprehend their predeceſſors for repreſenting ſlavery as diſuſed in Europe. The truth is, that the antient ſpecies of ſlavery by frequent emancipations became greatly diminiſhed in extent; the remnant of it was conſiderably abated in ſeverity; the diſuſe of the practice of enſlaving captives taken in the wars between chriſtian powers aſſiſted in preventing the future increaſe of domeſtic ſlavery; and in ſome countries of Europe, particularly England, a ſtill more effectual method, which I ſhall explain hereafter, was thought of to perfect the ſuppreſſion of it. Such was the expiring ſtate of domeſtic ſlavery in Europe at the commencement of the ſixteenth century, when the diſcovery of America and of the weſtern and eaſtern coaſts of Africa gave occaſion to the introduction of a new ſpecies of ſlavery. It took its riſe from the Portugueſe, who, in order to ſupply the Spaniards with perſons able to ſuſtain the fatigue of cultivating their new poſſeſſions in America, particularly the iſlands, opened a trade between Africa and America for the ſale of negro ſlaves. This diſgraceful commerce in the human ſpecies is ſaid to have begun in the year 1508, when the firſt importation of negro ſlaves was made into Hiſpaniola from the Portugueſe ſettlements on the weſtern coaſts of Africa (y). In 1540 the emperor Charles the fifth endeavoured to ſtop the progreſs of the negro ſlavery, by orders that all ſlaves in the American iſles ſhould be made free; and they were accordingly manumitted by Lagaſca the governor of the country, on condition of continuing to labour for their maſters. But this attempt proved unſucceſsful, and on Lagaſca's return to Spain domeſtic ſlavery revived and flouriſhed as before (z). The expedient of having ſlaves for labour in America was not long peculiar to the Spaniards; being afterwards adopted by the other Europeans, as they acquired poſſeſſions there. In conſequence of this general practice, negroes are become a very conſiderable article in the commerce between Africa and America; and domeſtic ſlavery has taken ſo deep a root in moſt of our own American colonies, as well as in thoſe of other nations, that there is little probability of ever ſeeing it generally ſuppreſſed.

Decline of ſlavery in Europe.

Revival of domeſtic ſlavery in America.

The attempt to introduce the ſlavery of negroes into England examined.

Here I conclude my obſervations on domeſtic ſlavery in general. I have exhibited a view of its nature, of its bad tendency, of its origin, of the arguments for and againſt its juſtice, of its decline in Europe, and the introduction of a new ſlavery by the European nations into their American colonies. I ſhall now examine the attempt to obtrude this new ſlavery into England. And here it will be material to obſerve, that if on the declenſion of ſlavery in this and other countries of Europe where it is diſcountenanced, no means had been deviſed to obſtruct the admiſſion of a new ſlavery, it would have been vain and fruitleſs to have attempted ſuperſeding the antient ſpecies. But I hope to prove, that our anceſtors at leaſt were not ſo ſhort-ſighted; and that long and uninterrupted uſage has eſtabliſhed rules, as effectual to prevent the revival of ſlavery, as their humanity was ſucceſsful in once ſuppreſſing it. I ſhall endeavour to ſhew, that the law of England never recognized any ſpecies of domeſtic ſlavery, except the antient one of villenage now expired, and has ſufficiently provided againſt the introduction of a new ſlavery under the name of villenage (a) or any other denomination whatever. This propoſition I hope to demonſtrate from the following conſiderations.

Arguments to prove, that the law of England will not admit a new ſlavery.

1. Argument from the manner of making title to a villein.

I. I apprehend, that this will appear to be the law of England from the manner of making title to a villein.

The only ſlavery our law-books take the leaſt notice of is that of a villein; by whom was meant, not the mere tenant by villein ſervices, who might be free in his perſon, but the villein in blood and tenure: and as the Engliſh law has no proviſions to regulate any other ſlavery, therefore no ſlavery can be lawful in England, except ſuch as will conſiſtently fall under the denomination of villenage.

The condition of a villein.

The condition of a villein had moſt of the incidents which I have before deſcribed in giving the idea of ſlavery in general. His ſervice was uncertain and indeterminate, ſuch as his lord thought fit to require; or, as ſome of our ancient writers (b) expreſs it, he knew not in the evening what he was to do in the morning, he was bound to do whatever he was commanded. He was liable to beating, impriſonment, and every other chaſtiſement his lord could deviſe, except killing and maiming (c). He was incapable of acquiring property for his own benefit, the rule being quicquid ac-

(g) De Jur. Gent. cap. de ſervitute. (h) De Jur. Bell. l. 3. c. 7. ſ. 5.

(i) Law of Nature and Nations, b. 6. c. 5. ſ. 6. (j) Quæſt. Jur. Publ l. 1. t. 3.

(k) B. 15. c. 2. (l) See his Inſt. Nat. Law, vol. 2. p. 573. and vol. 1. p. 481.

(m) See Grot. Jur. Bell. l. 2. c. 5. ſ. 1, 2. and Puff. Law of Nature and Nations, b. 6. c. 3. ſ. 4.

(n) See Blackſt. Comment. 1ſt ed. vol. 1. p. 412.

(o) See Locke on Governm. 8*vo edit. b.* 2. c. 4. p. 213.

(p) See his Inſt. Nat. Law. vol. 1. p. 480.

(q) Some writers there are, who deduce the lawfulneſs of domeſtic ſlavery from the practice of it amongſt the Jews, and from ſome paſſages in the Old Teſtament which are thought to countenance it. See Vinn. in Inſtit. Heinecc. ed. l. 1. t. 3. p. 31. There are others who attempt to juſtify ſlavery by the New Teſtament because it contains no direct precepts againſt it. See Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 434.—I ſhall not attempt to examine either of theſe opinions.

(r) It appears by Cæſar and Tacitus, that the ancient Germans had a kind of ſlaves before they emigrated from their own country. See Cæſ. de bell. Gall. lib. 6. cap 13. & Tac. de mor. German. cap. 24. & 25. & Potgieſſ. de ſtat. ſervor. ap. Germ. lib. 1. cap. 1.

(s) See his book De Republicâ, cap. 5. de imperio ſervili.

(t) Jur. Gent. cap. de ſervitute.

(u) Jur Germ. de ſtatu ſervorum.

(w) Life of the emperor Charles the 5th, vol. 1.

(x) Obſervations on the Diſtinction of Ranks in Civil Society. See alſo Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 434. to 439.

(y) Ander. Hiſt. Comm. v. 1. p. 336.

(z) See Bodin de republic. lib. 1. c. 5.

(a) Villenage is uſed to expreſs ſometimes the tenure of lands held by villein-ſervices, and ſometimes the perſonal bondage of the villein; but throughout this argument it is applied in the latter ſenſe only.

(b) See the extracts from them in Co. Litt. 116. b.

(c) See Termes de la Ley, ed. of 1567. voc. Villenage—Old Tenures, cap. Villenage—Fitzh. Abr. Coron. 17.—2. Ro. Abr. 1.—2. Inſt. 45.—& Co. Litt. 126. & 127.

quiritur ſervo acquiritur domino (d). He was himſelf the ſubject of property; as ſuch ſaleable and tranſmiſſible. If he was a villein regardant, he paſſed with the manor or land to which he was annexed, but might be ſevered at the pleaſure of his lord (e). If he was a villein in groſs, he was an hereditament or a chattel real according to his lord's intereſt; being deſcendible to the heir where the lord was abſolute owner, and tranſmiſſible to the executor where the lord had only a term of years in him (f). Laſtly, the ſlavery extended to the iſſue, if both parents were villeins, or if the father only was a villein; our law deriving the condition of the child from that of the father, contrary to the Roman law, in which the rule was partus ſequitur ventrem (g).

The origin of villeins.

The origin of villenage is principally (h) to be derived from the wars between our Britiſh, Saxon, Daniſh and Norman anceſtors, whilſt they were contending for the poſſeſſion of this country. Judge Fitzherbert, in his reading on the 4th of Edw. I. ſtat. 1. intitled Extenta manerii, ſuppoſes villenage to have commenced at the Conqueſt, by the diſtribution then made of the forfeited lands and of the vanquiſhed inhabitants reſident upon them (i). But there were many bondmen in England before the Conqueſt, as appears by the Anglo-Saxon laws regulating them; and therefore it would be nearer the truth to attribute the origin of villeins, as well to the preceding wars and revolutions in this country, as to the effects of the Conqueſt (k).

Decline of villenage.

After the Conqueſt many things happily concurred, firſt to check the progreſs of domeſtic ſlavery in England, and finally to ſuppreſs it. The cruel cuſtom of enſlaving captives in war being aboliſhed, from that time the acceſſion of a new race of villeins was prevented, and the humanity policy and neceſſity of the times were continually wearing out the ancient race. Sometimes, no doubt, manumiſſions were freely granted; but they probably were much oftener extorted during the rage of the civil wars, ſo frequent before the reign of Henry the VIIth, about the forms of the conſtitution or the ſucceſſion to the crown. Another cauſe, which greatly contributed to the extinction of villenage, was the diſcouragement of it by the courts of juſtice. They always preſumed in favour of liberty, throwing the onus probandi upon the lord, as well in the writ of homine replegiando, where the villein was plaintiff, as in the nativo habendo, where he was defendant (l). Nonſuit of the lord after appearance in a nativo habendo, which was the writ for aſſerting the title of ſlavery, was a bar to another nativo habendo, and a perpetual enfranchiſement; but nonſuit of the villein after appearance in a libertate probanda, which was one of the writs for aſſerting the claim of liberty againſt the lord, was no bar to another writ of the like kind (m). If two plaintiffs joined in a nativo habendo, nonſuit of one was a nonſuit of both; but it was otherwiſe in a libertate probanda (n). The lord could not proſecute for more than two villeins in one nativo habendo; but any number of villeins of the ſame blood might join in one libertate probanda (o). Manumiſſions were inferred from the ſlighteſt circumſtances of miſtake or negligence in the lord, from every act or omiſſion which legal refinement could ſtrain into an acknowledgment of the villein's liberty. If the lord veſted the ownerſhip of lands in the villein, received homage from him, or gave a bond to him, he was enfranchiſed. Suffering the villein to be on a jury, to enter into religion and be profeſſed, or to ſtay a year and a day in antient demeſne without claim, were enfranchiſements. Bringing ordinary actions againſt him, joining with him in actions, anſwering to his actions without proteſtation of villenage, imparling in them or aſſenting to his imparlance, or ſuffering him to be vouched without counterpleading the voucher, were alſo enfranchiſements by implication of law (p). Moſt of the conſtructive manumiſſions I have mentioned were the received law, even in the reign of the firſt Edward (q). I have been the more particular in enumerating theſe inſtances of extraordinary favour to liberty; becauſe the anxiety of our anceſtors to emancipate the ancient villeins, ſo well accounts for the eſtabliſhment of any rules of law calculated to obſtruct the introduction of a new ſtock. It was natural, that the ſame opinions, which influenced to diſcountenance the former, ſhould lead to the prevention of the latter.

When villenage expired.

I ſhall not attempt to follow villenage in the ſeveral ſtages of its decline; it being ſufficient here to mention the time of its extinction, which, as all agree, happened about the latter end of Elizabeth's reign or ſoon after the acceſſion of James (r). One of the laſt inſtances, in which villenage was inſiſted upon, was Crouch's caſe reported in Dyer and other books (s). An entry having been made by one Butler on ſome lands purchaſed by Crouch, the queſtion was, whether he was Butler's villein regardant; and on two ſpecial verdicts, the one in ejectment Mich. 9th and 10th Eliz. and the other in aſſize Eaſter 11th Eliz. the claim of villenage was diſallowed, one of the reaſons given for the judgment in both being the want of ſeizin of the villein's perſon within 60 (t) years, which is the time limited by the 32d of Hen. VIII. chap. 2. in all caſes of hereditaments claimed by preſcription (u). This is generally ſaid to have been the laſt caſe of villenage; but there are four ſubſequent caſes in print. One was in Hillary 18th of Elizabeth (w); another was a judgment in Eaſter 1ſt of James (x); the third, which was never determined, happened in Trinity 8th of James (y); and the fourth was ſo late as Hillary 15th of James (z). From the 15th of James the firſt, being more than 150 years ago, the claim of villenage has not been heard of in our courts of juſtice; and nothing can be more notorious, than that the race of perſons, who were once the objects of it, was about that time completely worn out by the continual and united operation of deaths and manumiſſions.

But though villenage itſelf is obſolete, yet fortunately thoſe rules, by which the claim of it was regulated, are not yet buried in oblivion. Theſe the induſtry of our anceſtors has tranſmitted; nor let us their poſterity deſpiſe the reverend legacy. By a ſtrange progreſs of human affairs, the memory of ſlavery expired now furniſhes one of the chief obſtacles to the introduction of ſlavery attempted to be revived; and the venerable reliques of the learning relative to villenage, ſo long conſigned to gratify the inveſtigating curioſity of the antiquary, or uſed as a ſplendid appendage to the ornaments of the ſcholar, muſt now be drawn forth from their faithful repoſitories for a more noble purpoſe; to inform and guide the ſober judgment of this court, and as I truſt to preſerve this country from the miſeries of domeſtic ſlavery.

(d) Co. Litt. 117. a.——The words, in pleading ſeizin of villein-ſervice, are very expreſſive of the lord's power over the villein's property. In 1 E. 2. 4. it is pleaded, that the lord was ſeized of the villein and his anceſtors come affaire rechat de char & de ſank & de fille marier & de eux tailler haut & bas, &c. The form in 5 E. 2. 15. is, come de nos vileynes en feſant de luy notre provoſt en pnant de luy rechat de char & de ſaunk & redemption pur fill' & fitz marier de luy & de ces aunc & a tailler haut & bas a notre volente. In the firſt of the above forms there is evidently a miſprint; and the reading ſhould be a faire rechat inſtead of affaire rechat. As to the word provoſt in the ſecond form, it ſeems to ſignify plunder, and perhaps the print ſhould be proie or proye inſtead of provoſt. I was led to this conjecture by the following proverb in Cotgrave's French Dictionary, qui a le vilain il a ſa proye. See Cotgr. ed. of 1673. voc. proye. However, in the Latin Entries the word provoſt is tranſlated propoſitum, which in a barbarous ſenſe of the word may be conſtrued to ſignify will or pleaſure, and will make the paſſage intelligible. In ſome Entries provoſt is tranſlated præpoſitus; but this word cannot be underſtood in any ſenſe that will make this uſe of it intelligible.

The forms of pleading ſeizin of villein-ſervices in the Latin Entries are very ſimilar to thoſe I have extracted from the year-books. See Raſt. Entr. 401. a.

(e) Litt. ſect. 181. (f) Bro. Abr. Villenage, 60.—Co. Litt. 117. (g) Co. Litt. 123. Antiently our law ſeems to have been very uncertain in this reſpect. See Glanv. lib. 5. c. 6. Mirr. c. 2. ſ. 38. Britt. c. 31. But the writers in the reign of Henry the 6th agree, that our law was as here repreſented; and from the plea of baſtardy, which was held to be a peremptory anſwer to the allegation of villenage ſo early as the reign of Edward the 3d. I conjecture, that the law was ſettled in the time of his father. See Forteſc. laud. leg. Angl. c. 42. Litt. ſect. 187.—43 E. 3. 4. & Bro. Abr. Villenage, 7. (h) I do not ſay wholly, becauſe probably there were ſome ſlaves in England before the firſt arrival of the Saxons; and alſo they and the Danes might bring ſome few from their own country. (i) See the extract from Fitzherbert's reading in Barringt. Obſervations on Ant. Stat. 2d edit. p. 237. (k) See Spelm. Gloſſ. voc. Lazzi & Servus. Somn. on Gavelk. 65. and the index to Wilk. Leg. Saxon. tit. Servus.

(l) See Lib. Intrat. 176. a. 177. b. & Bro. Abr. Villenage, 66. It ſeems however, that if after a nativo habendo brought by the lord, the villein, inſtead of waiting for the lord's proceeding upon it, ſued out a libertate probanda to remove the queſtion of villenage for trial before the juſtices in eyre, on the return of it he was to produce ſome proof of his free condition; and that if he failed, he and his pledges were amerced. But this failure did not entitle the lord to any benefit from his nativo habendo, and therefore, if he proceeded in it, and could not prove the villenage, the judgment was for the villein; or if the lord did not proceed, a nonſuit, which was equally fatal to the lord's claim, was the neceſſary conſequence. See 47 H. 3. It. Dev. Fitz. Abr. Villenage, 39. In truth, the requiſition of proof from the villein on the libertate probanda, and the amercement for want of it, ſeem to have been mere form; for, as Fitzherbert ſays, in explaining the effect of the libertate probanda, 'the record ſhall be ſent before the juſtices in 'eyre, and the lord ſhall declare thereupon, and the villein ſhall make his defence 'and plead thereunto, and the villein ſhall not declare upon the writ de libertate 'probanda, nor ſhall any thing be done thereupon; for that writ is but a ſuper- 'ſedeas to ſurceaſe for the time, and to adjourn the record and the writ of nativo 'habendo before the juſtices in eyre.' Fitz. Nat. Br. 77. D. Upon the whole therefore it may I think be ſafely aſſerted, that in all caſes of villenage the onus probandi was laid upon the lord.

The ſeveral remedies againſt and for one claimed as a villein are now ſo little underſtood, that perhaps a ſhort account of them may be acceptable; more particularly as, by a right conception of them, it will be more eaſy to determine on the force of the argument drawn againſt the revival of ſlavery from the rules concerning villenage.

The lord's remedy for a fugitive villein was, either by ſeizure, or by ſuing out a writ of nativo habendo, or neifty, as it is ſometimes called.

1. If the lord ſeized, the villein's moſt effectual mode of recovering liberty was by the writ of homine replegiando; which had great advantage over the writ of habeas corpus. In the habeas corpus the return cannot be conteſted by pleading againſt the truth of it, and conſequently on a habeas corpus the queſtion of liberty cannot go to a jury for trial; though indeed the party making a falſe return is liable to an action for damages, and puniſhable by the court for a contempt; and the court will hear affidavits againſt the truth of the return, and if not ſatisfied with it reſtore the party to his liberty. Therefore, if to a habeas corpus villenage was returned as the cauſe of detainer, the perſon for whom the writ was ſued at the utmoſt could only have obtained his liberty for the time, and could not have had a regular and final trial of the queſtion. But in the homine replegiando it was otherwiſe; for if villenage was returned, an alias iſſued directing the ſheriff to replevy the party on his giving ſecurity to anſwer the claim of villenage afterwards, and the plaintiff might declare for falſe impriſonment and lay damages, and on the defendant's pleading the villenage had the ſame opportunity of conteſting it, as when impleaded by the lord in a nativo habendo. See Fitzh. N. Br. 66. F. & Lib. Intrat. 176. a. 177. b.

2. If the lord ſued out a nativo habendo, and the villenage was denied, in which caſe the ſheriff could not ſeize the villein, the lord was then to enter his plaint in the county court; and as the ſheriff was not allowed to try the queſtion of villenage in his court, the lord could not have any benefit from the writ, without removing the cauſe by the writ of pone into the King's Bench or Common Pleas. [For the count pleading and judgment in the nativo habendo after the removal, ſee Raſt. Entr. 436, 437.] It is to be obſerved, that the lord's right of ſeizure continued notwithſtanding his having ſued out a nativo habendo, unleſs the villein brought a libertate probanda. This writ, which did not lie except upon a nativo habendo previouſly ſued out, was for removal of the lord's plaint in the nativo habendo for trial before the juſtices in eyre or thoſe of the King's Bench, and alſo for protecting the villein from ſeizure in the mean time. This latter effect ſeems to have been the chief reaſon for ſuing out the libertate probanda; and therefore after the 25th of Edw. 3. ſtat. 5. c. 18. which altered the common law, and gives a power of ſeizure to the lord, notwithſtanding the pendency of a libertate probanda, that writ probably fell much into diſuſe, though ſubſequent caſes, in which it was brought, are to be found in the year-books. See Fitzh. Nat. 77. to 79. & 11 Hen. 4. 49.

(m) Co. Litt. 139. (n) Co. Litt. 139. (o) Fitzh. Nat. Br. 78. C. D. (p) See Litt. ſect. 202 to 209. & 2. Ro. Abr. 735, 736, & 737. (q) See Britt. cap. 31. & Mirr. cap. 2. ſect. 38. (r) See Sir Thomas Smith's Commonwealth, b. 2. c. 10. and Barringt. Obſerv. on Ant. Stat. 2d. ed. p. 252. (s) See Dy. 266. pl. 11. & 283. pl. 32. (t) Accord. Bro. Read. on the Stat. of Limitat. 32 Hen. 8. page 17. (u) Before this ſtatute of Hen. the 8th. the time of limitation ſeems to have been the coronation of Hen. 3. as appears by the form of the nativo habendo; though in other writs of right the limitation by 31 E. 1. c. 39. was from the commencement of the reign of Rich. the 1ſt. (w) See Co. Entr. 406. b. (x) Yelv. 2. (y) This caſe is only to be found in Hughes' Abridgment, tit. Villenage, pl. 23. (z) Noy, 27.

Manner of making title to a villein explained.

Littleton (a) ſays, every villein is either a villein by title of preſcription, to wit that he and his anceſtors have been villeins time out of memory, or he is a villein by his own confeſſion in a court of record. And in another place (b), his deſcription of a villein regardant and of a villein in groſs ſhews, that title cannot be made to either without preſcription or confeſſion. Time whereof no memory runs to the contrary, is an inſeparable incident to every preſcription (c); and therefore, according to Littleton's account of villenage, the lord muſt prove the ſlavery antient and immemorial; or the villein muſt ſolemnly confeſs it to be ſo in a court of juſtice. A ſtill earlier writer lays down the rule in terms equally ſtrong. No one, ſays Britton (d), can be a villein except of antient nativity, or by acknowledgment. All the proceedings in caſes of villenage, when conteſted, conform to this idea of remote antiquity in the ſlavery, and are quite irreconcileable with one of modern commencement.

1. The villein in all ſuch ſuits (e) between him and his lord was ſtiled nativus as well as villanus; our antient (f) writers deſcribe a female ſlave by no other name than that of neif; and the technical name of the only writ in the law for the recovery of a villein is equally remarkable, being always called the nativo habendo, or writ of neifty. This peculiarity of denomination, which implies that villenage is a ſlavery by birth, might perhaps of itſelf be deemed too ſlight a foundation for any ſolid argument; but when combined with other circumſtances more deciſive, ſurely it is not without very conſiderable force.

2. In pleading villenage where it had not been confeſſed on ſome former occaſion, the lord always founded his title on preſcription. Our year-books, and books of entries, are full of the forms uſed in pleading a title to villeins regardant. In the homine replegiando, and other actions where the plea of villenage was for the purpoſe of ſhewing the plaintiff's diſability to ſue, if the villein was regardant, the defendant alledged, that he was ſeized of ſuch a manor, and that the plaintiff and his anceſtors had been villeins belonging to the manor time out of mind, and that the defendant and his anceſtors, and all thoſe whoſe eſtate he had in the manor, had been ſeized of the plaintiff and all his anceſtors as of villeins belonging to it (g). In the nativo habendo the form of making title to a villein regardant was in ſubſtance the ſame (h). In fact, regardancy neceſſarily implies preſcription, being where one and his anceſtors have been annexed to a manor time out of the memory of man (i). As to villeins in groſs, the caſes relative to them are very few; and I am inclined to think, that there never was any great number of them in England. The author of the Mirroir (k), who wrote in the reign of Edward the IId, only mentions villeins regardant; and ſir Thomas Smith, who was ſecretary of ſtate in the reign of Edward the VIth, ſays, that in his time he never knew a villein in groſs throughout the realm (l). However, after a long ſearch I do find places in the year-books, where the form of alledging villenage in groſs is expreſſed, not in full terms, but in a general way; and in all the caſes I have yet ſeen, the villenage is alledged in the anceſtors of the perſon againſt whom it was pleaded (m), and in one of them the words time beyond memory (n) are added. But if precedents had been wanting, the authority of Littleton, according to whom the title to villenage of each kind, unleſs it has been confeſſed, muſt be by preſcription, would not have left the leaſt room for ſuppoſing the pleading of a preſcription leſs neceſſary on the claim of villeins in groſs than of thoſe regardant.

3. The kind of evidence, which the law required to prove villenage, and allowed in diſproof of it, is only applicable to a ſlavery in blood and family, one uninterruptedly tranſmitted through a long line of anceſtors to the perſon againſt whom it was alledged. On the lord's part, it was neceſſary that he ſhould prove the ſlavery againſt his villein by other villeins of the ſame blood (o), ſuch as were deſcended from the ſame common male ſtock, and would acknowledge themſelves villeins to the lord (p), or thoſe from whom he derived his title; and at leaſt two witneſſes (q) of this deſcription were requiſite for the purpoſe. Nay, ſo ſtrict was the law in this reſpect, that in the nativo habendo the defendant was not obliged to plead to the claim of villenage, unleſs the lord at the time of declaring on his title brought his witneſſes with him into court, and they acknowledged themſelves villeins, and ſwore to their conſanguinity with the defendant (r); and if the plaintiff failed in adducing ſuch previous evidence, the judgement of the court was, that the defendant ſhould be free for ever, and the plaintiff was amerced for his falſe claim (s). In other actions the production of ſuit or witneſſes by the plaintiff, previouſly to the defendant's pleading, fell into diſuſe ſome time in the reign of Edward the third; and ever ſince, the entry of ſuch production on the rolls of the court has been mere form, being always with an &c. and without naming the witneſſes. But in the nativo habendo the actual production of the ſuit, and alſo the examination of them, unleſs the defendant releaſed (t) it in court, continued to be indiſpenſable even down to the time when villenage (u) expired.---Such was the ſort of teſtimony, by which only the lord could ſupport the title of ſlavery; nor were the means of defence on the part of the villein leſs remarkable. If he could prove that the ſlavery was not in his blood and family, he intitled himſelf to liberty. The author of the Mirroir (w) expreſly ſays, that proof of a free ſtock was an effectual defence againſt the claim of villenage; and even in the time of Henry the ſecond the law of England was in this reſpect the ſame, as appears by the words of Glanville. In his chapter of the trial (x) of liberty, he ſays, that the perſon claiming it ſhall produce plures de proximis et conſanguineis de eodem ſtipite unde ipſe exierat exeuntes; per quorum libertates, ſi fuerint in curia recognitæ et probatæ, liberabitur à jugo ſervitutis qui ad libertatem proclamatur. But the ſpecial defences which the law permitted againſt villenage are ſtill more obſervable; and prove it beyond a contradiction to be, what the author of the Mirroir emphatically ſtiles it (y), a ſlavery of ſo great an antiquity that no free ſtock can be found by human remembrance. Whenever the lord ſued to recover a villein by a nativo habendo, or alledged villenage in other actions as a diſability to ſue, the perſon claimed as a villein might either plead generally that he was of free condition, and on the trial of this general iſſue avail himſelf of every kind of defence which the law permits againſt villenage; or he might plead ſpecially any ſingle fact or thing, which if true was of itſelf a legal bar to the claim of villenage, and in that caſe the lord was compellable to anſwer the ſpecial matter. Of this ſpecial kind were the pleas of baſtardy and adventif. The former was an allegation by the ſuppoſed villein that either himſelf or his father, grand-father or other male anceſtor, was born out of matrimony; and this plea, however remote the anceſtor in whom the baſtardy was alledged, was peremptory to the lord; that is, if true it deſtroyed the claim of villenage, and therefore the lord could only ſupport his title by denying the fact of baſtardy. This appears to have been the law from a great variety of the moſt antient authorities. The firſt of them is a determined caſe ſo early as the 13th of Edward the ſecond (z), and in all the ſubſequent caſes (a) the doctrine is received for law without once being drawn into queſtion. In one of them (b) the reaſon why baſtardy is a good plea in a bar againſt villenage is expreſſed in a very peculiar manner; for the words of the book are, when one claims any man as his villein, it ſhall be intended always that he is his villein by reaſon of ſtock, and this is the reaſon that there ſhall be an anſwer to the ſpecial matter where he alledges baſtardy; becauſe if his anceſtor was a baſtard, he can never be a villein, unleſs by ſubſequent acknowledgment in a court of record. The force of this reaſon will appear fully on recollection, that the law of England always derives the condition of the iſſue from that of the father, and that the father of a baſtard being in law uncertain (c), it was therefore impoſſible to prove a baſtard a ſlave by deſcent. In reſpect to the plea of adventif, there is ſome little confuſion in the explanation, our year-books give us, of the perſons to whom the deſcription of adventif is applicable; but the form of the plea will beſt ſhew the preciſe meaning of it. It alledged (d), that either the perſon himſelf who was claimed as a villein regardant to a manor, or one of his anceſtors, was born in a county different from that in which the manor was, and ſo was free, which was held to be a neceſſary concluſion to the plea. This in general was the form of the plea, but ſometimes it was more particular, as in the following caſe (e). In treſpaſs, the defendant pleads that the plaintiff is his villein regardant to his manor of Dale; the plaintiff replies, that his great-grandfather was born in C, in the county of N, and from thence went into the county of S, and took lands held in bondage within the manor to which the plaintiff is ſuppoſed to be a villein regardant, and ſo after time of memory his great-grandfather was adventif. It is plain from this caſe, that the plea of adventif was calculated to deſtroy the claim to villenage regardant, by ſhewing that the connection of the ſuppoſed villein and his anceſtors with the manor to which they were ſuppoſed to be regardant, had begun within time of memory; and as holding lands by villein-ſervices was antiently deemed a mark (f), though not a certain one, of perſonal bondage, I conjecture that this ſpecial matter was never pleaded, except to diſtinguiſh the mere tenant by villein ſervices from the villein in blood as well as tenure. But whatever might be the caſes proper for the plea of adventif, it is one other incontrovertible proof,

---

(a) Sect. 175. (b) Sect. 181, 182, & 185. (c) Litt. ſect. 170. (d) Nul ne poit eſtre villeyn forſque de aunciene nativite ou par recognizance. Britt. Wing. ed. cap. 31. p. 78. (e) See the form of the writs of nativo habendo and libertate probanda, and alſo of the alias homine replegiando, where on the firſt writ the ſheriff returns the claim of villenage. (f) Brit. cap. 31. & Litt. ſect. 186. (g) See Raſt. Entr. tit. Homine Replegiando, 373. & Lib. Intrat. 56. (h) See the form in Lib. Intrat. 97. & Raſt. Entr. 401. (i) This is agreeable to what Littleton ſays in ſect. 182. (k) Mirr. c. 2. ſ. 38. (l) Smith's Commonwealth, b. 2. c. 10. (m) See 1 E. 2. 4.—5 E. 2. 15.—7 E. 2. 242. & 11 E. 2. 344. In 13 E. 4. 2. b. pl. 4. & 3. b. pl. 11. there is a caſe in which villenage in groſs is pleaded, where one became a villein in groſs by ſeverance from the manor to which he had been regardant. This being the only caſe of the kind I have met with, I will ſtate ſo much of it from the year-book as is neceſſary to ſhew the manner of pleading. In treſpaſs the defendant pleads, that a manor, to which the plaintiff's father was a villein regardant, was given to an anceſtor of the defendant in tail, and that the manor deſcended to Cecil and Catharine; and that on partition between them, the villein with ſome lands was allotted to Cecil, and the manor to Catherine; and then the defendant conveyed the villein from Cecil to himſelf as heir. (n) 11 E. 2. 344. (o) See Bro. Abr. Villenage, 66. Reg. Br. 87. a. Old Nat. Br. 43 b. Fitz. Abr. Villenage, 38, 39. A baſtard was not receivable to prove villenage, 13 E. 1. It. Northt Fitzh. Abr. 36 & Britt. Wing. edit. 82. a. (p) In Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, 79. B. it is ſaid, that the witneſſes muſt acknowledge themſelves villeins to the plaintiff in the nativo habendo; and there are many authorities which favour the opinion. See Glanv. lib. 5. c. 4. Britt. Wing. ed. 81. a. 19 Hen. 6. 32. b. Old Tenures, chap. Villenage; and the form in which the confeſſion of villenage by the plaintiff's witneſſes is recorded, in Raſt. Entr. tit. Nativo habendo, 401. a. However, it muſt be confeſſed, that in Fitzherbert the opinion is delivered with a quære; and it is ſo irreconcileable with the lord's right of granting villeins, as it is ſtated by Littleton, ſect. 181. that I will not inſiſt upon it here. (q) Fitzh. Nat. Br. 78. H. & Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 36 & 37.—Alſo Britton ſays, un maſle ſauns pluſurs neſt mie receivable. Britt. Wingate's ed. p. 82. It is remarkable that females, whether ſole or married, were not receivable to prove villenage againſt men. Saunk de un home ne puit ne doit eſtre trie par femmes. Britt. Wing. ed. p. 82. The reaſon aſſigned is more antient than polite. It is ſaid to be pur lour fraylte, and alſo becauſe a man eſt pluis digne perſon que une feme. 13 E. 1. Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 37. (r) Fitzh. Nat. Br. 78. H. Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 32. Lib. Intrat. 97. Raſt. Entr. 401. Reg. Br. 87. (s) In Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 8. there is an inſtance of ſuch a judgment, merely for the plaintiff's failure in the production of his witneſſes at the time of declaring on his title. (t) See 19 H. 6. 32. b. a caſe in which the defendant releaſes the examination of the ſuit. (u) The laſt entry in print of the proceedings in a nativo habendo contains the names of the ſecta or ſuit produced, and their acknowledgment of villenage on oath. See the caſe of Jerney againſt Finch, Hill. 18 Eliz. C. B. Co. Entr. 406. b. (w) Mirr. c. 2. ſ. 28. (x) Glanv. lib. 5. c. cap. 4. (y) Eſt ſubjection iſſuant de cy grand antiquite, que nul franke ceppe purra eſtre trove per humane remembrance. Mirr. c. 2. ſ. 28. (z) 13 E. 2. 408. (a) Hill. 19 E. 2. Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 32.—39 E. 3. 36.—43 E. 3. 4.—19 Hen. 6. 11. & 12.—19 Hen. 6. 17.—Old Tenures, chap. Villenage.—Co. Litt. 123. a. In the caſe 19 H. 6. 17. there is ſomething on the trial of baſtardy in caſes of villenage, explaining when it ſhall be tried by the biſhop's certificate and when by a jury. See on the ſame ſubject Fitzh. Abr. Villenage, 32. & Lib. Intrat. 35. a. which latter book contains the record of a caſe where the trial was by the biſhop. (b) 43 E. 3. 4. (c) Co. Litt. 123. a. (d) 13 E. 1. It. North. Fitz. Abr. Villenage 36. 19 E. 2. Fitz. Abr. Villenage 32. 33 E. 3. Fitz. Abr. Viſne 2.—39 E. 3. 36.—41 E. 3. Fitz. Abr. Villenage 7.—43 E. 3. 31.—50 E. 3. Fitz. Abr. Villenage, 24.—19 H. 6. 11.—19 H. 6. 17. (e) 31 E. 3. Fitz. Abr. Viſne 1. (f) Fitzherbert ſays, if a man dwells on lands which have been held in villenage time out of mind, he ſhall be a villein, and it is a good preſcription; and againſt this preſcription it is a good plea to ſay that his father or grandfather was adventif, &c. Fitz. Abr. Villenage 24.

It

in addition to the proofs already mentioned, that no ſlavery having had commencement within time of memory was lawful in England; and that if one anceſtor could be found whoſe blood was unpolluted with the ſtain of ſlavery, the title of villenage was no longer capable of being ſuſtained.

How it is that the rules of law concerning villenage exclude a new ſlavery.

Such were the ſtriking peculiarities in the manner of making title to a villein, and of conteſting the queſtion of liberty; and it is ſcarce poſſible to attend to the enumeration of them, without anticipating me in the inferences I have to make.—The law of England only knows ſlavery by birth; it requires preſcription in making title to a ſlave; it receives on the lord's part no teſtimony except ſuch as proves the ſlavery to have been always in the blood and family, on the villein's part every teſtimony which proves the ſlavery to have been once out of his blood and family; it allows nothing to ſuſtain the ſlavery except what ſhews its commencement beyond the time of memory, every thing to defeat the ſlavery which evinces its commencement within the time of memory. But in our American colonies and other countries ſlavery may be by captivity or contract as well as by birth; no preſcription is requiſite; nor is it neceſſary that ſlavery ſhould be in the blood and family, and immemorial. Therefore the law of England is not applicable to the ſlavery of our American colonies, or of other countries.—If the law of England would permit the introduction of a ſlavery commencing out of England, the rules it preſcribes for trying the title to a ſlave would be applicable to ſuch a ſlavery; but they are not ſo; and from thence it is evident that the introduction of ſuch a ſlavery is not permitted by the law of England.—The law of England then excludes every ſlavery not commencing in England, every ſlavery though commencing there not being antient and immemorial. Villenage is the only ſlavery which can poſſibly anſwer to ſuch a deſcription, and that has been long expired by the deaths and emancipations of all thoſe who were once the objects of it. Conſequently there is now no ſlavery which can be lawful in England, until the legiſlature ſhall interpoſe its authority to make it ſo.

This is plain, unadorned, and direct reaſoning; it wants no aid from the colours of art, or the embelliſhments of language; it is compoſed of neceſſary inferences from facts and rules of law, which do not admit of contradiction; and I think, that it muſt be vain to attempt ſhaking a ſuperſtructure raiſed on ſuch ſolid foundations.

As to the other arguments I have to adduce againſt the revival of domeſtic ſlavery, I do confeſs that they are leſs powerful, being merely preſumptive. But then I muſt add, that they are ſtrong and violent preſumptions; ſuch as furniſh more certain grounds of judicial deciſion, than are to be had in many of the caſes which become the ſubjects of legal controverſy. For

2d. Argument againſt a new ſlavery from the fact of there never having been any ſlavery but villenage, and from the extinction of that ſlavery.

2dly. I infer that the law of England will not permit a new ſlavery, from the fact of there never yet having been any ſlavery but villenage, and from the actual extinction of that antient ſlavery. If a new ſlavery could have lawfully commenced here, or lawfully have been introduced from a foreign country, is there the moſt remote probability, that in the courſe of ſo many centuries a new ſlavery ſhould never have ariſen? If a new race of ſlaves could have been introduced under the denomination of villeins, if a new ſlavery could have been from time to time engrafted on the antient ſtock, would the laws of villenage have once become obſolete for want of objects, or would not a ſucceſſive ſupply of ſlaves have continued their operation to the preſent times? But notwithſtanding the vaſt extent of our commercial connections, the fact is confeſſedly otherwiſe. The antient ſlavery has once expired; neither natives nor foreigners have yet ſucceeded in the introduction of a new ſlavery; and from thence the ſtrongeſt preſumption ariſes, that the law of England doth not permit ſuch an introduction.

3d. Argument againſt a new ſlavery from the rules of law againſt ſlavery by contract.

3dly. I inſiſt, that the unlawfulneſs of introducing a new ſlavery into England, from our American colonies or any other country, is deducible from the rules of the Engliſh law concerning contracts of ſervice. The law of England will not permit any man to enſlave himſelf by contract. The utmoſt, which our law allows, is a contract to ſerve for life; and ſome perhaps may even doubt the validity of ſuch a contract, there being no determined caſes directly affirming its lawfulneſs. In the reign of Henry the fourth (g), there is a caſe of debt, brought by a ſervant againſt the maſter's executors, on a retainer to ſerve for term of life in peace and war for one hundred ſhillings a-year; but it was held, that debt did not lie for want of a ſpeciality; which, as was agreed, would not have been neceſſary in the caſe of a common labourer's ſalary, becauſe, as the caſe is explained by Brooke in abridging it, the latter is bound to ſerve by ſtatute (h). This caſe is the only one I can find, in which a contract to ſerve for life is mentioned; and even in this caſe, there is no judicial deciſion on the force of it. Nor did the nature of the caſe require any opinion upon ſuch a contract; the action not being to eſtabliſh the contract againſt the ſervant, but to enforce payment againſt the maſter's executors for arrears of ſalary in reſpect of ſervice actually performed; and therefore this caſe will ſcarce bear any inference in favour of a contract to ſerve for life. Certain alſo it is, that a ſervice for life in England is not uſual, except in the caſe of a military perſon; whoſe ſervice, though in effect for life, is rather ſo by the operation of the yearly acts for regulating the army, and of the perpetual act for governing the navy, than in conſequence of any expreſs agreement. However, I do not mean abſolutely to deny the lawfulneſs of agreeing to ſerve for life; nor will the inferences I ſhall draw from the rules of law concerning ſervitude by contract, be in the leaſt affected by admitting ſuch agreements to be lawful. The law of England may perhaps give effect to a contract of ſervice for life; but that is the ne plus ultra of ſervitude by contract in England. It will not allow the ſervant to inveſt the maſter with an arbitrary power of correcting imprisoning (i) or alienating him; it will not permit him to renounce the capacity of acquiring and enjoying property, or to tranſmit a contract of ſervice to his iſſue (k). In other words, it will not permit the ſervant to incorporate into his contract the ingredients of ſlavery. And why is it that the law of England rejects a contract of ſlavery? The only reaſon to be aſſigned is, that the law of England, acknowledging only the antient ſlavery which is now expired, will not allow the introduction of a new ſpecies, even though founded on conſent of the party. The ſame reaſon operates with double force againſt a new ſlavery founded on captivity in war, and introduced from another country. Will the law of England condemn a new ſlavery commencing by conſent of the party, and at the ſame time approve of one founded on force, and moſt probably on oppreſſion alſo? Will the law of England invalidate a new ſlavery commencing in this country, when the title to the ſlavery may be fairly examined; and at the ſame time give effect to a new ſlavery introduced from another country, when diſproof of the ſlavery muſt generally be impoſſible? This would be rejecting and receiving a new ſlavery at the ſame moment; rejecting ſlavery the leaſt odious, receiving ſlavery the moſt odious: and by ſuch an inconſiſtency, the wiſdom and juſtice of the Engliſh law would be compleatly diſhonoured. Nor will this reaſoning be weakened by obſerving that our law permitted villenage, which was a ſlavery confeſſed to originate from force and captivity in war; becauſe that was a ſlavery coeval with the firſt formation of the Engliſh conſtitution, and conſequently had a commencement here prior to the eſtabliſhment of thoſe rules which the common law furniſhes againſt ſlavery by contract.

Examination of the caſes on the ſubject of ſlavery ſince or juſt before the extinction of villenage.

Having thus explained the three great arguments which I oppoſe to the introduction of domeſtic ſlavery from our American colonies, or any foreign country, it is now proper to enquire, how far the ſubject is affected by the caſes and judicial deciſions ſince or juſt before the extinction of villenage.

The firſt caſe on the ſubject is one mentioned in Mr. Ruſhworth's Hiſtorical Collections (l); and it is there ſaid, that in the eleventh of Elizabeth, one Cartwright brought a ſlave from Ruſſia, and would ſcourge him; for which he was queſtioned; and it was reſolved, that England was too pure an air for a ſlave to breathe in. In order to judge what degree of credit is due to the repreſentation of this caſe, it will be proper to ſtate from whom Mr. Ruſhworth reports it. In 1637, there was a proceeding by information in the Star-Chamber againſt the famous John Lilburne, for printing and publiſhing a libel; and for his contempt in refuſing to anſwer interrogatories, he was by order of the court impriſoned till he ſhould anſwer, and alſo whipped, pilloried, and fined. His impriſonment continued till 1640, when the Long Parliament began. He was then releaſed, and the houſe of commons impeached the judges of the Star-Chamber for their proceedings againſt Lilburne. In ſpeaking to this impeachment, the managers of the commons cited the caſe of the Ruſſian ſlave. Therefore the truth of the caſe doth not depend upon John Lilburne's aſſertion, as the learned Obſerver on the Antient Statutes (m) ſeems to apprehend; but reſts upon the credit due to the managers of the commons. When this is conſidered, and that the year of the reign in which the caſe happened is mentioned, with the name of the perſon who brought the ſlave into England; that not above 72 or 73 years had intervened between the fact and the relation of it; and alſo that the caſe could not be ſuppoſed to have any influence on the fate of the impeachment againſt the judges; I ſee no great objection to a belief of the caſe. If the account of it is true, the plain inference from it is, that the ſlave was become free by his arrival in England. Any other conſtruction renders the caſe unintelligible, becauſe ſcourging, or even correction of a ſeverer kind, was allowed by the law of England to the lord in the puniſhment of his villein; and conſequently, if our law had recognized the Ruſſian ſlave, his maſter would have been juſtified in ſcourging him.

The firſt caſe in our printed Reports is that of Butts againſt Penny (n), which is ſaid to have been adjudged by the court of King's Bench in Trinity term, 29th of Charles the ſecond. It was an action of trover for 10 (o) negroes; and there was a ſpecial verdict, finding, that the negroes were infidels, ſubjects to an infidel prince, and uſually bought and ſold in India as merchandize by the cuſtom amongſt merchants, and that the plaintiff had bought them, and was in poſſeſſion of them; and that the defendant took them out of his poſſeſſion. The court held, that negroes being uſually bought and ſold amongſt merchants in India, and being infidels (p), there might be a property in them ſufficient to maintain the action; and it is ſaid that judgment niſi was given for the plaintiff, but that on the prayer of the counſel for the defendant to be further heard in the caſe, time was given till the next term. In this way our Reporters ſtate the caſe; and if nothing further appeared, it might be cited as an authority, though a very feeble one, to ſhew that the maſter's property in his negro ſlaves continues after their arrival in England, and conſequently that the negroes are not emancipated by being brought here. But having a ſuſpicion of ſome defect in the ſtate of the caſe, I deſired an examination of the roll (q); and according to the account of it given to me, though the declaration is for negroes generally in London, without any mention of foreign parts, yet from the ſpecial verdict it appears, that the action was really brought to recover the value of negroes, of which the plaintiff had been poſſeſſed, not in England, but in India. Therefore this caſe would prove nothing in favour of ſlavery in England, even if it had received the court's judgment, which however it never did receive, there being only an ulterius conſilium on the roll.

(g) 2 H. 4. 14. (h) Bro. Abr. Dett. 53. (i) Lord Hobart ſays, the body of a freeman cannot be made ſubject to diſtreſs or impriſonment by contract, but only by judgment. Hob. 61. I ſhall have occaſion to make uſe of this authority again in a ſubſequent part of this argument. (k) Mr. Molloy thinks, that ſervants may contract to ſerve for life; but then he adds, but at this day there is no contract of the anceſtor can oblige his poſterity to an hereditary ſervice; nor can ſuch as accept thoſe ſervants exerciſe the ancient right or dominion over them, no not ſo much as to uſe an extraordinary rigour, without ſubjecting themſelves to the law. Moll. de Jur. Marit. 1ſt. ed. b. 3. c. 1. ſ. 7. p. 388.

(l) Ruſhw. v. 2. p. 468. (m) Barr. Obſerv. on Ant. Stat. 2d edit. p. 241.

(n) 2 Lev. 201. & 3. Keb. 785. See Hill. 29 Char. II. B. R. rot. 1116. (o) According to Levinz, the action was for 200 negroes; but it is a miſtake, the record only mentioning 10. (p) According to this reaſoning, it is lawful to have an infidel ſlave, but not a Chriſtian one. This diſtinction, between perſons of oppoſite perſuaſions in religion, is very antient. Amongſt the Jews, the condition of the Hebrew ſlave had many advantages over that of a ſlave of foreign extraction. [See ſect. 37. of the diſſertation on ſlavery prefixed to Potgieſſer. Jus Germ. de Stat. Serv.] Formerly too the Mahometans pretended, that their religion did not allow them to enſlave ſuch as ſhould embrace it; but, as Bodin ſays, the opinion was little attended to in practice. (See Bodin. de Republica, lib. 1. cap. 5. de imperio ſervili.) A like diſtinction was made in very early times amongſt Chriſtians; and the author of the Mirroir in one place expreſſes himſelf, as if the diſtinction had been adopted by the law of England. (See the Mirr. c. 2. ſ. 28.) But our other antient writers do not take the leaſt notice of ſuch a diſtinction, nor do I find it once mentioned in the year-books; which are therefore ſtrong preſumptive evidence againſt the reception of it in our courts of juſtice as law, however the opinion may have prevailed amongſt divines and others in ſpeculation. See Barr. Obſerv. Ant. Stat. 2d edit. p. 239.

The next caſe of trover was between Gelly and Cleve in the Common-Pleas, and was adjudged in Michaelmas term 5th of William and Mary. In the report of this caſe (r), the court is ſaid to have held, that trover will lie for a negro boy, becauſe negroes are heathens; and therefore a man may have property in them, and the court without averment will take notice that they are heathens. On examination of the roll (s), I find that the action was brought for various articles of merchandize as well as the negro; and I ſuſpect, that in this caſe, as well as the former one of Butts and Penny, the action was for a negro in America; but the declaration being laid generally, and there being no ſpecial verdict, it is now too late to aſcertain the fact. I will therefore ſuppoſe the action to have been for a negro in England, and admit that it tends to ſhew the lawfulneſs of having negro ſlaves in England. But then if the caſe is to be underſtood in this ſenſe, I ſay that it appears to have been adjudged without ſolemn argument; that there is no reaſoning in the report of this caſe to impeach the principles of law, on which I have argued againſt the revival of ſlavery in England; that unleſs thoſe principles can be controverted with ſucceſs, it will be impoſſible to ſuſtain the authority of ſuch a caſe; and further, that it ſtands contradicted by a ſubſequent caſe, in which the queſtion of ſlavery came directly before the court.

The only other reported caſe of trover is that of Smith againſt Gould, which was adjudged Mich. 4 Ann in the King's Bench. In trover (t) for ſeveral things, and among the reſt for a negro, not guilty was pleaded, and there was a verdict for the plaintiff with ſeveral damages, 30 l. being given for the negro; and after argument on a motion in arreſt of judgment, the court held, that trover did not lie for a negro. If in this caſe the action was for a negro in England, the judgment in it is a direct contradiction to the caſe of Gelly and Cleve. But I am inclined to think, that in this, as well as in the former caſes of trover, the negroes for which the actions were brought, were not in England; and that in all of them the queſtion was not on the lawfulneſs of having negro ſlaves in England, but merely whether trover was the proper kind of action for recovering the value of a negro unlawfully detained from the owner in America and India. The things, for which trover in general lies, are thoſe in which the owner has an abſolute property, without limitation of the uſe of them; whereas the maſter's power over the ſlave doth not extend to his life, and conſequently the maſter's property in the ſlave is in ſome degree qualified and limited. I am willing to ſuppoſe, that the caſes of trover were determined on this diſtinction, and therefore I will not inſiſt upon any benefit from them in argument; though the laſt of them, if it will bear any material inference, is certainly an authority againſt ſlavery in England.

The next caſe I ſhall ſtate is a judgment by the King's Bench in Hillary 8th and 9th of William the IIId. Treſpaſs vi et armis was brought by Chamberlain (u) againſt Harvey, for taking a negro of the value of 100 l. and by the ſpecial verdict it appears, that the negro, for which the plaintiff ſued, had been brought from Barbadoes into England, and was here baptized without the plaintiff's conſent, and at the time when the treſpaſs was alledged, was in the defendant's ſervice, and had 6 l. a-year for wages. In the argument of this caſe, three queſtions were made. One was, whether the facts in the verdict ſufficiently ſhewed that the plaintiff had ever had a veſted property in the negro (x): another was, whether that property was not deveſted by bringing the negro into England: and the third was, whether treſpaſs for taking a man of the value of 100*l.* was the proper action. After ſeveral arguments, the court gave judgment againſt the plaintiff. But I do confeſs, that in the Reports we have of the caſe, no opinion on the great queſtion of ſlavery is mentioned; it becoming unneceſſary to declare one, as the court held, that the action ſhould have been an action to recover damages for the loſs of the ſervice, and not to recover the value of the ſlave. Of this caſe, therefore, I ſhall not attempt to avail myſelf.

But the next caſe, which was an action of indebitatus aſſumpſit in the King's Bench by Smith againſt Browne and Cowper (xx), is more to the purpoſe. The plaintiff declared for 20*l.* for a negro ſold by him to the defendants in London; and on motion in arreſt of judgment, the court held, that the plaintiff ſhould have averred in the declaration, that the negro at the time of the ſale was in Virginia, and that negroes by the laws and ſtatutes of Virginia are ſaleable (y). In theſe words there is a direct opinion againſt the ſlavery of negroes in England: for if it was lawful, the negro would have been ſaleable and transferable here, as well as in Virginia; and ſtating, that the negro at the time of the ſale was in Virginia, could not have been eſſential to the ſufficiency of the declaration. But the influence of this caſe, on the queſtion of ſlavery, is not by mere inference from the court's opinion on the plaintiff's mode of declaring in his action. The language of the judges, in giving that opinion, is remarkably ſtrong againſt the ſlavery of negroes, and every other new ſlavery attempted to be introduced into England. Mr. juſtice Powell ſays, In a villein the owner has a property; the villein is an inheritance; but the law takes no notice of a negro. Lord chief juſtice Holt is ſtill more explicit; for he ſays, that one may be a villein in England; but that as ſoon as a negro comes into England, he becomes free. The words of theſe two great judges contain the whole of the propoſition, for which I am contending. They admit property in the villein; they deny property in the negro. They aſſent to the old ſlavery of the villein: they diſallow the new ſlavery of the negro.

I beg leave to mention one other caſe, chiefly for the ſake of introducing a ſtrong expreſſion of the late lord chancellor Northington. It is the caſe of Shanley and Hervey, which was determined in Chancery ſome time in March 1762. The queſtion was between a negro and his former maſter, who claimed the benefit of a donatio mortis cauſâ made to the negro by a lady, on whom he had attended as ſervant for ſeveral years by the permiſſion of his maſter. Lord Northington, as I am informed by a friend who was preſent at the hearing of the cauſe, diſallowed the maſter's claim with great warmth, and gave coſts to the negro. He particularly ſaid, As ſoon as a man puts foot on Engliſh ground, he is free: a negro may maintain an action againſt his maſter for ill uſage, and may have a habeas corpus, if reſtrained of his liberty (z).

Objections likely to be made to the arguments againſt the preſent lawfulneſs of ſlavery in England, ſtated and anſwered.

Having obſerved upon all the caſes, in which there is any thing to be found relative to the preſent lawfulneſs of ſlavery in England; it is time to conſider the force of the ſeveral objections, which are likely to be made, as well to the inferences I have drawn from the determined caſes, as to the general doctrine I have been urging.

1. It may be aſked, Why it is that the law ſhould permit the ancient ſlavery of the villein, and yet diſallow a ſlavery of modern commencement?

To this I anſwer, that villenage ſprung up amongſt our anceſtors in the early and barbarous ſtate of ſociety; that afterwards more humane cuſtoms and wiſer opinions prevailed, and by their influence rules were eſtabliſhed for checking the progreſs of ſlavery; and that it was thought moſt prudent to effect this great object, not inſtantaneouſly by declaring every ſlavery unlawful, but gradually by excluding a new race of ſlaves; and encouraging the voluntary emancipation of the ancient race. It would have ſeemed an arbitrary exertion of power, by a retroſpective law to have annihilated property, which, however inconvenient, was already veſted by lawful means; but it was policy without injuſtice to reſtrain future acquiſitions.

2 It may be ſaid, that as there is nothing to hinder perſons of free condition from becoming ſlaves by acknowledging themſelves to be villeins, therefore a new ſlavery is not contrary to law.

The force of this objection ariſes from a ſuppoſition, that confeſſion or acknowledgment of villenage is a legal mode of creating ſlavery; but on examining the nature of the acknowledgment, it will be evident, that the law doth not permit villenage to be acknowledged for any ſuch purpoſe. The term itſelf imports ſomething widely different from creation; the acknowledgment, or confeſſion of a thing, implying that the thing acknowledged or confeſſed has a previous exiſtence; and in all caſes, criminal as well as civil, the law intends, that no man will confeſs an untruth to his own diſadvantage, and therefore never requires proof of that which is admitted to be true by the perſon intereſted to deny it. Beſides, it is not allowable to inſtitute a proceeding for the avowed and direct purpoſe of acknowledging villenage; for the law will not allow the confeſſion of it to be received, except where villenage is alledged in an adverſe way; that is, only (a) when villenage was pleaded by the lord againſt one whom he claimed as his villein; or by the villein againſt ſtrangers, in order to excuſe himſelf from defending actions to which his lord only was the proper party; or when one villein was produced to prove villenage againſt another of the ſame blood who denied the ſlavery. If the acknowledgment had been permitted as a creation of ſlavery, would the law have required, that the confeſſion ſhould be made in a mode ſo indirect and circuitous as a ſuit profeſſedly commenced for a different purpoſe? If confeſſion is a creation of ſlavery, it certainly muſt be deemed a creation by conſent; but if confeſſion had been adopted as a voluntary creation of ſlavery, would the law have reſtrained the courts of juſtice from receiving confeſſion, except in an adverſe way? If confeſſion had been allowed as a mode of creating ſlavery, would the law have received the confeſſion of one perſon as good evidence of ſlavery in another of the ſame blood merely becauſe they were deſcended from the ſame common anceſtor? This laſt circumſtance is of itſelf deciſive; becauſe it neceſſarily implied, that a ſlavery confeſſed was a ſlavery by deſcent.

On a conſideration of theſe circumſtances attending the acknowledgment of villenage, I think it impoſſible to doubt its being merely a con-

(q) The roll was examined for me by a friend. (r) 1. L. Raym. 147. (s) See Trin. 5 W. & M. C. B. Roll. No. 407. (t) 2. Salk. 666.—See alſo, 1. L. Raym. 147. (u) 1. L. Raym. 146. Carth. 396. & 5. Mod. 186. (x) The facts which occaſioned this queſtion, I have omitted in the ſtate of the caſe; becauſe they are not material to the queſtion of ſlavery in England. (xx) 2. Salk. 666. The caſe is not reported in any other book; and in Salkeld the time when the caſe was determined is omitted. But it appears to have been in the King's Bench, by the mention of Lord Ch. J. Holt and Mr. J. Powell. (y) The reporter adds, that the court directed, that the plaintiff ſhould amend his declaration. But after verdict it cannot ſurely be the practice to permit ſo eſſential an amendment; and therefore the reporter muſt have miſunderſtood the court's direction. (z) In the above enumeration of caſes, I have omitted one, which was ſir Thomas Grantham's caſe in the Common-Pleas, Hillary 2 & 3 Jam. 2. Being ſhort, I ſhall give it in the words of the Report. He bought a monſter in the Indies, which was a man of that country, who had the ſhape of a child growing out of his breaſt as an excreſcency all but his head. This man he brought hither, and expoſed to the ſight of the people for profit. The Indian turns Chriſtian and was baptized, and was detained from his maſter, who brought a homine replegiando. The ſheriff returned, that he had replevied the body; but doth not ſay the body in which ſir Thomas claimed a property; whereupon he was ordered to amend his return, and then the court of Common-Pleas bailed him. 3. Mod. 120.—It doth not appear, that the return was ever argued, or that the court gave any opinion on this caſe; and therefore nothing can be inferred from it. (a) Co. Litt. 121. b.

feſſion of that antiquity in the ſlavery, which was otherwiſe neceſſary to be proved. But if a doubt can be entertained, the opinions of the greateſt lawyers may be produced to remove it, and to ſhew, that, in conſideration of law, the perſon confeſſing was a villein by deſcent and in blood. In the year-book of 43 E. III. (b), it is laid down as a general rule, that when one claims any man as his villein, it ſhall be intended always that he is his villein by reaſon of ſtock. Lord chief juſtice Hobart conſiders villenage by confeſſion in this way, and ſays (c), the confeſſion in the court of record is not ſo much a creation, as it is in ſuppoſal of law a declaration of rightful villenage before, as a confeſſion in other actions. Mr. Serjeant Rolle too, in his abridgment, when he is writing on villenage by acknowledgment, uſes very ſtrong words to the ſame effect. He ſays in one place (d), it ſeems intended that title is made that he ſhould be a villein by deſcent; and in another place (e), it ſeems intended that title is made by preſcription, wherefore the iſſue ſhould alſo be villeins. The only inſtance I can find, of a nativo habendo founded on a previous acknowledgment of villenage, is a ſtrong authority to the ſame purpoſe. In the 19th of Edward II. (f) the dean and chapter of London brought a writ of neifty to recover a villein, and concluded their declaration with mentioning his acknowledgment of the villenage on a former occaſion, inſtead of producing their ſuit, or witneſſes, as was neceſſary when the villenage had not been confeſſed: but notwithſtanding the acknowledgment, the plaintiffs alledged a ſeizin of the villein with eſplees, or receipt of profits from him, in the uſual manner. This caſe is another proof, that a ſeizin previous to the acknowledgment was the real foundation of the lord's claim, and that the acknowledgment was merely uſed to eſtop the villein from conteſting a fact which had been before ſolemnly confeſſed. However, I do admit, that under the form of acknowledgment there was a poſſibility of colluſively creating ſlavery. But this was not practicable without the concurrence of the perſon himſelf who was to be the ſufferer by the fraud; and it was not probable, that many perſons ſhould be found ſo baſe in mind, ſo falſe to themſelves, as to ſell themſelves and their poſterity, and to renounce the common protection and benefit of the law for a bare maintenance, which, by the wiſe proviſion of the law in this country, may always be had by the moſt needy and diſtreſſed, on terms infinitely leſs ignoble and ſevere. It ſhould alſo be remembered, that ſuch a colluſion could ſcarcely be wholly prevented, ſo long as any of the real and unmanumitted deſcendants from the antient villeins remained; becauſe there would have been the ſame poſſibility of defrauding the law on the actual trial of villenage, as by a previous acknowledgment. Beſides, if colluſions of this ſort had ever become frequent, the legiſlature might have prevented their effect by an extraordinary remedy. It ſeems, that antiently ſuch frauds were ſometimes practiſed; and that free perſons, in order to evade the trial of actions brought againſt them, alledged that they were villeins to a ſtranger to the ſuit, which, on account of the great improbability that a confeſſion ſo diſadvantageous ſhould be void of truth, was a plea the common law did not ſuffer the plaintiff to deny. But a remedy was ſoon applied, and the ſtatute of (g) 37 E. III. was made, giving to the plaintiff a liberty of conteſting ſuch an allegation of villenage. If in theſe times it ſhould be endeavoured to revive domeſtic ſlavery in England, by a like fraudulent confeſſion of villenage, ſurely ſo unworthy an attempt, ſo groſs an evaſion of the law, would excite in this court the ſtrongeſt diſapprobation and reſentment, and from parliament would receive an immediate and effectual remedy; I mean, a law declaring that villenage, as is moſt notoriouſly the fact, has been long expired for want of real objects, and therefore making void all precedent confeſſions of it, and prohibiting the courts of juſtice from recording a confeſſion of villenage in future.

3. It may be objected, that though it is not uſual in the wars between chriſtian powers to enſlave priſoners, yet that ſome nations, particularly the ſeveral ſtates on the coaſt of Barbary, ſtill adhere to that inhuman practice; and that in caſe of our being at war with them, the law of nations would juſtify our king in retaliating; and conſequently, that the law of England has not excluded the poſſibility of introducing a new ſlavery, as the arguments againſt it ſuppoſe.

But this objection may be eaſily anſwered; for if the arguments againſt a new ſlavery in England are well founded, they reach the king as well as his ſubjects. If it has been at all times the policy of the law of England not to recognize any ſlavery but the antient one of the villein, which is now expired; we cannot conſiſtently attribute to the executive power a prerogative of rendering that policy ineffectual. It is true, that the law of nations may give a right of retaliating on an enemy, who enſlaves his captives in war; but then the exerciſe of this right may be prevented or limited by the law of any particular country. A writer of eminence (h) on the law of nations, has a paſſage very applicable to this ſubject. His words are, If the civil law of any nation does not allow of ſlavery, priſoners of war who are taken by that nation cannot be made ſlaves. He is juſtified in his obſervation not only by the reaſon of the thing, but by the practice of ſome nations, where ſlavery is as unlawful as it is in England. The Dutch (i) when at war with the Algerines, Tuniſians, or Tripolitans, make no ſcruple of retaliating on their enemies; but ſlavery not being lawful in their European dominions, they have uſually ſold their priſoners of war as ſlaves in Spain, where ſlavery is ſtill permitted. To this example I have only to add, that I do not know an inſtance, in which a prerogative of having captive ſlaves in England has ever been aſſumed by the crown; and it being alſo the policy of our law not to admit a new ſlavery, there appears neither reaſon nor fact to ſuppoſe the exiſtence of a royal prerogative to introduce it.

4. Another objection will be, that there are Engliſh acts of parliament, which give a ſanction to the ſlavery of negroes; and therefore that it is now lawful, whatever it might be antecedently to thoſe ſtatutes.

The ſtatutes in favour of this objection are the 5 Geo. II. c. 7. (k) which makes negroes in America liable to all debts, ſimple-contract as well as ſpecialty, and the ſtatutes regulating the African trade, particularly the 32 Geo. II. c. 31. which in the preamble recites, that the trade to Africa is advantageous to Great Britain, and neceſſary for ſupplying its colonies with negroes. But the utmoſt which can be ſaid of theſe ſtatutes is, that they impliedly authorize the ſlavery of negroes in America; and it would be a ſtrange thing to ſay, that permitting ſlavery there, includes a permiſſion of ſlavery here. By an unhappy concurrence of circumſtances, the ſlavery of negroes is thought to have become neceſſary in America; and therefore in America our legiſlature has permitted the ſlavery of negroes. But the ſlavery of negroes is unneceſſary in England, and therefore the legiſlature has not extended the permiſſion of it to England; and not having done ſo, how can this court be warranted to make ſuch an extenſion?

5. The ſlavery of negroes being admitted to be lawful now in America, however queſtionable its firſt introduction there might be, it may be urged, that the lex loci ought to prevail, and that the maſter's property in the negro as a ſlave, having had a lawful commencement in America, cannot be juſtly varied by bringing him into England.

I ſhall anſwer this objection by explaining the limitation, under which the lex loci ought always to be received. It is a general rule (l), that the lex loci ſhall not prevail, if great inconveniences will enſue from giving effect to it. Now I apprehend, that no inſtance can be mentioned, in which an application of the lex loci would be more inconvenient, than in the caſe of ſlavery. It muſt be agreed, that where the lex loci cannot have effect without introducing the thing prohibited in a degree either as great, or nearly as great, as if there was no prohibition, there the greateſt inconvenience would enſue from regarding the lex loci, and conſequently it ought not to prevail. Indeed, by receiving it in a caſe ſo circumſtanced, the end of a prohibition would be fruſtrated, either entirely or in a very great degree; and ſo the prohibition of things the moſt pernicious in their tendency would become vain and fruitleſs. And what greater inconveniences can we imagine, than thoſe, which would neceſſarily reſult from ſuch an unlimited ſacrifice of the municipal law to the law of a foreign country? I will now apply this general doctrine to the particular caſe of our own law concerning ſlavery. Our law prohibits the commencement of domeſtic ſlavery in England; becauſe it diſapproves of ſlavery, and conſiders its operation as dangerous and deſtructive to the whole community. But would not this prohibition be wholly ineffectual, if ſlavery could be introduced from a foreign country? In the courſe of time, though perhaps in a progreſs leſs rapid, would not domeſtic ſlavery become as general, and be as completely revived in England by introduction from our colonies and from foreign countries, as if it was permitted to revive by commencement here; and would not the ſame inconveniences follow? To prevent the revival of domeſtic ſlavery effectually, its introduction muſt be reſiſted univerſally, without regard to the place of its commencement; and therefore in the inſtance of ſlavery, the lex loci muſt yield to the municipal law. From the fact of there never yet having been any ſlavery in this country except the old and now expired one of villenage, it is evident, that hitherto our law has uniformly controlled the lex loci in this reſpect; and ſo long as the ſame policy of excluding ſlavery is retained by the law of England, it muſt continue intitled to the ſame preference. Nor let it be thought a peculiar want of complaiſance in the law of England, that diſregarding the lex loci in the caſe of ſlaves, it gives immediate and entire liberty to them, when they are brought here from another country. Moſt of the other European ſtates, in which ſlavery is diſcountenanced, have adopted a like policy.

In Scotland domeſtic ſlavery is (m) unknown, except ſo far as regards the (n) coal-hewers and ſalt-makers, whoſe condition, it muſt be confeſſed, bears ſome reſemblance to ſlavery; becauſe all who have once acted in either of theſe capacities are compellable to ſerve, and fixed to their reſpective places of employment during life. But with this ſingle exception, there is not the leaſt veſtige of ſlavery; and ſo jealous is the Scotch law of every thing tending to ſlavery, that it has been held to diſallow contracts of ſervice for life, or for a very long term; as, for ſixty years (o). However, no particular caſe has yet happened, in which it has been neceſſary to decide, whether a ſlave of another country acquires freedom on his arrival in Scotland. In 1757 this queſtion was depending in the Court of Seſſion in the caſe of a negro; but the negro happening to die during the pendency of the cauſe, the queſtion was not * determined. But when it is conſidered, that in the time of ſir Thomas Craig, who wrote at leaſt 150 years ago, ſlavery was even then a thing unheard of in Scotland, and that there are no laws (p) to re-

---

(b) 43 E. 3. 4. (c) Hob. 99. (d) 2 Ro. Abr. 732. pl. 6. (e) 2. Ro. Abr. 732. pl. 8. (f) Fitz. Abr. Villenage 34. (g) 37 E. 3. c. 16. (h) Rutherf. Inſt. Nat. L. v. 2. p. 576. (i) Quia ipſa ſervitus inter Chriſtianos ferè exolevit, eâ quoque non utimur in hoſtes captos. Poſſumus tamen, ſi ita placeat; imo utimur quandoque adverſus eos, qui in nos utuntur. Quare et Belgæ quos Algerienſes, Tunitanos, Tripolenſes, in Oceano aut Mari Mediterraneo capiunt, ſolent in ſervitutem Hiſpanis vendere, nam ipſi Belgæ ſervos non habent, niſi in Aſiâ Africâ et Americâ. Quin anno 1661, Ordines Generales Admiralio ſuo mandârunt, piratos captos in ſervitutem venderet. Idemque obſervatum eſt anno 1664. Bynkerſhoek Quæſt. Jur. Publ. lib. 1. cap. 3.

(k) 5 G. 2. c. 7. ſ. 4. (l) See the chapter de conflictu legum diverſarum in diverſis imperiis, in Huber. Prælect. p. 538. (m) See Crag. Jus Feud. lib. 1. dieges. 11. ſ. 32.— Stair's Inſtit. E. 1. t. 2. ſ. 11, 12. (n) Forb. Inſtit. part 1. b. 2. t. 3.—Macdoual. Inſtit. vol. 1 p. 68. (o) Macdoual. Inſtit. vol. 1. p. 68. But I muſt obſerve, that in the caſe relied on by Mr. Macdoual, the term of ſervice was not the only material circumſtance. The contract was between the maſters and the crews of ſome fiſh boats; the latter binding themſelves for a yearly allowance to ſerve in their reſpective boats during three times nineteen years, ſo that not one of them, during all that time, could remove from a particular village, or ſo much as from one boat to another See Dict. Deciſ. tit. Pactum illicitum.

(*) Wall. Inſtit. Law of Scotl. chap. on maſter and ſervant. (p) Sir Thomas Craig, mentioning the Engliſh villenage, ſays,—Nullus eſt apud nos ejus uſus, et inauditum nomen, niſi quod nonnulla in libro Regiæ Majeſtatis de nativis et ad libertatem proclamantibus proponantur; quæ et ab Anglorum moribus ſunt recepta, et nunquam in uſum noſtrum deducta. Crag. Jus Feud. lib. 1. dieges. 11. ſ. 32.

gulate ſlavery, one can ſcarce doubt what opinion the Lords of Seſſion would have pronounced, if the negro's death had not prevented a deciſion.

In the United Provinces ſlavery having fallen into diſuſe (q), all their writers agree, that ſlaves from another country become free the moment they enter into the Dutch territories (r). The ſame cuſtom prevails in ſome of the neighbouring countries, particularly Brabant, and other parts of the Auſtrian Netherlands; and Gudelinus, an eminent civilian, who was formerly profeſſor of law at Louvain in Brabant, relates from the annals of the ſupreme council at Mechlin, that, in the year 1531, an application for apprehending and ſurrendering a fugitive ſlave from Spain was on this account rejected (s).

In France the law is particularly explicit againſt regarding the lex loci in the caſe of domeſtic ſlavery: and though, in ſome of the provinces, a remnant of the antient ſlavery is ſtill to be ſeen in the perſons of the ſerfs, or gens de main-morte, who are attached to particular lands (t), as villeins regardant formerly were in England; yet all the writers on the law of France agree, that the moment a ſlave arrives there from another country he acquires liberty, not in conſequence of any written law, but merely by long uſage having the force of law. There are many remarkable inſtances in which this rule againſt the admiſſion of ſlaves from foreign countries has had effect in France. Two are mentioned by (u) Bodin; one being the caſe of a foreign merchant who had purchaſed a ſlave in Spain, and afterwards carried him into France; the other being the caſe of a Spaniſh ambaſſador, whoſe ſlave was declared free, notwithſtanding the high and independent character of the ſlave's owner. This latter caſe has been objected to by ſome writers (w) on the law of nations, who do not diſapprove of the general principle on which liberty is given to ſlaves brought from foreign countries, but only complain of its application to the particular caſe of an ambaſſador. But, on the other hand, Wicquefort (x) blames the ſtates of Holland for not following the example of the French, in a caſe which he mentions. After the eſtabliſhment of the French colonies in South America, the kings of France thought fit to deviate from the ſtrictneſs of the antient French law, in reſpect to ſlavery, and in them to permit and regulate the poſſeſſion of negro ſlaves. The firſt edict for this purpoſe is ſaid to have been one in April 1615, and another was made in May 1685 (y), which is not confined to negroes, but regulates the general police of the French iſlands in America, and is known by the name of the Code noir. But notwithſtanding theſe edicts, if negro ſlaves were carried from the French American iſlands into France, they were intitled to the benefit of the antient French law, and became free on their arrival in France (z). To prevent this conſequence, a third edict was made in October 1716, which permits the bringing of negro ſlaves into France from their American iſlands. The permiſſion is granted under various reſtrictions; all tending to prevent the long continuance of negroes in France, to reſtrain their owners from treating them as property whilſt they continue in their mother country, and to prevent the importation of fugitive negroes; and with a like view, a royal declaration was made in Dec. 1738 (a), containing an expoſition of the edict of 1716, and ſome additional proviſions. But the antient law of France in favour of ſlaves from another country, ſtill has effect, if the terms of the edict of 1716, and of the declaration of 1738 are not ſtrictly complied with; or if the negro is brought from a place, to which they do not extend. This appears from two caſes adjudged ſince the edict of 1716. In one (b) of them, which happened in 1738, a negro had been brought from the iſland of Saint Domingo without obſerving the terms of the edict of 1716; and in the other (d), which was decided ſo late as in the year 1758, a ſlave had been brought from the Eaſt Indies, to which the edict doth not extend: and in both theſe caſes the ſlaves were declared to be free.

Such are the examples drawn from the laws and uſages of other European countries; and they fully evince, that wherever it is the policy to diſcountenance ſlavery, a diſregard of the lex loci, in the caſe of ſlavery, is as well juſtified by general practice, as it is really founded on neceſſity. Nor is the juſtice of ſuch proceeding leſs evident; for how can it be unjuſt to deveſt the maſter's property in his ſlave, when he is carried into a country, in which, for the wiſeſt and moſt humane reaſons, ſuch property is known to be prohibited, and conſequently cannot be lawfully introduced?

6. It may be contended, that though the law of England will not receive the negro as a ſlave, yet it may ſuſpend the ſevere qualities of the ſlavery whilſt the negro is in England, and preſerve the maſter's right over him in the relation of a ſervant, either by preſuming a contract for that purpoſe, or, without the aid of ſuch a refinement, by compulſion of law grounded on the condition of ſlavery in which the negro was previous to his arrival here.

But inſuperable difficulties occur againſt modifying and qualifying the ſlavery by this artificial refinement. In the preſent caſe, at all events ſuch a modification cannot be allowable; becauſe, in the return, the maſter claims the benefit of the relation between him and the negro in the full extent of the original ſlavery. But for the ſake of ſhewing the futility of the argument of modification, and in order to prevent a future attempt by the maſters of negroes to avail themſelves of it, I will try its force.

As to the preſuming a contract of ſervice againſt the negro, I aſk at what time is its commencement to be ſuppoſed? If the time was before the negro's arrival in England, it was made when he was in a ſtate of ſlavery, and conſequently without the power of contracting. If the time preſumed was ſubſequent, the preſumption muſt begin the moment of the negro's arrival here, and conſequently be founded on the mere fact of that arrival, and the conſequential enfranchiſement by operation of law. But is not a ſlavery, determined againſt the conſent of the maſter, a ſtrange foundation for preſuming a contract between him and the ſlave? For a moment, however, I will allow the reaſonableneſs of preſuming ſuch a contract, or I will ſuppoſe it to be reduced into writing; but then I aſk, what are the terms of this contract? To anſwer the maſter's purpoſe, it muſt be a contract to ſerve the maſter here; and when he leaves this country to return with him into America, where the ſlavery will again attach upon the negro. In plain terms, it is a contract to go into ſlavery whenever the maſter's occaſions ſhall require. Will the law of England diſallow the introduction of ſlavery, and therefore emancipate the negro from it; and yet give effect to a contract founded ſolely upon ſlavery, in ſlavery ending? It is impoſſible, that the law of England can be ſo inſulting to the negro, ſo inconſiſtent with itſelf.

The argument of modification, independently of contract, is equally deluſive.—There is no known rule by which the court can guide itſelf in a partial reception of ſlavery. Beſides, if the law of England would receive the ſlavery of the negro in any way, there can be no reaſon why it ſhould not be admitted in the ſame degree as the ſlavery of the villein: but the argument of modification neceſſarily ſuppoſes the contrary; becauſe, if the ſlavery of the negro was received in the ſame extent, then it would not be neceſſary to have recourſe to a qualification. But there is one other reaſon ſtill more repugnant to the idea of modifying the ſlavery. If the law of England would modify the ſlavery, it would certainly take away its moſt exceptionable qualities, and leave thoſe which are leaſt oppreſſive. But the modification required will be inſufficient for the maſter's purpoſe, unleſs the law leaves behind a quality the moſt exceptionable, odious, and oppreſſive; an arbitrary power of reviving the ſlavery in its full extent, by removal of the negro to a place, in which the ſlavery will again attach upon him with all its original ſeverity (e).

From this examination of the ſeveral objections in favour of ſlavery in England, I think myſelf well warranted to obſerve, that inſtead of being weakened, the arguments againſt ſlavery in England have derived an additional force. The reſult is, not merely that negroes become free on being brought into this country, but that the law of England confers the gift of liberty intire and unincumbered; not in name only, but really and ſubſtantially; and conſequently, that Mr. Steuart cannot have the leaſt right over Sommerſett the negro, either in the open character of a ſlave, or in the diſguiſed one of an ordinary ſervant.

(2) Point on Mr. Steuart's authority to enforce his right to the negro by tranſporting him out of England.

(2.) In the outſet of the argument I made a ſecond queſtion on Mr. Steuart's authority to enforce his right, if he has any, by tranſporting the negro out of England. Few words will be neceſſary on this point, which my duty as counſel for the negro requires me to make, in order to give him every poſſible chance of a diſcharge from his confinement, and not from any doubt of ſucceſs on the queſtion of ſlavery.

If in England the negro continues a ſlave to Mr. Steuart, he muſt be content to have the negro ſubject to thoſe limitations which the laws of villenage impoſed on the lord in the enjoyment of his property in the villein; there being no other laws to regulate ſlavery in this country. But even thoſe laws did not permit that high act of dominion which Mr. Steuart has exerciſed; for they reſtrained the lord from forcing the villein out of England. The law, by which the lord's power over his villein was thus limited, has reached the preſent times. It is a law * made in the time of the Firſt William, and the words of it are, prohibemus ut nullus vendat hominem extra patriam (f).

If Mr. Steuart had claimed the negro as a ſervant by contract, and in his return to the habeas corpus had ſtated a written agreement to leave England as Mr. Steuart ſhould require, ſigned by the negro, and made after his arrival in England, when he had a capacity of contracting, it might then have been a queſtion, whether ſuch a contract in writing would have warranted Mr. Steuart in compelling the performance of it, by forcibly tranſporting the negro out of this country? I am myſelf ſatiſfied, that no contract, however ſolemnly entered into, would have juſtified ſuch violence. It is contrary to the genius of the Engliſh law, to allow any enforcement of agreements or contracts, by any other compulſion,

---

(q) Belgæ ſervos non habent, niſi in Aſia, Africa, et America. Bynkerſh. Quæſt. Jur. Pub. lib. 1. c. 3. Another great Dutch lawyer adds, Nec cuiquam mortalium nunc liceat ſeſe venundare, aut aliâ ratione ſervitutis jure ſemel alteri addicere. Voet Commentar. ad Pandect. lib. 1. tit 5. ſ. 3.

(r) Servitus paulatim ab uſu receſſit, ejuſque nomen hodie apud nos exolevit; adeo quidem ut ſervi, qui aliunde huc adducuntur, ſimul ac imperii noſtri fines intrârunt, invitis ipſorum dominis ad libertatem proclamare poſſint: id quod et aliorum Chriſtianârum gentium moribus receptum eſt. Grœnewegen de Leg. Abrogat. in Hollandiâ, &c. p. 5. John Voet, in the place cited in the preceding note, expreſſes himſelf to the ſame effect.

(s) Gudelin. de Jur. Noviſſ. lib. 1. c. 5. et Vinn. in Inſtit. lib. 1. tit. 3. p. 32. edit. Heinecc. (t) See Inſtit. au droit Franc. par M. Argou, ed. 1753, liv. 1. chap. 1. p 4. (u) Bodin. de Republic. lib. 1. cap. 5. de imperio herili. See ſeveral other inſtances mentioned in the Negro cauſe in the 13th volume of the Cauſes Celebres. (w) Kirchner. de Legat. lib. 2. c. 1. num. 233—and after him Bynkerſhoek Juge Compet. des Ambaſſad. ed. par Barbeyr. c. 15. ſ. 3. (x) Wicquefort's Embaſſador, Engl. ed. p. 268. (y) Deciſions Nouvelles, par M. Deniſart, tit. Negres.—Deniſart mentions, that the edict of 1685 is regiſtered with the ſovereign council at Domingo, but has never been regiſtered in any of the French parliaments.

(z) Nouvelles Deciſions par M. Deniſart, tit. Negres, ſ. 27. (a) M. Deniſart obſerves, that the edict of 1716, and the declaration of 1738, do not appear to have been ever regiſtered by the parliament of Paris, becauſe they are conſidered as contrary to the common law of the kingdom.—See his Nouvelles Deciſions, tit. Negres. (b) See Cauſes Celebres, vol. 13. p. 492. (d) Nouvelles Deciſions par M. Deniſart, tit. Negres, ſ. 147.

(e) This anſwer to the argument of modification, includes an anſwer to the ſuppoſition, that an action of treſpaſs per quod ſervitium amiſit, will lie for loſs of a negro's ſervice. I am perſuaded, that the caſe, in which that remedy was looſely ſuggeſted, was one in which the queſtion was about a negro being out of England. See the caſe of Smith and Gould. 2. Salk. 667.—Another writ, hinted at in the ſame caſe, is the writ of treſpaſs, quare captivum ſuum cepit; which is not in the leaſt applicable to the negro, or any other ſlave. It ſuppoſes the plaintiff to have had one of the king's enemies in his cuſtody as a priſoner of war, and to have had a right of detaining him till payment of a ranſom. See Reg. Br. 102. b. and 2. Salk. 667. * Wilk. Leg Saxon. p. 229. et cap. 65, Leg. Gulielm. 1.

(f) This law furniſhes one more argument againſt ſlavery imported from a foreign country. If the law of England did not diſallow the admiſſion of ſuch a ſlavery, would it reſtrain the maſter from taking his ſlave out of the kingdom?

than that from our courts of juſtice. The exerciſe of ſuch a power is not lawful in caſes of agreements for property; much leſs ought it to be ſo for enforcing agreements againſt the perſon. Beſides, is it reaſonable to ſuppoſe, that the law of England would permit that againſt the ſervant by contract, which is denied againſt the ſlave? Nor are great authorities wanting to acquit the law of England of ſuch an inconſiſtency, and to ſhew, that a contract will not warrant a compulſion by impriſonment, and conſequently much leſs by tranſporting the party out of this kingdom. Lord Hobart, whoſe extraordinary learning judgment and abilities have alſays ranked his opinion amongſt the higheſt authorities of law, expreſsly ſays (g), that the body of a freeman cannot be made ſubject to diſtreſs or impriſonment by contract, but only by judgment. There is, however, one caſe, in which it is ſaid that the performance of a ſervice to be done abroad, may be compelled without the intervention of a court of juſtice; I mean, the caſe of an infant-apprentice, bound by proper indentures to a mariner or other perſon, where the nature of the ſervice imports, that it is to be done out of the kingdom (h), and the party, by reaſon of his infancy, is liable to a coercion not juſtifiable in ordinary caſes. The habeas corpus act (i) goes a ſtep further; and perſons who, by contract in writing, agree with a merchant or owner of a plantation, or any other perſon, to be tranſported beyond ſea, and receive earneſt on ſuch agreements, are excepted from the benefit of that ſtatute. I muſt ſay, that the exception appears very unguarded; and if the law, as it was previous to this ſtatute, did entitle the ſubject to the habeas corpus in the caſe which the ſtatute excepts, it can only operate in excluding him in that particular caſe from the additional proviſions of the ſtatute, and cannot, I preſume, be juſtly extended to deprive him of the habeas corpus, as the common law gave it before the making of the ſtatute.

Concluſion.

Upon the whole, the return to the habeas corpus in the preſent caſe, in whatever way it is conſidered, whether by inquiry into the foundation of Mr. Steuart's right to the perſon and ſervice of the negro, or by reference to the violent manner in which it has been attempted to enforce that right, will appear equally unworthy of this court's approbation. By condemning the return, the revival of domeſtic ſlavery will be rendered as impracticable by introduction from our colonies and from other countries, as it is by commencement here. Such a judgment will be no leſs conducive to the public advantage, than it will be conformable to natural juſtice, and to principles and authorities of law; and this court, by effectually obſtructing the admiſſion of the new ſlavery of negroes into England, will in theſe times reflect as much honour on themſelves, as the great judges, their predeceſſors, formerly acquired, by contributing ſo uniformly and ſucceſsfully to the ſuppreſſion of the old ſlavery of villenage.

(g) Hob. 61.

(h) Hob. 134.

(i) 31 Cha. 2. c. 2. ſ. 13.

No. VIII. The Caſe of Preſſing Mariners, on the Trial of Alexander Broadfoot, for Murder, Briſtol, Auguſt 30, 1743.

[This caſe is taken from the ſecond edition of Sir Michael Foſter's Reports, publiſhed by his nephew Michael Dodſon, Eſq. The additional notes and references by Mr. Dodſon, are diſtinguiſhed by being placed between parentheſes.]

ADVERTISEMENT.

THIS caſe, though already in print, hath been thought to deſerve a place in this collection. It is therefore here inſerted.

If it be aſked, where are the adjudged caſes on which the author groundeth his opinion? he freely confeſſeth, that he hath not met with one, in which the legality of preſſing for the ſea-ſervice hath directly come in judgment. What (Kel. 59. 136, 137. Comb. 245). this is to be imputed to every reader will judge. A few modern caſes there are, from which the legality of the practice may be inferred. But the author choſe to ground himſelf on much better authorities than inferences from modern reports.

AT the gaol-delivery holden for the city and county of the city of Briſtol, Auguſt 30, 1743, Alexander Broadfoot was indicted for the murder of Cornelius Calahan, a ſailor belonging to his majeſty's ſhip the Mortar Sloop.

The caſe was thus: captain Hanway, commander of the Mortar Sloop, had a warrant from the Lords of the Admiralty, grounded on an order of his majeſty in council, impowering him to impreſs, or cauſe to be impreſſed, ſeamen for his majeſty's ſervice. The warrant expreſly directeth, 'That the captain ſhall not intruſt any perſon with the execution of it, 'but a commiſſion-officer; and ſhall inſert the name and office of the 'perſon intruſted on the back of the warrant.'

The lieutenant of the Mortar Sloop, (the only commiſſion-officer on board beſides the captain) was deputed by him to impreſs according to the tenor of the warrant.

On the 25th of April laſt captain Hanway, being at anchor in Kingroad within the port and county of Briſtol, ordered the ſhip's boat down the channel in order to preſs as they ſhould ſee opportunity. But the lieutenant ſtaid in Kingroad, on board with the captain.

Towards evening, the boat came up with a merchantman, the Bremen Factor, homeward-bound, in that part of the channel which is within the county of the city of Briſtol, but ſome leagues from Kingroad; and ſome of the crew went on board, in order to preſs; who being informed that one or two of the Bremen's men were concealed in the hold, Calahan, with three others of the boat's crew, went thither in ſearch of them. Whereupon Broadfoot, one of the Bremen's men, (who had before provided himſelf with a blunderbuſs and piſtols for his defence againſt the preſs-gang) called out and aſked them what they came for: he was anſwered by ſome of the preſs-gang, 'We come for you and your comrades.' Whereupon he cried out, 'Keep back, I have a blunderbuſs loaded with 'ſwan-ſhot.' Upon this the others ſtopped, but did not retire. He then cried out, 'Where is your lieutenant?' And being anſwered, 'He 'is not far off,' he immediately fired among them. By this ſhot Calahan was killed on the ſpot, and one or two more of the preſs-gang wounded.

Mr. Serjeant Foſter. The caſe being thus, the Recorder was of opinion, that the boat's crew having been ſent out with a general order to impreſs as they ſhould ſee opportunity, and having, in purſuance of that order, boarded the veſſel without a proper officer, expreſsly againſt the terms of the captain's warrant, every thing they did was to be looked upon as an attempt upon the liberty of the perſons concerned, without any legal warrant: and he accordingly directed the jury to find Broadfoot guilty of manſlaughter. But this being a caſe of great expectation, and uncommon pains having been taken to poſſeſs people with an opinion that preſſing for the ſea-ſervice is a violation of Magna Charta, and a very high invaſion of the liberty of the ſubject, the Recorder thought proper to deliver his opinion touching the legality of preſſing for the ſea-ſervice; provided the perſons impreſſed are proper objects of the law, and thoſe employed in that ſervice come armed with a proper warrant for that purpoſe.

Captain Hanway's warrant with the indorſement.

By the Commiſſioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain and Ireland, &c. and of all his majeſty's plantations, &c.

IN purſuance of his majeſty's order in council dated the 19*th day of* Jan. 1742, we do hereby impower and direct you to impreſs or cauſe to be impreſſed ſo many ſeamen and ſeafaring men and perſons whoſe occupations and callings are to work in veſſels and boats upon rivers, as ſhall be neceſſary not only to complete the number of men allowed to his majeſty's ſhip under your command, but alſo to mann ſuch others of his majeſty's ſhips as may be in want of men; giving unto each man ſo impreſſed one ſhilling for preſs-money. And in the execution hereof you are to take care that neither yourſelf nor any officer authorized by you do demand or receive any money, gratuity, reward, or other conſideration whatſoever, for the ſparing, exchanging, or diſcharging any perſon or perſons impreſſed, or to be impreſſed, as you will anſwer it at your peril. You are not to intruſt any perſon with the execution of this warrant but a commiſſion-officer, and to inſert his name and office in the deputation on the other ſide hereof, and ſet your hand and ſeal thereto. This warrant to continue in force till the 31*ſt day of* December 1743. And in the due execution of the ſame and every part thereof, all mayors, ſheriffs, juſtices of the peace, bailiffs, conſtables, headboroughs, and all other his majeſty's officers and ſubjects whom it may concern, are hereby required to be aiding and aſſiſting unto you and thoſe employed by you, as they tender his majeſty's ſervice, and will anſwer the contrary at their perils. Given under our hands and ſeal of the office of Admiralty the 31ſt day of January 1742.

Jo. Cockburne.
Geo. Lee.
J. Trevor.

By command of their Lordſhips,
Thomas Corbett.

I do hereby depute A. B. a lieutenant belonging to his majeſty's ſhip the Mortar Sloop under my command, to impreſs ſeamen, ſea-faring men, and perſons whoſe occupations and callings are to work in veſſels and boats upon rivers according to the tenor of this warrant. In teſtimony whereof I have hereunto ſet my hand and ſeal this ——— day of ———

The RECORDER's Argument.

This queſtion touching the legality of preſſing mariners for the public ſervice is a point of very great and national importance. On one hand, a very uſeful body of men ſeem to be put under hardſhips inconſiſtent with the temper and genius of a free government. On the other, the neceſſity of the caſe ſeemeth to intitle the public to the ſervice of this body of men, whenever the ſafety of the whole calleth for it.

Before I ſpeak directly to the point, it will be neceſſary to throw out of the caſe every thing which doth not enter into the merits of the preſent queſtion.

We are not at preſent concerned to inquire, whether perſons may be legally preſſed into the land-ſervice, nor whether landmen may be legally preſſed into the ſea-ſervice. The preſent queſtion, I ſay, is not, whether people may be taken from their lawful occupations at home, and ſent againſt their wills into a remote and dangerous ſervice; into a ſervice they are utterly unacquainted with, and poſſibly unfit for: no; the only queſtion at preſent is, whether mariners, perſons who have freely choſen a ſea-faring life, perſons whoſe education and employment have fitted them for the ſervice, and inured them to it,---whether ſuch perſons may not be legally preſſed into the ſervice of the crown, whenever the public ſafety requireth it, ne quid detrimenti reſpublica capiat.

For my part, I think they may. I think the crown hath a right to command the ſervice of theſe people, whenever the public ſafety calleth for it. The ſame right that it hath to require the perſonal ſervice * of every man able to bear arms, in caſe of a ſudden invaſion or formidable inſurrection. The right in both caſes is founded on one and the ſame principle, the neceſſity of the caſe in order to the preſervation of the whole.

It would be time very ill ſpent to go about to prove, that this nation can never be long in a ſtate of ſafety, our coaſt defended and our trade protected, without a naval force equal to all the emergencies which may happen. And how can we be ſecure of ſuch a force? The keeping up the ſame naval force in time of peace, which will be abſolutely neceſſary for our ſecurity in time of war, would be an abſurd, a fruitleſs, and a ruinous expence.

The only courſe then left is for the crown to employ upon emergent occaſions the mariners bred up in the merchant's ſervice.

By this means the trade of the nation becometh a nurſery for her navy; and the merchant, while he is increaſing the wealth of the kingdom, is at the ſame time training up the mariner for its defence.

And as for the mariner himſelf, he when taken into the ſervice of the crown only changeth maſters for a time: his ſervice and employment continue the very ſame; with this advantage, that the dangers of the ſea and enemy are not ſo great in the ſervice of the crown, as in that of the merchant.

I am very ſenſible of the hardſhip the ſailor ſuffereth from an impreſs in ſome particular caſes, eſpecially if preſſed homeward-bound after a long voyage. But the merchants who hear me know, that an impreſs on outward-bound veſſels would be attended with much greater inconveniencies to the trade of the kingdom; and yet that too is ſometimes neceſſary. But where two evils preſent, a wiſe adminiſtration, if there be room for an option, will chooſe the leaſt.

War itſelf is a great evil, but it is choſen to avoid a greater. The practice of preſſing is one of the miſchiefs war bringeth with it. But it is a maxim in law, and good policy too, that all private miſchiefs muſt be borne with patience for preventing a national calamity. And as no greater calamity can befal us than to be weak and defenceleſs at ſea in a time of war, ſo I do not know that the wiſdom of the nation hath hitherto found out any method of manning our navy, leſs inconvenient than preſſing; and, at the ſame time, equally ſure and effectual.

---

* This perſonal ſervice in caſes of extreme neceſſity is a principal branch of the allegiance every ſubject of England oweth to the crown. See 11 H. VII. c. 1. and 1 E. III. c. 5. and 16 and 17 Car. I. c. 28.

The expedient of a voluntary regiſter, which was attempted in king William's time, had no effect.

And ſome late ſchemes I have ſeen appear to me more inconvenient to the mariner and more inconſiſtent with the principles of liberty, than the practice in preſſing: and, what is ſtill worſe, they are in my opinion totally impracticable.

Thus much I thought proper to ſay upon the foot of reaſon and public utility, before I come to ſpeak directly to the point of law. Which I ſhall now do.

According to my preſent apprehenſion, (and I have taken ſome pains to inform myſelf) the right of impreſſing mariners for the public ſervice is a prerogative inherent in the crown, grounded upon common-law, and recognized by many acts of parliament.

A general immemorial uſage not inconſiſtent with any ſtatute, eſpecially if it be the reſult of evident neceſſity, and withal tendeth to the public ſafety, is, I apprehend, part of the common-law of England. If not, I am at a loſs to know what is meant by common-law, in contradiſtinction to ſtatute-law. And therefore it is a great miſtake in this caſe, as indeed it would be in any other, to conclude that there is no law, becauſe perhaps there may be no ſtatute that expreſly and in terms impowereth the crown to preſs. For the rights of the crown, and the liberties of the ſubject too, ſtand principally upon the foot of common-law; though both have been in many caſes confirmed, explained, or aſcertained by particular ſtatutes.

As to the point of uſage in the matter of preſſing, I have met with a multitude of commiſſions and mandatory writs to that purpoſe conceived in various forms; and from time to time directed to different officers, as the nature of the ſervice required.

It would be tedious for me to cite one half of them; but I will endeavour to range them under ſome general heads, and then cite a few.

Some are for preſſing ſhips.

Others for preſſing mariners.

And others for preſſing ſhips and mariners.

In ſome, the parties to whom they are directed are required to make a general impreſs upon certain great and emergent occaſions.

In others, they are confined to a certain number of ſhips and mariners for ſpecial ſervices.

And in others, they are ſtill farther confined to certain places on the coaſt.

Some commiſſions, particularly thoſe conferring the admiralty-juriſdiction and the rights of admiralty, warrant an impreſs as often as there ſhall be occaſion.

Others impower commanders of fleets or ſquadrons intended for certain expeditions, to preſs for that particular ſervice.

And others impower maſters of particular ſhips to preſs for manning their reſpective veſſels.

This general view will be ſufficient to let us into the nature of theſe precedents. And though the affair of preſſing ſhips is not now before me, yet I could not well avoid mentioning it; becauſe many of the precedents I have met with and muſt cite go as well to that, as to the buſineſs of preſſing mariners; and taken together, they ſerve to ſhew the power the crown hath conſtantly exerciſed over the whole naval force of the kingdom, as well ſhipping as mariners, whenever the public ſervice required it.

This however muſt be obſerved, that no man ſerved the crown in either caſe at his own expence. Maſters and mariners received full wages, and owners were conſtantly paid a full freight. But whether the pay in either caſe commenced from the time of preſſing, or from the time of actual entry into the ſervice, is not ſo clear.

There is in Cotton's * records a note of a petition of the commons, and of the king's anſwer upon this ſubject, in the 57 E. III. which inclineth me to think that the latter was the caſe. The petition, as abridged by Cotton, is thus; 'The maſters of ſhips may be 'paid the wages of them and their mariners from the day of 'their being appointed to ſerve the king.' The anſwer is, 'that taking of ſhips ſhall not be but for neceſſity, and 'payment ſhall be reaſonable as heretofore.' Cott. 118. No. 28. Rot. Parl. 47 E.III. No. 28.

In the ſame parliament an attempt was made to obtain for owners of ſhips an allowance for wear and tear in the king's ſervice.

The petition is thus abridged: 'The maſters of ſhips re'quire an allowance for the tackling of their ſhips worn by 'the king's ſervice.' Eod. Rot. No. 29 Cott. 118. No. 29.

The anſwer is, "Such allowance hath not been heretofore made.'

In the 2 R. II. an attempt of the like kind was made and with the like ſucceſs. The petition is, 'That owners of 'ſhips taken up for the king's ſervice, for their loſſes in the 'ſame, may be conſidered; and that mariners may have the 'like wages as archers have.' The anſwer is, 'It ſhall be 'as it hath been uſed.' Cott. 171. No. 50. Rot. Parl. 2 R. II. Pars ſecunda. No. 50.

Theſe petitions, though ſtiled in the record the petitions of the commons, as having probably begun in that houſe, were really the acts of both houſes; otherwiſe they could not have been offered to the king in a parliamentary way: for the antient method of paſſing bills was, that the matter of the bill was tendered to the crown for the royal aſſent of both houſes in form of petitions; and according to the anſwers from the throne, they paſſed into laws or were rejected.

I cannot but obſerve, that when we ſee every branch of the legiſlature ſpeaking of the ſubject of preſſing in the manner they do in theſe petitions and anſwers, it is not eaſy to conceive, that the legality of the practice was then queſtioned. It is plain at leaſt, that it was in thoſe early times treated in parliament as an antient and well-known uſage.

I come now to the commiſſions and mandatory writs I ſpeak of. I will cite a few from Rymer's Fœdera, out of a great number of the like kind which may be met with in that valuable collection of public records.

William Barret, commander of the ſhip Julian, had a commiſſion to make choice of and take up in the counties of Kent, Eſſex, Surry, and Suſſex, as well within liberties as without, 36 mariners, and to put them on board his ſhip, in order to proceed with the Prince of Wales on an expedition to Gaſcony †. 29 E. III. (5 Rym. 815.) Ad Eligendum & Capiendum.

The like commiſſions were given at the ſame time to the commanders of ſeven other ſhips for manning their reſpective veſſels for the ſame ſervice. (5 Rym. 816.)

There is a commiſſion to John Orewell, one of the King's ſerjeants at arms, to arreſt and take up 60 able mariners in the Thames and Medway and parts adjacent, as well within liberties as without, and to cauſe them to be at Sandwich within 15 days for the King's ſervice. 1 R. II. (7 Rym. 196.) Ad Arreſtandum & Capiendum.

John Elingham, a ſerjeant at arms, is impowered to arreſt and take up in the counties of Somerſet, Glouceſter, Briſtol, Devon and Cornwal, and in South Wales, as well within liberties as without, ſo many ſhips, barges, and other veſſels, and alſo mariners ſufficient for manning them, as ſhould be found ſufficient for an expedition to Ireland under the king's uncle the duke of Glouceſter. And all ſheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, maſters of ſhips and mariners are required to be aſſiſting to him in that ſervice. 15 R. II. (7 Rym. 718.) (See alſo 7 Rym. 195, 391, 453, 501, 504, 506, 507, 789, 839.)

In the ſame year the like commiſſions iſſued to two other ſerjeants at arms for the ſame ſervice, in Wales, Ireland, Lancaſhire, and Cheſhire ‡. (7 Rym. 718.)

John Kingſton, commander of the ſhip Katharine, is commiſſioned by himſelf or deputies to arreſt and take up, as well within liberties as without, as many mariners as ſhould be neceſſary for manning his ſhip, and to put them on board for the king's ſervice. And all ſheriffs, mayors, &c. are required to be aſſiſting to him in that ſervice. 3 H. V. (9 Rym. 238.) (See alſo 9 Rym. 91, 104, 144, 310.)

Commiſſions went at the ſame time to ſix commanders of other veſſels, for manning their reſpective veſſels in the ſame manner, and for the ſame ſervice. (9 Rym. 239.)

A mandatory writ iſſued directed to Thomas College ſerjeant at arms, and to Ralph Ingoldeſby, and to the cuſtomers of the port of Sandwich, and of every port from thence to Southampton, requiring them to arreſt and take up for the king's ſervice all and ſingular ſhips, barges, and other veſſels capable of tranſporting men or horſes, of what burden ſoever; and alſo all maſters and mariners who could be found in any of the ports mentioned before, and to put the ſaid maſters and mariners on board the ſaid veſſels for an expedition to the dutchy of Aquitain; any royal letters of licence thentofore granted to any perſon or perſons, or any other matter notwithſtanding: and all ſheriffs, mayors, and other officers are required to be aſſiſting to them in that ſervice. 21 H. VI. (11 Rym. 21.) (See alſo 10 Rym. 449, 685.)

At the ſame time the like writs iſſued to the cuſtomers and other officers of almoſt all the port-towns in the kingdom. (11 Rym. 22.)

There is a commiſſion to the maſter and purſer of the Mary Grace, impowering them to arreſt and take up, as well within liberties as without, whereſoever they could be found, as many mariners as ſhould be ſufficient for manning their veſſel, and to put them on board at the king's wages and for his ſervice. 14 E. IV. (11 Rym. 843.) (See alſo 11 Rym. 839.)

At the ſame time the like commiſſions iſſued to four other maſters for manning their reſpective ſhips in the ſame manner. (11 Rym. 843.)

The like commiſſions to maſters of ſix veſſels.
The like to eleven maſters in the ſame form. 15 E. IV. (12 Rym. 4. 5.)

I will now mention a few precedents of another ſort; which, becauſe they relate in great meaſure to one and ſame ſervice, I will place together, to avoid as much as poſſible a needleſs repetition in matters of form. 20 E. IV. (12 Rym. 139, 140.)

Theſe are either ſpecial commiſſions for commanding fleets or ſquadrons intended for certain expeditions mentioned in the commiſſion; or the general commiſſions conferring the whole admiralty-juriſdiction with the rights of admiralty, whether to one perſon under the ſtile of High Admiral, or to two under the character of Admirals of the north and weſt. Which latter was the uſual manner of conferring the admiralty-juriſdiction before the office of Lord High Admiral of England came much in uſe.

As to the ſpecial commiſſions, ſir William Bardolph was appointed admiral of a fleet then intended to be fitted out; his commiſſion impowereth him among other things to make choice of and take up for the king's ſervice a ſufficient number of mariners and others, and to put them on board the fleet, and to puniſh and chaſtiſe ſuch mariners who ſhould be diſobedient or refractory in that reſpect. 8 H. V. (10 Rym. 68.) Eligendi & Capiendi.

The lord Willoughby de Broke was appointed commander in chief of the fleet and army then intended for an expedition to France; he hath the ſame powers with regard to the manning the fleet as ſir William Bardolph had. 5 H. VII. (12 Rym. 455.

---

* The citations from Cotton have been found to agree with the record.

† See Madox's Hiſt. of the Exchequer 262. in notis, y, a writ to the ſheriff of Kent for the like ſervice; eligi facias 50 nautas &c. 9 E. II.

‡ See the editor's note at the end of this argument)

8 H. VII. (12 Rym. 484.) Sir Robert Poyntz is appointed to command the fleet in the abſence of the lord Willoughby, and hath the ſame powers with regard to manning the fleet.

31 Eliz. (16 Rym. 22.) Sir Martin Frobuſher had a commiſſion, which, after reciting that the command of a ſmall ſquadron intended againſt the Spaniards in the Weſt Indies had been given to him, goeth on thus: 'We therefore let you to wit that we have authorized and appointed, and by theſe preſents do give full power and authority unto the ſaid ſir Martin Frobuſher, and to his ſufficient deputy or deputies, whereſoever he ſhall have need, to preſs and to take up for our ſervice, to the furniture of ſuch ſhips as are committed to his charge, in any place upon our coaſts of England or Ireland, any mariners, ſoldiers, gunners, or other needful artificers:" and then requireth all juſtices and other officers to be aſſiſting to him in the premiſes.

I would not be underſtood to ſay, that all commanders of fleets or ſquadrons for ſpecial ſervices have had the ſame powers as thoſe I have mentioned. The truth is, the greater number of theſe ſpecial commiſſions, which I have met with, and thoſe too of the lateſt date, are ſilent as to that point.

I come now to the general commiſſions conferring the whole admiralty-juriſdiction and the rights of admiralty.

And thoſe I have met with, though I apprehend they all agree in ſubſtance with regard to the preſent queſtion, yet differ a little in point of form.

10 E. III. (4 Rym 727.) 12 E. III. (5 Rym 3-6, 83, 84.) Eligendi. In the 10th E. III. and in the 12th of the ſame reign, the admirals (for at that time there were two, one for the north, the other for the weſt) are impowered to make choice of, as well within liberties as without, able-bodied men fit for the ſervice, and to put them on board the fleet. The word Eligendi, made uſe of in theſe commiſſions, is the word uſed to the ſame purpoſe about that time in all the commiſſions for preſſing for the land-ſervice, which was then likewiſe practiſed. You have the word in relation to the land-ſervice in the ſtatute of the 18 E. III. Stat. 2. c. 7. 'Men of arms, hoblers and archers, choſen to go in the king's ſervice out of England, ſhall be at the king's wages from the day that they depart out of the counties where they were choſen, till their return.'

50 E. III. (7 Rym. 127, 128.) In the 50th E. III. the admirals' commiſſions, with regard to this matter, run thus, 'Necnon naves & naviculas guerrinas, quot neceſſariæ, cujuſcumque portagii fuerint, quotiens neceſſe fuerit, congregandi; & marinarios & alios pro navibus & naviculis illis neceſſarios eligendi, capiendi, & in eiſdem ponendi; & hujuſmodi marinarios qui rebelles vel contrarientes fuerint in hac parte, debitè compeſcendi & caſtigandi; & omnia alia, quæ ad officium admiralli pertinent IN HAC PARTE, faciendi & exercendi; prout de jure & ſecundum legem maritimam fuerit faciendum.'

And all ſheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, miniſters, owners of ſhips, maſters and mariners, are required to be aiding and aſſiſting to them in the premiſes.

1 R. II. (7 Rym 171.) The admirals' commiſſions run exactly in the ſame form.

6 H. IV. (8 Rym. 388.) So doth Thomas of Lancaſter's commiſſion of high admiral.

40 H. VI. (11 Rym. 679.) So doth the earl of Warwick's commiſſion of high admiral.

17 H. VIII. (14 Rym. 42.) And ſo doth the duke of Richmond's.

1 E. VI. (15 Rym. 127, 128.) The lord Seymour's commiſſion of high admiral expreſſeth the matter a little differently: the words are, Ac ad nautas & marinarios ac alios, pro omnibus & ſingulis navibus et naviculis conducendum & gubernandum neceſſarios, eligendum, capiendum & apprehendendum, atque eoſdem in dictis navibus & naviculis ponendum & retinendum.

(15 Rym. 157-163.) In the ſame year the lord Seymour had another commiſſion in fuller terms, with all the juriſdictions and rights of admiralty particularly enumerated and ſet forth at large: the words with regard to the preſent matter are, Et inſuper tam naves & naviculas guerrinas quam quaſcumque alias naves & naviculas ſeu vaſa quæcumque, pro quibuſcumque viagiis et negotiis noſtris vel expeditione eorundem; necnon navigeros ſive pilotas, ac navium magiſtros, nautas, naucleros, vibrellatores ſive bombardiatores et marinarios ac alias perſonas quaſcumque, pro navibus et naviculis ſeu vaſibus hujuſmodi aptos & idoneos, de tempore in tempus quotiens neceſſe fuerit, ubique locorum infra regna & dominia noſtra prædicta, tam infra libertates quam extra, congregandum, deligendum, retinendum, capiendum, areſtandum, deputandum & aſſignandum abſque interruptione ſeu impedimento per quemcumque alium in contrarium, fiendo; cum plenâ juriſdictione & poteſtate ad exequendum omnia alia & ſingula quæ in eâ parte per magnum admirallum noſtrum & præfectum generalem claſſis & marium, jure fieri debent, poſſint, vel ſolent.

3 E. VI. (15 Rym. 194.) The earl of Warwick had a commiſſion of high admiral in the ſame form.

And ſo had the duke of *Buckingham.

16 Jac. I. (17 Rym. 124.) And now, when I conſider theſe precedents, not fetched from dark, remote, and unſettled times, but running uniformly through a courſe of many ages, all, as I conceive, ſpeaking to the ſame purpoſe, though in different forms of expreſſion; ſome for making choice of, others, and thoſe the much greater number and of the lateſt date, for making choice of and taking up, or for arreſting, preſſing and taking up, mariners, and putting them on board for the public ſervice:---when I conſider theſe precedents, with the practice down to the preſent time, I cannot conceive otherwiſe of the point in queſtion, than that the crown hath been always in poſſeſſion of the prerogative of preſſing mariners for the public ſervice. Which prerogative hath been carried into execution, as well by virtue of ſpecial commiſſions, iſſued as the exigency of affairs required, as by the perſons who from time to time have been intruſted with the whole admiralty-juriſdiction.

And indeed the words, touching the manning the fleet, impowering the admirals to do and execute all other matters and things touching that ſervice which belong to the office of admiral, ſeem to imply either that thoſe powers were deemed to be inherent in the office, or that they had been conſtantly by expreſs words in the commiſſions annexed to it.

To this purpoſe I will mention a very remarkable tranſaction in the parliament of the 7th and 8th H. IV.

Complaint was made in parliament, that the ſea-ſervice had been greatly neglected, and that depredations were daily committed. To remedy this evil a very extraordinary expedient was offered, to which the neceſſity of the king's affairs obliged him for the preſent to ſubmit. It was, that the naval force of the kingdom ſhould, for a time, be put under the direction of the merchants themſelves.

Accordingly an act paſſed, that the merchants ſhould have the keeping of the ſeas from the firſt day of May 1406 to Michaelmas 1407: and to defray the expence of this ſervice they were to be intitled by writs of privy ſeal to certain duties mentioned in the record, as I find it abridged by Cotton.

Cott. 452, 453; Rot. Parl. 8 H. IV. No. 19, to No. 26. No. 26. Among other proviſions touching this matter, it was enacted, that the merchants ſhould name two perſons, one for the north and the other for the ſouth, who by commiſſion ſhould have the like powers as other admirals have had.

In purſuance of this act, Nicholas Blackburn was named by the merchants for the north, and Richard Cliderow for the ſouth.

One might reaſonably hope, that no powers deemed illegal or oppreſſive, no powers hurtful to trade or grievous to the mariners, ſhould be inſerted in the commiſſions of admirals nominated by the merchants: but it happeneth that Blackburn's commiſſion is extant, and runneth in the very words of thoſe I have cited from the 50th of E. III. to the 17th of H. VIII.

8 Rym. 439. You have it in Rymer. It reciteth the act of parliament, and that Blackburn had been nominated by the merchants for the north, and then goeth on in the uſual form impowering him to make choice of, take up and put on board ſuch mariners and others as ſhall be found neceſſary for the ſervice, and to puniſh and chaſtiſe ſuch as ſhall be diſobedient and refractory in that behalf.

The commiſſion was to continue as long as the merchants ſhould have the keeping of the ſeas; which indeed was not long: for before that parliament roſe, this novelty came to an end, the merchants were eaſed of a ſervice they were found to be very unequal to, their admirals' commiſſions dropped, and the whole direction of the marine returned to its proper channel.

8 Rym. 455. (Cott. 462.) I think it may ſafely be inferred from this record, that in the judgment of thoſe times, and in a concern of the merchants themſelves, the practice of manning the navy by the methods mentioned in theſe commiſſions was eſteemed to be neceſſary for the ſervice, and a branch of admiral juriſdiction †.

I come now to the ſtatutes which ſpeak of this matter.

And I do admit, that I know of no ſtatute now in force, which directly and in expreſs terms impowereth the crown to preſs mariners into the ſervice: and admitting that the prerogative is grounded on immemorial uſage, I know of no neceſſity for any ſuch ſtatute; for let it be remembered, that a prerogative grounded upon general immemorial uſage not inconſiſtent with any ſtatute, nor repugnant to the public utility, is as much part of the law of England, as ſtatute-law. You will be pleaſed to carry this obſervation too along with you, that the ſtatutes, which mention preſſing as a practice then ſubſiſting and not diſallowed, are at leaſt an evidence of the uſage, if they go no farther, I mean if they do not amount to a tacit approbation of it.

For it is hard to conceive, that the legiſlature ſhould frequently mention a practice utterly illegal, and repugnant to the principles of the conſtitution as ſubſiſting, without ſome mark of diſapprobation.

2 R. II. ſt. 1. c. 4. The firſt ſtatute I have met with is that of the 2 R. II. ſtat. 1. c. 4. It is an act againſt mariners deſerting the ſervice; not to be met with in the later editions of the Statutes at Large, which give us only the title of this act, with a note that it is altered by the 18th H. VI. and 5th Eliz.

It is however ſtill in force, and as ſuch is inſerted by Raſtal in his abridgment under title Mariner No. 1. My worthy friend Mr. Cay hath likewiſe inſerted it in his abridgment under title Seaman No. 1. I will give you the words of the act as far as concerneth this point, as I find it in an edition of the Statutes at Large ‡ ending with the laſt year of H. VII. 'Item becauſe that divers mariners after that they be arreſted and retained for the king's ſervice upon the ſea in defence of the realm and thereof have received their wages, do flee out of the ſaid ſervice without licence of the admirals or their lieutenants---It is ordained and eſtabliſhed, that all thoſe mariners, which from hence-

---

* The earl of Northumberland's commiſſion, in the time of king Charles the firſt, is ſilent with regard to theſe powers; and I am inclined to think they were not inſerted in any commiſſion in the latter part of that reign. But that matter is ſufficiently accounted for towards the end of this argument.

The High Admirals ſince the Reſtoration have had all the powers for preſſing conferred upon them, in as full a manner as in any of the commiſſions I have cited; and nearly in the ſame terms as in lord Seymour's ſecond commiſſion. And during ſuch commiſſions, whenever an impreſs hath been ordered, it hath been by warrants from the High Admiral. But when that office hath been put in commiſſion, the ſame ſervice hath been conſtantly carried on by warrants from the Admiralty-board, grounded on orders made from time to time by the king in council, as the exigency of affairs hath required.

† The parliament roll placeth this parliament in the 8th of H. IV. whereas Rymer, Dugdale, and the printed ſtatutes place it in the 7th. It was, to ſpeak in modern language, a parliament of the 7th and 8th of that reign: it began in the 7th and ended in the 8th.

‡ It is likewiſe in a collection of the ſtatutes at large, called Raſtal's ſtatutes, printed 1618, and in an old collection of the ſtatutes called the Great Book of Statutes; and in every edition antecedent to Pulton's in 1618. (It is now printed in ſeveral of the modern editions of the ſtatutes.)

‘ forth ſhall do in ſuch manner,---ſhall be holden to reſtore to our ſaid ‘ ſovereign lord the king the double of that they have taken for their ‘ wages, and nevertheleſs ſhall have one year's impriſonment without ‘ being delivered by mainpriſe, bail, or by other way.’

The act then goeth on to direct how fugitive mariners ſhall be apprehended and dealt with; and concludeth with this clauſe: ‘ And like ‘ puniſhment ſhall be made of ſerjeants of arms, maſters of ſhips and ‘ all others that ſhall be attainted before the admiral or his lieutenant ‘ aforeſaid, that they have any thing taken of the ſaid mariners for to ‘ ſuffer them to go at large out of the ſaid ſervice after that they have ‘ been arreſted for the ſame ſervice.’

You will be pleaſed to obſerve, that the word arreſt, twice uſed in this act, is made uſe of in the precedents I cited of the 1ſt and 15th of this very reign, and in moſt of thoſe of later date: it is likewiſe uſed in ten other commiſſions in the ſame reign touching this very ſervice, all likewiſe directed for execution to ſerjeants at arms, which for brevity-ſake I have omitted. (7 Rym. 391, 453, 501, 504, 709, 839.)

So that if it be aſked, who are the perſons ſubjected to the penalties of this act, it muſt be anſwered, mariners arreſted and taken into the ſervice by virtue of commiſſions from the crown, in caſe of their deſertion; and ſerjeants at arms, maſters of ſhips and others executing ſuch commiſſions, who for lucre ſhall ſuffer them to go at large after ſuch arreſts.

Mariners indeed were not ſubject to the penalties of this act, unleſs they had received wages. But might not a mariner ſo arreſted have reaſonably ſaid, ‘ I was compelled againſt law into the ſervice, I did my duty ‘ while I continued in it, and dearly earned the wages I received;’ might not a mariner have ſaid this, and much more upon a ſuppoſition of the illegality of an impreſs? Certainly he might. But you ſee mariners, though taken into the ſervice by compulſion, are by this act made liable to pecuniary, and corporal puniſhment too, in caſe of deſertion *. This doth more than imply the legality of ſuch compulſion.

It may poſſibly be objected, that the word retained is uſed in the act, and that a retainer implieth a mutual contract for ſome ſervice to be done. It may, when it ſtandeth alone, have received that ſenſe in modern language, but in ſtrict propriety it meaneth nothing more than the taking a perſon into ſome ſervice; and is in truth the act only of the perſon retaining or taking. And therefore when I ſee the word retained connected with one, which hath no other meaning in the Engliſh tongue than what carrieth with it the idea of compulſion, I cannot conceive that the legiſlature, ſpeaking of perſons arreſted and retained, ſhould mean no other, than perſons taken into the ſervice with their own conſent.

That there was a practice then ſubſiſting of taking mariners into the ſervice by compulſion cannot be denied: the parliament could not be ignorant of it. Is it poſſible then to imagine, that they could uſe a word which manifeſtly ſignifieth compulſion, and yet mean nothing more than a mutual contract? Beſides, it cannot be conceived, that ſerjeants at arms, who, as I before obſerved, were the perſons about that time uſually employed in the ſervice of preſſing, could be expreſly and by name ſubjected to the penalties of the act, if no mariners but ſuch as voluntarily entered into the ſervice were comprehended in it.

2, 3 Ph. & Mar. c. 16. The next act is that of the 2d & 3d Ph. and Mar. which layeth a penalty on watermen plying between Graveſend and Windſor, who, to ſpeak in the language of the act, in the time of preſſing by commiſſion for the ſervice of the crown upon the ſea, do willingly and obſtinately withdraw, hide and convey themſelves into ſecret places and out-corners; and after, when ſuch time of preſſing is over-paſſed, return to their employments.

This proviſion, it is true, extendeth only to watermen on the Thames, and may be conſidered as one of the many wholſome regulations thoſe perſons are brought under by this act: and it is mentioned in that light in an act paſſed in the late queen's time. 4, 5 A. c. 19. ſ. 18. But at the ſame time it ſheweth, that commiſſions for preſſing were then in uſe. And, in my opinion, it likewiſe ſuppoſeth the legality and utility of ſuch commiſſions, and that theſe people are the objects of them: otherwiſe why are they ſubjected even to the ſlighteſt puniſhment, for abſconding at the time of the execution of thoſe commiſſions?

The acts which come next to be conſidered are ſome made ſince the Revolution; a moſt auſpicious period! when the principles of liberty were well underſtood, and moſt glorioſly aſſerted.

Theſe are the 7th & 8th of king William, the 2d & 3d, and the 4th & 5th of the late queen.

7 & 8 W. III. c. 21. The firſt is intitled, An act for the increaſe and encouragement of ſeamen.

Sect. 15. It enacteth, among other things, that licences may be given, by his majeſty, or the Lord High Admiral, or Commiſſioners of Admiralty, to any landmen willing to enter into the merchants ſervice; which ſhall be to them a protection againſt being impreſſed for the ſpace of two years.

Provided ſuch landmen bring two credible perſons to vouch for them. But if any perſon ſhall vouch for any one as a landman, who ſhall afterwards appear to have been a ſeaman, he ſhall forfeit twenty pounds.

2 & 3 A. c. 6. The 2d & 3d of the late queen is intitled, An act for the increaſe of ſeamen, and better encouragement of navigation and ſecurity of the coal-trade. To theſe ends it impowereth pariſh-officers to bind out poor boys to ſea in the merchants' ſervice; and enacteth, that Sect. 4, 5. boys ſo bound out ſhall not be compelled or impreſſed or permitted to enter into the ſervice of the crown at ſea till they attain their age of eighteen, and that certificates of ſuch binding ſhall be tranſmitted by the collectors of the reſpective ports to the Admiralty; and that thereupon ſuch protections ſhall be made for ſuch apprentices without fee or reward.

Sect. 15. And, for encouraging other perſons to bind themſelves apprentices in the merchants' ſervice, it further enacteth, that perſons ſo binding themſelves ſhall not be compelled or impreſſed into the ſervice of the crown for three years from the time of ſuch binding, and that, upon certificates of ſuch binding from the Collectors of the reſpective ports, the Admiralty ſhall grant protections without fee or reward.

Sect. 20. And, for encouraging the coal-trade, it farther enacteth, that during the war there ſhall be allowed to every veſſel employed in that trade, beſides the maſter, mate, and carpenter, one able ſeaman for every one hundred tun of the veſſel, not exceeding three hundred tun, free from impreſſing.

4, 5 Ann. c. 19. ſ. 17. The 4th & 5th of the late queen reciteth that clauſe in the act of the 2d & 3d, which exempted voluntary apprentices for three years, and ſaith, ‘ Whereas ſuch exemption ‘ for three years, which was intended for the encouragement of landmen ‘ to bind themſelves, hath been manifeſtly abuſed for the exempting and pro- ‘ tecting of ſeamen from the ſervice, to the great hindrance and prejudice of her ‘ majeſty's ſea-ſervice: Be it therefore enacted and declared, that no per- ‘ ſon or perſons of the age of eighteen years ſhall have any exemption ‘ or protection from her majeſty's ſea-ſervice, who ſhall have been in any ‘ ſea-ſervice before the time they bound themſelves, any law or ſtatute ‘ to the contrary notwithſtanding.’ †

Let us now take a ſhort view of theſe acts.

Perſons under certain ſpecial qualifications are exempted from being impreſſed.

To that end, in one caſe, licences are to be granted by his majeſty or from the Admiralty, but under proper cautions to prevent abuſes.

In other caſes, certificates are to be returned from the chief officers of the ports, and protections thereupon granted without fee or reward.

And in every caſe theſe exemptions, as they are confined to perſons under certain limited qualifications, ſo are they limited too in point of time, and withal given by way of encouragement. And laſtly, the extending the benefit even of a temporary exemption beyond the original intent of the legiſlature is declared to be an abuſe, and an abuſe tending to the great hindrance and prejudice of her majeſty's ſea-ſervice.

Do not theſe things inconteſtibly preſuppoſe the expediency, the neceſſity, and the legality of an impreſs in general? If they do not, one muſt entertain an opinion of the legiſlature acting and ſpeaking in this manner, which it will not be decent for me to mention in this place.

For the very notion of an exemption, when granted by ſtatute to particular perſons, and this too by way of encouragement, implieth, that, without ſuch exemption, the parties intitled to the benefit of it would by law be liable to the duty or burden which is the ſubject-matter of that exemption: otherwiſe the ſtatute doth nothing; it operateth upon nothing, if no legal duty or burden be removed by it. And conſequently the granting exemptions to ſeamen under certain limited qualifications, and for a limited time only, ſuppoſeth that all ſeamen in general, without ſuch exemption, were by law liable to the duty or burden which is the ſubject-matter of that exemption.

And the many proviſions the legiſlature hath made to prevent abuſes with regard to theſe exemptions, attended with a plain, full and expreſs declaration, that ſuch abuſes, namely the extending the benefit of exemptions beyond the intent of the legiſlature, tend to the great hindrance and prejudice of the ſea-ſervice, imply, that the duty or burden, which is the object of all this care and caution, is expedient and neceſſary to the ſervice.

And this burden is plainly an impreſs in time of war.

Which, from the authorities I have cited, appeareth to me to be grounded on common and ſtatute-law; in other words, upon a general immemorial uſage, allowed, approved, and recognized by many acts of parliament.

Againſt what I have ſaid it hath been objected, that the practice of preſſing is inconſiſtent with the liberty of the ſubject, and a breach of Magna Charta.

I readily admit, that an impreſs is a reſtraint upon the natural liberty of thoſe who are liable to it: but it muſt likewiſe be admitted on the other hand, that every reſtraint upon natural liberty is not eo nomine illegal, or at all inconſiſtent with the principles of civil liberty. And if the reſtraint, be it to what degree ſoever, appeareth to be neceſſary to the good and welfare of the whole, and to be warranted by ſtatute-law, as well as immemorial uſage, it cannot be complained of otherwiſe than as a private miſchief: which, as I ſaid at the beginning, muſt, under all governments whatſoever, be ſubmitted to for avoiding a public inconvenience.

As to Magna Charta, it is not pretended that the practice of preſſing mariners for the public ſervice is condemned by expreſs words in that ſtatute: and if it be warranted by common and ſtatute-law, it cannot be ſhewn to be illegal by any conſequences drawn from Magna Charta; in like manner as preſſing for the land-ſervice could not be deemed illegal, or inconſiſtent with the principles of our conſtitution, while there were temporary acts (as there were many in the late war) to warrant it.

Beſides, we know that Magna Charta hath been expreſly and by name confirmed by many acts of parliament, my lord Coke ſaith 32; and yet the practice of preſſing mariners ſtill continued through all ages, and was never, that I know of, once mentioned in any of thoſe acts as illegal or a violation of the Great Charter.

---

† See Statuta de Officio Admiralitatis Angliæ, publiſhed by Dr. Simpſon in the year 1743, at the end of Clark's Praxis Supremæ Curiæ Admiralitatis—Articles 10, 37, 39; and the learned doctor's notes on thoſe articles touching ſhips and mariners preſſed into the king's ſervice.

† N. B. Other acts to the like purpoſe which did not occur to the author when this argument was delivered are, 1 Annæ, ſeſſ. 1. c. 16. ſ. 2. 6 Annæ, c. 31. ſ. 2. 13 Geo. II. c. 17. ſ. 1, 2, 3. and c. 28 ſ. 5. (See alſo 19 Geo. II. c. 30.)

4 E. III. ſt. 2. c. 5. 25 E. III ſt. 5. c. 8. In a ſimilar caſe, I mean the practice of preſſing ſoldiers for foreign ſervice, there are ſtatutes of an early date, which I conceive, were intended againſt it; though it was practiſed long afterwards. But thoſe acts extend only to the caſe of preſſing for the land-ſervice, not a word do I find in them touching the ſea-ſervice. One reaſon of the difference, among others, may be, that the land-ſervice was thought to be ſufficiently provided for in ordinary caſes by the military tenures; and extraordinary caſes, caſes of neceſſity, ſuch as that of a foreign invaſion, were expreſly excepted. In thoſe caſes, ſaith the 1 E. III. it ſhall be done as in times paſt; which we know was by commiſſions of array; whereas no competent proviſion was made by law for the ordinary ſea-ſervice. There were no naval ſervices due to the crown, except thoſe of the cinque ports and a very few others; which, all together, were too inconſiderable to be mentioned, and bore no ſort of proportion to the common exigencies of the public in time of war.

But there is another objection, which deſerveth to be conſidered. It is, that temporary acts have from time to time been made, authorizing the preſſing mariners for the ſea-ſervice; from whence it is argued, that the legiſlature, which is ſuppoſed to do nothing in vain, would not have given thoſe powers for a time, if the king by his prerogative could have provided for the ſervice without the aid of ſuch temporary acts.

1 Vol. 679, in margine. The gentleman who had the care of publiſhing lord chief juſtice Hale's Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown referreth to ſeveral temporary acts made in the late queen's time, authorizing, as he ſuppoſeth, the preſſing of ſoldiers and mariners. I have looked into all thoſe acts. They are ſolely for preſſing ſoldiers and marines; not a ſingle word that concerneth the preſſing of mariners do I find in any of them.

4, 5 Annæ, c. 19. There was indeed an act made in that reign for compelling mariners into the ſervice, by methods which, it was then thought, the prerogative alone could not warrant. To that end it authorized and required juſtices of the peace, and other magiſtrates to cauſe privy ſearches to be made from time to time for mariners, who, as the act expreſſeth it, did lie hid, withdraw, and conceal themſelves, and to deliver them when apprehended to conductors for the ſervice of the crown: and conſtables and other officers were, by warrants from the magiſtrates, to make privy ſearches by night, and were impowered to enter houſes and open doors in execution of ſuch warrants, and were required to give an account of their proceedings from time to time to the magiſtrates on oath, and, in caſe of negligence or remiſſneſs in the premiſes, were ſubjected to pecuniary puniſhments. This is the ſubſtance of the firſt nine ſections of the act; which ſections, continuing in force only till the firſt of March 1706, are not printed in the later editions of the ſtatutes at large.

But it cannot, I conceive, be inferred from the new powers given by this act, that an impreſs by commiſſion from the crown or by admiralty-warrants, which was practiſed at that very time, was illegal. All that can be inferred is, that the ordinary methods then in uſe were found ineffectual; and therefore the legiſlature had, for that time, recourſe to an extraordinary one, for compelling into the ſervice thoſe, who could not be come at by the ordinary methods; thoſe, who, in the language of the act, lay hid, withdrew, and concealed themſelves. And to that end, civil magiſtrates and civil officers are required and authorized to do, what, in the judgment of the legiſlature, without the aid of that act, they could not have done, or at leaſt were not compellable to do.

And whoever readeth and conſidereth the 17th and 18th ſections of this act, which I have already cited to another purpoſe, will hardly conceive, that that parliament had any doubts concerning the legality of an impreſs by the ordinary methods of law.

16 & 17 Car. I. c. 5, 23, 26. Indeed the temporary acts of the 16th and 17th of Car. I. come directly to the point. They authorized an impreſs by admiralty-warrants for a limited time. And had temporary acts of that kind been frequent, or had the practice of preſſing been diſcontinued from the time of Charles I. unleſs when revived by ſubſequent temporary acts, I think what hath been ſaid upon the foot of antient precedents could, after all, have had very little weight. For I freely declare, that antient precedents alone, unleſs ſupported by modern practice, weigh very little with me in queſtions of this nature; I mean, in queſtions touching the prerogative. But we all know, that the practice of preſſing by admiralty-warrants hath continued, now near a century ſince the expiration of thoſe acts of king Charles I. without one ſtatute of the like kind to authorize it.

Theſe acts of king Charles I. do indeed ſhew, that the prerogative of preſſing mariners into the public ſervice was at that time doubted of. And whoever conſidereth the peculiar circumſtances of that time, when the prerogative had in too many inſtances been carried to great lengths, and when the nation was at the very eve of a civil war upon the ſubject of liberty and prerogative, and conſidereth withal that a naval force muſt in all events, as things then ſtood, be provided;—whoever, I ſay, conſidereth theſe things, will not wonder, that the prerogative of preſſing mariners ſhould, at that very critical time, be called in queſtion; or that, in order to procure an univerſal ſubmiſſion to a meaſure neceſſary at that time, the authority of parliament ſhould be called in, in aid of the prerogative.

c. 28. There was a temporary act made in this very ſeſſion for preſſing for the land-ſervice. It reciteth that a rebellion was on foot in Ireland, and then declareth, almoſt in the words of 1 E. III. before cited, That by law no man is compellable to go out of his county to ſerve as a ſoldier, except in caſe of neceſſity of ſudden coming of ſtrange enemies into the kingdom, or except he was bound thereto by tenure.

It is worth obſerving, that no ſuch declaration ſaving the rights of the ſubject is to be found in any of the acts of this ſeſſion for preſſing mariners. And the different penning of theſe acts, made in the ſame ſeſſion, and touching caſes of ſo ſimilar a nature, ſtrongly intimateth, that the point was not, even at that critical time, thought equally clear in the one caſe as in the other. The ſame obſervation occurreth with regard to the different penning of all the acts of the late queen for preſſing ſoldiers and marines, and of that for preſſing mariners; the former declare, that it was neceſſary at that time of war that ſoldiers and marines ſhould be raiſed by the methods preſcribed in the acts, 'by common conſent and grant in parliament.' Theſe are the words of the acts, and they are the very words made uſe of to the ſame purpoſe in the 25th E. III. already cited. The latter, without any ſuch declaration, barely impowereth and requireth magiſtrates and other peace officers to make ſearch for and apprehend mariners, who then lay hid, withdrew and concealed themſelves, and to ſend them into the ſervice.

1 Vol. 678. Lord chief juſtice Hale, in his Hiſtory of the Pleas of the Crown, ſpeaking of the legality of preſſing, which he indeed ſeemeth to doubt of, ſaith, 'He that looks upon the acts enabling preſ'ſing of ſoldiers and mariners for foreign ſervice upon or be'yond the ſea, namely 17 Car. I. c. 12, 25, 26. may think 'that thoſe times made ſome doubt of it. But of this," ſaith he, "I deliver no opinion." The chapters are miſnumbered, they are 5, 23, 26.

That learned man, you ſee, carrieth the inference from theſe temporary acts no farther than to render the matter doubtful; and ſo he leaveth it. But had he lived to ſee the practice of preſſing mariners continue near a century longer, and eſpecially had he ſeen this practice treated by the legiſlature in the manner the acts made ſince the Revolution treat it, I think what was then but matter of doubt would have now appeared to him in a different light. I confeſs it doth ſo to me. For rights of every kind, which ſtand upon the foot of uſage, gradually receive new ſtrength in point of light and evidence from the continuance of that uſage; as it implieth the tacit conſent and approbation of every ſucceſſive age, in which the uſage hath prevailed. But when the prerogative hath not only this tacit approbation of all ages, the preſent as well as the former on its ſide, but is recognized, or evidently preſuppoſed, by many acts of parliament, as in the preſent caſe I think it is, I ſee no legal objection that can be made to it.

I make no apology for the length of my argument, becauſe I hope the importance of the queſtion will be thought a ſufficient excuſe for me in that reſpect. For it is no more nor leſs than, whether the only effectual method yet found out for manning our navy in time of war, for raiſing that number of mariners which the legiſlature from time to time declare to be neceſſary for defending our coaſt and protecting our trade,—whether this method be legal or not. This I ſay is the queſtion. And therefore I could not ſatisfy myſelf without entering as far into the merits of it as I could.

And I have delivered my opinion upon it without any reſerve.

[N. B. The authorities for preſſing mariners for the public ſervice, to be found in Rymer's Fœdera, are ſo numerous, that the learned author purpoſely left many of them uncited by him. To ſome of thoſe in the reigns of Richard II. Henry V. Henry VI. and Edward IV. I have referred in the margin of his argument. But as amongſt the commiſſions and mandatory writs cited in pages 162 and 163, he hath given none which were iſſued in the reign of Henry IV. I think it not improper to take particular notice in this place of two commiſſions granted in that king's reign. The firſt of them was iſſued in the 12th year of his reign; and being a remarkably ſtrong authority for the practice, it deſerves to be here tranſcribed. It is in the following form.

8 Rym. 700. Rex dilecto ſibi Roberto Spellowe ſervienti ſuo ad arma, ſalutem.

Scias quod aſſignavimus te, tam ad omnes et ſingulas naves, bargeas, et balingeras, ac alia vaſa portagii triginta doliorum et ultra, in quibuſcumque portubus et locis regni noſtri Angliæ inveniri poterunt, quam ad tot magiſtros et marinarios, quot pro gubernatione navium, bargearum, balingerarum et vaſorum prædictorum neceſſarii fuerint, infra libertates et extra, pro denariis noſtris prompte et rationabiliter ſolvendis, areſtandum et capiendum, et uſque portum civitatis noſtræ Londoniæ,

Ad proficiſcendum nobiſcum in propria perſona noſtra in præſenti viagio noſtro verſus partes tranſmarinas;

Duci faciendum,

Et ad omnes illos quos in hac parte contrarios inveneris ſeu rebelles areſtandum et capiendum, et priſonis noſtris mancipandum, in eiſdem moraturos quouſque pro eorum deliberatione aliter duxerimus ordinandum;

Et ideo tibi præcipimus quod circa præmiſſa diligenter intendas, ac ea facias et exequaris in forma prædicta:

Damus autem univerſis et ſingulis vicecomitibus, majoribus, ballivis, conſtabulariis, miniſtris, poſſeſſoribus, magiſtris et marinariis navium, bargearum, et balingerarum, et aliorum vaſorum quorumcumque, ac aliis fidelibus et ſubditis noſtris, tam infra libertates quam extra, tenore præſentium firmiter in mandatis, quod tibi in executione præmiſſorum pareant, obediant, et intendant, prout decet.

In cujus &c.

Teſte Rege apud Weſtmonaſterium Tertio die Septembris.

Per ipſum regem.

8 Rym. 730. By the other, which iſſued in the 13th year of the ſame reign, John Drax, a ſerjeant at arms, is impowered, by himſelf and his deputies, to arreſt and take up one hundred mariners in the county of Suffolk, one hundred in the county of Kent, and thirty in the county of Eſſex. And all ſheriffs, mayors and other officers are required to be aſſiſting to him in that ſervice. DODSON.]

AN

ALPHABETICAL TABLE

OF THE

NAMES of the PRISONERS or PRINCIPAL PARTIES in the ſeveral TRIALS.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

The DATES of the TRIALS; the CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION; the COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL; the PUNISHMENTS, JUDGMENTS, or EVENTS of the ſeveral PROSECUTIONS; with REFERENCES to the VOLUMES in which the TRIALS are reſpectively contained.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
A
ABINGTON	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - - 134
Acton	Aug. 1, 1729	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	ix. 181, 203, 209, 218
Anderſon	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 993
Anderton	June 3, 1693	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	viii. - - 63
Andrews,	Aug. 16, 1650	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	vii. - 324
Angleſea, Earl	Nov. 11, 1743	Ejectment	Ireland	Verdict for defendant	ix. - - 380
	Aug. 3, 1744	Aſſault	Ireland	Fined	ix. — 336
Anna Boleyn, Queen	May, 1536	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. - 10
Anneſley	July 15, 1742	Murder	O. B.	Chance-medley	ix. - - 315
Appletree	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	ii. - 385
Argyle, Earl	Nov. 1681	Treaſon	Scotland	Beheaded	ii. 417 vii. 379
Argyle, Marquiſs	Jan. 23, 1661	Treaſon	Scotland	Beheaded	iii. - 441
Armſtrong, Sir Thomas	June 14, 1684	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	iii. - - 383
Arnold	March 20, 1723-4	Felonious ſhooting at	Aſſizes	Reprieved	viii. — 290
Aſaph, Saint Biſhop	June 29, 1788	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Arundel, Earl	April 18, 1589	Treaſon	High Steward	Died in priſon	i. 164 xi. 27
Aſhby	Jan. 1703	Breach of Privilege	Parliament		viii. — 89, 124
Aſhley	April, 1752	Perjury	O. B.	Pilloried, impriſoned, and tranſported	x. — 411
Aſhton	Jan. 17, 1690	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 455
Aſtlin	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. 949, 978
Atkins, Samuel	Feb. 11, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Acquitted	ii. — 792
Atkins, William	Aug. 13, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	Aſſizes	Sentence for Treaſon	ii. — 968
Atterbury, Biſhop	May, 1723	Treaſonable Conſpiracy	Parliament	Baniſhed	vi. — 335
Audley, Lord	April 25, 1631	Rape and Sodomy	High Steward	Beheaded	i. — 388
Axtel	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 369
B
Babington	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 128
Bacon, Lord	March 19, 1620	Bribery and Corruption	H. L.	Fined and impriſoned	i. — 375
Baillie, David	Feb. 14, 1703-4	Defamation	Scotland	Impriſoned	viii. — 195
Baillie, Robert	Dec. 3, 1684	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed, &c.	iii. — 1095
Ballard	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed, &c.	i. — 128
Balmerino, Lord	March 10, 1609	Treaſon	Scotland	Pardoned	vii. — 85
Balmerino, Lord	Dec. 3, 1634	Treaſonable Libel	Scotland	Pardoned	i. — 429
Balmerino, Lord	July, 1746	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. — 587
Bambridge	May 22, 1729	Murder	O. B.		ix. — 145
	Jan 22, 1729-30	Appeal of Murder	G. H.	Acquitted	152
	Dec. 26, 1729	Felony	O. B.		234
Banbury, Earl	January, 1692-3	Murder	B. R.	Arraigned only	viii. — 50
Barbot	Jan. 5, 1753	Murder	Saint Chriſtophers	Executed	x. — 139
Barkſtead, Colonel	April 16, 1662	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. — 369
Barlicorn	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Barnard	May 10, 1758	Threatening Letters	O. B.	Acquitted	x. — 447
Barnardiſton, Sir Samuel	Feb. 14, 1683	Miſdemeanour	G. H.	Fined	iii. — 933
Barnewell	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 128
Barroverſe, Sir James	March 12, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	i. — 5
Baſtwick	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and impriſoned	i. — 481
Bateman	Dec. 9, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 162
Bates, John	M. Term, 1604	Contempt	Exchequer		xi. — 29
Bates, Thomas	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder Plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 232
Battray	July 16, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Reprieved	ix. — 555
Bayard, Colonel	Feb. 19, 1701	Treaſon	New-York	Reprieved	v. — 419
Baynton	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible Marriage	B. R.	Reprieved	v. — 464
Baxter, Clerk	May 20, 1685	Libel	G. H.	Fined	x. Ap. — 37
Beadle	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Beaſley	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Beauchamp	March 12, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	i. — 15
Bedford, Earl	May 29, 1630	Seditious Writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. — 121
Belknap, Sir R.L.C.J.C.B.	March 2, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. — 13
Bellamy	Sept. 13, 1536	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 134
Bennet, Ralph	May 2, 1684,	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. 949, 978
Bernardi, Major	March 25, 1696	Aſſaſſination Plot		Died in priſon	x. Ap. — 64
Berry, Henry	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. — 760
Berry, John	March 1, 1755	Acceſſary before the Fact	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. — 417
Berwick	July 17, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 559
Bethel	Oct. 5, 1681	Aſſault and Battery	Southwark	Fined	iii. — 413
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Biſhops, Seven	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Blackmore	E. and M. Terms, 1765	Falſe Impriſonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. — 307
Blackſton, Colonel	Aug. 16, 1649	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Executed	vii. — 322

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
Blake, King's Counſel	March 3, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	i. — 14
Blague	July 13, 1683	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	iii. — 739
Blandy, Mary	Feb. 29, 1752	Parricide	Oxon	Executed	x. — 1
Blunt, Sir Chriſtopher	March 5, 1600	Treaſon	Com. of Oy & Term.	Beheaded	i. 209 vii. 47
Bolton	June 25, 1662	Refuſing to take the Oaths	O. B.	Impriſoned	ii. — 463
Boleyn Anna, Queen	May, 1536	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Bonnet, Major	Oct. 30, 1718	Piracy	Carolina	Executed	vi. — 156
Boroſky	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 466
Bothwell, Earl	April 12, 1567	Regicide	Scotland	Acquitted	i. — 78
Bouchier	Feb. 28, 1703	Treaſon	B. R.	Reprieved	v. — 506
Braddon	Feb. 7, 1683	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 855
Bradſhaw, Deering	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	vii. — 648
———, James	Oct. 27, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 576
Brambre, Mayor of London	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Executed	i. — 1
Brereton	May, 1536	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Brewſter	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. — 538
Briſtol, Biſhop of	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Britton	Feb. 24, 1703-4	Conſpiracy	B. B.	Fined	viii. — 178
Broadfoot	Aug. 30, 1754	Murder	Briſtol	Manſlaughter	xi 349
Brodway	June 27, 1631	Rape and Sodomy	B. R.	Executed	i. — 396
Brommich	Aug. 13, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	Aſſizes	Sentence for treaſon	ii. — 965
Brooke	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Brookeſby	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Reprieved	vii. — 63
Brooks	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. — 528
Buckner	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Cenſured	i. — 418
Burleigh, Simon de	March 12, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	i. — 15
Burleigh, Sir William	March 12, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. — 13
Burton	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and impriſoned	i. — 481
Buſby	July 25, 1681	Romiſh Prieſt	Aſſizes	Reprieved	iii. — 328
Butler	Oct. 12, 1699	Forgery	O. B.	Fined	v. — 232
Byron, Lord	April 16, 1765	Murder	H. L.	Diſcharged	x. — 498*
C.
Cambridge univerſity	April, 1687	Contempt		Vice Chancellor deprived	iv. — 254
Cameron, Doctor	May, 17, 1753	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	x. — 202
Campman	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. — 85
Canning, Eliz.	April, 1754	Perjury	O. B.	Tranſported	x. — 205
Canterbury, Archbiſhop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Carew	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 330
Carey, Sir John, baron of Exchequer	March 2, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. — 13
Carliel	June 27, 1612	Murder	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 91
Carnegie	July 25, 1728	Murder	Scotland	Acquitted	ix. — 26
Carnwath, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Carr	July 2, 1680	Libel	G. H.		iii. — 57
Carter	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chicheſter	Executed	ix. — 716
Cave	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	vii. — 648
Cavenagh	March 7, 1688	Cow-ſtealing	Ireland	Executed	iv. — 408
Carrington	M. Term, 1765	Seizure of papers	C. B.	Damages	ix. — 313
Cellier, Eliz.	June 11, 1680	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. — 32
	Sept. 1680	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried and fined	iii. — 89
Chadwick	July 16, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 555
Chambers	1629	Seditious ſpeeches	C. S.	Fined	xi. — 118
Charles, king	Jan. 20, 1648	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	i. — 986
Charnel	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Charnock, John	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 134
Charnock, Robert	Nov. 23, 1682	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. — 519
	March 11, 1695	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Chetwynd	Oct. 12, 1743	Murder	O. B.	Pardoned	ix. — 527
Chicheſter, biſhop	March 6, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Pardoned	i. — 15
	June 29, 1638	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Churchill	May 8, 1704	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Clare, earl	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. — 121
Clarendon, earl	July 10, 1663	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	ii. — 554
Clarke	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Clement	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 338
Cobby	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chicheſter	Executed	ix. — 716
Cobham, lord	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	High Steward	Impriſonment	vii. — 63
Coke	March 16, 1721	Maiming	Aſſizes	Executed	vi. — 212
Cole	Sept. 2, 1692	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	iv. — 506
Coleman	Nov. 27, 1678	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	ii. — 660
Colledge	Aug. 17, 1681	Treaſon	Oxon	Executed	iii. — 341
Conſtable, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Deſertion	Court-martial	Shot	v. — 445
Cook, John	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 341
——, Peter	May 9, 1696	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. — 738
——, Shadrack	April 3, 1696	Sedition	Aſſizes	Cenſured and impriſoned	x. Ap. — 43
Conningſmark, count	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	iii. — 466
Copley	Nov. 13, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.		vii. — 63
Corbet, Miles	April 16, 1622	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. — 369
———, ſir John	Nov. 22, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Diſcharged	vii. — 114
Corbett, Richard	Jan. 22, 1729-30	Appeal of murder	Niſi Prius	Acquitted	ix. — 152
Corker	July 18, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Corniſh	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
	Oct. 19, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 130
Cornwallis, lord	1678	Murder	High Steward	Acquitted	ii. — 725
Cotton, Edward	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Cotton, Sir Robert	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. — 121
Cowper	July 16, 1699	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	v. — 194
Cranburne	April 21, 1696	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	iv. — 698
Creighton, lord Sanquire	June 27, 1612	Murder	B. R.	Executed	vii. — 86
Crook	June 25, 1662	Not taking oaths	O. B.	Impriſoned	ii. — 463

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Puniſhments, &c.	Volumes.
Cromartie, earl	July, 1746	Treaſon	H. L.	Reprieved	ix. — 587
Crompton, bp. of London	Aug. 1686	Contempt	Eccleſ. Com.	Suſpended	iv. — 247
Crone	May 19, 1690	Treaſon	O. B.		x. Ap. - 40
Crook	June 25, 1662	Not taking oaths	O. B.	Impriſoned	ii. - - 463
Croſby,	E. Term, 1694	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	x. Ap. - 42
mayor of London	E. Term, 1771	Hab. Corp.	C. B.	Remanded	xi. — 335
Cuffe	March 5, 1600	Treaſon	Com. Oy. & Term.	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Curl	M. Term, 1714	Libel	B. R.	Pillioried	x. Ap. - 92
Curtis	1679	Libel	G. H.		ii. — 1042
D.
Dacres, lord	July 9, 1535	Treaſon	High Steward	Acquitted	xi. — 10
Dagleiſh	June 13, 1567	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	viii. — 327
Dammaree	April 18, 1710	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	viii. — 218
Danby, earl	Dec. 1678	Treaſon	Parliament	Pardoned	ii. — 731
Darby	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Fine and impriſonment	vii. — 47
Darnel, ſir Thomas	Nov. 15, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Diſcharged	vii. — 114
Davers, ſir Charles	March 5, 1601	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	i. 209 vii. 47
Davis, ſir John	March 5, 1601	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Daviſon	March 28, 1587	Miſpriſ. and contempt	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 20
Dawſon	Oct. 19, 1696	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 1
Deacon	July 17, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 558
Deagle	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Delamere, lord	Jan. 14, 1685	Treaſon	High Steward	Acquitted	iv. — 210
Denew	Feb. 14, 1703	Aſſault and conſpiracy	B. R.	Fined	viii. — 178
Derwentwater, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	vi. — 1
Devonſhire, earl	E. Term, 1687	Aſſault	B. R.	Fined 30000l.	xi. — 133
Digby, ſir Everard	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder-plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 232
Diſney	June 25, 1685	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 558
Donn	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 128
Dover	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. — 545
Downes	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 396
Dudley, ſir Edward	Aug. 19, 1553	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Edmund	July 16, 1509	Treaſon	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. - - 3
E.
Earl, ſir Walter	Nov. 22, 1627	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Diſcharged	vii. - 114
Earles	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 585
Egan	March 1, 1755	Acceſſary before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. - - 417
Elliot, Edmund	Jan. 17, 1690	Treaſon	O. B.	Not tried	iv. - - 410
Elliot, ſir John	M. Term, 1629	Seditious ſpeeches in Parl.	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	vii. - 243
Ellis	Aug. 6, 1734	Quo Warranto	Aſſizes	Judgment	x. Ap. 127
Elwes, ſir Jervis	Nov. 16, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. - - 341
Ely, biſhop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. - - 304
Empſon, ſir Thomas	July 16, 1509	Treaſon	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. - 3
Eſſex, earl	Feb. 19, 1600	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	i. - - 197
earl and counteſs	1613	Impotency	Delegates	Divorced	i. - - 315
Eviot	Nov. 15, 1600	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	vii. - 33
F.
Fagg, ſir John	May, 1675	Appeal to the Lords	H. of Commons	Taken into cuſtody	vii. - 453
Farewell	June 20, 1682	Libels	G. H.	Pilloried and fined	iii. - 505
Farrel	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - 585
Faulconer	July 12, 1652	Perjury	B. S.	Impriſoned	vii. - - 343
Fawkes	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - - 232
Fenwick	June 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. - 829
Fenwick, ſir John	Nov. 1696	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	v. - - 540
Fernley	Oct. 19, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Reprieved	iv. - 130
Ferrers, earl	April 16, 1760	Murder	H. L.	Executed	x. - 478
Fielding	Dec. 4, 1706	Bigamy	O. B.	Pardoned	v. - - 610
	June 25, 1707		Doctors Commons	Marriage annulled	v. - - 628
Fiennes, colonel	Dec. 14, 1643	Cowardice	C. of war	Pardoned	i. - 766
Finch, ſir John, lord keeper	Jan. 1640	Treaſon	H. of Commons	Flight	vii. - 309
Fiſher, biſhop of Rocheſter	June 17, 1535	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. — 7
Fitzharris	March 25, 1681	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	iii. - - 224
Fitzpatrick	June 27, 1631	Rape and ſodomy	B. R.	Executed	i. - - 396
Fleetwood	Oct. 10, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 311
Fletcher	July 16, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. - 552
Fogg, captain	Oct. 8, 1702	Deſertion	Martial	Shot	v. - - 445
Ford	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - 585
Forteſcue, ſir John	March, 1603	Parl. election	H. of Commons	New writ	vii. - 67
Fowlis, ſir David	H. Term, 1633	Traducing of ſtate	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. - 131
Fowlis, Henry	H. Term, 1633	Traducing of ſtate	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. - 131
Fox	June 30, 1654	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Pardoned	ii. - - 212
Frances	July 16, 1685	Murder	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. - 34
Francia	Jan. 22, 1716	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	vi. - 58
Franklin, James	Nov. 27, 1615	Murder	B. R.	Executed	i. - - 346
Franklin, Richard	Dec. 3, 1713	Libel	B. R.	Impriſoned and fined	ix. - - 255
Freeman	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Friend, ſir John	March 23, 1695	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. - 599
Fuller, William	Jan. 19, 1701	Libel	Parliament	Impriſoned, pilloried, &c.	v. - 441
	May 20, 1702	Impoſtor	G. H.	Pilloried, &c.	viii. — 78
Fulthorp, ſir Roger, J. C. B.	March 2, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. - 13
G.
Gage	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - 134
Gahagan	March 1, 1755	Acceſſary before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. - 417
Garland	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 398
Garnet	March 28, 1606	Gunpowder plot	G. H.	Executed	i. - 248
Gaſcoigne, ſir Thomas	Feb. 11, 1679	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. - 1
Gates, Henry Gates, ſir John	Aug. 19, 1553	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. - 26
Gavan	June 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. - 829
Gaunt, Elizabeth	Oct. 19, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Beheaded	iv. - 150
Gerhard	June 30, 1654	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - - 212
Germaine	Nov. 24, 1692	Crim. con	B. R.	Damages	viii. - 27
Gibbon, John	Aug. 1734	Quo Warranto	Aſſizes	Judgment	ii. - - 183
Gibbons, John	July 18, 1651	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	x. Ap. - 118

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Gibbs	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. 478
Gilbert, L. C. B.	July 28, 1719	Contempt	Ireland	Impriſoned	vi. 188
Giles	July 14, 1680	Attempt to murder	O. B.	Pilloried and fined	iii. 65
Goddard	Sept. 1751	Robbery	O. B.	Acquitted	x. 411
Golding and others	Sept. 1693	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	viii. 73
Goodenough	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. 630
Goodere	March 17, 1740	Murder	Briſtol	Executed	vi. 795
Goodwin, ſir Francis	March, 1603	Parl. election	Houſe of Commons	New writ	vii. 67
Gowrie, earl	Nov. 15, 1600	Treaſon	Scotland	Attainted	vii. 33
Grant	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. 232
Gray, lord	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	High Steward	Impriſoned	vii. 63
Greaves, John ——, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Green, capt.	March 14, 1704	Piracy	Scotland	Executed	v. 572
Green, Robert	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. 760
	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Green, William	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. 585
Greg	Jan. 19, 1707-8	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. 77
Gregory, George	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Grey, lord	June 25, 1540	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. 17
	Nov. 23, 1682	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. 519
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. 630
Grey, Iſaac	June 25, 1662	Refuſing oaths	O. B.	Impriſoned	ii. 463
Grove	Dec. 17, 1678	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. 696
H.
Hacker	Oct. 15, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. 382
Hales	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition	C. S.	Fined and impriſoned	vii. 729
Hales, ſir Edward	June 1, 1686	Not taking oaths	B. R.	Verdict for defendant	vii. 612
Hales, William	Dec. 7, 1728	Forgery	O. B.		x. Ap. 94
	Jan. 20, 1728-9				ix. 67
		Miſdemeanour			ix. 76
		Forgery		Impriſonment	ix. 77
	Jan. 28,	Miſdemeanour	O. B.		ix. 93
		Forgery	O. B.	Fined, pilloried, and died in priſon	ix. 103
Hales, Robert	Jan. 27, 1728-9	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Pardoned	ix. 68
Halifax, lord	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Hamilton, duke	Feb. 9, 1648	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. 1
Hammond	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chicheſter	Executed	ix. 716
Hampden, ſir Edmund	Nov. 22, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Diſcharged	vii. 114
——, John	T. Term, 1638	Ship-money	Exchequer	Judgment	i. 505
	Feb. 6, 1683	High Crimes	B. R.	Fined	iii. 824
	Dec. 30, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. 207
Harcourt	June 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. 829
Harding	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. 86
Harris, Benjamin	Feb. 5, 1679	Libel	G. H.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. 1037
John	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and impriſoned	vii. 317
Harriſon, Clerk	T. Term, 1638	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	i. 720
——, Henry	April 6, 1692	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iv. 448
——, Thomas	Oct. 11, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. 313
Hartwell	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Acquitted	v. 465
Harvey	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. 390
Haſtings corporation	T. Term, 1736	Mandamus	B. R.	Admittance	x Ap. — 138
Hathaway	March 24, 1702	Impoſtor	Aſſizes	Pilloried, &c.	v. 482
	March 26, 1703,	Riot	Aſſizes		v. 504
Haverſham, lord	June 24, 1701	Words ſpoken	H. L.	Charge diſmiſſed	v. 339
Hawkins	March 11, 1668	Felony	Aſſizes	Acquitted	ii. 595
Hay	June 13, 1567	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed, &c.	viii. 327
Hayes	Nov. 21, 1684	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	iii 1067
Heath, Mary	Feb. 8, 1744	Perjury	Ireland	Acquitted	ix. 432
Hendley, Clerk	July 15, 1719	Preaching charity-ſermon	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. 86
Hepburn	June 13, 1567	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed, &c.	viii. — 327
Heveningham	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. 400
Hewet, doctor	June 1, 1658	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. 281
Hickford	Feb. 9, 1571	Treaſon	B. R.	Judgment	i. 117
Hicks	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. 86
Hill	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. 760
Hoe	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Hind	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. 478
Hollis, Denzil	M. Term, 1629	Seditious ſpeeches in Parl.	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	vii. 242
Hollis, ſir John	Nov. 10, 1615	Traducing public juſtice	C. S.	Fined	i, 333
Holloway	April 21, 1684	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	iii. 943
Holt, ſir John, J. C. B.	March 2, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. 13
Hone	July 12, 1683	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. 702
Horne	July 4, 1777	Libel	B. R.	Fined, impriſoned, &c.	xi. 264
Howe	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. 287
Huggins	May 21, 1729	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. 112
Hulet	Oct. 15, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. 385
Hurly	May 31, 1701	Perjury and cheat	Ireland	Fined	v. 384
Hutchinſon and Charles	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.		iii. 949, 978
I.
Jackſon	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Aſſizes	Died in priſon	ix. 716
James	Nov. 14, 1662	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	ii. 470
Jeffereys, Elizabeth	March, 1752	Murder	Chelmsford	Executed	x. 36
Jekyll	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. 630
Jenkes	June 27, 1676	Seditious ſpeech	Privy Council	Fined	vii. 468
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii, 630
Jenkins	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. 287
Johnſon,	June 21, 1686	High crimes	B. R.	Impriſoned, pilloried, whipped, and fined	vii. 645
Jones, David	Nov. 23, 1682	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. 519
——, Edward	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. 134
——, Frances	Nov. 23, 1682	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. 519
——, John	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. 338

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
Jones, Rebecca	Nov. 23, 1682	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. - 519
——, ſir Thomas, J. B. R.	July, 1689	Breach of privilege	H. of Commons	Taken into cuſtody	viii. - 1
——, Thomas	Sept. 1693	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	viii. — 73
Ireland, duke	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. — 1
——, William	Dec. 17, 1678	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 696
Ivy, lady	June 3, 1684	Tortious entry	B. R.	Ejected	vii. — 571
K.
Keach	Oct. 8, 1664	Libel	Aſſizes	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. — 550
Kelly	May 1723	Treaſonable conſpiracy	Parliament	Impriſoned for life	vi. — 335
Kemiſh	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Arraigned only	ii. — 663
Kendal	Oct. 31, 1695	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Bailed	iv. — 554
Kenn, bp. of Bath and Wells	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Kenmure, viſcount	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	vi. — 1
Kerne	Aug. 4, 1679	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Acquitted	ii. — 961
Key	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Keys, Robert	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 232
——, Thomas	March 11, 1695	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Kidd, capt. and others	May 8, 1701	Murder and piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Kilmarnock, Earl	July 1746	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. — 587
King	March 11, 1695	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Kinlock	1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Not tried	ix. — 567
Kirby and others	Oct. 8, 1702	Deſertion	Court-martial	Shot	v. — 445
Knevet, ſir Edmund	June 10, 1441	Striking in the palace	Commiſſioners	Executed	xi. — 16
Knightley, Alexander	May 20, 1696	Treaſon	B. R.	Pardoned	iv. — 777
——, ſir Richard	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition and libel	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 29
Knowles, C. commonly called earl of Banbury	Jan. 1692-3	Murder	B. R.	Arraigned only	viii. — 50
Knox	Nov. 25, 1679	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	ii. — 970
Kingſton, ducheſs	April 15, 1776	Bigamy	H. L.	Diſcharged	xi. — 198
L.
Lake, biſhop of Chicheſter	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Lalor	H. Term, 1607	Romiſh Prieſt	Ireland	Premunire	xi. — 69
Lamley	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Lane	Nov. 25, 1679	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. — 970
Langhorne	June 14, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 878
Latimer	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	ii. — 585
Laud, archbiſhop	March 12, 1643	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	i. — 824
Layer	Nov. 21, 1722	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	vi. — 229
Layton, ſir Thomas	H. Term, 1633	Traduction	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 131
Lee, capt.	Nov. 26, 1600	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 44
Leech	Oct. 14, 1682	Contempt	O. B.	Acquitted	x. Ap. — 31
Leighton, doctor	June 4, 1630	Libel	C. S.	Whipped, pilloried, branded, &c.	xi. — 120
Lewis	March 28, 1679	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Executed	xi. — 801
Lilburne, John	Feb. 9, 1637	Libels	C. S.	Pilloried, whipped, impriſoned, fined, & baniſhed	vii. — 286
	Oct. 24, 1649	Treaſon	G. H.	Acquitted	ii. — 19
	July 13, 1653	Return from baniſhment	H. Com.	Acquitted	vii. — 354
——, His Jury	Aug. 20, 1653			Examined	ii. — 81
Lilburne, Robert	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 394
Limerick	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Lindſay	April 19, 1704	Treaſon		Reprieved	v. — 508
Liſle, lady	Aug. 27, 1685	Treaſon	Winton	Beheaded	iv. — 105
Lloyd, bp. of St. Aſaph	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
——, bp. of Worceſter	Nov. 18, 1702	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Removed	viii. — 82
——, His Son	Nov. 18, 1702	The like	H. Commons	Proſecution ordered	viii. — 82
Lockton, king's ſerj. at law	March 2, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Baniſhed	i. — 13
Loff	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Logan	June, 1609	Treaſon	Scotland	Attainted	vii. — 78
London, biſhop	Aug. 1686	Contempt	Eccleſ. Com.	Suſpended	iv. — 247
London, city	Hil. T. 1683	Quo Warranto	B. R.	Charter forfeited	iv. — 769
Lovat, lord	March 9, 1746-7	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. — *621
Love	June 20, 1651	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. — 83
Lowick	April 22, 1696	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	iv. — 718
Lumſden	Nov. 10, 1615	Miſdemeanour	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
——, Alexander	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	C. S.	Fined	i. — 333
M.
Macclesfield, earl	May 6, 1725	High crimes	H. L.	Fined	vi. — 477
Macdaniel	March 1, 1755	Acceſſary before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. — 417
Macdonald	Dec. 10, 1747	Treaſon	B. R.	Pardoned	ix. — 586
Macgrowther	July 31, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Reprieved	ix. — 566
Macguire, lord	Feb. 10, 1644	Treaſon	B. B.	Executed	i. — 949
Magdalen College	June 1637	Contempt	Eccleſiaſtical	Fellows expelled	iv. — 262
Maitland	July 28, 1681	Perjury	Scotland	Acquitted	viii. Ap. — 436
Markham, ſir Griffin	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy & Term.	Impriſoned	vii. — 63
Marſhal, William	July 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Marſon	July 16, 1699	Murder	B. R.	Acquitted	v. — 194
Marten, Harry	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 392
Matthews	Oct. 30, 1719	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 680
Mawgridge	July 1, 1706	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ixi 61
Mead, William	Sept. 1, 1670	Tumult	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 610
Merriam	Feb. 14, 1703-4	Aſſault, &c.	B. R.	Acquitted	viii. — 178
Merrick, ſir Gilly	March 5, 1600-1	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Meſſenger	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Meyne	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 399
Millington	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 393
Mills	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chicheſter	Executed	ix. — 716
Mitchel	Jan. 7, 1677	Attempt to murder	Scotland	Executed	ii. — 623
Moders, German princeſs	June 3, 1663	Bigamy	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 498
Mohun, lord	Jan. 31, 1692	Murder	H. L.	Acquitted	vii. — 510
	March 29, 1699	Murder	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 180

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
Moncrief	Nov. 15, 1600	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	vii. - 33
Money	E. Term, 1765	Falſe Impriſonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. - - 307
Monſon, ſir Thomas	Dec. 1, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Not tried	i. — 347
Mordaunt	June 1, 1658	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Acquitted	ii. — 292
More, lord chancellor	May 7, 1535	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	i. — 59
Morgan	July 16, 1746	Treaſon	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 561
Morley, lord	April 30, 1666	Murder	High Steward	Diſcharged	vii. — 42
Morris, colonel	Aug. 16, 1649	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and impriſoned	vii. — 320
——, John	Sept. 21, 1747	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Executed	vii. — 317
Moſtyn, governor	T. Term, 1773	Baniſhment	Common Pleas	Damages	xi. — 162
Mullins	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Munſon	July 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Murphy	Jan. 13, 1753	Forgery	O. B.	Executed	x. — 183
N.
Nairn, lord	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Nairn, Katharine	Aug. 5, 1765	Inceſt and murder	Scotland	Eſcaped	x. — 479
Napper	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Naylor	Dec. 1656	Blaſphemy	H. Commons	Whipped, pilloried, branded, &c.	ii. — 265
Nevil, archbiſhop of York	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. — 1
Nithiſdale, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	vi. — 1
Norfolk, duke	Dec. 13, 1546	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Saved	xi. — 18
	Jan. 16, 1571	Treaſon		Beheaded	i. - - 82
———, duke and ducheſs	Jan. 1691	Adultery	H. L.	Marriage diſſolved	viii. — 7
	Feb. 1699		Parliament	Divorced	v. — 239
Norkott	1628	Murder	Aſſizes	Executed	x. Ap. — 29
Norrys	May 1536	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	xi. - 10
Northampton, earl	Aug. 18, 1553	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. - - 26
Northumberland, duke	Aug. 18, 1553	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
O.
Oates	June 18, 1684	Scand. mag.	B. R.	Damages	iii. — 987
	May 8, 1685	Perjury	B. R.	Pilloried, whipped, fined, &c.	iv. — 1
	May 9, 1685	Perjury	B. R.	Pilloried, whipped, fined, &c.	iv. — 66
Ogilvie, a Jeſuit	Feb. 28, 1615	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	vii. — 95
———, Patrick	Aug. 5, 1765	Murder	Scotland	Executed	x. — 479
Okeman	1628	Murder	Aſſizes	Executed	x. Ap. — 29
Okey, colonel	April 16, 1660	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. — 369
Oldcaſtle, lord Cobham	Sept. 23, 1413	Hereſy	Arch. of Canterbury	Hanged and burnt	i. — 36
Oneby	March, 1725-26	Murder	O. B.	Died in priſon	ix. — 14
Owen	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. — 196
Owens	July 6, 1752	Libel	G. H.	Acquitted	v. — 287
Orford, earl	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Oxford, earl	June 24, 1717	Treaſon	H. L.	Acquitted	vi. — 102
P.
Pain	June 20, 1682	Libel	G. H.	Fined	iii. — 505
Palmer, earl of Caſtlemaine	June 23, 1680	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. - 36
	Oct. 26, 1689	Treaſon	H. Commons	Bailed	iv. — 397
———, ſir Thomas	Aug. 19, 1553	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Papillon	Nov. 6, 1684	Falſe arreſt	G. H.	Damages, 10,000l.	iii. — 1072
Parham, ſir Edward	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Winton	Acquitted	vii. - - 63
Parris	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Parrot	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Parry	Feb. 25, 1584	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 121
Pemberton, ſir Francis J.K.B	July 1689	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Impriſoned	viii. — 1
Pembroke, earl	April 4, 1678	Murder	H. L.	Diſcharged	ii. — 641
Penn	Sept. 1, 1670	Tumult	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 610
Pennington	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 391
Penruddock, colonel	April 19, 1655	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	ii. - 259
Perkins, ſir William	March 24, 1695	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 627
Perrot, ſir John	April 27, 1592	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Died in priſon	i. — 188
Perry	1661	Robbery	Aſſizes	Pardoned	x. Ap. 29
		Murder		Executed	x. Ap. 29, 30
Peterborough, biſhop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Peters	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 357
Pickering	Dec. 17, 1678	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. - 696
Pilkington	May 8, 1683	Riot	G. H.	Fined	ii. - - 630
Phillips	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Player, ſir Thomas	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Plunket, John	May 1723	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	iii. — 291
———, Oliver	June 8, 1681	Treaſonable conſpiracy	Parliament	Impriſoned	vi. — 335
Pordage, doctor	Sept. 1654	Inſufficiency	Commiſſioners	Ejected	ii. — 217
Porteous, captain	July 5, 1736	Murder	Scotland	Executed	vi. — 763
Porter	Dec. 10, 1684	Murder	O. B.	Pardoned	x. Ap. 74, n.
Portland, earl	1701	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 339
Potter	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 398
Powrie	June 13, 1567	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed,	viii. - 327
Poyntz	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Impriſoned and fined	vii. — 317
Prance	June 15, 1686	Perjury	King's Bench	Pilloried, whipped, &c.	viii. — 442, n.
Pratt	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. 86
——, biſhop of Rocheſter	1692	Treaſonable conſpiracy	Privy Council	No proſecution	viii. — 37
Preſſicks	July 24, 1680	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Acquitted	iii. — 79
Preſton, viſcount	Jan. 17, 1690	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. — 410
Price, Anne	Feb. 3, 1679	Subornation of perjury	B. R.	Fined	iii. - 1017
——, John	March 6, 1688	Treaſon	Ireland	Not tried	iv. - 401
Prieſt	Jan. 26, 1615	Sending a challenge	C. S.	Fine, commitment, &c.	xi. — 112
Prynn	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Fined, mutilated, &c.	i. - 418
	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and impriſoned	i. - 481
Purchaſe	April 18, 1710	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	viii. — 267
Q.
Quelch	June 13, 1704	Piracy	New England	Executed	viii. — 205

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
R.
Raleigh, ſir Walter	Nov. 17, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy & Term.	Beheaded	i. - - 212
Rapley	July 20, 1681	Falſe return of writ	Aſſizes		viii. — 94 n.
Ratcliffe	Nov. 21, 1746	Treaſon	). B.	Beheaded	ix. - 582
Rea, lord, and Ramſay	1631	Appeal of treaſon	Chivalry	Duel prevented	xi. - - 124
Reading	April 24, 1679	Miſdemeanour	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Pilloried, fined, and impriſoned	ii. - - 806
Reaſon	Feb. 3, 1721	Murder	B. R.	Burnt in the hand	vi. - 196
Redding	July 15, 1742	Murder	O. B.		ix. - 315
Riccards, Arthur	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - 949, 978
———, Samuel
Richardſon	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - 585
Ring	Oct. 19, 1685	Treaſon	O. B.	Reprieved	iv. - 130
Rocheſter, Atterbury, biſhop	May, 1723	Treaſonable conſpiracy	Parliament	Baniſhed	vi. - 335
———, Fiſher, biſhop	June 17, 1535	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. - 7
———, Spratt, biſhop	1692	Reſtoration plot	Privy Council	Cleared	viii. - 37
Rocheforde, viſcount	May, 1536	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. - 10
Roe, Owen	Oct 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 394
——, Richard	Oct. 31, 1695	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Bailed	iv. - 554
Rogers	July 16, 1699	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	v. - 194
Rookwood, Ambroſe	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - - 232
	April 2, 1696	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	iv. - - 661
Roſewell	Nov. 18, 1684	Treaſon	B. R.	Pardoned	iii - 997
Rouſe	July 12, 1683	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. - 731
Rumley	July 18, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - 917
Ruſſel, William	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 993
——, lord	July 13, 1683	Treaſon	O. B.	Beheaded	iii. - - 700
Ruthven, Alexander	Nov. 15, 1600	Treaſon	Scotland	Attainted, &c.	vii. - 33
———, Henry	Nov. 15, 1600	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed, &c.	vii. - 33
S.
Sacheverel, doctor	Feb. 27, 1709	High Crimes	H. L.	Silenced	v. - - 641
———, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949
Saintjohn	April 15, 1615	Contempt	C. S.	Fined and impriſoned	xi. - 110
	May 29, 1630	Seditious writings	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - - 121
Saliſbury, ſir John	March 12, 1588	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	i. - 15
———, Mary	March 12, 1712-13	Murder	Aſſizes	Bailed	ix. - - 1
———, Thomas	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - - 128
Salmon, Francis	May 2 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - 949, 978
———, James	March 1, 1755	Acceſſary before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. - - 417
Sancroft, archbiſhop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. - 300
Sands, Thomas	M. Term. 1683	Infringement of charter	B. R.	Convicted	vii. - - 493
Sanquire, lord	June 27, 1612	Murder	B. R.	Executed	vii. - 86
Savage	Sept. 13, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. - - 128
Sayer, Mary	March 12, 1712-13	Petty treaſon	Aſſizes	Bailed	ix. - 1
Scots, queen	Oct. 12, 1586	Traitorous conſpiracy	Com. of Oy & Term.	Beheaded	i. - - 143
Scot	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - 334
Scroggs, ſir Wm. L. C. J.	Nov. 13, 1680	High crimes	H. of Commons	Removed	iii. 479, 476
Scroop	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - 334
Sedley, ſir Charles	M. Term, 1663	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Impriſoned	x. Ap. - 94
Selden	1629	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	vii. - 217
———	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - 121
Sellers	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 478
Seymour, ſir Thomas	Feb. 25, 1549	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	vii. - 1
Shafteſbury, earl	June 29, 1677	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Remanded	ii. - - 616
	Nov. 24, 1681	Treaſon	O. B.	Bill thrown out	iii. - 418
Sherfield	Feb. 6, 1632	Miſdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	i. - 369
Sherwin	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	.iii - 949, 978
Shirley, doctor	May, 1675	Breach of privilege	H. Com.	Impriſoned	vii. - 453
Shrewſbury, counteſs	T. Term, 1614	Contempt	B. R.	No judgment	xi. - 108
Shute	May 6, 1683	Riot	G. H.	Fined	iii. - 630
Sidney, colonel	Nov. 21, 1683	Treaſon	B. R.	Beheaded	iii. - 7 4
Simons	Dec. 10, 1751	Perjury	B. R.	Acquitted	x. - 411
	March 12, 1752	Miſdemeanour	Aſſizes	Special verdict	x. - 414
	July 12,	Miſdemeanour	Aſſizes	Acquitted	x — 416
Sindercome, alias Fiſh	Feb. 9, 1656	Treaſon	O. B.	Died in priſon	vii. - 371
Slingſby, ſir Henry	May 21, 1658	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - 277
Smeton	May, 1536	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Executed	xi. - - 10
Smith, Francis	Feb. 7, 1679	Libel	G. H.	Fined	ii. - - 1040
———, Henry	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 395
———, Iſabel	Sept. 21, 1647,	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and impriſoned	vii. - - 317
———, Richard	1608	Aſſizes	B. R.	Diſſeiſed	xi. - 86
———, Richard	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - 949, 978
———, Samuel
———. William
Snatt	April 3, 1696	Sedition	B. R.	Cenſured and impriſoned	x. Ap. - 43
Soame, ſir William	Nov. 12, 1674	Parl. election	Exchequer	Fine remitted	vii. - 428
	June, 1689		H. L.
Somers, lord	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Somerſet, duke	Jan 1550-1	Miſdemeanour & treaſon	Parliament	Fined and degraded	vii. - 12
	Dec. 1, 1551	Treaſon and felony	High Steward	Beheaded	vii. - - 15
———, earl	May 25, 1616	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. - 351
	May 29, 1630	Seditious writings	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - - 121
———, counteſs	May 24, 1616	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. - - 348
———, James	1771	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Diſcharged	xi. - 339
Southampton, earl	Feb. 19, 1600	Treaſon	High Steward	Reprieved	i. - 197
Sparkes	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Cenſured	i. - 418
Speke	Feb. 7, 1683	Miſdemeanour	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 855
Spottiſwood, ſir Robert	Nov. 1645	Treaſon	Scotland	Beheaded	v. - - 1
Sprot	Aug. 12, 1608	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	i. - 310
Spurr	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Acquitted	v. - - 465
Squires, Mary	Feb. 21, 1753	Robbery	O. B.	Pardoned	x. - 223
Stafford, viſcount	Nov. 30, 1680	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	iii. — 101
Standsfield	Feb. 6, 1687	Parricide	Scotland	Executed	iv. - - 283
Stanley, ſir William	1494-5	Treaſon		Beheaded	xi. - 1
Stapleton, ſir Miles	June 18, 1681	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Acquitted	iii. — 317
Starkey	Jan. 17, 1679	Romiſh Prieſt	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - 993
Stayley	Nov. 21, 1678	Treaſon	B. R.	Executed	iii. — 656
Stedman	June 3, 1663	Bigamy	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 498
Stephens	July 16, 1699	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	v. — 194
Sterne	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 462
Stevenſon	April 27, 1759	Murder	Aſſizes	Burnt in the hand	x. — 466

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

Names.	Dates.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
Steward, Archibald	June 8, 1747	Neglect of duty	Scotland	Acquitted	ix. — 587
———, James	Sept. 1752	Murder	Scotland	Executed	x. — 40
Stirling	Nov. 15, 1708	Treaſon	Scotland	Acquitted	v. — 630
Strafford, earl	March 22, 1640	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	i. — 723
Streater, capt.	Nov. 1653	Hab. Corp.	U. B.	Diſcharged	ii. — 195
Strickland, Mary	Oct. 12, 1699	Forgery	O. B.	Fined and impriſoned	v. — 232
Stubbs	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Sudley, lord	Feb. 25, 1549	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	vii. - 1
Suffolk, earl	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. — 1
Surry, earl	Dec. 13, 1546	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. — 18
Swan	March 1752	Petty Treaſon	Aſſizes	Executed	x. — 36
Swenſden	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Executed	v. — 449
Swinock	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
T.
Talbot	H. Term, 1614	Popery	C. S.	No judgment	xi. — 116
Tapner	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Aſſizes	Executed	ix. — 716
Taſborough	Feb. 3, 1679	Subornation of perjury	B. R.	Fined	ii. — 1017
Temple, James ———, Peter	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
Thompſon, Clerk	Dec. 24, 1680	High crimes	Parliament	Never tried	vii. — 491
————, Nathaniel	June 20, 1682	Libels	G. H.	Pilloried and fined	iii. - 505
Thorpe	July 3, 1407	Hereſy	ABp.	Impriſoned	i. — 16
Throckmorton, ſir Nicholas	April 17, 1554	Treaſon	G. H.	Acquitted	i. — 63
————, his Jury	Nov. 10,	Miſdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	i. — 78
Thwing	July 24, 1680	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Executed	iii. - 79
Tilney	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 134
Titchburne, Chidiock	Sept. 14, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Fxecuted	i. — 128
————, Robert	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 394
Tonge	Dec. 11, 1662	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Townley	July 15, 1746	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	xi. — 543
Tranter	Feb. 3, 1721	Murder	B. R.	Burnt in the hand	vi. — 195
Travers	Sept. 15, 1586	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 134
Trelawney, bp. of Rocheſter	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Treſilian, Lord C. J.	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Executed	i. — 1
Trigge, Thomas	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 948, 978
Turner, Anne	Nov. 7, 1615	Murder	B. R.	Executed	i. — 339
———, Anthony	June 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed, &c.	ii. — 829
———, biſhop of Ely	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
———, col.	Jan. 15, 1663	Burglary	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 502
Turpin, Joſeph	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Tutchin	Nov. 4, 1704	Libel	G. H.	No judgment	v. — 528
Twyn	Feb. 20, 1663	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 528
V.
Valentine	1629	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Remanded	vii. — 217
	M. Term, 1629	Sedition	B. R.	Fined and impriſoned	vii. — 242
Vane, ſir Henry	June 2, 1662	Treaſon	B. R.	Beheaded	ii. — 435
Vaughan, capt.	Nov. 6, 1696	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	v. — 17
Uchiltrie, lord	Nov. 30, 1631	Slander	Scotland	Impriſoned	vii. — 260
Udal	July 24, 1590	Felony	Aſſizes	Pardoned	i. — 168
Vere, duke of Ireland	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. - 1
Vincent, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Deſertion	Court-martial	Shot	i. — 168
Vowel	June 30, 1654	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Executed	ii. — 2 2
Vratz	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 466
Uſke	March 8, 1388	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	i. — 14
W.
Wade, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Deſertion	Martial	Shot	v. — 445
Waite	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
Wakeman, ſir Geo.	July 18, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
Walcot	July 12, 1683	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 684
Waller, ſir Hardreſs	Oct. 10, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 308
Walters	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	No judgment	vii. — 648
Ward, ſir Patience	May 19, 1683	Perjury	B. R.	No judgment	iii. — 661
Warwick, earl	Aug. 18, 1553	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
	March 28, 1699	Murder	H. L.	Diſcharged	v. — 137
Watſon, James	E. Term, 1765	Falſe impriſonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. — 307
———, William	Nov. 15, 1603	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Wedderburne, ſir John	Nov. 4, 1746	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ix. — 580
Wells, Suſannah	Feb. 21, 1753	Robbery	O. B.		x. — 224
Wentworth, ſir John	Nov. 10, 1615	Traducing public juſtice	C. S.	Fined, impriſoned, &c.	i. — 333
Weſton, Richard	Oct. 19, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. — 324
————, ſir Francis	May 1536	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Wharton	Feb. 9, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Fined, pilloried, &c.	vii. — 286
White, bp. of Peterborough	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Whitebread	Dec. 17, 1678	Treaſon	O. B.	Jury diſcharged of him	ii. — 696
————	June 13, 1679	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 829
Whitelocke	June 1613	Contempt	C. S.		xi. - 106
Wiat, ſir Thomas	March 13, 1554-5	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Executed	vii. — 325
Wickham	May 8, 1683	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Wickſtone	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition	C. S.	Impriſoned and fined	vii. — 29
Widdrington, lord	Feb. 9, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Wilkes	E. Term, 1763	Hab. Corp.	C. B.	Diſcharged	xi. — 302
	M. Term, 1764 H. Term, 1770	Seditious libel Blaſphemous libel	B. R.	Fined, &c.	xi. — 324
Wilks	April 4, 1668	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Williams	March 22, 1638	Murder	B. R.		ix. 63, 534, n.
Willis	April 18, 1710	Treaſon	B. R.	Acquitted	viii. — 250
Wilſon, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Winter, Robert ———, Thomas	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Weſtminſter	Executed	i. — 232
Wintoun, earl	March 15, 1715	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	vi. — 17
Woodburn	March 13, 1721	Maiming	Aſſizes	Executed	iv. — 212
Woodward	April 14, 1668	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Worceſter, Lloyd, bp. of	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 305
	1702	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Removed	viii. — 82
Wraynham	E. Term, 1618	Slander	C. S.	Cenſured	vii. — 102
Wright	Jan. 26, 1615	Carrying a challenge	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 112
Y.
York, Archbiſhop	Feb. 3, 1388	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. — 1
Z.
Zenger	Aug. 4, 1735	Libel	New-York	Acquitted	ix. — 276

A

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

OF THE

DATES OF THE TRIALS.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

The NAMES of the PRISONERS or PRINCIPAL PARTIES in the ſeveral TRIALS; the CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION; the COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL; the PUNISHMENTS, JUDGMENTS, or EVENTS of the ſeveral PROSECUTIONS; with REFERENCES to the VOLUMES in which the TRIALS or PROCEEDINGS are reſpectively contained.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Cauſes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Puniſhments, &c.	Volumes.
	RICHARD THE SECOND.
1388. 11 Rich. II.	Archbiſhop of York	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	i. — 1
	Duke of Ireland			Eſcaped
	Earl of Suffolk			Eſcaped
	L. C. J. of England			Executed
	Mayor of London & others			Executed
	HENRY THE FOURTH.
1407. 8 Hen. IV.	William Thorpe	Hereſy	Archbiſhop	Impriſoned	i. — 16
	HENRY THE FIFTH.
1413. 1 Hen. V.	Lord Cobham	Hereſy	Archbiſhop	Executed and burnt	i. — 36
	HENRY THE SEVENTH.
1494-5. 10 Hen. VII.	Sir William Stanley	Treaſon		Beheaded	xi. — 1
	HENRY THE EIGHTH.
1509. 1 Hen. VIII.	Sir Thomas Empſon Edmund Dudley	Treaſon	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. — 3
1522. 13 Hen. VIII.	Duke of Buckingham	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 4
1535. 26 Hen. VIII.	Lord Chancellor More	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	i. — 59
	Biſhop of Rocheſter	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	xi. — 7
	Lord Dacres	Treaſon	High Steward	Acquitted	ix. — 10
1536. 27 Hen. VIII.	Queen Anne Boleyn	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 10
	Viſcount Rocheforde	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 10
	Henry Norrys	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	xi. — 10
	Mark Smeton			Hanged
	William Brereton			Beheaded
	Sir Francis Weſton			Beheaded
1540. 33 Hen. VIII.	Lord Grey	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Attainted	xi. — 17
1541. 33 Hen. VIII.	Sir Edmund Knevet	Striking in the palace	Commiſſioners	Pardoned	xi. — 16
1546. 37 Hen. VIII.	Earl Surry	Treaſon	Com. Oy. & Term.	Executed	xi. — 18
	Duke of Norfolk	Treaſon	Attainted	Saved	xi. — 18
	EDWARD THE SIXTH.
1549. 2 & 3 Edw. VI.	Lord Sudley	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	vii. — 1
1550. 3 & 4 Edw. VI.	Duke of Somerſet	Treaſon, &c.	Parliament	Pardoned	vii. — 12
1551. 4 & 5 Edw. VI.		Treaſon and felony	High Steward	Beheaded	vii. — 15
	QUEEN MARY.
1553. 1 Mary	Duke of Northumberland Marquis of Northampton Earl of Warwick	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
	Sir John Gates Henry Gates Sir Andrew Dudley Sir Thomas Palmer	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Beheaded	xi. — 26
	Sir Nicholas Throckmorton	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Acquitted	i. — 63, 78
1554. 1 Mary	Sir Thomas Wiat	Treaſon	Weſtminſter	Arraigned only	vii. — 325
	QUEEN ELIZABETH.
1567. 9 Eliz.	William Powrie	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	viii. — 327
	George Dalgleiſh				viii. — 328
	John Hay				viii. — 329
	John Hepburn			Examined	viii. — 332
	Nicholas Hubert				viii. — 332

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
	QUEEN ELIZABETH.
1567. 9 Eliz.	Earl Bothwell	Treaſon and regicide	Commiſſioners	Acquitted	i. — 78
1571. 14 Eliz.	Duke of Norfolk	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	i. 82 viii. 335
	Robert Hickford	Hereſy	Queen's Bench	No judgment	i. — 117
1584. 26 Eliz.	William Parry, L. D.	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Executed	i. — 121
1586. 28 Eliz.	Mary Queen of Scots	Traitorous conſpiracy	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	i. — 145
	Anthony Babington	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	i. — 128
	Chidiock Titchburne
	Thomas Saliſbury
	Robert Barnewell
	John Savage
	Henry Donn
	John Ballard
	Edward Abington	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Executed	i. — 134
	Charles Tilney
	Edward Jones
	John Travers
	John Charnock
	Jerome Bellamy
	Robert Gage
1587. 30 Eliz.	Daviſon	Contempt	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 19
1588. 31 Eliz.	Sir Richard Knightley	Sedition	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 30
1589. 31 Eliz.	Earl of Arundel	Treaſon	High Steward	Died in priſon	i. 164 xi. 27
1590. 32 Eliz.	John Udall, clerk	Felony	Judges of aſſize	Pardoned	i. — 168
1592. 34 Eliz.	Sir John Perrot	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Died in priſon	i. — 188
1599. 41 Eliz.	Brains	Appeal of murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 536, n.
1600. 43 Eliz.	Earls Eſſex & Southampton	Treaſon	High Steward	Beheaded	i. — 196
	Sir Chriſtopher Blunt	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	i. 209 vii. 47
	Sir Charles Davers			Beheaded
	Sir John Davis			Executed
	Sir Gilly Merrick			Executed
	Henry Cuffe			Executed
	Earl Gowrie	Treaſon	Edinburgh	Executed	vii. — 33
	Alexander Ruthven
	Henry Ruthven
	Hugh Moncrief
	Peter Eviot
	Captain Lee	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 44
	JAMES THE FIRST.
1603. 1 & 2 Jac. I.	Sir Walter Raleigh	Treaſon	Commiſſioners	Beheaded	i. 212 viii. 339
	Sir Griffin Markham	Treaſon		Reprieved	vii. — 63
	Sir Edward Parham		Winton	Acquitted	vii. — 63
	George Brooke			Executed
	Bartholemew Brookeſby		Commiſſioners	Reprieved	vii: — 63
	Anthony Copley			Executed	vii. — 63
	William Watſon			Executed
	William Clarke			Executed
1604. 2 & 3 Jac. I.	Sir Francis Goodwin	Parliamentary election	H. Commons	New writ	vii. - - 67
	Richard Bates	Refuſing to pay duty	Exchequer		ix. — 29
1605. 3 & 4 Jac. I.	Robert Winter	Gunpowder plot	Commiſſioners	Executed	i. - 232
	Thomas Winter
	Guy Fawkes
	John Grant
	Ambroſe Rookwood
	Robert Keyes
	Thomas Bates
	Sir Everard Digby
1606. 4 & 5 Jac. I.	Henry Garnet	Gunpowder plot	Commiſſioners	Executed	i. — 248
1607. 5 & 6 Jac. I.	Robert Lalor	Romiſh Prieſt	Ireland	Premunire	xi. — 69
1608. 6 & 7 Jac. I.	Richard Smith	An aſſize	B. R.	Diſſeiſin	xi. — 86
	George Sprot	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed	i. — 310
1609. 7 & 8 Jac. I.	Robert Logan	Treaſonable conſpiracy	Scotland	Attainted	vii. — 78
	Lord Balmerino	Treaſon	Scotland	Pardoned	vii. — 85
1612. 10 & 11 Jac. I.	Lord Sanquire	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	vii. — 86
	James Whitelocke	Contempt	C. S.		xi. - 106
	Counteſs of Shrewſbury	Contempt	C. S.		xi. — 108
1613. 11 & 12 Jac. I.	William Talbot	Popery	C. S.		xi. — 116
	Earl and Counteſs of Eſſex	Impotency	Delegates	Divorced	i. — 315, n.
1615. 13 & 14 Jac. I.	Richard Weſton	Murder	Commiſſioners	Executed	i. — 324
	John Ogilvie	Treaſon	Scotland		vii. — 95
	Oliver St. John	Miſdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	xi. — 110
	Sir John Hollis	Traducing public juſtice	Star-chamber	Impriſoned and fined	i. - 333
	Sir John Wentworth
	Mr Lumſden
	Sir Jervis Elwes	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. - - 341
	James Franklin	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	i. - 346
	William Prieſt	Sending a challenge	C. S.	Fined, &c.	xi. - 112
	Sir Thomas Monſon	Murder	King's Bench	Arraigned only	i. — 347
	Richard Wright	Carrying a challenge	C. S.	Fined, &c.	xi. — 112
1616. 14 & 15 Jac. I.	Counteſs of Somerſet	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. — 348
	Earl of Somerſet	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. — 351
1618. 16 & 17 Jac. I.	Wraynham	Slander	C. S.	Cenſured	vii. — 102
1620. 18 & 19 Jac. I.	Lord Chancellor Bacon	Bribery and corruption	Parliament	Fined, &c.	i. — 375

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
	CHARLES THE FIRST.
1627. 3 Car. I.	Sir Thomas Darnel Sir John Corbet Sir Walter Earl Sir John Heveningham Sir Edmund Hampden	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	vii. —— 114
1628. 4 Car. I.	Holloway	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 532,533
1629. 5 Car. I.	William Stroud Walter Long John Selden	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	vii. - 217
	Richard Chambers	Seditious ſpeeches	C. S.	Impriſoned	xi. — 118
	Sir John Elliot Denzil Hollis Benjamin Valentine	Seditious ſpeeches in Parl.	King's Bench	Commitment	vii. - 242
1630. 6 Car. I.	Lord Uchiltrie	Calumny	Edinburgh	Perpetual impriſonment	vii. - 259
	Doctor Leighton	Libel	C. S.	Whipped, pilloried, &c.	xi. - - 120
	Earl Bedford Earl Clare Earl Somerſet Sir Robert Cotton John Selden Oliver St. John	Seditious writing	C. S.	Proceedings ſtayed	xi. — 121
1631. 7 Car. I.	Lord Audley	Rape and ſodomy	High Steward	Beheaded	i. 385 vi. Ap. 5
	Laurence Fitzpatrick Giles Broadway	Rape and ſodomy	King's Bench	Executed	i. — 396
	Lord Rea and Dav. Ramſay	Appeal of treaſon	Chivalry	No combat	xi. - 124
1632. 8 Car. I.	Henry Sherfield	Breaking church window	Star-chamber	Commitment, &c.	i. — 399
1632-3. 9 Car. I.	William Prynn Michael Sparkes William Buckner	Libel	Star-chamber	Impriſoned, pilloried, &c. Pilloried, fined, &c. Impriſoned and fined	i. - - 418
	Sir Thomas Layton Sir David Fowlis Henry Fowlis	Traducing of ſtate	Star-chamber	Diſmiſſed Fine, commitment, &c. Commitment and fine	xi. — 131
1634. 10 Car. I.	Lord Balmerino	Libel	Scotland	Pardoned	i. - - 429
1637. 13 Car. I.	John Baſtwick, M. D. Henry Burton William Prynn	Libel	Star-chamber	Loſs of ears, fine, &c. The ſame The ſame and ſtigmatiſed	i. — 481
	John Hampden	Ship-money	Exchequer	Judgment	i. 505 vi. Ap. 5
	John Lilburne John Wharton	Sedition	C. S.		vii. — 285
1638. 14 Car. I.	Thomas Harriſon, clerk	Reflecting on a judge	King's Bench	Fined 50,000l. &c.	i. 720 vi. Ap. 10
	David Williams	Murder	O. B.	Burnt in the hand	xi. — 534 n.
2640. 16 Car. I.	Earl Strafford	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	i. - - 723
	Lord Keeper Finch	Treaſon	Parliament	Fled	vii. — 309
1643. 19 Car. I.	Colonel Fiennes	Cowardice	Council of war	Pardoned	i. — 766
	Archbiſhop Laud	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	i. - - 824
1644. 20 Car. I.	Lord Macguire	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed	i. 949 viii. 341
	Sir Robert Spotiſwood	Treaſon	Scotland	Beheaded	i. — 961
1645. 21 Car. I. 1647. 23 Car. I.	John Morris, alias Poyntz, and his wife Iſabel Smith Leonard Darby John Harris	Forgery	H. L.	Fine and impriſonment	vii. — 317
1648. 24 Car. I.	Charles, king of England	Treaſon	H. C. of Juſtice	Beheaded	i. — 986
	CHARLES THE SECOND.
1648. 1 Car. II.	Duke of Hamilton	Treaſon	H. C. of Juſtice	Beheaded	ii. - - 1
1649. 2 Car. II.	Colonel Lilburne	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Acquitted	ii. - 19
1650. 3 Car. II.	Colonel Morris	Treaſon	Juſtices of Aſſize	Executed	vii. - 320
	Colonel Andrews	Treaſon	H. C. of Juſtice	Beheaded	vii. — 323
1651. 4 Car. II.	Chriſtopher Love	Treaſon	H. C. of Juſtice	Beheaded	ii. - - 83
	John Gibbons	Treaſon	H. C. of Juſtice	Beheaded	ii. - 183
1652. 5 Car. II.	Richard Faulconer	Perjury	King's Bench	Commitment	vii. - 343
1653. 6 Car. II.	Captain Streater	Hab. Corp.	Upper Bench	Diſcharged	ii. - 195
	John Lilburne	Return from baniſhment	O. B.	Acquitted	vii. - 354
	———, his jury	Miſdemeanour	Council of State	Examined	ii. - 81
1654. 7 Car. II.	John Gerhard Peter Vowell Somerſet Fox	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded Executed Reprieved	ii. 211 viii. 366 ii. 211 viii. 365 ii. - - 211
	John Pordage, D. D.	Inſufficiency	Commiſſioners	Ejected	ii. - 259
	John Penruddock	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	ix. - 534, n.
1655. 8 Car. II.	Buckner	Murder	O. B.	Burnt in the hand	vii. - - 371
1656. 9 Car. II.	James Nayler	Blaſphemy	H. of Commons	Tongue bored, &c.	ii. - - 266
	Miles Sindercome	Treaſon	Upper Bench	Died in priſon	vii. - - 371

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

CHARLES THE SECOND.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
1658. 11 Car. II.	Sir Henry Slingſby	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - 278
	John Hewet, D. D.	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - 282
	John Mordaunt	Treaſon	H. C. J.	Diſmiſſed	ii. - 291
1660. 12 Car. II.	Sir Hardreſs Waller	Regicides	Com. of Oy. & Term.		- - 307
	Thomas Harriſon			Executed	- 308, 313
	William Heveningham				- 308, 396
	Iſaac Pennington			Reprieved	- 309, 390
	Henry Marten				- 309, 390
	Adrian Scroop			Executed	- 310, 324
	Gilbert Millington				- 310, 390
	Robert Tichburne			Reprieved	- 310, 390
	Owen Roe				- 310, 390
	Robert Lilburne				- 310, 399
	George Fleetwood				- 311
1660. 12 Car. II.	John Carew			Executed	- 311, 330
	Thomas Scot			Executed	- 311, 334
	Gregory Clement			Executed	- 311, 338
	John Jones			Executed	- 311, 339
	John Cook			Executed	- 311, 341
	Francis Hacker			Executed	- 311, 382
	Edmund Harvey	Regicides	Com. of Oy. & Term.		- 311, 390
	Henry Smith				- 311, 390
	John Downes				- 311, 390, 396
	Vincent Potter				- . 311, 390
	Auguſtine Garland			Reprieved	- 311, 390, 396
	Simon Meyne				- 311, 390, 396
	James Temple				- 311, 390, 396
	Hugh Peters			Executed	- 312, 357,
	Daniel Axtell			Executed	- 312, 369
	Peter Temple			Reprieved	- 312, 390, 396
	Thomas Waite			Reprieved	- 312, 390, 396
	William Hulet				- 369, 385
	Colonel Okey	Attainted		Executed	- 307 viii. 369
	Miles Corbet	Attainted		Executed	- 337 viii. 369
	Colonel Barkſtead	Attainted		Executed	- 307 viii. 369
1661. 13 Car. II.	Marquis of Argyle	Treaſon	Scotland	Beheaded	ii. 418 viii. 379
1662. 14 Car. II.	Sir Henry Vane	Treaſon	King's Bench	Beheaded	ii. — 435
	John Crook Iſaac Grey John Bolton	Refuſing oaths	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Impriſoned	ii. 463 vi. Ap. 11
	John James	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed	ii. — 470
	Thomas Tonge George Phillips Francis Stubbs James Hind John Sellers Nathaniel Gibbs	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ii. — 478
1663. 15 Car. II.	Mary Moders	Bigamy	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 498
	Earl of Clarendon	Treaſon, &c.	Parliament	Baniſhed	viii. - 381
	Colonel John William } Turner Mary Ely	Felony and burglary	O. B.	Executed Acquitted Acquitted Acquitted	ii. 550, 554 viii. 387 ii. - 502
1664. 16 Car. II.	John Twyn	Treaſon	O. B.	Sentenced	ii. 527 viii. 386
	Thomas Brewſter Simon Dover Nathan Brooks	Sedition	O. B.	Each fined, pilloried, &c.	ii. - 527
	Benjamin Keach	Libel	Judges of Aſſize	Impriſoned, fined, &c.	ii. - 550
1666. 18 Car. II.	Lord Morley	Murder	High Steward	Diſcharged	vii. — 421
	John Grey	Murder	O. B.	Pardoned	xi. — 533
1668. 20 Car. II.	Peter Meſſenger	Treaſon	C. of Gaol Delivery	Executed	ii. - - 586
	Richard Beaſley			Executed
	William Green			Diſcharged
	Thomas Appletree			Pardoned
	John Earles			Acquitted
	William Wilks			Acquitted
	William Ford			Acquitted
	Richard Farrel			Acquitted
	Edward Cotton			Executed
	Edward Boodle			Diſcharged
	Richard Latimer			Pardoned
	John Sharpleſs			No evidence
	Richard Woodward			Acquitted
	Thomas Limerick			Executed
	John Richardſon			Acquitted
	Robert Hawkins Clerk	Felony	Judges of Aſſize	Acquitted	ii. — 595
1670. 22 Car. II.	William Penn William Mead	Tumult	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 610

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

CHARLES THE SECOND.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
			King's Bench	Damages	vii. - 427, 433
1674. 26 Car. II.	Sir Samuel Barnardiſton	Parl. Election	Exchequer	Judgment reverſed	vii. - 431
			H. of Lords	Reverſal affirmed	vii. - 451
1675. 27 Car. II.	Doctor Shirley	Breach of Privilege	H. of Commons	Taken into cuſtody	vii. - 453
1676. 28 Car. II.	Francis Jenks	Seditious Speeches	Privy Council	Commitment	vii. - 467
1677. 29 Car. II.	Earl of Shafteſbury	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	ii. - 610
	James Mitchel	Attempt to murder	Scotland	Executed	ii. - 623
1678. 30 Car. II.	Earl Pembroke	Murder	H. of Lords	Diſcharged	ii. - - 641
	William Stayley	Treaſon	King's Bench	Fxecuted	i. 656 viii. 439
	Edward Coleman	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed	i. - 660
	T. White, alias Whitebread			Jury diſcharged of him
	William Ireland			Executed
	John Fenwick	Treaſon	O. B.	Jury diſcharged of him	ii. - - 696
	Thomas Pickering			Executed
	John Grove			Executed	ii. 696 viii. 440
	Lord Cornwallis	Murder	High Steward	Diſcharged	ii. — 726
	Earl Danby	Treaſon, &c.	Parliament	Pardoned	ii. - 7322
					ii. 760 vi. 12
1678. 31 Car. II.	Robert Green				viii. — 441
	Henry Berry	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	ii. 760 viii. 44
	Lawrence Hill
	Samuel Atkins	Acceſſary to murder	King's Bench	Acquitted	ii. 791 viii. 443
1679. 31 Car. II.		Treaſon	Judge of Aſſize	Executed	ii. — 801
	David Lewis	Miſdemeanour	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Fined and pilloried	ii. - 806
	Nathaniel Reading
	T. White, alias Whitebread
	William Harcourt	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ii. - 830
	John Fenwick
	John Gavan
	Anthony Turner
	Richard Langhorn	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ii. — 878
	Lord Chief Juſtice Scroggs	High Miſdemeanours	Privy Council	Diſmiſſed	vii. — 476
	Sir George Wakeman
	William Marſhal	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. 917 viii. 453
	William Rumley
	James Corker
	Charles Kerne	Treaſon	Judges of Aſſize	Not guilty	ii. - 961
	Thomas Knox	Miſdemeanours	King's Bench	Impriſoned and fined	ii. - 971
	John Lane			Pilloried, fined, &c.
	Leo. Anderſon, alias Munſon
	Wm. Ruſſel, alias Napper
	Charles Parris, alias Parry	Treaſon	O. B.	Sentenced	ii. — 994
	Henry Starkey
	James Corker
	William Marſhal
	Alexander Lumſden
	Joſeph Kemiſh
	John Taſborough	Subornation of Perjury	King's Bench	Fined	ii. 1018 vi. Ap. 12
	Anne Price			Sentenced	ii. — 1038
	Benjamin Harris	Libel	G. H.	Fined	ii. 1039 vi. Ap. 13
	Francis Smith	Libel	G. H.	Found guilty	ii. — 1042
	Jane Curtis	Libel	G. H.	Not guilty	iii. — 1
	Sir Thomas Gaſcoigne	Treaſon	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. — 31
	Eliz. Collier	Treaſon	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. — 35
1680. 32 Car. II.	Earl Caſtlemaine	Treaſon	King's Bench	Guilty	iii. — 58
	Henry Carr	Libel	G. H.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	iii. — 66
	John Giles	Attempt to murder	O. B.	Ordered to be impeached	vii. — 491
	Richard Thompſon, Clerk	Complaints	Parliament	Executed	iii. 80, 89 viii. 459
	Thomas Thwing	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Not guilty	iii. 90 vi. Ap. 14
	Mary Preſſicks	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Fined, pilloried, &c.	iii. — 102
	Eliz. Collier	Libel	O. B.	Beheaded	vii. — 479
	Viſcount Stafford	Treaſon	H. L.	Removed	iii. 225, 263
	Lord Chief Juſtice Scroggs	Treaſon	Parliament	Executed	iii. - 293
1681. 33 Car. II.	Edward Fitzharris	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed	iii. — 317
	Oliver Plunket, D. D.	Treaſon	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. - 328
	Sir Miles Stapleton	Treaſon	Aſſizes	Sentenced	iii. — 341
	George Buſby	Romiſh Prieſt	Aſſizes	Executed	iii. — 413
	Stephen Colledge	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Fined	iii. — 418
	Slingſby Bethel	Aſſault and Battery	Southwark	No bill	iii. — 442
	Earl of Shafteſbury	Treaſon	O. B.	Beheaded
	Earl Argyle	Treaſon	Scotland
	George Boroſky	Murder	O. B.	Executed, &c.	iii. — 466
	Chriſtopher Vratz			Executed
	John Stern			Executed, &c.
	Count Conningſmark			Not guilty
	William Rapley	Falſe return of Parl. writ	Aſſizes	Damages	viii. — 94, n.
	Charles Maitland	Perjury	Edinburgh	Not proſecuted	viii: 436
1682. 34 Car. II.	Earl Danby	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	ii. 742, 754
	Nathaniel Thompſon	Libel	G. H.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	iii. — 506
	William Pain			Fined
	John Farewell			Pilloried, &c.
	Lord Grey	Miſdemeanour	King's Bench	No judgment	i. 519 vi. Ap. 15
	Robert Charnock
	Anne Charnock

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
	CHARLES THE SECOND.
1683. 35 Car. II.	David Jones Frances Jones Rebecca Jones	Miſdemeanour	King's Bench	No judgment	i. 519 vi. Ap. 15
	City of London	Uſurpation of Franchiſe	King's Bench	Forfeiture of charter	iii. 545 vi. Ap. 16
	Thomas Pilkington Samuel Shute Henry Corniſh Ford Lord Grey Sir Thomas Player Slingſby Bethel Francis Jenks John Deagle Richard Freeman Richard Goodenough Robert Key John Wickham Samuel Swinock	Riot	Niſi Prius	Fined	iii. 630 vi. Ap. 40
	John Jekyll				iii. - - 662
1683. 35 Car. II.	Sir Patience Ward	Perjury	King's Bench	No judgment	iii 684 vi. Ap.42
	Captain Thomas Walcot	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. - 706
	William Hone	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. 706, 755, 766
	Lord Ruſſel	Treaſon	O. B.	Beheaded	viii. 464, 471, 471 vii. - 496
	Thomas Sandys	Infringement of Charter	King's Bench	Damages	iii. - 731
	John Rouſe	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iii. - 739
	William Blague	Treaſon	O. B.	Not guilty	iii. 793 vi. Ap. 45
	Colonel Sidney	Treaſon	King's Bench	Beheaded	viii. 469, 471, 476 iii. 824 vi. Ap. 45
1684. 36 Car. II.	John Hampden	Miſdemeanour	King's Bench	Fined and ſureties, &c.	iii. 856 vi. Ap. 46
	Lawrence Braddon Hugh Speke	Miſdemeanour	King's Bench	Fined and ſureties, &c.	iii. 933 vi. Ap. 46
	Sir Samuel Barnardiſton	Miſdemeanour	Niſi Prius	Fined and ſureties, &c.	iii. - 943
	James Holloway	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed
	William Sacheverel George Gregory Charles Hutchinſon John Greaves William Greaves Samuel Richards Robert Green Francis Salmon Arthur Riccards Ralph Bennet John Sherwin William Wilſon Samuel Smith Thomas Trigg Richard Smith John Hoe William Smith Joſeph Turpin Nathaniel Charnel Joſeph Aſtlin	Riot	King's Bench	Fined and ſecurity	iii. — 949, 978
	Sir Thomas Armſtrong	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed, &c.	iii. 983 viii. 470
	Titus Oates	Scand. mag.	King's Bench	Damages	iii. - - 987
	Thomas Roſewell	Treaſon	King's Bench	Pardoned	iii. 997 vi. Ap. 48
	Joſeph Hayes	Treaſon	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. 1067 vi. Ap. 50
	Thomas Papillon	Falſe Arreſt	Niſi Prius	Damages	iii. 1072 vi. Ap. 50
	Robert Baillie	Treaſon	Scotland	Executed, &c.	iii. - 195
	Lady Ivy	Tortious Entry	King's Bench	Ejected	vii. — 516
	JAMES THE SECOND.
1685. 1 Jac. II.	Titus Oates, D. D.	Perjury	King's Bench	Fined, degraded, &c.	iv. - 1, 66
	William Diſney	Treaſon	Special com.	Executed, &c.	vii. — 611
	Lady Liſle	Treaſon	Winton	Beheaded	iv. — 105
	Richard Baxter, Clerk	Seditious libel	G. H.	Fined, &c.	x. Ap. 37
	John Fernley			Reprieved	iv. — 131
	William Ring			Reprieved	iv. — 134
	Elizabeth Gaunt	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 142
	Henry Corniſh	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	iv. 132, 142 viii. 473, 476
	Robert Frances	Murder	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. - 33
	Charles Bateman	Treaſon	Com. of Oy & Term.	Executed	iv. - 162
	John Hampden	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. 207 vi. Ap. 51
	Lord Delamere	Treaſon	High Steward	Acquitted	iv. - 209
1686. 2 Jac. II.	Biſhop of London	Contempt	Eccleſ. Com.	Suſpended	iv. - - 247
	Sir Edward Hales	Not taking oaths	King's Bench	Judgment	vii. - - 612
	Samuel Johnſon	Libels	King's Bench	Fined, pilloried, &c.	vii. — 645
	Miles Prance	Perjury	King's Bench	Fined, pilloried, &c.	viii. 442, n.
1687. 3 Jac. II.	John Peachell, D. D.	Contempt	Eccleſ. Com.	Deprived and ſuſpended	iv. — 254
	Duke of Devonſhire	Striking in the palace	King's Bench	Fined 10,000l.	xi. — 133
	Magdalen College Oxon	Contempt	Eccleſ. Com.	Fellows incapacitated	iv. — 262
1688. 4 Jac. II.	Philip Stansfield	Parricide	Scotland	Executed	iv. — 283

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

JAMES THE SECOND.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
1689 5 Jac. II.	Archbiſhop of Canterbury Biſhops of St. Aſaph Ely Chicheſter Bath and Wells Peterborough Briſtol	Libel	King's Bench	Acquitted	iv. - 304
	Rowland Walters	Murder	O. B.	Manſlaughter	vii. — 648
	Dearing Bradſhaw			Acquitted
	Ambroſe Carr			Acquitted
	John Price and 100 others by name	Treaſon	Ireland	All bailed but ſeven, who were impriſoned	iv. - 402

WILLIAM AND MARY.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
1688-9. 1 W. & M.	Maurice Cavenagh Edmund Poor William Bowland	Felony	Ireland	Sentenced to be executed	iv. — 408
1689. 1 W. & M.	Earl Caſtlemaine	Treaſon	H. of Commons	Bailed	iv. — 397
	Sir Francis Pemberton Sir Thomas Jones Judges, B. R.	Breach of Privilege	H. Commons	Taken into cuſtody	viii. — 1
1690. 2 W. & M.	Viſcount Preſton	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. — 423
	John Aſhton			Executed	— 455
1692. 4 W. & M.	Henry Harriſon	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iv. 448 viii. 483
	John Cole	Murder	O. B.	Not guilty	iv. — 506
	John Germaine	Crim. Con.	King's Bench	Damages	vii. — 27
	Lord Mohun	Murder	H. L.	Diſcharged	iv. — 510
	Biſhop of Rocheſter	Treaſonable Conſpiracy	Privy Council	No proſecution	viii. — 37
1692-3. 4 & 5 W. & M.	Charles Knowles, earl of Banbury	Murder	O. B.	No trial	viii. — 50
1693. 5 W. & M.	William Anderton	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	viii. — 63
	John Golding & al.	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	viii. — 74

WILLIAM THE THIRD.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
1695. 7 W. III.	Thomas Kendall Richard Roe	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Bailed	iv. — 554
1695. 8 W. III.	Robert Charnock Edward King Thomas Keys	Treaſon	Special Commiſ.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 562
	Sir John Friend	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 599
	Sir William Parkyns		O. B.		iv. — 627
1696. 8 W. III.	Ambroſe Rookwood	Treaſon	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 661
	Charles Cranburne				iv. 698 vi. 56
	Robert Lowick				iv. 718 vi. 56
	Peter Cook	Treaſon	Goal delivery	Pardoned	iv. - 737
	Alexander Knightley	Treaſon	King's Bench	Pardoned	iv. — 777
	Joſeph Dawſon Edward Forſeith William May William Biſhop James Lewis John Sparkes	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	v. — 1
	Captain Vaughan	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	v. 18 vi. 57
	Sir John Fenwick	Treaſon	Parliament	Beheaded	v. — 40
	Earl of Warwick, &c.	Murder	H. L.	Diſcharged	v. — 138
1699. 11 W. III.	Spencer Cowper Ellis Stephens William Rogers John Marſon	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	v. 194 viii. 485
	Mary Butler	Forgery	O. B.	Fined and impriſoned	v. — 232
1699. 12 W. III.	Duke & Ducheſs of Norfolk	Adultery	Parliament	Divorce	v. 239 viii. 7, 27
1700. 13 W. III.	John Cowland	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 534 n.
1701. 13 W. III.	Captain Kidd	Murder and Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	v. 287, 289, 297, 315

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

Dates.	Names.	Crimes or Causes of Action.	Courts or Places of Trial.	Punishments, &c.	Volumes.
	WILLIAM THE THIRD.
1701. 13 W. III.	Nicholas Churchill
	Abel Owens	Piracy and Robbery		Sentenced to be executed	v. 297, 315, 318, 330
	James Howe
	Robert Lamley
	Darby Mullins
	William Jenkins
	Robert Hickman
	Gabriel Loffe
	John Eldridge
	Hugh Parrot
	Earl Portland	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 339
	Lord Somers
	Earl Orford
	Lord Halifax
	Lord Haverſham	Words	H. L.	Impeachment diſmiſſed	v. 373, 375, 378, 381
	Duke of Leeds	High Crimes	H. L.	Impeachment diſmiſſed	viii. — 512
1701-2. 14 W. III.	Patrick Hurley	Perjury and Conſpiracy	Ireland	Fined	v. — 389
	Colonel Bayard	Treaſon	New York	Sentence pronounced	v. — 419
	QUEEN ANNE.
1702. 1 Anne	William Fuller	Cheat	G. H.	Guilty	v. 441 vi. 58
	Colonel Kirkby	Breach of Articles of War	Jamaica	Shot	v. — 446
	Captains Conſtable Wade Vincent Fogg			Impriſoned Suſpended
	Haagen Swenſden	Forcible Marriage	Queen's Bench	Executed	v. — 449
	Sarah Baynton	Forcible Marriage	Queen's Bench	Reprieved	v. — 466
	John Hartwell			Acquitted
	John Spurr			Acquitted
1702. 2 Anne	Richard Hathaway	Cheat and Impoſtor	Aſſizes	Guilty	v. 482 vi. 59
	Bp. of Worceſter and ſon	Breach of Privilege	H. of Commons	Removed	viii. — 82
1703. 2 Anne	Richard Hathaway	Riot and Aſſault	Aſſizes	Guilty	v. 504 vi. 59
	Thomas Welling and wife
	Elizabeth Willoughby
1704. 3 Anne	William White	Breach of Privilege	H. of Commons H. of Peers Queen's Bench		viii. 89, 135 viii. 125, 163 viii. — 158
	James Bourchier	Treaſon	Queen's Bench	Reprieved	v. 506 vi. 60
	Nathaniel Denew	Aſſault, &c.	Queen's Bench	Fined	viii. 178, 536
	John Merriam			Not guilty
	Richard Britton			Fined
	David Baillie	Defamation	Scotland	Pilloried and baniſhed	viii. — 195
	David Lindſay	Treaſon	O. B.	Reprieved	v. 508 vi. 60
	Captain Quelch	Piracy	Boſton	Executed	viii. 204, 217, 218
	John Tutchin	Libel	G. H.	Judgment arreſted	v. - 528
1704-5. 4 Anne	Captain Green	Piracy	Scotland	Executed	v. 572, 606
1706. 5 Anne	Robert Fielding	Bigamy	O. B.	Pardoned	v. — 610
	John Mawgridge	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. - 61
1707-8. 6 Anne	William Gregg	Treaſon	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. - 77
1708. 7 Anne	James Stirling and others	Treaſon	Scotland	Not proven	v. - 630
1709-10. 8 Anne	Henry Sacheverell D. D.	High Crimes	H. L.	Silenced	v. 641, viii. 557
1710. 9 Anne.	Daniel Damaree	Treaſon	O. B.	Pardoned	viii. - 218
	Francis Willis			Not guilty	viii. - 250
	George Purchaſe			Pardoned	viii. - - 267
1712-13. 10 Anne	Richard Noble	Murder	Aſſizes	Executed	ix. - 1
	Mary Sayer	Petty Treaſon	Aſſizes	Acquitted
	Mary Saliſbury	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted
	GEORGE THE FIRST.
1715. 2 Geo. I.	Earl Derwentwater	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	vi. - 1
	Lord Widdrington			Pardoned
	Earl Nithiſdale			Eſcaped
	Earl Carnwath			Pardoned
	Viſcount Kenmure			Beheaded	vi. 1 x. Ap. 84
	Lord Nairn			Pardoned

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
GEORGE THE FIRST.
	Earl Wintoun	Treaſon	H. L.	Eſcaped	vi. - 17
1716. 3 Geo. I.	Francis Francia	Treaſon	O. B.	Acquitted	vi. - 58
1717. 4 Geo. I.	Earl Orford	Treaſon, &c.	H. L.	Act of Grace	vi. - 102
1718. 5 Geo. I.	Major Bonnet and others	Piracy	Charleſtown	Executed	vi. - 156
1719. 6 Geo. I.	Jeffery Gilbert, Lord C. B.	Breach of Privilege	Ireland	Taken into cuſtody	vi. - 188
	John Matthews	Treaſonable Libel	O. B.	Executed	ix. - - 680
	William Hendley, Clerk	Preaching charity ſermon	Aſſizes	Fined	x. Ap. - 86
	George Campman	Collecting charity money
	Robert Hicks
	Filier Harding
	Walter Prat
1721. 8 Geo. I.	Hugh Reaſon	Murder	King's Bench	Burnt in the hand	vi. - - 196
	Robert Tranter
	John Woodburne	Maiming	Aſſizes	Executed	vi. 212 vi. Ap. 60
	Arundel Coke
1722. 9 Geo. I.	Chriſtopher Layer	Treaſon	King's Bench	Executed, &c.	vi. - - 229
1723. 10 Geo. I.	John Plunket	Treaſonable Conſpiracy	Parliament	Impriſoned	vi. - - 390
	George Kelly			Impriſoned	vi. 335, 397
	Biſhop of Rocheſter			Baniſhed	vi. - 475
1723-4. 10 Geo. I.	Edward Arnold	Shooting at & wounding	Aſſizes	Execution reſpited	viii. - 290
1725. 10 Geo. I.	Earl Macclesfield	High Crimes	H. L.	Fined	vi. - 477
1725-6. 11 Geo. I.	Major Oneby	Murder	O. B.	Deſtroyed himſelf	ix. - 14
GEORGE THE SECOND.
1728. 1 Geo. II.	James Carnegie	Murder	Scotland	Not guilty	ix. — 26
	Edmund Curl	Libel	King's Bench	Pilloried	x. Ap. — 92
	William Hales	Forgery	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	x. Ap. 94 ix. 67
1728-9. 1 Geo. II.	Thomas Kinnerſley			Pilloried, fined, &c.	ix. 67, 75 77, 93, 94
1729. 2 Geo. II.	John Huggins	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. - 112
1729-30. 2 Geo. II.	Thomas Bambridge	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. — 146, 226,
		Felony	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Acquitted	ix. — 234
		Appeal of Murder	G. H.	Acquitted	ix. — 152
	William Acton	Murder	Aſſizes	Acquitted	ix. 182, 203, 209, 218
1731. 4 Geo. II.	Richard Franklin	Libel	King's Bench		ix. — 255
1734. 7 Geo. II.	Peter Zenger	Libel	New York	Acquitted	ix. — 276
1735. 8 Geo. II.	John Gibbon	Quo Warranto	Aſſizes	Verdict for the King	x. Ap. 118
	Richard Elles	Quo Warranto	Aſſizes	Verdict for the King	x. Ap. 129
1736. 9 Geo. II.	Captain Porteous	Murder	Scotland	Executed	vi. — 763
	Corporation of Haſtings	Mandamus	King's Bench	Admittance	x. Ap: 138
1740. 13 Geo. II.	Samuel Goodere	Murder	Briſtol	Executed	vi. — 795
	Matthew Mahony			Executed, &c.
	Charles White			Executed
1742. 15 Geo. II.	James Anneſley	Murder	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Chance-medley	ix. — 315
	Joſeph Redding
1743. 16 Geo. II.	Alexander Broadfoot	Murder	Briſtol	Manſlaughter	xi. — 349
	Earl Angleſea	Ejectment	Ireland	Verdict againſt him	ix. — 380
	William Chetwynd	Murder	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Pardoned	ix. — 527
1744. 17 Geo. II.	Earl Angleſea	Aſſault	Ireland	Fined	ix. — 336
	Francis Anneſley
	John Jones
	Mary Heath	Perjury	Ireland	Acquitted	ix. 451 See ix. 431
1746. 19 Geo. II.	Francis Townley	Treaſon	Special Commiſ.	Executed, &c.	ix. — 543 552
	George Fletcher
	Thomas Chadwick	Treaſon	Special Commiſ.	Executed
	William Battragh			Reprieved	ix. — 555
	Tho. Theodorus Deacon			Executed, &c.	ix. — 558
	John Berwick			Executed, &c.	ix. — 559
	David Morgan			Executed, &c.
	Alexander Macgrowther	Treaſon		Reprieved	ix. — 566
	Alex. and Charles Kinloch			Pardoned	ix. 567, 575
	James Bradſhaw			Executed, &c.	ix. — 575
	Sir John Wedderburne			Executed, &c.	ix. — 580
	Charles Ratcliffe	Treaſon	King's Bench	Beheaded	ix. - 582, 585
	Earl Kilmarnock	Treaſon	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. 590*, 595*
	Earl Cromartie			Pardoned	ix. 590*, 595*
	Lord Balmerino			Beheaded	ix. 590*, 596*
1746-7.	Lord Lovat	Treaſon	H. P.	Executed	ix. 616* x. Ap. 188
1747. 20 Geo. II.	Æneas Macdonald	Treaſon	Southwark	Pardoned	ix. — 586
	Archibald Stewart	Neglect of Duty, &c.	Scotland	Not guilty	ix. 589, 608

GEORGE THE SECOND.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
1748-9. 21 Geo. II.	William Jackſon William Carter Benjamin Tapper John Cobby John Hammond Richard Mills	Murder	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ix. - 716
1752. 25 Geo. II.	Mary Blandy	Parricide	Oxon	Executed	x. — 1
	William Owen	Libel	King's Bench	Acquitted	x. Ap. 196
	James Stewart	Murder	Scotland	Executed, &c.	x. — 40
1753. 26 Geo. II.	John Barbot	Murder	St. Chriſtopher's	Executed	x. — 139
	Mary Squires Suſannah Wells	Robbery	O. B.	Pardoned	x. — 223
	Timothy Murphy	Forgery	O. B.	Executed	x. — 183
1754. 27 Geo. II.	Elizabeth Canning	Perjury	O. B.	Tranſported	x. — 205
	Stephen Macdaniel John Berry James Egan James Salmon	Acceſſaries before a Felony	O. B.	Pilloried and impriſoned	x. — 418
1758. 31 Geo. II.	William Barnard	Threatening Letter	O. B.	Acquitted	x. — 448
1759. 32 Geo. II.	John Stevenſon	Murder	Aſſizes	Burnt in the hand	x. — 462
1760. 33 Geo. II.	Earl Ferrers	Murder	H. L.	Executed	x. 478 x Ap. 208

GEORGE THE THIRD.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
1763. 3 Geo. III.	John Wilkes	Hab. Corp.	Common Pleas	Diſcharged	xi. — 302
1764. 4 Geo. III.		Seditious Libel	King's Bench	Fined, impriſoned, &c.	xi. - 324
1765. 5 Geo. III.	John Money James Watſon Robert Blackmore	Falſe Impriſonment	King's Bench	Damages	xi. — 307
	Lord Byron	Murder	Houſe of Lords	Diſcharged	x. — 517*
	Nathan Carrington	Seizure of Papers	Common Pleas	Damages	xi. - 313
	Katharine Nairn Patrick Ogilvie	Inceſt and Murder	Scotland	Eſcaped Executed	x. - 479
1770. 10 Geo. III.	John Wilkes	Blaſphemous Libel	King's Bench	Fined, impriſoned, &c.	xi. - 324
1771. 11 Geo. III.	Croſby, mayor of London	Hab. Corp.	Common Pleas	Remanded	xi. - 335
1772. 12 Geo. III.	James Somerſet	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Diſcharged	xi. - - 339
1773. 13 Geo. III.	Governor Moſtyn	Falſe Impriſonment, &c.	Common Pleas	Damages	xi. - 162
1776. 16 Geo. III.	Dutcheſs of Kingſton	Bigamy	H. L.	Diſcharged	xi. - - 198
1777. 17 Geo. III.	John Horne	Libel	King's Bench	Fined, impriſoned, &c.	xi. — 264

INDEX

I N D E X.

N. B. The Numerals denote the Volume; the Figures the Pages; Ap. the Appendix to the Volume referred to; Em. Pref. Mr. Emlyn's Preface to the Second Edition; and the Aſteriſks preceding the Articles, ſignify that they were in the original Alphabetical Table of the principal Matters contained in the firſt Six Volumes, which is entirely preſerved in the Courſe of this Index.

A.

ABATEMENT.
Miſnomer pleaded in abatement by a peer viii. 51
ABBOT GEORGE, Abp. of CANTERBURY,
His caſe of Robert earl of Eſſex, and lady Frances Howard, relating to their divorce x. 4. Ap.
Explains proceedings in vol. i. 315. x. 4. Ap.
Shews the opinion of the biſhops and civilians x. 4. Ap.
Some obſervable particulars, when ſentence pronounced x. 14. Ap.
The ſpeech the archbiſhop intended to have made, when it came to his turn to give his opinion x. 21. Ap.
Seven of the commiſſioners in favour of the nullity of the marriage, five againſt it x. 21. Ap.
King James's letter to the archbiſhop on the occaſion x. 29. Ap.
ABBOTSBURY WITNESSES,
That ſwore on the trial of Mary Squires, indicted for perjury x. 242
Debate about the Certiorari to remove their indictment x. 243
Sir Criſp Gaſcoyne, knt. lord mayor, quitted the chair at the Old-Bailey when their trials were called on x. 243
No evidence appearing againſt them, they were acquitted x. 246
Serjeant Davy's ſpeech to the court on their behalf x. 246
* ABDICATION.
* The principle the Convention went upon, when they declared the throne vacant, at the Revolution v. 116
* ABINGTON EDWARD,
* Charles Tilney, Edward Jones, John Travers, John Charnock, Jerome Bellamy, and Robert Gage; their trial for high treaſon the 15th of September, 1586, 28 Eliz. i. 134
* The five firſt indicted for a conſpiracy againſt the queen's life, and contriving to ſet the queen of Scots at liberty; the two laſt for receiving and harbouring traitors i. 134
* The court deny Abington a pair of writing-tables to take notes; but allow him to ſpeak to any point as it was urged, before the whole charge was gone through i. 135
* The confeſſion of Babington and others, who had been attainted of treaſon, read againſt them i. 135, 136
* Abington objects that he could not be convicted without two witneſſes brought face to face i. 137
* The court deny that two witneſſes are neceſſary on an indictment for high treaſon, on the 25th of Edward III. i. 135, 136
* The priſoners are convicted i. 140
* Their judgment, and execution i. 140, &c.
* The bare hearing of treaſon, no treaſon; and what ſhall be deemed an aſſent to it i. 138
ABNEY, Sir THOMAS,
His ſpeech for Henry Moore, againſt mayor, &c. of Haſtings x. 138. Ap.
Propoſes reading an ancient book of the corporation x. 142. Ap.
His reply x. 167. Ap.
ABRIDGEMENT. See VINER CHARLES.
ACCESSARY.
* Where the concealing an intended felony ſhall make one an acceſſary before the fact i. 326
Perſons ſuppoſed to be guilty of a barbarous murder, as acceſſaries, declared by parliament, that if they ſhould be found guilty as acceſſaries, they ſhould not have their clergy iv. 174. See PARLIAMENT.
Perſons indicted and tried as acceſſaries, with principals, cannot be good witneſſes againſt the acceſſary iv. 199
* If all the principals are acquitted, the Jury ſhall not enquire of the acceſſaries: otherwiſe if any of the principals are convicted iii. 470. See alſo ii. 506
Acceſſary in ſame indictment with principal, need not be tried at ſame time iv. 199
Acceſſaries to all principals are acceſſaries to every one of them ſeverally iv. 199. See x. 434. 439
The acceſſaries to murder, either before or after the fact, cannot be convicted till after the conviction of the principal ix. 733 See x. 434. 439
If one ſpecies of felony is adviſed, and another committed, the adviſer is not acceſſary x. 437
Who are acceſſaries before the fact, and by what terms they are deſcribed by ſtatutes x. 417
A man procures a felony to be done, he is an acceſſary before x. 444
So he is if he conſents before-hand x. 444, 445
Principal ought to be convicted before trial of acceſſary iv. 199
Though principal and acceſſary be tried together, yet verdict is always given againſt the principal, before it is given againſt the acceſſary iv. 199
A perſon may be an acceſſary before the fact, by the Roman law, who never ſpoke to, or even ſaw the principal x. 435
Acceſſaries are good witneſſes, ii. 143. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN, and others. PRINCIPALS.
* ACCOMPLICE.
* Accomplices in treaſon, legal witneſſes till they are indicted i. 113. ii. 144, 339, 1099. iii. 883. iv. 149, 572, 594. vi. 259
* What an accomplice has ſaid, no evidence againſt thoſe who are indicted with him iii. 476
* One indicted for treaſon, and another for a miſdemeanor for the ſame fact; the record of the conviction of the firſt for treaſon ſhall not be read in evidence againſt the other iii. 834
* ACCUSATION.
* No man bound to accuſe himſelf i. 176, 395. ii. 24, 463, 822. iii. 439. iv. 606. ix. 414. n. xi. 323
* Whether one accuſed may legally be committed without oath made againſt him? ii. 743
ACQUITTALS.
Acquittal pleadable to impeachments iv. 166, 170
* ACTION.
* Action de Scandal. Magnat. iii. 987
* Action lies for charging a man with a crime after he has had his clergy, or a pardon v. 168
* Where one arreſts another without probable cauſe of action, he is liable to an action by the party grieved iii. 1076
* The purſuing malicious methods to obtain a right, ſubjects the party who takes ſuch methods to an action iii. 1090
The reaſon why many actions die with the perſons againſt whom they lay in their life-times iv. 205
Non uſer of action does not take it away vii. 432
No action will lie againſt a judge vii. 442
Record of a cauſe in an action for falſe impriſonment vi. 50. Ap.
See ASHBY and WHITE viii. 89, 93, 95, 131, 134
ACT of GOD.
A perſon non ſanæ memoriæ, and a lunatic during lunacy, are ſaid to be by act of God, tho' the means be human, as violent or hard impriſonment, terror of death; or natural, as ſickneſs iv. 205
ACT of GRACE. See PETITIONS. See alſo vi. 156.
ACTON WILLIAM,
(Firſt indictment) for the murder of Thomas Bliſs, 1ſt Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 181
He would not challenge any of the jury ix. 111
Mr. Harding opens the indictment againſt him ix. 182
Mr. Marſh on the ſame ſide ix. 182
Mr. Ward on the ſame ſide ix. 183
The evidence againſt him ix. 183
Mr. Richardſon would have aſked a queſtion then, but not admitted, ix. 187
Evidence for him ix. 197
Sir John Darnell and others to his character ix. 198
Baron Carter ſums up the evidence ix. 199
Acquitted ix. 203
——— (ſecond indictment) for the murder of John Bromfield, 2d Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 203
Deſires to have the indictment read in Latin ix. 203
Mr. Ward opens the nature of the evidence ix. 204
Evidence againſt Acton ix. 204
For him ix. 206
Baron Carter ſums up the evidence ix. 208
Acquitted ix. 209
——— (third indictment) for the murder of Robert Newton, 2d Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 209
Mr. Marſh opens how he came by his death ix. 209
Evidence againſt him ix. 209
For him ix. 215
Baron Carter ſums up the evidence ix. 216
Acquitted ix. 218
——— (fourth indictment) for the murder of James Thompſon, 2d Aug. 1729 ix. 218
Mr. Marſh opens the indictment againſt him ix. 218
Evidence againſt him ix. 218
For him ix. 223
Baron Carter ſums up the evidence ix. 224
Acquitted ix. 224

Mr. Strange's motion for priſoner's diſcharge, and his application to Mr. Oglethorp ix. 226

Mr. Oglethorp's ſpeech in anſwer to it ix. 226

—————— a bill preferred againſt him for a fifth murder, but returned Ignoramus ix. 226

Mr. Strange's motion to admit Acton to bail, on affidavit of his former trials and acquittals, but refuſed ix. 226

ACTS of PARLIAMENT.

Manner of ſurrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 652

Acts of parliament that give remedy, do not take away the Common Law remedy vii. 432, 440

When an act inflicts a penalty for ſecond offence, indictment for ſecond offence muſt recite record of firſt conviction; and, upon evidence, ſaid record muſt be proved: but matter of firſt conviction is never re-examined, but muſt ſtand for granted x. 433. n.

Act of Parliament cannot loſe its force by non uſer vi. 713

The reaſon of altering the ancient manner of paſſing laws into the method that is now uſed vi. 760

Whatever is teſted per regem et concilium in parliamento, is to be intended an act of parliament vi. Ap. 1 n.

Act to inflict pains and penalties on John Plunkett vi. 390

Act to inflict pains and penalties on George Kelly, alias Johnſon vi. 397

Act to inflict pains and penalties on Francis, lord biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 477. See ATTAINDERS. MORRIS JOHN, and others. PARLIAMENT. RECORDS. STATUTES.

ADDRESSES.

The addreſs of the houſe of lords to queen Anne, to grant writs of error in the caſe of the Ayleſbury men viii. 163. See CONVOCATION.

ADDRESSES of the LORDS HIGH-STEWARDS.

See BATHURST Earl. BUCKHURST Lord. CARMARTHEN Marquis. COVENTRY Lord. COWPER Lord. DAVENTRY Lord. ELLESMERE Lord. HARDWICK Lord. HENLEY Lord. JEFFERIES Lord. NORTHINGTON Earl. NOTTINGHAM Earl. SOMERS Lord. See alſo SACHEVEREL Doctor's trial. GOODWIN Sir FRANCIS. HIGH-STEWARD.

* ADHERING. See ENEMY.

* ADJOURNMENT.

Whoever can call or diſſolve an aſſembly, may adjourn it iii. 658

Improper adjournments of courts of juſtice cenſured iv. 176

Houſe of lords adjourned on a peer declining to be examined as a witneſs, on an allegation that the diſcloſure deſired would affect his honour, being communicated to him in confidence xi. 247. * See PARLIAMENT.

ADMISSION.

Record on a mandamus for admiſſion into the freedom of a corporation x. Ap. 138, 139

ADULTERY.

When a man is taken in adultery with another man's wife, if the huſband ſtab the adulterer or knock out his brains, it is bare manſlaughter ix. 66

Adultery ſeems not indictable by our law, though admitted to be a temporal offence againſt the peace of the realm, for which ſureties of the peace may be required; and that no adequate damages can be given for this crime in an action at the ſuit of the injured huſband Em. Pref. x. n.

In ancient time adultery was puniſhed in the turns and leets by fine or impriſonment Em. Pref. x. n.

The hiſtory of the puniſhment for this crime Em. Pref. xi. 21

See BIGAMY. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION. FIELDING ROBERT. GERMAN PRINCESS. GREY FORD Lord. KINGSTON Ducheſs Dowager of. NAIRN CATHARINE. OGILVIE PATRICK. POLYGAMY.

AFFIDAVITS.

Affidavit to ſupport petition, in order to put off trial in the houſe of lords, on impeachment for treaſon ix. *619, *620

Affidavits by jurymen, to ground motion for new trial. See CANNING ELIZABETH. SIMONS HENRY.

AFRICAN HOUSE.

Burglary in an apartment of the African houſe, muſt be laid to be the manſion-houſe of the company x. 575. n.

AGREEMENT.

Agreement to make a leaſe is not a leaſe ix. 133

* AIDING and ABETTING.

* Whoever is privy and conſenting to treaſon, or procures another to commit treaſon, is a traitor; and the procurer of felony or murder is a felon i. 73

* What ſhall be deemed an aſſent to treaſon, &c. i. 138. ii. 594

* The aiding a traitor knowingly, treaſon ii. 151

* The encouraging a traitor, treaſon ii. 365, 594

* Aiding and aſſiſting a pirate; 'tis no excuſe to ſay he was under the pirate's command v. 314

* Yet thoſe who were ſervants on board, directed to be acquitted v. 314

* One held to be aiding and aſſiſting at a forcible marriage, though not preſent at the ceremony v. 478

AILESBURY, THOMAS Earl of, iv. 606. See FREIND Sir JOHN.

ALAND, Sir JOHN FORTESCUE,

His reply on proſecution againſt Francia for treaſon vi. 63

——— baron of the Exchequer, his argument in the prince's caſe xi. 296

His opinion xi. 300, 302

ALBANS, SAINT. See BACON, Sir FRANCIS. BACON, Lord.

ALDERMEN.

Reſolution, that alderman might be removed for being a drunkard and haunter of taverns iii. 587

Aldermen of London facetiouſly compared to pictures and houſehold furniture xi. 92

ALFRED.

King Alfred cauſed no leſs than forty-four of his juſtices to be hanged in one year, as murderers, for condemning and executing ſome of his people without a legal indictment and trial by a ſworn jury, and others of them for offences not capital by the known law of the land, and without clear evidence ii. 288

* ALIEN. See POST NATI.

* Aliens are good witneſſes i. 113

* Natives of Scotland denizens of England to all intents ii. 9

* An act naturalizing the father, naturalizes his iſſue born before the act, without ſpecial words. Not ſo in caſe of denization ii. 12

* An Engliſhman having iſſue of an alien woman out of the king's dominions, ſuch iſſue are denizens of England ii. 12

* He who pleads he is an alien, muſt make it appear ii. 15

* Aliens ſhall be tried by a jury of half foreigners and half natives iii. 468. v. 449

* An alien and a natural-born ſubject indicted differently v. 527

* Whether a juryman's being an alien is ſufficient cauſe for arreſting judgment? v. 439

* An alien naturalized in Scotland ſhall not inherit lands in England, as a native of Scotland may v. 524

* An interpreter ſworn, to interpret the evidence to the aliens on a Party-Jury iii. 472

* ALLEGIANCE.

* Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare poteſt, nec patriam exuere ii. 9. See MAXIMS.

To doubt or heſitate in point of allegiance, ſaid to be direct treaſon and apoſtacy ii. 314

Jeſuits hold it damnation to take the oath of allegiance iii. 7

Allegiance due from natural-born ſubjects is perpetual and unalienable ix. 550, 586. See MAXIMS. OATHS.

* Allegiance cannot be circumſcribed by place, but is due to the perſon of the king v. 517

* The difference to be obſerved in an indictment againſt one who owes allegiance and him who owes natural allegiance v. 527. vi. 87

* Spencer's treaſon; that allegiance was due to the king only in his politick capacity; and that the people might compel him by dureſſe (or per aſpertee) to yield to their demands ii. 305

Said to be due to thoſe from whom we receive protection ii. 442. See RESISTANCE.

* ALLIES. See ENEMY.

ALLYBONE, Sir RICHARD, J. B. R.

Is of opinion, that the petition of the ſeven biſhops is a libel iv. 393, 394

Miſtakingly cites a caſe as a caſe in point againſt the defendants iv. 395

Not qualified by law to ſit as a judge, being a papiſt, and conſequently had not taken the oaths or teſt, which the law enjoins to be done, before a judge takes his place on the bench xi. 133

* AMBASSADOR.

* A French ambaſſador beheaded by the duke of Milan, for treaſonable practices during his embaſſy to him i. 119

* An ambaſſador may be tried for treaſon ii. 8

* Earl of Caſtlemaine charged by the houſe of commons with going ambaſſador to Rome iv. 397

* A bill of attainder againſt a perſon for killing a foreign miniſter v. 105

By the judgment of lord Bacon, in point of conſpiracy againſt the ſtate, even an ambaſſador is not privileged ii. 8. See CASTLEMAIN, ROGER, Earl of; alſo, i. 119. ii. 78. vii. 245, 248. PANTALOON.

* AMENDMENTS.

Books cited where amendments are allowed in crown caſes v. 547

No inſtances of amendment in criminal proſecution v. 553

Error in point of ſkill not amendable, tho' miſpriſions or miſtakes are v. 570

Mr. juſtice Blackſtone gives the riſe and hiſtory of amendments xi. 332

Record of information amended xi. 332

" Diviſion" ſtruck out, and " pariſh" inſerted xi. 332

Great difference between amending indictments and informations xi. 333

Order to amend information miſcalled an alteration of the record xi. 333

Information amendable by judge, at chambers xi. 333

Amendment, where to be allowed in criminal caſes, as well as in civil, viii. 58

Warranted by common law, no ſtatute of jeofails extending to criminal cauſes, or other cauſe, where the king is a party viii. 58 * See DISCONTINUANCES. PLEADING and PLEAS. WRITS.

AMERICA. See PLANTATION. SLAVERY.

AMICUS CURIÆ.

Any perſon may inform the courts as amicus curiæ ii. 466. iv. 168 ix. 583

ANANDALE, Marquis. See BAILLIE DAVID.

ANARCHY.

Tyranny, bad as it is, is better than anarchy, in the opinion of Lord C. J. Camden xi. 323

ANDERSON, Sir EDMUND,

Lord chief juſtice of the common pleas, at the arraignment of Daviſon in the Star-chamber for a contempt vii. 19, 21

His ſpeech on that occaſion vii. 24, 27

He was one of the commiſſioners on the trial of Babington and others for treaſon i. 127

And on the trial of Abington for like offence i. 135

His report concerning the impriſonment of the ſubject, without cauſe, read in the houſe of commons, and the articles, to which all the judges ſubſcribed their names vii. 133, 140, 147, 161

All written with his own hand vii. 133, 147, 148, 228

His

His report of the reſolution of the judges of C. B. that they could not obey the queen's letter in matters of juſtice; cited i. 708

* ANDERSON, alias MUNSON, LIONEL,

* William Ruſſel, Charles Parris, alias Parry, Henry Starkey, James Corker, William Marſhal, and Alexander Lumſden, tried for high treaſon the 17th of January, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 993
* Kemiſh indicted and arraigned for remaining in England, having received popiſh orders ii. 993
* But being ſick he is remanded to priſon ii. 993
* Anderſon, &c indicted alſo, for accepting popiſh orders ii. 993
* Marſhal and Corker object they had been already tried for high treaſon and acquitted; but are told, that was for compaſſing the king's death, &c. which is another ſpecies of treaſon ii. 994
* Anderſon firſt tried ii. 995
* The king's order for his ſtaying in England does not avail him at his trial ii. 995
* Sir John Keyling opens the evidence ii. 995
* Whoever accepts popiſh orders, by conſequence diſowns the king's ſupremacy, and aſſerts the pope's ii. 995
* Dangerfield depoſes, that he went to confeſſion to Anderſon ii. 996
* And that he had an indulgence from Anderſon to be drunk as ſoon as he had received the ſacrament ii. 996
* Oates's evidence, that the priſoner performed the function of a prieſt; and the court directs, that it is not neceſſary to prove his ordination ii. 997
* Bedloe commits a miſtake in his evidence againſt Anderſon ii. 998
* The priſoner urges in his defence, that he wrote in behalf of the king's power againſt the pope's ſupremacy ii. 998
* And obſerves, that the judges had delivered their opinion, that this law was made only in terrorem ii. 999
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 1000
* The clerk abſolves the prieſt when he ſays maſs ii. 1000
* Mr. Corker's trial ii. 1000
* He is proved to be titular biſhop of London ii. 1000
* A convent in the Savoy ſuppreſſed ii. 1001
* Mr. Marſhal's trial ii. 1002
* His own confeſſion, that he was a prieſt when tried for the popiſh plot, brought as evidence againſt him ii. 1003
* Mr. Ruſſel's trial ii. 1006
* Oates and Bedloe complain, that the court is crouded with papiſts ii. 1007
* Parris's trial ii. 1007
* The Venetian ambaſſador's letter not admitted as evidence for the priſoner ii. 1010
* Starkey's trial ii. 1010
* He ſays that Oates did not know what a prieſt's habit was ii. 1011
* Objects, that the prieſt makes the maſs, and not the maſs the prieſt ii. 1011
* Says that a proteſtant had ſaid maſs about town ii. 1011
* Says he had ſpent 4000l. and loſt a leg in the king's ſervice ii. 1011
* That he was baniſhed in the time of the uſurpation, for refuſing to take the engagement againſt the king ii. 1011
* Mr. Lumſden's trial ii. 1011
* He appears to be a Scotchman, and procurator for Scotland ii. 1012
* The ſix firſt convicted; but Lumſden being a Scotchman, it was found ſpecially as to him, the court doubting whether he was within the ſtatute ii. 1013
* The recorder ſhews the reaſonableneſs of making ſtatute 27 El. c. 2. and the putting it in force at this time, ii. 1016. See ii. 967.
* Sentence paſſed on the firſt ſix ii. 1017

* ANDERTON, WILLIAM,

His trial for high treaſon at the Old-Bailey, for two traitorous libels, June 3, 1693, 5 W. & M. viii. 63
Evidence of a printing-preſs, and materials for printing, found in his room viii. 64
And the two libels, one corrected by his own hand viii. 64
Priſoner's defence, that no overt act was proved, and prays counſel viii. 64
Printing declared an overt act viii. 64
Lord chief juſtice Treby ſums up the evidence, and the jury find him guilty viii. 64
Is executed, and the ordinary's account of him viii. 65
His trial by another hand viii. 65
The ſeveral evidences viii. 66
Is refuſed counſel, and delivers in his plea himſelf viii. 66
The plea viii. 67
That 13 & 14 Car. II. ch. 33, which makes printing ſeditious books an offence, extends not the puniſhment to life or limb viii. 68
The jury aſk the court, if having ſuch things by him, without uſing them, affected the priſoner's life? viii. 68
Jury, after long debate, find him guilty viii. 69
Petitions, that ſentence may be reſpited till counſel heard in his behalf viii. 69, 70
Pleads in arreſt of judgment, and is condemned viii. 70
His behaviour till execution viii. 71
Delivers a paper to the ſheriffs viii. 72

ANDREWS, EUSEBIUS, Col.

Proceedings againſt him for high treaſon, before the high court of juſtice, Aug. 16, 1650 vii. 324
His narrative preſented to the council of ſtate vii. 324
Some further circumſtances relating to his examination, put into writing vii. 327
Petitions the council to have his friends come to him, and for a ſpeedy trial vii. 328
Bradſhaw's warrant for his commitment to the Tower, dated two months after his real commitment vii. 328
He petitions the parliament vii. 329
Puts in his anſwer in writing to the high court of juſtice vii. 329
Pleads, that the act conſtituting the high court of juſtice is repugnant to Magna Charta vii. 329
Puts in a ſecond anſwer, that by the letter of the act the court is not qualified to try a freeman of England vii. 330
That they are ſworn in words of manifeſt partiality vii. 330
His third anſwer, that it is not repugnant to the act to try him by his peers vii. 331
Avows his right, as a freeman, to the benefit of challenging, and of having the witneſſes brought face to face vii. 331
His arguments at his trial
Firſt, that he ought to be tried by his peers vii. 332
Second, that the court, if a court, is only a court ex parte, not having power to diſcharge, if the perſon is acquitted vii. 333
Third, that it is no court of record, and therefore not capable to paſs upon any man, in matter of life vii. 334
Fourth, that the commiſſionary power of the court is againſt common law and vulgar reaſon vii. 334
Fifth, compares the oath of the judges and the commiſſioners vii. 335
Sixth, a recapitulation of the whole argument vii. 336
Sentenced to be beheaded vii. 337
Deſires a copy of his charge, and a day to be aſſigned to deliver in his anſwer vii. 338
Urges the crime imputed to him only a bare reſolution, ſo, conſequently, no treaſon vii 333
That the owning king Charles II. not within the words of the act, proclaim, declare, publiſh, or any ways promote, vii. 333
Takes exceptions to ſome of his triers, but not regarded vii. 340
His ſpeech on the ſcaffold on Tower-hill vii. 341

ANGLESEA, RICHARD, Earl of,

Anneſley James, eſq; and John Jans, gent. for an aſſault on James Anneſley, eſq; and others, tried at Athy, in the county of Kildare, in Ireland, 3 Aug. 1744, 17 Geo. II. ix. 336
The indictment, and opened by Mr. Diſney ix 336
Mr. Harward on the ſame ſide ix. 336
Mr. Spring on the other ſide ix. 337
Mr. Harward and Mr. Spring argue on the nature of giving evidence ix. 337
The court's opinion upon it ix. 337
Mr. Mac Manus for the proſecution ix. 339
Mr. Morgan for the defendants, and for ſeparating the indictments ix. 339
Court over-rule him ix. 340
Evidence againſt them, by Mr. Mac Kercher, and others, in ſupport of the indictments ix. 340
Mr. Spring ſtates the caſe ix. 364
Mr. Morgan moves, that thoſe acquitted may give teſtimony for the reſt ix. 365
Court of opinion they may ix. 365
Mr. Harward againſt allowing it ix. 366
His diſpute with the court about it ix. 366
Mr. Attorney-general, Mr. Mac Manus, and Mr. Callaghan's ſpeeches on the point ix. 367
Mr. Malone for the defendants ix. 368
The counſel for the proſecutors over-ruled in their objection ix. 368
More evidence on the other indictments ix. 369
Lord Angleſea is found guilty ix. 375
Mr. Spring's ſpeech, whether more evidence is neceſſary ix. 375
Court's opinion ix. 376
Mr. Harward's ſpeech ix. 376
Court ſtates the caſe ix. 376
Mr. Attorney-general's opinion upon it ix. 378
Jury find them guilty ix. 378
Mr. Harward's ſpeech, for judgment ix. 378
Court's on giving ſentence ix. 379
Their puniſhment ix. 379

ANIMADVERSIONS

On two 30th of January ſermons, reſolved by the lords, a villainous libel, and condemned to be burnt by the common hangman, 1700 viii. 80

ANNALY, Lord. See xi. 219.

ANNE BOLEYN. See BOLEYN ANNE.

ANNESLEY, JAMES,

And Joſeph Redding, for murder, at the Old-Bailey, 15 July, 1742, 15 Geo. II. ix. 315
The indictment ix. 316
Mr. Brown opens the indictment againſt them ix. 317
Mr. ſerjeant Gapper on the ſame ſide ix. 317
The evidence againſt them ix. 317, 318, &c.
Their defence, the latter being a gamekeeper ix. 323
The opinion of the court on their caſe ix. 329
The counſel's argument for the priſoners ix. 330
The counſel's argument againſt them ix. 331
Mr. Hume Campbell's reply ix. 331
More evidence called ix. 332
Court ſummed up the evidence ix. 333
Found guilty of chance-medley ix. 335

ANNESLEY JAMES, Eſq.

Againſt Richard earl of Angleſea, his trial in ejectment, for lands in the county of Meath, in Ireland, Nov. 1743, 16 Geo. II. ix. 380
The declaration ix. 380
Mr. ſerjeant Marſhal's ſpeech on opening the evidence ix. 381-3
Mr. ſerjeant Tiſdell on the ſame ſide ix. 383
Mr. Lehunt for defendant ix. 383
Mr. recorder Stannard on the ſame ſide ix. 383

Lord chief-baron Bowes's requeſt, that the jury would take notes ix. 383
The names of the evidence for the plaintiff ix. 383
Mr. Giffard, a principal witneſs for the plaintiff ix. 384
His evidence objected to ix. 384
Several ſpeeches for and againſt allowing him a witneſs ix. 385, &c.
Attorney ought not to diſcloſe the ſecrets of his client ix. 387
Mr. Giffard gives his evidence ix. 388
A point of law, whether an attorney ſhall diſcloſe any thing whatſoever in a collateral queſtion that ſhall affect his client ix. 389
Debated, with the ſeveral arguments ix. 389, &c.
Lord chief-baron Bowes's opinion thereupon ix. 392
Baron Mountney's ix. 392
Baron Dawſon's ix. 394
Mr. Giffard proceeds in his evidence ix. 394
Mr. Attorney-general (St. George Caulfield, eſq;) opens the defendant's evidence ix. 399
Names of defendant's witneſſes ix. 402
Mrs. Heath, a principal witneſs for the defendant ix. 403
More witneſſes called, and confronted with Mrs. Heath ix. 413
Lord chief-baron's charge ix. 415
Mr. baron Mountney's ix. 423
Mr. baron Dawſon's ix. 429
A verdict for the plaintiff ix. 431
See Mrs. Heath's trial for perjury in this cauſe ix. 431
His and his ſons death ix. 4.2. See ANGLESEA, RICHARD Earl of.

ANSWER in CHANCERY.

If it does not give an account of all the minute circumſtances charged by the bill, it may be excepted to vi. 703

ANTIDOTE againſt POISON;

Containing ſome remarks on paper mentioned to have been delivered by lord Ruſſel to the ſheriffs at his execution; compoſed by Sir Bartholomew Shower viii. 464

ANTIGUA. See BARBOT JOHN.

ANTRIM, Marquis of,

His caſe before the commiſſioners in the bill of ſettlement in Ireland viii. 419
Account of what money he received from Ireland viii. 423

*APPEAL.

* In an appeal, where one ſtands mute he ſhall be hanged i. 389
* Appeals in parliament remain in the ſame ſtate on the meeting of a new parliament, as they were in at the diſſolution of the old ii. 747
* In an appeal the priſoner's witneſſes ſhall be ſworn ii. 253
* A conviction on an indictment for murder no bar to an appeal ii. 253
The king may pardon burning even in an appeal v. 108
* One acquitted for murder ſhall give ſecurity to anſwer any appeal that may be brought iii. 501
Infant againſt whom ſpecial verdict is found for murder, pardoned before argument, not to give bail to anſwer appeal ix. 542
Appeal reſembles an impeachment iv. 167
In an appeal the priſoner may have counſel, and his witneſſes ſhall be ſworn ii. 253. iv. 174
Why appeals leſs frequent than indictments iv. 174
Appeal lies in robbery, murder, burglary, felony, and in all crimes at common law, puniſhable by loſs of life or member iv. 174
The Chancery has power to relieve, in caſe writ of appeal is loſt, and to renew it viii. 487
Appeal againſt a member of the houſe of commons, during the time of parliament, and debates between the two houſes thereon. See FAGG, Sir JOHN.
There lies, of common right, an appeal from all eccleſiaſtical courts in England to the ſovereign, in virtue of his majeſty's ſupremacy. So reſolved by all the judges of England viii. 570
In appeal of murder, peers to be tried by ordinary jury of freeholders, vii. 149, 152. xi. 278
An attempt to deprive the ſubject of his right of appeal in caſe of murder, made in parliament xi. 278
Trial of murder of a very extraordinary nature on appeal x. 31 Ap.
Appeals in parliament taken away by ſtat. 1 Hen. IV. ch. 14. i. 6. n.
In appeals of treaſon battle did not lie, if it could be proved by witneſſes i. 11. n.
Quaker cannot be a witneſs on appeal ix. 122. n.
Holt, chief juſtice, B. R. ordered an appeal himſelf ix. 152. See BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. BATHURST CHARLES. CHETWYND WILLIAM. CORBET RICHARD. COWPER SPENCER. NOBLE RICHARD. PORTER GEORGE. REA Lord. SHIRLEY Doctor. SLAUGHTERFORD CHRISTOPHER. TALES VENIRE.
Appeals to the court of Rome. See POPE.

APPEARANCE.

Where one appears upon ſummons he ſhall have an imparlance; but if he comes in cuſtody, or on recognizance, he ſhall plead inſtanter, iv. 323
Voluntary appearance upon an outlawry cannot be taken notice of by the court judicially xi. 325

* APPLETREE THOMAS. ii. 385. See MESSENGER, et al.

APPROVER.

Great credit was given to an approver iv. 200. See ii. 143

* ARCHBISHOP. See BISHOP.

ARCHER, JOHN,

Not permitted to argue at the bar, becauſe he refuſed to take the engagement ii. 159

AREOPAGITA.

Upon what occaſion Milton wrote that famous pamphlet xi. 322

* ARGYLE, ARCHIBALD, Marquis of,

His trial in Scotland for high treaſon, Jan. 23, 1661, 13 Car. II. ii. 417. vii. 379
The grand indictment exhibited againſt him by his majeſty's advocate to the parliament of Scotland vii. 379
* The charge againſt him, wherein are enumerated ſeveral acts of hoſtility in the reign of the late king ii. 418
* The delivering the king's perſon into the hands of the Engliſh rebels, ii. 418
* In taking the part of Oliver Cromwell when protector, and oppoſing king Charles the ſecond's reſtoration ii. 419, &c.
Petitions the parliament for a recognition of his caſe, and for warrants to cite ſuch perſons whoſe names he ſhould give in vii. 385
Refuſed vii. 380
Reſolved, that his advocates could not be allowed to ſpeak in caſes of treaſon, but upon their peril vii. 390
His ſpeech before preſenting his ſubmiſſion vii. 390
His ſubmiſſion, and begs the interceſſion of parliament vii. 392
Not accepted, and ordered to put in his defence vii. 392
The ſpeech before the parliament after the indictment read obſerves, that ſeveral matters ſtated in the libel are not produced, without which he is incapable of anſwering vii. 394
That the acts of parliament on which the libel is founded are not repeated as they bear vii. 395
That the libel, as founded on practice, is no ways relevant vii. 396
That the dittay is unclear and indiſtinct, therefore the libel inept vii. 396
* The marquis's anſwer ii 427
His defence vii. 387
* Pleads his majeſty's act of oblivion ii. 427, vii. 397
* Denies moſt of the other articles ii. 428
His further anſwer to particular articles vii. 399
Diſtinction between acts concurring with the uſurper, transferring de facto in his perſon the power he uſurps and acts, whereby the oppreſſed ſubjects make uſe of the power uſurped, wherein the utility, not of the uſurper, but of the ſubjects, is reſpected vii. 413
The opinion of ſeveral eminent civil lawyers concerning concealing treaſon vii. 418
* His ſpeech at his execution ii. 434

* ARGYLE, ARCHIBALD, Earl of,

His trial for high treaſon, in November, &c. 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 441
* November 3, 1681, the earl takes the Scotch teſt in council, his royal highneſs the duke of York, high-commiſſioner, being preſent iii. 441
* The privy council's explanation of the teſt iii. 441
* Novemb. 4. The earl of Argyle being about to take the teſt as a commiſſioner of the treaſury, and offering the explanation he had offered the day before, it was reſolved he could not ſit in council, not having taken the teſt according to the meaning of the act iii. 442
* The earl of Argyle's explication of the teſt iii. 442
* Novemb. 8. The council ſend a letter to his majeſty, to acquaint him they had committed the earl to the caſtle, and ordered him to be proſecuted for the ſcandalous paper he gave in as his explication of the teſt, iii. 442
* Novemb. 15. The king ſends an anſwer, approving their proceedings, iii. 443
* The indictment againſt him for treaſon and perjury, &c. iii. 443
* Abſtract of the acts of parliament whereon the indictment is founded, iii. 444
* The earl's petition that ſir George Lockhart may be aſſigned of counſel for him iii. 446
* The anſwer of the council iii. 446
* A ſecond petition of the earl's; with the anſwer of the council, that they allow counſel to plead for him iii. 447
* The earl cauſes ſir George Lockhart to be ſerved with the order of council, allowing counſel to plead for him iii. 447
* The earl is arraigned Decemb. 12, before the lords of juſticiary, iii. 448
* His ſpeech, reciting his ſervices to the king at Worceſter fight, &c. iii. 448
* The king's letter to the earl when he was lord Lorn iii. 449
* General Middleton's orders to the earl, and the earl of Glencairn's letter to him, read in court iii. 449
* Sir George Lockhart's argument and plea for the earl of Argyle iii. 450
* The king's advocate's argument and plea againſt the earl iii. 455
* Sir John Dalrymple's reply to the king's advocate iii. 458
* Sir George Lockhart's reply to the king's advocate iii. 460
* The king's advocate's third plea againſt the earl iii. 463
* The ſeveral arguments entered by the clerks in court iii. 464
* December 12. The lords of juſticiary adjudge the libel or indictment to be well ſupported, as to the treaſon; and refer the proof of the facts therein contained to the aſſize (or jury) conſiſting of fifteen peers and commoners iii. 464
* The aſſize having choſen the marquis of Montroſe their chancellor (or foreman) with one voice find the earl guilty of treaſon, leaſing-making, and leaſing-telling; and, by plurality of voices, acquit him of the perjury iii. 464
* The council acquaint his majeſty with the proceedings iii. 464
* The king, in his anſwer, directs the lords of juſticiary to proceed to paſs ſentence; but to reſpite the execution iii. 465
* December 23, 1681. The court paſs ſentence of high treaſon upon the earl in his abſence, he having made his eſcape iii. 466

ARMS.

The heralds and purſuivants with their coats diſplayed (after ſound of trumpet) publickly, in face of court, conform to the cuſtom of Scotland in ſentences of treaſon; and in purſuance thereto, in his majeſty's name and by his authority, cancel, tear, and deſtroy the traytor's arms, throw them in his face, trample them under foot, and ordain his arms to be expunged out of the books of heraldry, his poſterity to be ignoble and never to enjoy honour or dignity. They then go to the market-croſs of Edinburgh, and ſolemnly tear and cancel the the ſaid arms, and affix them on ſaid croſs reverſed, with this inſcription, " The arms of mr. Robert Baillie, late of Jerviſwood, traitor." iii. 1101. See iii. 466. iv. 304. vii. 44, 85. viii. 332.

* ARMSTRONG, Sir THOMAS,

*Proceedings on the outlawry againſt him, Trin. 36 Car. II. 1684 iii. 983
*He deſires he may have the benefit of a trial, according to the ſtatute of Edw. VI. it being leſs than a year ſince he was out-law'd. The court anſwer, he did not ſurrender himſelf purſuant to that ſtatute; but was taken, and ſo could not have the benefit of it iii. 983
* Remarks on this proceeding iii. 984
* Mrs. Matthews, the priſoner's daughter, exclaims againſt the court for murdering her father, and is committed iii. 984
* The priſoner charged with being one of thoſe who engaged to kill the king iii. 985
* He complains his money was taken from him when he was made priſoner iii. 985
* Execution awarded iii. 985
* His behaviour at execution iii. 985
* Subſtance of his dying ſpeech iii. 986
* Proceedings of the commons upon this attainder, in 1689 iii. 986
* His attainder reverſed, 6 W. III. iii. 986
The paper delivered by ſir Thomas to the ſheriffs viii. 471. See iii. 397, 398
Sir John Hawles's remarks on the award of execution againſt ſir Thomas iv. 198. See viii. 64, n. See alſo EXAMINATIONS.

ARMSTRONG, Lady,

Copy of the paper delivered by her to the lord keeper, lord chief juſtice, and attorney-general, in behalf of her huſband ſir Thomas Armſtrong viii. 470

ARNOLD, EDWARD,

His trial for ſhooting at lord Onſlow, Mar. 20, 1723-4 viii. 290
The indictment viii. 290
Counſel moves for a ſolicitor to be by him, to call his witneſſes, he being a lunatic viii. 291
Counſel for the king oppoſe it viii. 291
Mr. ſerjeant Cheſhire's ſpeech, at opening the fact viii. 292
The evidence of the perſons with lord Onſlow, when he was ſhot viii. 293
Evidence of his declaring he would ſhoot lord Onſlow, if he ſaw him viii. 297
His confeſſion to the juſtice, that he had long and deliberately intended to murder him viii. 300
Evidence for the priſoner, to prove him a lunatic viii. 301
Mr. Hungerford urges, the priſoner's not being diſguiſed brought him not within the act of parliament viii. 313
Mr. juſtice Tracy delivers the opinion of all the judges, that the clauſe was diſtinct from the former, of being in diſguiſe viii. 313
Mr. ſerjeant Cheſhire's obſervations on the evidence viii. 313
Some letters of the priſoner's during his confinement, and ſtate of the caſe, as he himſelf dictated it, produced viii. 316
Mr. juſtice Tracy ſums up the evidence viii. 317
The jury find him guilty viii. 322
Died in priſon viii. 322

ARRAIGNMENT.

Not neceſſary for peer or commoner to hold up his hand at the bar on his arraignment ii. 28. iii. 212, 213. iv. 211, 512. See FITZHARRIS, EDWARD. HOLDING UP THE HAND.

ARREST.

* Huſſey, chief juſtice, ſaid, that ſir John Markham told king Edward IV. he could not arreſt a man for treaſon or felony, as a ſubject might, becauſe that if the king did wrong, the party could not have his action againſt him vii. 120, 129, 130, 146, 171, 219, 221. See ii. 208, 212. iv. 558.
Arreſt under a warrant filled up after ſealed, illegal x. 478
Mr. juſtice Foſter's opinion of ſuch arreſt x. 476. n. See ACTION. PRITCHARD, WILLIAM.

ARTICLES of IMPEACHMENT. See IMPEACHMENTS.

ARUNDEL, Archbiſhop of Canterbury,

Is ſaid to have been impeached of, but not committed for, treaſon ii. 572

* ARUNDEL, PHILIP HOWARD, Earl of,

His trial for high treaſon, the 18th of April, 1589. 31 Eliz. before a commiſſion of peers i. 164
* Indicted for correſponding with dr. Allen, a traitor, in promoting a foreign invaſion, and ſaying maſs for the ſucceſs of the Spaniſh armada i. 165
* A picture found in his trunk given in evidence againſt him i. 166
* Refuſed to have his accuſers brought face to face i. 167
* He objects to ſome of the witneſſes, that they were indicted or attainted; but is over-ruled i. 168
* He is convicted; and ſentence pronounced upon him i. 168
* He dies in priſon i. 168

ARUNDEL, THOMAS HOWARD, Earl of,

Lord high ſteward on earl Strafford's trial for treaſon i. 736

ASHBY and WHITE.

Proceedings in the houſe of commons in that caſe viii. 89
Aſhby brings his action againſt White, for refuſing his vote; is caſt in the Queen's Bench, and recovers on a writ of error, in the houſe of lords viii. 89
Members appointed to ſearch the journals of the houſe of lords, and the Queen's Bench viii. 89
The record, viii. 89, 90
Mr. ſpeaker Harley's ſpeech viii. 92, 113
Mr. Brewer's ſpeech againſt the action's lying viii. 93
Denzil Onſlow's caſe cited viii. 94
Sir Thomas Powys's ſpeech againſt it viii. 95
Cites the caſe of Nevil and Stroud, 1655 viii. 98
And Soame and Barnardiſton viii. 98
Sir John Hawles's ſpeech in juſtification of the lords viii. 100
Sir Edward Seymour's ſpeech that no action lay viii. 103
Marquis of Harrington's ſpeech viii. 104
Mr. Lowndes's ſpeech viii. 104
Sir Simon Harcourt, ſolicitor-general, his ſpeech viii. 107
Mr. Dormer's ſpeech viii. 108, 109
Sir Joſeph Jekyl's ſpeech viii. 110
Sir George Meggot's and mr. Tancred's caſes cited by him viii. 111
Sir Thomas More's ſpeech viii. 114
Mr. Cowper's ſpeech viii. 114
Sir Humphrey Mackworth's ſpeech viii. 117
Sir Gilbert Dolben's ſpeech viii. 119
Mr. King's ſpeech viii 121
Sir Thomas Littleton's ſpeech viii. 122
Serjeant Hooper's ſpeech viii. 122
Mr. Walpole's ſpeech viii. 123
Reſolved, that the qualification of any elector, or right of any perſon elected, is cognizable, and determinable no where, but before the parliament viii. 123
Aſhby reſolved guilty of a breach of privilege viii. 124
Report of the lords committees appointed to draw up a ſtate of the caſe, upon the writ of error viii. 125
Reaſons of the lords for reverſing the judgment viii. 125
Two ſorts of boroughs deſcribed viii. 126
Though the inheritance of the franchiſe be in the body corporate, yet it is for the benefit of the particular members, and enures to their advantage in their private capacities viii. 127
Where a man is injured, if he cannot bring his action to recover the thing itſelf, the law will always give him damages in lieu thereof viii. 131
The lords reſolve, the action maintainable in the queen's courts; and that the voting Aſhby guilty of a breach of privilege, is an unprecedented attempt upon the judicature of parliament viii. 134
Mr. Mead brings other actions of the like nature, and is ordered to attend the houſe of commons viii. 134
The declarations in five cauſes viii. 135
The ſeveral plaintiffs, and the attorney. committed to Newgate viii. 137
The commons addreſs the queen, that ſhe will not give leave for any writ of error viii. 137
Her majeſty's anſwer viii. 138
Mr. Page, mr. Mountague, mr. Lechmere. and mr. Denton, ordered into cuſtody, for pleading on the return of a habeas corpus, in behalf of the perſons committed viii. 139
The five plaintiffs taken from Newgate, into the cuſtody of the ſerjeant at arms viii. 139
Report of the proceedings of the houſe of lords, in relation to the perſons committed, read viii. 140
Protection granted to their counſel and attornies, on their petition viii. 140
Conference appointed viii. 141
Two writs of habeas corpus ſerved on the ſerjeant for mr. Mountague and mr. Denton viii. 142
Report of the committee appointed to draw up what is proper to be offered at the next conference viii. 143
The caſe of the Norfolk election, 28 Eliz. and of ſir Francis Goodwin, viii. 145
Writs iſſued by the lord-chancellor, during a prorogation, declared void viii. 146
Mr. Bromley reports the conference viii. 149
Reſolved, that no perſon committed by the commons ſhould be brought by habeas corpus before any other judicature during that ſeſſion, viii. 149
That the ſerjeant make no return, and the lord-keeper be acquainted with theſe reſolutions, that the writs may be ſuperſeded viii. 149
Report of a third conference viii. 149
The lords ſay, the commons have no power to make declarations, which belong to the crown viii. 150
No action lay for a double return till 7 & 8 William III. viii. 151
The commons juſtify their declaration viii. 154
Writ of error lies not in any proceedings on a habeas corpus viii. 157
Reſolved, that the proceedings in relation to the Ayleſbury men, and other proceedings in that matter, are in maintenance of the privileges of the commons of England viii. 157
Proceedings in the Queen's-Bench on the habeas corpus viii. 158
Mr. Page, mr. Lechmere, mr. Mountague, and mr. Denton, urge they were bailable, and object to the return viii. 158
Gould, Powys, and Powell, give their opinions, ſeriatim, they were not bailable viii. 159
Lord chief-juſtice Holt, e contra viii. 161
Priſoners remanded, and judgment entered on record viii. 163
Houſe of lords addreſs the queen to grant writs of error viii. 163
The queen's anſwer viii. 170
The parliament prorogued viii. 170
Some arguments of the lords at the free conferences viii. 171
Copy of the record viii. 89

ASHLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech on behalf of his majeſty, at a conference of lords and commons, concerning the liberty of the ſubject vii. 179
He was committed to the Tower by the houſe of lords, for delivering the above ſpeech as from the commons, without their authority, and for aſſerting in the argument of it, that there was a law of ſtate different from the common law vii. 180. xi. 323. See STATE LAW.

ASHLEY, JAMES,

And Simons Henry a Jew; their caſe for felony and robbery x. 411

ASHLEY, THOMAS,

A witneſs on Goddard's trial, perjured x. 411

*ASHTON, JOHN,
* His trial for high treaſon, the 19th of January, 1690, 2 W. & M. iv. 455
* The indictment iv. 410
* The priſoner is denied to have his ſolicitor by him at the trial iv. 455
* Mr. ſerjeant Thompſon's ſpeech before evidence iv. 456
* Billop's evidence of his taking the priſoners on board a yacht, with the papers, as in the lord Preſton's trial iv. 464
* Mr. Aſhton's defence iv. 473
* He calls witneſſes to his reputation iv. 476
* Mr. ſerjeant Thompſon ſums up the evidence iv. 479
* The chief-juſtice Holt directs the jury iv. 481
* Lord chief-juſtice Pollexfen adds his obſervations iv. 484
* Mr. Aſhton is convicted iv. 485
* Lord Preſton and mr. Aſhton called to hear judgment iv. 486
* Mr. Aſhton deſires a ſight of the indictment, but is denied. iv. 486
* Sentence paſſed on the lord Preſton and mr. Aſhton iv. 487
* Mr. Aſhton's dying ſpeech iv. 487
* He reflects upon a particular judge and juryman iv. 488
* Copy of paper he left in a friend's hand vi. 64. See viii. 64, n. ii. 432. n.

ASK, RICHARD,
Argues againſt return of hab. corp. for William Stroud and others, vii. 219

* ASSASSINATION. See BARNARDI's PLOT.

ASSAULT.
Record for an aſſault vi. 59. Ap.
Indictment for an aſſault and conſpiracy with intent to wound and beat viii. 178
Ex officio information for riot, aſſault, and battery iii. 629. See vi. 40
Indictment for aſſault and attempt to murder iii. 65. See BETHEL SLINGSBY. BRITON JOHN. DENEW NATHANIEL. ELLIOT Sir JOHN. GILES JOHN. HATHAWAY RICHARD. MERRIAM JOHN. VALENTINE BENJAMIN. WELLING THOMAS and ELIZ.

* ASSIZE. See JURY.

ASSIZES.
It is the duty of all juſtices of the peace to attend the aſſizes x. 92. Ap.

* ASSOCIATION.
* Aſſociation entered into (for the preſervation of queen Elizabeth) by private perſons, confirmed by parliament i. 143, 144
* The draught of an aſſociation to exclude the duke of York, found in the earl of Shafteſbury's ſtudy iii. 424
Aſſociation for bringing in the late king James, forged by Younge and Blackhead. See ROCHESTER, Biſhop of.

* ASTLIN JOSEPH, iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

ASTON, RICHARD,
His argument for Macdaniel and others x. 441. See WILKES JOHN.

ATHEIST.
He pleads againſt a God, not that he diſbelieves a Deity, but would have it ſo iii. 223. vii. 481

*ATKINS, SAMUEL,
His examination before the committee of lords appointed to examine into the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey viii. 443
The depoſition of captain Atkins, upon which mr. Atkins was apprehended viii. 446
Mr. Bedlow's depoſition before the lords viii. 449
*His trial for the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, February 1678, 31 Car. II. ii. 792
*His indictment, as acceſſary with Green, Berry, and Hill ii. 792
*He pleads not guilty ii. 792
*His indictment, as principal with Welch and Le Faire ii. 793
*He pleads not guilty ii. 794
*The jury ſworn and charged with both indictments ii. 794
*Sir William Jones, Attor. Gen. his ſpeech ii. 794
Charles Atkins*'s evidence of the priſoner's expreſſing ſome reſentment againſt ſir Edmondbury Godfrey ii. 795
*And of his deſiring to ſpeak with one Child, who would afterwards have engaged him in the murder of a man ii. 796
Bedlow*'s evidence ii. 797
*He owns he had formerly declared that the priſoner was in the room where ſir Edmondbury Godfrey's body lay, and ſpake to him; but now cannot be poſitive whether it was the priſoner or not ii. 797
*Evidence that the priſoner diſappointed ſome perſons who expected his company that day ii. 798
*The priſoner proves to the ſatisfaction of the court, that he was at Greenwich at the time mentioned by Bedlow ii. 799
*He is acquitted ii. 800. See viii. 443, 452.

*ATKINS, WILLIAM,
*His trial at Stafford aſſizes, for high-treaſon, the 13th of Auguſt 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 968
*The indictment, for that being a ſubject of England, he accepted Popiſh orders, and afterwards reſided in England ii. 968
*Evidence of the priſoner's exerciſing his function ii. 969
*He makes no defence, and is convicted ii. 970

ATKYNS, EDWARD, Baron of the Exchequer,
His directions to the jury on the trial of Thwyng and Mary Preſſicks for treaſon iii. 87
Lord viſcount Stafford hoped that mr. baron Atkyns's reaſon why two witneſſes were not neceſſary to every overt act of treaſon, viz. "becauſe elſe a great many of thoſe perſons who have been already executed, muſt be acknowledged to have been unjuſtly cut off," was an argument which would not weigh with any body. He ſaid it ſtruck him, and he was ſorry to hear a judge advance any ſuch doctrine, and that his blood roſe at it iii. 205
He was examined as a witneſs on one of Oates's trials for perjury iv. 41

ATKYNS, ROBERT, of Lincoln's-inn,
(Afterwards a Judge in the Court of Common Pleas)
Opens the anſwer of William Prynne, who was informed againſt in the Star-Chamber for writing and publiſhing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 419
His argument in his defence i. 422

ATKYNS, ROBERT, Serjeant at Law.
Henry Burton prays he may be aſſigned one of his counſel i. 503
So does doctor John Baſtwick i. 502

ATKYNS, Sir ROBERT, Knight of the Bath, Juſtice C. P. and L. C. B. of the Exchequer,
*His remarks on lord Ruſſel's trial iii. 755, 784
His argument in the cauſe of Barnardiſton and Soame vii. 433
His argument on the pleadings in the cauſe of Godwin againſt ſir Edward Hale vii. 623
His animadverſions on the lord chief-juſtice Herbert's juſtification of the king's diſpenſing power vii. 625
Acknowledges himſelf to be the author of the arguments againſt the diſpenſing power iii. 782
He was very ſevere againſt Matthew Crone, a traitor x. 39. Ap. See ANDERSON LIONEL.

ATTACHMENTS.
There muſt be a motion to make the order of a judge a rule of court, if it becomes neceſſary to enforce the order by attachment xi. 333

* ATTAINDER.
*Bills of attainder univerſally exploded, where the party is forth-coming v. 98
Proceedings of the commons on the reverſal of ſir Thomas Armſtrong's attainder at the Revolution iii. 586
Manner of ſurrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 652*
Record of ſuch ſurrender ix. 664*
If it be a good reaſon to reverſe attainders, becauſe party had not benefit of law, ſame reaſon holds againſt enacting them v. 125
* Sir John Fenwick's was the firſt bill of attainder began in the houſe of commons, except the duke of Monmouth's v. 125
Lord Cromwell was the firſt man who promoted attainders in Henry VIII.'s reign, and the advice he gave his maſter for the ruin of others proved fatal to himſelf v. 125. vi. 475. See v. 83. 106
Attainders in Henry VIII.'s time cenſured xi. 25
Lord Ruſſel's attainder void iv. 172
Attainders for treaſon do not work diſinheriſon of heirs, or affect any other rights than only offenders for life Em. Pref. vi.
Act for the attainder of Seymour lord Sudley vii. 6
Act for annulling Algernon Sidney's attainder viii. 472
Viſcount Stafford's attainder was attempted to be reverſed 1 Jac. II. and a bill for that purpoſe paſſed the lords, but was dropped in the commons iii. 214 n.
* Bill of attainder againſt one for killing a foreign miniſter after a trial in an inferior court v. 105
Bills of attainder uſed to begin by impeachment, and then witneſſes were upon oath v. 111
Law ought to be the rule even in bills of attainder v. 125
Whether attainder of commoner can begin in houſe of peers v. 127
Algernon Sidney's attainder reverſed at Revolution iii. 824
The act of parliament for it given in evidence x. 42. Ap.
Earl of Strafford's attainder reverſed i. 764
Act for reverſing alderman Corniſh's attainder viii. 473
Act for reverſing lord Ruſſel's attainder viii. 471
Sir William Stanley's placing the crown upon the earl of Richmond's head, purged his attainder v. 679. See xi. 2
Trial on the identity of the perſon upon attainder cannot be put off by the common affidavit ix. 584
No peremptory challenge on ſuch a trial ix. 584
Legiſlative and judicial capacities united on paſſing bills of attainder vi. 405
Bills of attainder are like Siſyphus's ſtone, they have frequently rolled back upon thoſe who were the chief promoters of them vi. 475
The act of attainder of the earl of March paſſed, becauſe he had been inſtrumental in the attainder of another lord vi. 475
Attainder reverſed for error in entry of judgment, and reverſal confirmed in parliament iii. 752
Duke of Norfolk attainted xi. 20
Reaſons for reverſal of it xi. 20
Attainders of a new and unheard of nature paſſed in the parliament of 1539 xi. 25
Attainting perſons without trial is a breach of the moſt ſacred and unalterable rules of juſtice xi. 25
The parliament of 1539, attainted ſixteen perſons for treaſon xi. 25. See v. 86
The parliament of 1540, attainted ſeventeen perſons for treaſon xi. 25
The parliament of 1541, attainted fifteen perſons for treaſon xi. 25
Perſon attainted pleads that he is not the perſon mentioned in the record or act of parliament, a venire may be awarded returnable inſtanter, and a verdict againſt the defendant on ſuch iſſue is concluſive ix. 582, 583
Execution awarded againſt perſons attainted many years before ix. 583
And againſt perſons attainted by act of parliament, or by outlawry ix. 583, 584. x. 203
Act of parliament attainting a man of treaſon, removed by certiorari into Chancery, and ſent thence into B. R. by mittimus x. 203, 204
How far an attainted perſon is liable to civil ſuits, and how far under the protection of the law ix. 586, 587
Act for annulling the attainder of Alicia Liſle, widow vi. 130
Attainder of treaſon reverſed, ſome words being omitted in the entry of the judgment iii. 752. See ACTS OF PARLIAMENT. ATTERBURY FRANCIS, biſhop of Rocheſter. CAMERON ARCHIBALD. FENWICK ſir JOHN. GOWRIE, JOHN earl of. KELLY GEORGE. LAUD archbiſhop. MONCRIEF HUGH. OYER and TERMINER. PLUNKET JOHN. RATCLIFFE CHARLES. RECORDS. RUTHVEN ALEXANDER. SEYMOUR, THOMAS lord. STAFFORD earl of. STRAFFORD earl of.

ATTEMPT.
Attempt to rob or raviſh, puniſhable with death in Scotland ii. 629
See GILES JOHN, MITCHEL JAMES.
ATTERBURY, Dr. FRANCIS, Biſhop of Rocheſter,
Proceedings in parliament againſt him, John Plunket, and George Kelly, alias Johnſon, upon bills of pains and penalties for a treaſonable conſpiracy, May 1723, 9 Geo. I. vi. 335
* The names of the committee appointed by the houſe of commons vi. 335
* The report of the ſaid committee vi. 335
* The reſolutions of the houſe of commons on the ſaid report vi. 382
* The names of the committee of the houſe of lords vi. 382
* The report of the ſaid committee vi. 382
* The reſolutions of the houſe of lords on the ſaid report vi. 390
* The lord chancellor's ſpeech, returning the thanks of the houſe to the lords of the committee vi. 399
* The act to inflict pains and penalties on John Plunket vi. 390
* Mr. Kelly's ſpeech to the houſe of lords vi. 391
* The act to inflict pains and penalties on George Kelly, alias Johnſon vi. 397
* Sir Conſtantine Phipps's ſpeech for the biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 398
* Mr. Wynne's ſpeech for the biſhop vi. 406
* Sir Conſtantine Phipps's recapitulation of the evidence vi. 429
* Mr. Wynne's recapitulation vi. 430
* The biſhop's ſpeech in his own defence vi. 435
* Mr. Reeve's reply vi. 445
* Mr. Wearg's reply vi. 453
* The biſhop of Saliſbury's ſpeech for the bill vi. 458
* The duke of Wharton's ſpeech againſt the bill vi. 465
* The act to inflict pains and penalties on Francis lord biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 475
* The deprived and baniſhed biſhop embarks for France vi. 476
See ATTORNEY. SOLICITORS. WITNESSES.
ATTORNEY-GENERAL.
He is called upon by defendant to give his evidence in a cauſe wherein he was proſecutor for the crown xi. 283
Defends himſelf againſt charge of acting improperly in his office xi. 287
See THURLOW, EDWARD.
Sir F. Bacon the firſt attorney-general permitted to have a ſeat in the houſe of commons xi. 273
The office of attorney-general hath been the rock whereon many aſpiring lawyers have made a ſhipwreck of their virtue and of human nature xi. 273
Charles Pratt, eſquire, attorney-general to Geo. III. an illuſtrious inſtance of exception to the above obſervation x.* 483
The office of attorney-general of more profit than that of a puiſne judge iv. 166
Queen Elizabeth ſaid, the duty of the attorney-general was to proſecute for truth, as well as for the queen iv. 176
When mr. Egerton, of ſolicitor was made attorney-general i. 194
Charged with being an impeached traitor vii. 364
Information filed by ſolicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, good in law; ſo reſolved by the judges xi. 334. See BAIL. OUTLAWRY.
ATTORNIES AT LAW.
An attorney fined 1000l. bound to his good behaviour for ſeven years, and his name ſtruck out of the roll, without any offence alledged in his practice iii. 219. vii. 482, 483
Two attornies at New-York were, by order of court, excluded from practice, and their names ſtruck out of the rolls of attornies, for their contempt in ſigning exceptions that denied the legality of the judges their commiſſion ix. 281
Attorney fined for libelling a juſtice of peace ix. 313
Serjeant at law proſecuted for libelling an attorney ix. 311
The arguments of counſel in Ireland, with thoſe of the judges, and their opinion on the queſtion, "whether an attorney ſhall be allowed to diſcloſe and give in evidence what his client had told him in ſecret" ix. 379. n. 386, 387, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394. See ii. 828.
ATWOOD, WILLIAM,
His examination of ſir Edward Herbert's juſtification of the king's diſpenſing power vii. 630
Of counſel for Richard Baxter; and brow-beat and ill treated by lord chief juſtice Jefferies x. 39. App. See v. 421
* AUDLEY, MERVIN, Lord, and Earl of Caſtlehaven,
* His trial for a rape upon his own wife, and for ſodomy, Apr. 25, 1631, 7 Car. I. i. 388
* Opinions of the judges upon ſeveral points moved to them by the attorney-general before the trial i. 388
* Lord ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner i. 390
* His charge to the peers i. 390
* The counteſs's examination read againſt the earl i. 392
* Evidence that he held his lady, while his ſervant raviſhed her i. 392
* Evidence of the earl's committing ſodomy i. 392
* That he ſolicited his ſervants to lie with his daughter at twelve years old i. 392
* His daughter, the young lady Audley's examination read againſt him i. 392
* The earl objects to his lady's teſtimony, that ſhe was a lewd woman i. 393
* The earl is convicted, and ſentenced to be hanged; but is beheaded i. 394
* His behaviour at execution i. 395
* Fitzpatrick and Broadway, lord Audley's ſervants, tried and convicted; the one for buggery, and the other for a rape on lady Audley i. 396
* The perſon proſtituting himſelf adjudged guilty of felony as well as the actor i. 396
* The judges letter to the lord keeper about their caſe i. 396
* They are executed, and confeſs the crime i. 397
The indictment for the rape vi. 4. Ap.
The indictment for the ſodomy vi. 5. Ap.
Audley, Mervin lord, was beheaded, though he had judgment to be hanged iv. 129
AUDLEY, Sir THOMAS,
(Lord Chancellor, and Commiſſioner on the Trial of ſir Thomas More)
Omits to aſk the priſoner what he had to ſay why judgment ſhould not be pronounced againſt him, before he paſſed ſentence; of which omiſſion ſir Thomas reminded Audley i. 61. See iv. 199
AUTRE FOITS ACQUITE.
This plea unjuſtly over-ruled ii. 715, 831. iv. 673. See ix. 542
* AVERMENT.
Where words are plain and expreſs, there needs no averment iii. 1060
* See PLEADING and PLEAS.
* AVERY. See DAWSON, & al.
* AXTEL, DANIEL. iii. 369. See REGICIDES.
AYLESBURY-MEN,
Their caſe. See ADDRESSES. ASHBY and WHITE.
AXE.
A mayor in his mayoralty cauſed an uncommon axe to be made, to ſtrike off the heads of ſuch as ſhould reſiſt his will and pleaſure; and he was ſentenced by the parliament to be beheaded with his own axe i. 13. n.
No axe to be carried before a priſoner impeached i. 736

B.

* BABINGTON, ANTHONY,
* Chidiock Titchburn, Thomas Saliſbury, Robert Barnewell, John Savage, Henry Donn, and John Ballard, their arraignment, Sept. 1586. 28 Eliz. i. 128
* Indicted of high treaſon, for conſpiring the queen's death, and to ſet the queen of Scots at liberty i. 129
* They all confeſs the indictment i. 129, &c.
* After they pleaded guilty, their former confeſſions are read in court i. 130, &c.
* Being called to judgment, they quarrel among one another who were the firſt contrivers of the plot i. 133
* Their behaviour and cruel execution i. 140, 141. See EXECUTION.
BACON, Sir FRANCIS,
By command of queen Elizabeth publiſhed a declaration touching the treaſons of the earl of Eſſex and his accomplices vii. 47. n.
Reports the conference with the judges, in preſence of king and council, on the caſe between ſir Francis Goodwin and ſir John Forteſcue, concerning the election for the county of Bucks vii. 76
His ſpeech as counſel for Calvin, in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79
Argument of ſir Francis Bacon, king's ſolicitor, in lower houſe of parliament, for impoſitions by crown xi. 33
Speech of ſir Francis Bacon to the king, on preſenting petition of grievances by the commons xi. 65
His ſpeech on the trial of Robert lord Sanquhar vii. 89
Lord Sanquhar's execution was the nobleſt piece of juſtice, in lord Bacon's opinion, that ever came forth in any king's time xi. 112. See SANQUHAR lord.
His ſpeech on proſecution of James Whitelock xi. 106
His ſpeech in the caſe of William Talbot xi. 116
His ſpeech on proſecution of Mary counteſs of Shrewſbury xi. 109
His ſpeech in the caſe of Oliver St. John xi. 111
His charge in the caſe of Duels xi. 112
His ſpeech on the proceedings againſt ſir John Hollis, and others, in the Star-chamber, for traducing the public juſtice of the kingdom i. 333
Opens the evidence on the trial of Robert Carr, earl of Somerſet, as acceſſary before the fact, to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury i. 352
He obſerved to the noble priſoner, on his wiſhing a witneſs preſent becauſe he could clear up many obſcure things, that if he was preſent he could not be ſworn for reaſons of ſtate i. 364. See STATE LAW.
His ſpeech on the counteſs of Somerſet's confeſſion at her trial for ſame crime as her earl i. 349
The firſt attorney-general permitted to have a ſeat in the houſe of commons xi. 273
This very wiſe chancellor affirmed, that proverbs were the wiſdom of a people x. 208. Ap.
When lord chancellor Verulam, he told ſir Walter Raleigh poſitively, that upon his life, he had a ſufficient pardon for all that was paſſed, the king having, under his broad ſeal, made him admiral of his fleet, and given him power of the martial law over the officers and ſoldiers i. 227, 228
Obſerved that evidence was the lanthorn of juſtice i. 352
In the judgment of lord Bacon, an ambaſſador is not privileged in a conſpiracy againſt the ſtate ii. 8
Compares the benefit king Hen. VII. received from ſir William Stanley in Boſworth field, to the benefit of Chriſt, at once to ſave and crown xi. 2
A quotation from his "Advancement of Learning" concerning the judges iii. 763
His encomiums on the laws of England vi. 407
Wraynham was ſeverely puniſhed for ſlandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 109. ix. 314. See WRAYNHAM.
Said judges ſhould beware of hard conſtructions and ſtrained inferences, becauſe there was no worſe torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
The great luminary of ſciences, lord Bacon, exerciſed his eloquence to reconcile parliament to impoſitions by prerogative xi. 29
BACON, FRANCIS, Lord,
* Proceedings againſt him in parliament for bribery and corruption, Mar. 1620 i. 375
* Report from the committee of the houſe of commons i. 375

* A ſecond report of the ſaid committee i. 376
* Debates in the houſe of commons i. 377
* The report ſent up to the lords i. 378
* A conference between the two houſes i. 379
* The lords read a letter from lord Bacon i. 380
* And ſend an anſwer thereto i. 381
* Receive a further complaint from the commons i. 381
* State an account of the briberies and corruptions of the lord chancellor i. 381
* Who ſends a general confeſſion and ſubmiſſion i. 382
* Which is objected to by the lords i. 383
* Afterwards he makes a particular anſwer to each head of complaint i. 383
* And acknowledges it at the lords bar i. 383
* The commons demand judgment; which is pronounced by the lord chief juſtice Lea in his abſence, his attendance being excuſed on account of ſickneſs i. 387
His condemnation an inſtance of the virtue and integrity of the lords, in the abhorrence they ſhewed, and the puniſhment they inflicted on that great man's crimes vi. 497
Admonition to the earl of Middleſex, afterwards convicted of the ſame crime as his lordſhip vi. 597
* Was reduced to great want i. 387
* His death and burial i. 387
Extracts from his hiſtory of the reign of king Henry VII. xi. 2
Extracts from his lordſhip's works in quarto edition, 1740 xi. 79, 106, 109, 110, 111, 112.

BACON, FRANCIS,
One of Oliver Cromwell's judges, his anſwer to lord Maguire, on his demanding by what authority the court ſat i. 959. See viii. 341. n. 363

BAGSHAW, EDWARD,
The proſecution of him made one of the charges in the articles of impeachment againſt archbiſhop Laud i. 864

BAIL,
Cannot be granted ex gratiâ in ſodomy; reſolved by all the judges i. 388
* A peer committed by the houſe of peers cannot be bailed by the court of king's bench ii. 622, 754
* Bail not be taken (even in caſe of a peer) in a homine replegiando, till the party eſſoigned be produced iii. 544
* The bail cannot be a witneſs for the principal iii. 842
Refuſing ſufficient bail in caſes bailable by law, illegal, and an high breach of liberty of ſubject iii. 221, 223. vii. 484, 486
The mayor of London committed by the houſe of commons, in his magiſterial capacity, not bailable by the inferior courts in Weſtmininſter-hall xi. 335, 338
Whether perſons impriſoned by the king's particular command, be bailable? See DARNEL, Sir THOMAS.
Difference between bailable and repleviable vii. 153, 230
Defendant in execution upon an outlawry, after conviction of a miſdemeanor, in crown proſecutions, cannot be admitted to bail without the conſent of the attorney-general xi. 327
Several proceedings relating to bailing Bambridge ix. 227
The counſel's ſpeeches thereupon ix. 228, &c.
Lord chief juſtice Raymond, mr. baron Comyn, and mr. j. Probyn, opinions on the caſe ix. 229, &c. See DANBY, earl of. SHAFTESBURY, earl of.

BAILEY, the Biographer,
Extracts from his life of John Fiſher, biſhop of Rocheſter xi. 7

BAILEY, DAVID,
Proceedings againſt him for defaming the marquis of Anandale, Feb. 1703—4 viii. 195
He charges the duke of Queenſbury, and the marquis of Anandale, with enticing him to accuſe duke Hamilton of a plot viii. 195
Is examined upon interrogatories viii. 196
Refuſes to anſwer them viii. 196
The indictment for leeſing-making and defamatory libelling viii. 197
His anſwer to the indictment viii. 198
The queen's advocate's reply viii. 199
Found guilty by all the privy counſellors preſent, and baniſhed for life viii. 200
Is ſet at liberty by the parliament, on finding bail viii. 200
Several letters relating to the plot mentioned viii. 201
The letter to duke Hamilton for which he was indicted viii. 203
To earl Eglington, preſident of the council viii. 204

* BAILLIE, ROBERT, of Jerviſwood,
* His trial for high treaſon before the earl of Linlithgow, lord juſtice-general of the kingdom of Scotland, and other the lords of juſticiary, at Edinburgh, the 23d of December, 1684 iii. 1095
* The indictment, for conſpiring the death of his majeſty, and endeavouring to excite an inſurrection and rebellion iii. 1095
* The priſoner can demand no time to prepare for his trial in Scotland iii. 1097
* Two noblemen and thirteen commoners upon the aſſize, or jury iii. 1097
* An accomplice, who had been indicted and confeſſed the crime, admitted a witneſs iii. 1099
* Earl of Tarras depoſes, that the priſoner went to London to concert meaſures with the Engliſh; and that Argyle was to have 10,000l. of the Engliſh to begin an inſurrection in Scotland iii. 1099
* Carſtare's evidence as to lord Ruſſel's being concerned iii. 1104
* Mr. Sheppard privy to the deſign iii. 1105
* Dr. Owen, and mr. Mead of Stepney, concerned in it iii. 1106
* Sheppard's examination read concerning the Scots coming to London to ſettle matters with the Engliſh iii. 1106
* Sir George Mackenzie, lord advocate, his ſpeech iii. 1107
* The priſoner is convicted iii. 1110
* The manner of pronouncing judgment in Scotland iii. 1111

BALDWIN, Mrs.
Ordered to be proſecuted for ſelling ſome of Fuller's libels. See FULLER WILLIAM.

BALDWYN, Sir SAMUEL, King' Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of William Ireland and others, for treaſon ii. 699

* BALLARD, JOHN, i. 108. See BABINGTON.

BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord,
The whole proceedings in the houſe of peers, upon the indictment againſt him for high-treaſon, in levying war againſt his majeſty, July and Auguſt, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 587
The lord high-ſteward's proceſſion upon his trial ix. 590*
His commiſſion ix. 590*, 591*
Certiorari and return ix. 591*
Captions of the indictment ix. 591*
The indictment ix. 593*
Copy of commitment read ix. 594*
The lord ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner ix. 595*
Lord Balmerino mentions a defect in the indictment previous to pleading to it ix. 596*
He pleads not guilty ix. 596*
Sir Richard Lloyd, king's counſel, opens the indictment ix. 596*
Mr. ſerjeant Skinner, king's ſerjeant, opens the caſe ix. 597*
Mr. attorney-general (Dudley Ryder) his ſpeech before evidence ix. 598*
Sir John Strange calls and examines the witneſſes ix. 599*
Houſe adjourned on a point of law ix. 606*
The judges of opinion, that it is not neceſſary to prove the overt-act to be committed on the particular day laid in the indictment ix. 607*
He is found guilty ix. 609*
His lordſhip prayed counſel to an objection he made to the trial ix. 611*
The houſe adjourns thereon ix. 612*
He waves his objection ix. 613*
Lord ſteward's ſpeech previous to his paſſing judgment ix. 613*
Account of his behaviour at his execution x. 183. Ap. See x. 179. Ap.
His genuine ſpeech on that ſolemn occaſion x. 185. Ap.

* BALMERINO, JOHN Lord,
* His trial, for libelling his majeſty and the government, at Edinburgh, the 3d of December, 1634, 10 Car. I. before William earl of Errol, great conſtable of Scotland, lord juſtice-general, and ſir Robert Spotiſwood, ſir John Hay, and ſir James Learmouth, aſſeſſors to the lord juſtice-general i. 429
* The indictment i. 429
* Concealing the author, as well as compoſing the libel, capital i. 431
* The petition, or libel i. 433
* The kirk is apprehenſive of being new modelled i. 433
* That the king favoured Arminianiſm, and admitted Papiſts to ſit in parliament i. 434
* Counſel aſſigned the priſoner i. 435
* They have liberty of peruſing the depoſitions againſt him i. 435
* His counſel manage his defence i. 435
* The king's counſel reply i. 443
* The priſoner's counſel anſwer; and the counſel on both ſides debate i. 459, &c.
* His exceptions to the indictment over-ruled i. 470
* The aſſize (or jury) empannelled, conſiſting of eight lords and ſeven commoners i. 470
A juror challenged, for that he had prejudged the priſoner i. 471
* The libel and depoſitions produced in evidence againſt the priſoner i. 471
* The counſel for the priſoner make their obſervations on the evidence i. 478
* The priſoner is convicted i. 480
* Sentence paſſed; but he is pardoned i. 480

BALMERINOTH, Lord,
His trial for high-treaſon, at St. Andrew's, 7 Ja. I. vii. 85
Confeſſes writing a letter to the pope, and getting the king to ſign it, among other diſpatches, by ſurprize vii. 85
Is found guilty, but afterwards pardoned, and reſtored to his blood and eſtate vii. 86

BAMBRIDGE, THOMAS, Warden of the Fleet,
Report of the committee of the houſe of commons againſt him ix. 107
His trial for murder, May 22, 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 145
Deſires the indictment may be read in Latin ix. 146
Mr. Holland opens the indictment againſt him ix. 146
Serjeant Cheſhire's ſpeech on the ſame ſide ix. 146
Evidences againſt him ix. 147
Judge Page ſums up the evidence ix. 150
Found not guilty ix. 151
Proceedings againſt him and Richard Corbett, previous to the trial on the appeal for the murder of Robert Caſtel ix. 151
Trial of them on the appeal, at Guildhall, London, Jan. 26, 1729-30, 2 Geo. II. ix. 152
Mr. Filmer opens the declaration ix. 152
Mr. Reeves on the ſame ſide ix. 152
Mr. Lee alſo for the appellant ix. 153
The evidence againſt them ix. 154, &c.
Serjeant Darnell, ſerjeant Eyre, mr. Fazakerly, mr. Kettelby, mr. Strange, croſs-examined the witneſſes for the priſoners ix. 155, &c.
Serjeant Darnell's ſpeech for the defendants ix. 167
Serjeant Eyre's ſpeech on the ſame ſide ix. 168
The evidence for them ix. 169, &c.
Mr. Strange ſtates a point of law, whether Caſtel was unlawfully taken, and unlawfully confined ix. 176
Lord Raymond ſaid, tho' lawfully taken, he ought not to be unlawfully confined ix. 176
His opinion that counſel for the crown can't reply ix. 177. See REPLY.
Lord Raymond ſums up the evidence ix. 177

Found not guilty ix. 181
Mr. Kettelby moves for damages, but the court would not allow any; but diſcharge the priſoners ix. 181. See BAIL.

BAMBRIDGE, THOMAS,
His trial for felony Dec. 3, 1729, 3 Geo. II. ix. 234
Mr. Holland opens the evidence ix. 235
Serjeant Cheſhire on the ſame ſide ix. 235
Attorney-general, ſir P. Yorke, on the ſame ſide ix. 236
Who ſaid it would appear as a colour of diſtreſs to commit a fraud ix. 238
Bambridge replied, You mean in fraudem legis ix. 238
Evidence againſt him ix. 238, &c.
Bambridge declines making any defence, but hoped, if any point of law ſhould ariſe, it might be reſerved ix. 248
Lord chief juſtice Eyre ſums up the evidence ix. 248
He is acquitted ix. 251
One of the grand jury very importuning to the reſt to find the bill againſt Bambridge, laid violent hands upon himſelf for the injury done him ix. 229

BANBURY, Lord. See KNOWLES, CHARLES.

BANISHMENT.
In 2 Hen. IV. lord chief juſtice Belknap's wife brought a writ without naming her huſband therein, becauſe he was baniſhed vii. 229, xi. 101. See ATTERBURY, FRANCIS. CLARENDON, Earl of. LILBURNE, JOHN.

BANKER's CASE.
The caſe of the Bankers in court of Exchequer, and afterwards in Exchequer-chamber, A.D. 1690, 1696, and 1699 xi. 136
The record xi. 138
Extract from Freeman's reports xi. 138
Extract from third modern report xi. 138
Argument of lord chief juſtice Treby in error in the Exchequer-chamber, xi. 141
The argument of lord chief juſtice Holt xi. 143
The argument of the lord keeper Somers on his giving judgment xi. 145
The proceedings on error in parliament from the Exchequer-chamber xi. 160

BANKRUPT and BANKRUPTCY.
Inſtance of a tradeſman who had failed, becoming a general in the army, and paying all his creditors the deficiencies of their demands x. 117. Ap.
Inſtance of a perſon becoming bankrupt, and though colluſively, whereby, in fact, he was no bankrupt, yet executed for concealing his effects xi. 68, 69, 96

BANKS, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General,
His argument for the king againſt John Hampden, eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 586, 594, 603
His ſpeech on the trial of Thomas Harriſon for reflecting on the judicial character of ſir Richard Hutton, juſtice C. B. for his opinion in the cauſe of ſhip-money, 1638, 14 Car. I. i. 721
On proſecution of William Prynne and others for ſeveral libels, in Star-chamber, 14 June, 1637, 13 Car. I. i. 483

* BANNANTYNE, JOHN, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

BAR.
Sentence pronounced next day, though priſoner tried at bar ii. 789
Priſoner tried at bar for treaſon, receives ſentence ſame day ii. 659. See PLEADING and PLEAS.

BARBADOES.
The caſe of ſeveral grantees of that iſland ſtated viii. 401

BARBOT, JOHN,
His trial at St. Chriſtopher's for murder, Jan. 5, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 139
The indictment againſt him x. 139
Priſoner moves for counſel to aſſiſt him in matters of law, as well as fact x. 139
Court ordered him counſel as to points of law to be ſtated by himſelf; and to examine his own, and croſs-examine the witneſſes for the crown x. 140
Mr. Kerr opens the indictment x. 141
Solicitor-general (of the iſland) on the ſame ſide x. 141
Evidence againſt the priſoner x. 147, &c.
Priſoner's defence x. 164
Witneſſes for him x. 165
Mr. Frye, counſel for the priſoner, gave the priſoner ſome papers for his defence; and he went on, and cited ſome caſes x. 168
Solicitor-general's reply x. 171
Mr. Kerr ſays, the caſes cited by the priſoner are not in any book of authority extant x. 174
The preſident ſums up the evidence to the jury x. 174
Found guilty x. 180
Priſoner addreſſes the court x. 180
His paper delivered at the place of execution x. 182
Some account of the priſoner x. 182

* BARKER, HUMPHREY, iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM.

BARKSTEAD, ———, Colonel,
One of the attainted regicides, ſeized at Delft and brought to England viii. 370
His ſpeech at his execution viii. 379

BARNARD, WILLIAM,
Tried on ſtat. 9 Geo. I. chap. 22. (commonly called the Black Act) for ſending a letter in a fictitious name, to Charles duke of Marlborough, demanding a genteel ſupport for life, May 1758, 31 Geo. II. x. 447
The indictment x. 447
Serjeant Davy opens the caſe x. 448
Duke of Marlborough, and the other evidence, to prove the fact, croſs-examined x. 451, &c.
Priſoner's counſel object to part of the duke's evidence, but over ruled x. 452
Priſoner's defence and evidence x. 456, &c.
Mr. Serjeant Davy's reply x. 460
Acquitted x. 462
Indicted a ſecond time, for feloniouſly ſending another letter to Charles duke of Marlborough, ſigned F. demanding two or three hundred pounds; but no evidence appearing, he was acquitted x. 462

BARNARDISTON, Sir SAMUEL, Bart.
His trial upon an information for a miſdemeanour, the 14th of February, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 933. vi. 46
Upon oath made of his being ſick, his recognizance is reſpited, and he is admitted to plead by attorney iii. 933
The information opened, for ſcandalizing the government in ſeveral letters, or libels, written to his correſpondents, wherein he endeavours to perſuade them, that the plot againſt the king and the duke, of which my lord Ruſſel, Sidney, &c. had been convicted, was a ſham iii. 934
Sir Thomas Jenner's ſpeech before evidence iii. 934
Proved that he owned the letters before the council iii. 935
And that they were laid, among his other letters, to go to the poſt-houſe iii. 935
The letters read iii. 937
Mr. Williams's ſpeech for the defendant iii. 938
The chief juſtice Jefferies his obſervations on the evidence iii. 940
Mentions in his charge a contemptuous expreſſion the defendant had uſed of him iii. 941
The defendant is convicted, and receives ſentence iii. 942
The record vi. 46. Ap.
His cloſe impriſonment, as it was againſt law, ſo it was without precedent iv. 165
His fine was monſtrouſly extravagant Em. Pref. xii. See iii. 942
Proceedings between him and Sir William Soame, Sheriff of Suffolk, for a double return, 26 Car. II. 1674 vii. 428
Copy of the record in the King's-Bench vii. 428
Plaintiff recovers 800l. damages vii. 430
Upon a writ of error in the Exchequer-chamber, ſix judges for reverſing the judgment, and two for affirming it vii. 431
Judge Ellis's argument for affirming the judgment vii. 431
That the non-uſer of the action does not take away the action vii. 432
That the acts of parliament, though they may give a remedy, take not away the remedy given by common law vii. 432, 440
Sir Robert Atkins's argument for it vii. 433
The objection of its belonging to the juriſdiction of the houſe of commons, conſidered vii. 436, 448
What things concerning the parliament the court of King's-Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437
Its being a new action conſidered vii. 438, 447
Lord chief juſtice North's argument againſt the judgment vii. 441
That the ſheriff is, in this caſe, a judge; therefore no action will lie againſt him vii. 442
The words Falſo, Malitioſe, &c. conſidered vii. 450
The reverſal affirmed in the houſe of peers vii. 452
Five lords proteſt againſt it vii. 453
Thoſe who argued againſt this judgment in the King's Bench, were made judges, and they themſelves afterwards determined the caſe upon error, in the Exchequer-chamber viii. 109

* BARNES, HENRY, v. 576. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

* BARNWELL, ROBERT, i. 121. See BABINGTON, & al.

BARONETAGE.
Of its inſtitution vi. 804

BARONIES. See PEERAGE and PEERS.

* BAROVERSE, Sir JAMES, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.

BARRATRY.
Of the indictment on a proſecution for barratry iv. 191

BARTON, ELIZABETH,
The holy maid of Kent xi. 117. See FISHER, JOHN, Biſhop of Rocheſter. STANLEY, Sir WILLIAM. MOORE, Sir THOMAS.

BASTILE.
A ſtate priſoner in the baſtile in France, pays not, nor is ſqueezed out of any thing for his lodging, meat, drink, or eaſe, nor is loaded with irons, nor put into a dungeon, or otherwiſe ill uſed in priſon; but he is always handſomely provided for, and allowed a liberal ſubſiſtence by the government, according to his rank and degree x. 75. Ap.

BASTWICK, Dr. JOHN,
* Tried in the Star-chamber, with Henry Burton and William Prynne, for ſeveral libels, June 14, 1637, 13 Car. I. i. 481
* Counſel refuſing to ſign their anſwers, they deſire they may be accepted ſigned by themſelves; which is refuſed i. 482
* They not anſwering, the charge is taken pro confeſſo i. 483
* The titles of their books i. 483
* They receive ſentence i. 486
* Archbiſhop Laud's ſpeech i. 486
* Their crime declared to be finding fault with the common prayer, and the faſts appointed by authority i. 488
* Their diſcourſes to the people, and with one another, as they ſtand in the pillory i. 495
Their petitions to the long parliament i. 502
* Upon their petitions to the parliament, their ſentence is reverſed i. 504

* BATEMAN, CHARLES,
* His trial the 9th of December, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 162, 204
* He deſires his trial may be put off, having had no notice; but is told he had notice enough, being tried upon an indictment of the preceding ſeſſions; and that notice was a favour which the priſoner could not claim iv. 162
* The indictment for high treaſon in conſpiring the death of the king, and promiſing to aſſiſt in ſeizing of the king's perſon, the Tower, &c. iv. 162

* A witneſs is permitted to be examined after the evidence ſummed up iv. 164

* The priſoner convicted; ſentence paſſed on him, and executed iv. 164. See viii. 460.

Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 204

BATES, JOHN.

Caſe of impoſitions on information in Exchequer-chamber, by attorney-general againſt John Bates, merchant, Mich. Term. 4 Jac. I. 1604 xi. 29

The matter was divers times argued at the bar, and on the bench xi. 30

Robert Clark, baron of the Exchequer, his argument xi. 30

Sir Thomas Fleming, chief baron, his argument xi. 31

BATHURST, CHARLES, Eſq.

His petition to the houſe of commons, ſetting forth the lord Wharton's proceedings againſt him in the houſe of peers viii. 175

Lord Wharton, in a petition to the lords, by way of appeal, begs to have an order of the court of Exchequer, to which he was no party, diſcharged, and the record taken off the file viii. 175

Some lords proteſt againſt it, as giving themſelves an original juriſdiction viii. 176

Mr. Bathurſt not allowed to make uſe of the record, as evidence in the trial of an iſſue, directed by the houſe of peers viii. 177

Reſolved by the commons, that the lords taking cognizance of, and proceeding upon lord Wharton's petition, is unwarrantable viii. 177

That the ſubject has undoubted right to make uſe of ſuch record viii. 178

The lords reſolve ſuch reſolution of the commons to be an uſurpation of a judicature to which they have no pretence viii. 178

BATHURST, Hon. HENRY, King's Counſel,

His ſpeech on ſtating the caſe and evidence on the trial of Mary Blandy, for parricide, 25 Geo. II. A. D. 1753 x. 3

His reply on the ſame trial x. 24

BATHURST, HENRY Earl, Lord Chancellor,

His proceſſion as lord high ſteward on the trial of the ducheſs of Kingſton xi. 198

His grace's commiſſion xi. 198

His addreſs to the noble priſoner previous to the evidence xi. 200

His ſpeech to her, on pronouncing the judgment of her peers xi. 260

BATTERY.

Ex officio information for riot, aſſault, and battery iii. 629. See vi. 40.

BATTRAGH, WILLIAM,

His trial for treaſon, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 555

Evidence againſt him ix. 555

Found guilty ix. 557

Reprieved ix. 559

* BAYARD, Colonel NICHOLAS,

* His trial at New-York for high-treaſon, Feb. 19, 1701-2, 13 W. III. v. 419

* Matters introductory to his trial v. 419

* The attorney-general's opinion that he was not criminal v. 420

* The act upon which he was tried v. 421

* Some of the grand jury diſmiſſed, who were ſuſpected of tenderneſs to him v. 422

* The indictment found againſt him v. 422

* He objects by his counſel, that twelve jurors did not agree to find it v. 423

* Which is over-ruled v. 424

* The indictment v. 424

* The priſoner deſires two clerks to take minutes; but is denied v. 425

* He pleads not guilty v. 425

* Objection made by the priſoner's counſel, that the precept to ſummon the petit jury was not under the hands and ſeals of the commiſſioners: whereupon the court adjourned, and another precept was awarded v. 426

* His trial begins v. 427

* The priſoner convicted v. 435

* He moves in arreſt of judgment v. 436

* Sentence paſſed on him as a traitor v. 440

BAYNES, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,

Objects to ſome of the pannel, as being related to William Hales, who was tried for forgery x. 94. Ap.

His ſpeech in favour of William Hales x. 113. Ap.

For the king, on the proſecution of John Gibbon x. 121. Ap.

For the defendant Richard Elles x. 129, 135. Ap.

* BAYNTON, SARAH. See SWENSDEN.

BAXTER, RICHARD,

His trial for publiſhing a ſeditious libel, May 30, 1685. 1 Jac. II. x. 37. Ap.

The indictment x. 37. Ap.

The chief juſtice Jefferys' cruel treatment of him x. 38. Ap.

His counſel, mr. Wallop, mr. Williams, mr. Rotheram, mr. Atwood, and mr. Phipps, were brow-beat and ill-treated by the chief juſtice x. 39. Ap.

Mr. Baxter not ſuffered to make a defence x. 39. Ap.

Found guilty x. 40. Ap.

Fined 500 marks, and to lie in priſon till he paid it, and give ſecurity for his good behaviour for ſeven years; afterwards pardoned, and fine remitted x. 40. Ap.

Died December 8, 1691 x. 40. Ap.

* BEASLEY, RICHARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

* BEAUCHAMP, JOHN, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.

BECKET, THOMAS.

A brief of his troubles, or rather treaſons xi. 72

BEDFORD, Earl of,

Proceedings againſt the earl of Bedford, the earl of Clare, the earl of Somerſet, ſir Robert Cotton, John Selden, Oliver Saint John, and others, in the Star-chamber, May 29, 6 Car. I. 1630, for publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous writing xi. 121

The ſubſtance of the information contained in "A propoſition for his majeſty's ſervice to bridle the impertinence of parliaments" xi. 121

The effect of the earl of Somerſet's anſwer xi. 123

The reſt of the defendants deny the inuendos in the information xi. 123

Subſtance of the depoſitions read in the cauſe xi. 123

Court ordered by his majeſty to proceed no further on account of the birth of a prince xi. 123, 124

The propoſition ordered to be burnt, and the proceedings againſt the defendants to be taken off the file xi. 124

BEDFORD,

The author of "Hereditary Right," a ſeditious libel, ſome account of him vi. 1. viii. 682. n.

* BEDLE, EDWARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

BEDLOW.

His depoſition at the committee of lords appointed to examine into the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey viii. 449

His examination, taken in his laſt ſickneſs, by ſir Francis North, 1680 viii. 460

Accuſes the duke of York of being in the plot viii. 460

Captain Bedlow's and dr. Oates's articles exhibited to the king and council, againſt lord chief juſtice Scroggs vii. 476

BEHEADING.

The king iſſues writ to ſheriffs to only behead lord Stafford iii. 214

Sheriffs apply to the lords for directions, who declare the king's writ ought to be obeyed iii. 215

The ſentence of burning altered to beheading, on precedent iv. 129. xi. 12

"Maiden" is the name of the inſtrument uſed in Scotland for beheading criminals ii. 435

Though the judgment in felony is always "to be hanged by the neck;" yet the party may be beheaded iv. 129. See AUDLEY MERVIN, lord. SOMERSET, duke of.

BELISARIUS.

The ducheſs of Kingſton obſerved to the lords, in her ſpeech on her defence for bigamy, that ſhe had reſted on the ſeat where the poor blind Beliſarius is ſaid to have aſked charity of every paſſenger, after having conquered the Goths, Vandals, Africans, and Perſians xi. 252

* BELKNAP, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice, C. B.

Was arreſted ſitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and ſent priſoner to the Tower i. 5 and n.

Tried for high-treaſon, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14

Confeſſes, and begs mercy i. 8. n. 14

Life ſaved, but tranſported to the village of Dromore, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, not to live as a juſtice, but as a baniſhed offender, and not to go out of town above the ſpace of two miles, upon pain of death i. 14 and n. vii. 229

His learning gave him honour, but his villany made his exit by a rope iii. 223. vii. 481

Lord Egerton ſaid, that Belknap ſuffered rather by the potency of his enemies, than the greatneſs of his offence vii. 238. * See BRAMBRE.

* BELLAMY, JEROME, i. 139. See ABINGTON, & al.

BELWOOD, ROGER,

Of counſel for the crown, on the proſecution of Lionel Anderſon, &c. ii. 997

BENEVOLENCE.

Benevolences, loans, and gifts declared contrary to law by petition of right xi. 29, 110. See St. JOHN, OLIVER.

* BENNET, RALPH, iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM.

BERKLEY, ROBERT, Serjeant at Law,

His argument for return of hab. corp. in William Stroud's caſe vii. 221

BERKLEY, Sir ROBERT, Juſtice B. R.

His argument, opinion, and reaſons for the king againſt John Hampden, eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 619

Articles of impeachment againſt him, for the above opinion i. 709. vii. 488. viii. 566

Mr. Pierpont's ſpeech thereon i. 713

Cenſured the juſtices Hutton and Croke for ſubſcribing their opinion in ſhip-money, for conformity only, becauſe the major number of the judges had ſubſcribed; and that it was a baſe and unworthy thing for any man to give his hand contrary to his heart; this cenſure alſo is part of one of the articles of impeachment againſt him i. 711

Another charge was for ſaying openly in court, "that there was a rule of law, and a rule of government; and that many things which might not be done by the rule of law, might be done by the rule of government." i. 711. See ASHLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law. See alſo ii. 209. vii. 250.

BERNARDI, JOHN, Major,

Proceedings againſt him, Counter, Blackburn, Caſſels, Chambers, and Meldrum, on account of the aſſaſſination plot, in king William's reign x. 64. Ap.

Theſe proceedings were wrote by the major, after he had been confined a ſtate priſoner thirty-three years in Newgate x. 64. Ap.

Hiſtory of Bernardi's life x. 64. Ap.

Served in the Dutch wars, loſt an eye at the ſiege of Maeſtricht, and ſhot through the arm x. 64. Ap.

Went to king James II. at St. Germains, and then ſent to Ireland x. 65. Ap.

Afterwards to Scotland, where he had like to have been ſeized x. 65. Ap.

Came to London, ſet out for Flanders, ſeized at Colcheſter x. 65. Ap.

Remained in cuſtody ſeven months, then admitted to bail x. 66. Ap.

Grand jury of Eſſex returned the bill againſt him Ignoramus x. 66. Ap.

Met captain Rookwood, and ſeized with him x. 67. Ap.

A proclamation, with 1000l. reward, came out againſt him; committed to Newgate x. 67. Ap.

Act of parliament to confine them all x. 67. Ap.

On the ſuſpenſion of the hab. corp. act expiring, Blackburn, who was alſo a cloſe priſoner in Newgate on account of the aſſaſſination conſpiracy, entered his prayer, at the then next ſeſſions and term, to be tried or admitted to bail; and he was bailed out and diſcharged x. 68. Ap.

Bernardi, Counter, Caſſels, Meldrum, and Chambers, make ſeveral motions by their counſel, in different reigns, to be diſcharged, but never could ſucceed x. 68. Ap.

Blackburn, after being bailed out and diſcharged, was taken up again upon the ſame account, and ſent again to _Newgate_ x. 68, 69. Ap.
Chambers, being brought up by _hab. corp._ to the court of _King's-Bench_, having entered his prayer in order to be bailed, but one of his bail refuſing to ſwear himſelf worth 500l. was remanded to _Newgate_, where he remained till his death x. 69, 71. Ap.
Captain _Counter_ was releaſed by queen _Anne_ x. 69, 71. Ap.
Meldrum died in priſon x. 71. Ap.
Bernardi's commitment to _Newgate_ by earl _Shrewſbury_, without oath x. 71. Ap.
His ſeveral petitions to the king and queen x. 71, 72. Ap.
Bernardi, _Blackburn_, and _Caſſels_ were unjuſtly charged with having ſpirited away an evidence that could have proved them concerned in the plot for aſſaſſinating king _William_ III. which though falſe, the report of it turned much to their prejudice; for the ſame was the ground and foundation for the parliament paſſing the firſt act for their confinement x. 75. Ap. See _FENWICK_, Sir _JOHN_.
Bernardi died in _Newgate_ at the age of 82, after having been a ſtate priſoner above 40 years x. 76. Ap.

* _BERRY, HENRY_,
* Account of his behaviour on the day of execution, for the murder of Sir _E. Godfrey_ viii. 442. * See ii. 760. _GREEN, ROBERT_, & al.
BERRY, JOHN. See _MACDANIEL STEPHEN_, & al.

BERWICK, JOHN,
His trial for treaſon, _July_ 17, 1746, 19 _Geo._ II. ix. 539
Evidence againſt him ix. 559
Mr. j. _Foſter_ ſtates his caſe ix. 559
Motions in arreſt of judgment in his caſe, and the other rebels ix. 560
Over-ruled ix. 560
Found guilty, and executed at _Kennington-common_ ix. 560
Some account of him ix. 560

* _BETHEL, SLINGSBY_, Eſq.
* His trial for aſſault and battery at an election, _Oct._ 5, 1681, 33 _Car._ II. iii. 413
* The indictment iii. 413
* Mr. _Holt_ opens the evidence iii. 413
* Evidence of the aſſault and battery iii. 414
* Mr. _Thompſon_'s ſpeech for the defendant iii. 415
* The defendant's evidence contradicts the king's witneſſes iii. 415
* Mr. _Thompſon_ ſums up for the defendant iii. 417
* Mr. _Holt_ for the king iii. 417
* The defendant convicted iii. 417
* He is fined five marks iii. 418
* _BETHEL, SLINGSBY_, Eſq. iii. 630. See _PILKINGTON_, & al.

BEYOND SEA.
Maſter may covenant with ſervant that he ſhall ſerve him beyond ſea iv. 186
Maſter may ſend his ſervant beyond ſea by agreement iv. 186. See xi. 348

* BIGAMY.
Indictment for bigamy v. 610. See ADULTERY. _CRIM. CON._ _FIELDING, ROBERT._ _GERMAN_ PRINCESS. _GREY FORD_, Lord. _KINGSTON_, Ducheſs Dowager of. * MARRIAGE. _MODERS, MARY._ _NAIRN, KATHERINE._ _OGILVIE, PATRICK._ POLYGAMY.

BILL. See GRAND JURY.

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.
The form and ceremony with which ſuch bills are acknowledged by the judges xi. 307, 308

* BILLS OF ATTAINDER. See ATTAINDER.

BINKS, Doctor,
His ſermon on _Jan._ 30, 1701—2, cenſured by the lords viii. 81

* BISHOP of _LONDON._ See _COMPTON_, Dr. _HENRY._
* BISHOP of _ROCHESTER._ See _ATTERBURY_, Dr. _FRANCIS._ _FISHER, JOHN._ _SPRATT_, Doctor _THOMAS._

* BISHOPS.
* Impugning their authority adjudged to be an impugning the queen's authority in cauſes eccleſiaſtical i. 175
* Archbiſhop refuſing to conſecrate one elected biſhop, incurs a _præmunire_ i. 850
* Biſhops derive their power in temporals from the prince; but in matters purely ſpiritual from _Chriſt_, though they may not exerciſe their ſpiritual power without leave of the prince i. 883
* The title of Holineſs given to the primitive biſhops i. 871
* Epiſcopacy _jure divino_ i. 915
* A ſchiſmatick may not be a witneſs againſt his biſhop, by the civil law i. 934
* The biſhops excluded from ſitting in the houſe of lords, by act of parliament ii. 337
* Biſhops may vote in matters previous to the trial in capital caſes ii. 752. iii. 101
A biſhop who is a peer in right of the church, muſt plead his peerage that he is one of the peers of the realm, for he hath no letters patent viii. 59
Biſhops to be tried for treaſons or felonies, at the king's ſuit, by an ordinary jury viii. 360
The lords ſpiritual omitted in the enacting part of bills of attainder v. 119
In the time of king _Hen._ I. the pope uſurped the donation of biſhopricks xi. 71

* BISHOPS, the SEVEN,
* Their trial iv. 304. See v. 749.
* They are brought by _habeas corpus_ from the _Tower_ to the _King's-Bench_-bar, the firſt day of _Trinity-Term_, 1688 iv. 304
* The return of the _habeas corpus_ read, in which is recited the warrant for their commitment iv. 304
* Mr. attorney prays the information may be read iv. 305
* The biſhops counſel move they may be diſcharged before it be read; for that they were not legally committed iv. 306
* 1ſt, Becauſe the return ſays they were committed by the lords of the council, but not in council; and that the lords have no power to commit but in council iv. 306
* 2dly, That a peer cannot be committed for a miſdemeanour iv. 312
* Ruled, that every commitment ſhall be preſumed to be purſuant to the power of the perſon committing iv. 311
* If the proceſs, whereby one is brought into court, be illegal, the party cannot be charged with an information iv. 312
* A peer may be committed for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace iv. 315
* The making a ſeditious libel deemed an actual breach of the peace iv. 316
* Ruled, that the information ſhould be read; and it was read in _Latin_ iv. 318
* The declaration for liberty of conſcience recited iv. 317
* Order of council for the reading and diſtributing it iv. 319
* The biſhops petition iv. 320
* Mr. attorney prays the biſhops may plead to the information iv. 320
* The biſhops counſel inſiſt on an imparlance iv. 320
* Sir _Samuel Aſtry_ teſtifies the courſe of the court to be, that where one appears upon a ſummons, he ſhall have an imparlance; but if he comes in cuſtody, or on a recognizance, he ſhall plead preſently iv. 324
* In capital caſes, the party accuſed muſt plead preſently iv. 323
* Ruled, that my lords the biſhops plead immediately iv. 328
* They offer a plea in paper, being the ſubſtance of what their counſel had already inſiſted on iv. 329
* The plea is rejected as frivolous, and they are ordered to plead over; whereupon they plead not guilty iv. 332
* The court directs 48 to be returned on the jury, and the jury to be ſtruck in preſence of the attorneys on both ſides iv. 332
* The archbiſhop enters into a recognizance of 200l. and the other biſhops in 100l. each for their appearance iv. 333
* The trial comes on _Friday_ the 29th of _June_, 1688 iv. 333
* The names of the jury iv. 333
* Mr. attorney, ſir _Thomas Powis_, ſtates the caſe, and opens the evidence for the king iv. 334
* The declarations under the broad ſeal given in evidence iv. 335
* Proof is inſiſted on, that they were the ſame with the printed declaration iv. 336
* The biſhops hands to the petition attempted to be proved iv. 337
* Similitude of hands, whether proof of a man's hand-writing in criminal matters iv. 342
* And if it be, whether the witneſs himſelf be judge of the likeneſs; or whether ſome of the party's writing ought to be produced in court for the jury to judge of it iv. 342
* The court divided about the ſufficiency of the proof; and directed the king's counſel to produce other proof of the biſhops hands iv. 345
* Mr. _Blathwayt_ depoſes, they acknowledged their hands before the council iv. 346
* The biſhops counſel examine Mr. _Blathwayt_, if the king did not promiſe that their owning their hands ſhould be no prejudice to them iv. 348
* He depoſes that the king made no ſuch promiſe iv. 348
* The petition not proved to be framed in the county where the offence was laid; and matters of crime being local, it was inſiſted, that the defendants muſt be preſumed to be innocent iv. 349
* Held not neceſſary to inſert the whole petition in the information iv. 352
* Putting a libel into the poſt, adjudged a publication of it iv. 353
* The owning their hands before the council did not amount to a publication; but had the witneſſes been poſitive that the biſhops owned that this was the paper they delivered to the king, it was agreed that that would have been a ſufficient proof of their publiſhing it; but the witneſſes not being poſitive in this, it was held they had failed as to their proof of the publiſhing it: whereupon the people ſhouted iv. 361
* The lord _Sunderland_ depoſed, that the biſhops applied to him, to aſſiſt them in delivering their petition to the king; whereupon the court were of opinion there was ſufficient proof of the publiſhing iv. 366
* The biſhops counſel enter upon their defence, and inſiſt that the petition is no libel iv. 367
* That it is the ſubject's right to petition iv. 367
* They ſhew that the king cannot diſpenſe with the laws iv. 369
* And that the biſhops were under a neceſſity of petitioning, being commanded to diſtribute the declarations iv. 370
* That it was allowable to ſay, the king was miſtaken in the law; and that this was daily practiſed in relation to his grants iv. 370
* The defendants produce a record, wherein it appears, that the commons empowered king _Rich._ II. with the conſent of the lords, to ſuſpend the ſtatute of proviſors iv. 375
* The journals of the houſes of the lords and commons produced in evidence iv. 376
* Wherein are the addreſſes of the commons to king _Charles_ II. againſt the diſpenſing power, and the king's anſwers iv. 376, &c.
* King _Charles_ cancels his declaration for ſuſpending the penal laws, and declares it ſhall never be drawn into example iv. 381
* The commons addreſs on king _James_'s claiming the ſame power after _Monmouth_'s rebellion iv. 382
* The caſe of _Thomas_ and _Sorrel_, in relation to the diſpenſing power, cited by Mr. _Somers_ iv. 384
* The attorney-general replies, that the inſtances they have produced are evidences againſt them, being only of matters tranſacted in parliament iv. 385
* That it may be a libel though the facts are true iv. 386
* That the biſhops ſhould have acquieſced under their paſſive obedience, till the meeting of a parliament iv. 386
* That the law interprets the thing to be malicious and ſeditious, if it be illegal iv. 386
* Mr. ſolicitor denies that the ſubject has a right to petition out of parliament concerning matters of government iv. 387

* He inſiſts that votes and addreſſes are not evidence; and cannot be ſtiled declarations in parliament iv. 389
* That the king may make conſtitutions in matters eccleſiaſtical iv. 389
* And that the biſhops denying that prerogative, was in diminution of the prerogative, as laid in the information iv. 390
* The chief juſtice holds it lawful to petition, but not in that reflecting manner as in the petition iv. 391
* The petition of the city of London for the ſitting of a parliament, adjudged a libel iv. 392
* The chief juſtice directs the jury, and is of opinion with mr. juſtice Allybone, that it was a libel iv. 393, 394
* Mr. juſtice Holloway and mr. juſtice Powell declared their opinion, it was not a libel iv. 394, 395
* Mr. juſtice Allybone cites a caſe in the time of king James I. where it was adjudged a miſdemeanour to petition the king to put the penal laws in execution iv. 395
* But was anſwered, the reaſon of that judgment was, becauſe the puritans threatened that, unleſs their requeſt was granted, many thouſands of the king's ſubjects would be diſcontented iv. 395
* The court permit the jury to ſend for wine iv. 396
* The jury are not allowed to have any papers with them, but what are under ſeal iv. 396
* They are kept together all night, without fire or candle iv. 396
* The biſhops are acquitted; whereupon the people ſhout; and a gentleman is committed for it, but releaſed again iv. 396. See PEERS. LAUD, Archbiſhop. MORE, Sir THOMAS. UDAL, JOHN.
BLACK ACT, 9 Geo. I. chap. 22. See BARNARD, WILLIAM.
BLACKHEAD. See SPRATT, doctor THOMAS, biſhop of Rocheſter.
BLACKBURNE, ROBERT. See BERNARDI, JOHN, major.
BLACKMORE, ROBERT. See LEACH, DRYDEN.
BLACKSTONE, Sir WILLIAM, Juſtice C. B.
His commentaries commended xi. 251
Mr. juſtice Blackſtone gives in them the riſe, and a ſhort hiſtory of the doctrine of amendments xi. 332
* BLAGUE, Captain WILLIAM,
* His trial for high-treaſon, the 13th day of July, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 731, 739
* There being but one witneſs that ſwore the treaſon poſitively againſt the priſoner, the chief juſtice directed the jury to acquit him; which they did iii. 744
BLAKE, JOHN,
Being retained of the king's counſel at law, by his command, whom he ought to obey, yet he was impeached by the commons of high-treaſon, for giving advice contrary to law, and his oath, and condemned, drawn, and executed, as a traitor i. 14, 15
BLANDY, MARY,
Her trial for parricide, Feb. 29, 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 1
The indictment againſt her x. 1
Mr. Bathurſt's ſpeech, ſtating the caſe and evidence x. 3
Serjeant Hayward's ſpeech on the ſame ſide x. 7
Dr. Addington, dr. Lewis, and the other evidences againſt her x. 9, &c.
Priſoner's defence x. 22
Mr. Bathurſt's reply x. 24
Mr. baron Legge ſums up the evidence to the jury x. 25
Found guilty x. 33
Baron Legge's ſpeech at paſſing ſentence x. 33
Priſoner begs for time to ſettle her affairs, which is granted x. 33
Her behaviour in gaol x. 33
Her declaration that ſhe did not know, or believe, that the powder to which her father's death was aſcribed, had any noxious or poiſonous quality lodged in it, and that ſhe had no intention to deſtroy him x. 35
* BLASPHEMY.
In what blaſphemy conſiſts Em. Pref. viii. * See BACON, lord. * NAYLOR, JAMES. ii. 265. PEMBROKE, earl.
BLENCOWE, Sir JOHN, Juſtice of the Common-Pleas,
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 295, 300
His opinion xi. 300, 302
BLUNT, Sir CHRISTOPHER,
Tried with ſir Charles Davers, ſir John Davis, ſir Gilly Merrick, and Henry Cuffe, for high-treaſon in the earl of Eſſex's plot, March 5, 1600, i. 209. vii. 47
The commiſſioners names vii. 47
The indictment for conſpiring with the earl of Eſſex vii. 47
* They plead not guilty; but upon their trial confeſs the facts i. 210
Aſk the judges if they might not confeſs in part, and plead not guilty to the reſt vii. 48
Mr. ſerjeant Yelverton opens the indictment vii. 48
Mr. attorney-general's ſpeech vii. 49
Sir Chriſtopher Blunt's examination and confeſſion vii. 50
Part of the earl of Eſſex's confeſſion read vii. 53
The attorney urges a correſpondence between the earl of Eſſex, ſir Chriſtopher Blunt, and Tyrone vii. 54
Evidence againſt ſir Charles Davers vii. 55
Evidence againſt ſir John Davis vii. 56
Againſt ſir Gilly Merrick, and Cuffe vii. 57
Sir Henry Nevil's narration read vii. 57
Cuffe's defence vii. 59
All found guilty of high treaſon vii. 60
Their ſpeeches before judgment given vii. 61
Lord chief juſtice Popham's ſpeech at pronouncing judgment vii. 62
* Sir Gilly Merrick and Mr. Cuffe executed at Tyburn, and their behaviour i. 210
* Sir Chriſtopher Blunt and ſir Charles Davers beheaded upon Tower-hill i. 211
* Sir Chriſtopher Blunt's ſpeech at his execution i. 211
BOLEYN, ANNE, Queen, and Lord Viſcount ROCHFORD,
Their trials for treaſon in the court of the lord high ſteward, in May, 1536, 28 Hen. VIII.
Lord high ſteward xi. 10, 12
The queen is arraigned xi. 10, 14
She is permitted to ſit at her trial xi. 10, 12
The charge xi. 10, 14
She pleads not guilty xi. 12
Defends herſelf xi. 12
Partially condemned xi. 10, 14
Her majeſty's ſpeech on the ſcaffold xi. 10, 12
She is beheaded xi. 10, 13
Queen Anne flouriſhed, was accuſed, condemned, and executed, and her bed and honours poſſeſſed by another, in one and the ſame month xi. 11, 13, 15 xi. 11
Extract from biſhop Burnet's hiſtory of the reformation, reſpecting the proceedings againſt the queen xi. 11, 13
Archbiſhop Cranmer's letter to the king on behalf of the queen xi. 12
Lord viſcount Rochford, the queen's brother, pleaded not guilty xi. 12
He is condemned to be beheaded and quartered xi. 12, 13
* BOLTON, JOHN. See CROOK, JOHN.
* BONNET, Major STEDE,
* The trial of him and thirty-three others, for piracy in South-Carolina, 1718, 5 George I. vi. 156
* Nicholas Trott, eſq. judge of the vice-admiralty, his charge to the grand inqueſt vi. 157
* Five pirates brought to their trial vi. 160
* The indictment for taking the Francis, Peter Manwaring commander vi. 161
* Richard Allen, eſq. attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence vi. 161
* Mr. Hepworth's ſpeech vi. 163
* Evidence for the king vi. 164
* The priſoners defence vi. 166
* Mr. juſtice Trott's charge vi. 167
* The priſoners convicted vi. 167
* Eight more tried for the ſame fact vi. 168
* Their defence vi. 168
* They are all convicted vi. 169
* Nine more tried for the ſame fact vi. 169
* Eight found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 171
* Five more tried for the ſame vi. 171
* Four found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 171
* Eight tried for taking the Fortune, captain Read commander vi. 171
* Evidence for the king vi. 172
* They are all convicted vi. 173
* Nine more tried for the ſame vi. 174
* Eight found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 174
* Eight more tried for the ſame, and convicted vi. 175
* Five tried for taking the Francis vi. 176
* Two convicted, and three acquitted vi. 179
* The ſame priſoners tried for ſtealing the Fortune vi. 179
* One convicted, and four acquitted vi. 180
* Judge Trott's ſpeech before ſentence vi. 181
* Sentence paſſed upon 29 pirates vi. 183
* Twenty-two executed vi. 183
* Major Bonnet's trial, for taking The Francis vi. 183
* Evidence againſt him vi. 183
* His defence vi. 185
* He is convicted vi. 186
* Judge Trott's ſpeech before judgment vi. 186
* He is condemned and executed vi. 188
BOOKBINDER. See BROOKS, NATHAN.
BOOKS,
Several cenſured by the lords viii. 78. See LIBELS.
BOOKSELLER. See BREWSTER, THOMAS. CURTIS, JAMES. HARRIS, BENJAMIN. PRINTING. SMITH, FRANCIS.
BOOTLE, THOMAS,
Of counſel for Franklin ix. 260
His ſpeech for him ix. 267
On the liberty of the preſs ix. 269
Opens indictment and evidence againſt Matthews for treaſon ix. 683
* BOROSKI, GEORGE, CHRISTOPHER VRATZ, JOHN STERN, and CHARLES-JOHN Count CONINGSMARK,
* Tried for the murder of Thomas Thynn, eſq. the firſt three as principals, the laſt as acceſſary before the fact, Feb. 28, 1681. 34 Car. II. iii. 466
* The priſoners being foreigners, an interpreter ſworn iii. 466
* Indicted as of the pariſh of St. Martin's, as well all the principals as the acceſſary, in one indictment iii. 467
* The ſubſtance of the indictment interpreted to the priſoners in their own language iii. 467
* The court demand if they would be tried after the manner of the Engliſh; to which they aſſent, and plead not guilty iii. 468
* They demand a jury of half foreigners, and half Engliſh; which is granted iii. 468
* Alſo that there be no friends or relations of the deceaſed upon the jury; which is granted iii. 468
* Coningſmark demands a jury of quality; agreed they ſhould conſiſt of conſiderable merchants iii. 468
* The court deny to try him diſtinctly from the reſt iii. 468
* He is denied further time to prepare for his trial iii. 469
* A copy of the pannel denied him; but he is allowed to look on the pannel iii. 465
* They deſire that none of the foreigners on the jury be Roman Catholicks; granted iii. 465
* The court direct that firſt an Engliſhman, and then a foreigner, ſhould be called and ſworn iii. 465

* A foreigner challenged for the king; and the counſel inſiſt they need not ſhew cauſe, unleſs they want jurymen iii. 465
* The court inform the priſoners they may challenge all the reſt, and ſo compel the king's counſel to ſhew cauſe iii. 465
* Priſoners deſire that thoſe that are challenged ſhould not come near thoſe that are ſworn; it is granted iii. 470
* Sir Francis Wythens's ſpeech before evidence iii. 471
* The evidence interpreted to thoſe aliens upon the jury, by interpreters ſworn for the purpoſe iii. 472
* The coroner examined that ſat upon the body iii. 474
* The juſtices who took the examination of the priſoners are not allowed to read the examination as evidence iii. 474, 476
* What any of the priſoners ſaid at their examination, no evidence againſt any but themſelves iii. 474
* The examination of one of the witneſſes before the privy council ſhewn him to refreſh his memory at the trial iii. 478
* The count's defence iii. 492, &c.
* The three firſt found guilty iii. 500
* Coningſmark being acquitted of being acceſſary to the murder, the court order him to enter into a recognizance, with three ſureties, to appear next ſeſſions, and anſwer any appeal if brought iii. 501
* Sentence pronounced on Boroſki, Vratz, and Stern iii. 502
Sir John Hawles's remarks on this trial iv. 199

BOROUGHS,
Two ſorts of them deſcribed viii. 126

BOSTON. See QUELCH JOHN.

* BOTHWELL, JAMES Earl,
* Tried for the murder of the king of Scots, Apr. 12, 1567. 9 Eliz. i. 78. See viii. 327
Commiſſion of the queen of Scots to try him i. 77
* The indictment againſt him i. 79
* No proſecutor appearing, he is acquitted i. 81
* Is afterwards forced to fly the kingdom, and turns pirate i. 82

BOUCHER, JAMES,
Proceedings in the houſe of commons, and houſe of lords, relating to him viii. 536
Her majeſty's ſpeech to both houſes viii. 536
The commons addreſs to her majeſty, that they will ſupport her majeſty againſt all her enemies viii. 536
Reſolved, that no perſons accuſed of crimes, and who are her majeſty's priſoners, ought to be taken out of the cuſtody of the crown, without her majeſty's leave viii. 537
The addreſs upon that reſolution viii. 537
Her majeſty's anſwer viii. 538
The humble repreſentation of the houſe of lords, complaining of the addreſs, and giving the reaſons for their proceedings viii. 538
Complaint of the commons applying to the throne without firſt aſking a conference, as unprecedented viii. 540
Her majeſty's anſwer viii. 541
Addreſs from the commons, to clear themſelves from the miſrepreſentations of the houſe of lords viii. 542
Her majeſty's anſwer viii. 544
Addreſs from the commons, to deſire her majeſty to re-aſſume the juſt exerciſe of her prerogative, and to declare the appointing a committee of lords for the ſole examination of the conſpiracy, is of a dangerous conſequence viii. 545
The humble repreſentation of the lords, complaining of the conduct of the commons viii. 545
Juſtify their power of taking priſoners out of any other cuſtody, as the houſe thought moſt proper for their examination viii. 547
Precedents out of the lords journals viii. 549
Precedents of the ſame power exerciſed by the commons viii. 554
The parliament prorogued viii. 557

* BOUCHER, JAMES,
* His trial for high treaſon, for going into France, and returning without licence, Feb. 28, 1703 v. 506. vi. 60. Ap. See viii. 536
Indictment v. 506
* He confeſſes the indictment, and receives ſentence v. 507

BOX-MONEY,
Is a ſum of money, which is laid out and diſtributed in private charities by the chancellor every year vi. 700

BRACTON.
This author wrote the latter end of the reign of king Henry the Third, by Holt, Ch. J. ix. 62, 306
However, he was a learned and famous judge in his age; yet he lived ſo long ſince, and the particulars of which he writes are ſo different from the practice and eſtabliſhed laws of the enſuing ages, that his authority is of ſlight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day; though it be very conſiderable in examination, what the law was in his time, and that way it ſometimes is uſed as an ornament in argument only vii. 235
He died about five hundred and fifty years ſince vii. 235

* BRADDON, LAURENCE, and HUGH SPEKE,
* Tried for a miſdemeanor, Feb. 7, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 855. vi. 46. Ap.
* The information, for endeavouring to make people believe that the earl of Eſſex was murdered by thoſe to whoſe cuſtody he was committed; and for procuring falſe witneſſes to prove it iii. 855
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iii. 856
* The earl's commitment, and the coroner's inquiſition read iii. 857
* Evans and Edwards depoſe, that Mr. Braddon came to Edwards to enquire about a razor, ſaid to be ſeen by young Edwards to be thrown out of the window where the earl of Eſſex lodged in the Tower iii. 857, 861
* Edwards, the ſon, depoſes, that the ſtory he had told of the razor was all falſe iii. 865
* Dr. Hawkins's ſon ſwears the ſtory of the razor to be all falſe iii. 866
* The information read which Mr. Braddon procured young Edwards to ſign iii. 868
* Evidence that Mr. Speke wrote a letter into the country, recommending Mr. Braddon as a proſecutor of the earl of Eſſex's murder iii. 870
* Evidence that a girl had declared a ſtory of a razor ſomething like Edwards's iii. 871, 880
* The counſel for Mr. Braddon enter upon the defence iii 872
* Where one has counſel allowed, he ought not to ſpeak himſelf iii. 875
* Evidence of the women of the Edwards's family iii 875
* None of the witneſſes can tell from whom they had the report in the country of my lord Eſſex's death, which they teſtified they had heard before he died iii. 884
* Mr. Speke's counſel make a defence iii. 886
* He ſpeaks for himſelf iii. 886
* Bomeney, who had been gentleman to my lord Eſſex ſix years, and attended him in the Tower when he died, gives evidence that my lord of Eſſex cut his own throat iii. 888
* The warder, the centinel at the door, and captain Hawley, the maſter of the houſe, depoſe to the ſame effect iii. 889, 890
* The chief juſtice's obſervations on the evidence iii. 891
* The defendants are convicted iii. 897
* Mr. Juſtice Wythens's ſpeech before judgment iii. 899
* Their reſpective fines are ſet iii. 899
* His vindication of the earl of Eſſex iii. 900
* Copies of informations taken before the coroner iii. 901
* Mr. Braddon committed to a gaol in Wiltſhire, and his ſufferings iii. 905, 906
* His own account of the trial iii. 908
* The lords houſe, in 1688, appoint a committee to enquire concerning the death of the earl of Eſſex iii. 910
* The depoſitions which were laid before them iii. 911
* Evidence that ſeveral perſons were in the earl's room the morning he died iii. 914
* Mr. Braddon's remarks iii. 917
* The circumſtance of the razor conſidered iii. 921
* The proceedings upon the coroner's inquiſition iii. 924
* Evidence that my lord was murdered by one Holland iii. 927, 928
* A ſummary recapitulation of the whole fact iii. 929
The record vi. 46. Ap.

BRADSHAW, JAMES,
His trial for treaſon, Oct. 27, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 576
Sir John Strange opens the nature of his crime ix. 576
Evidence againſt him ix. 576
Mr. Joddrell and Mr. Ford, his counſel, argued his inſanity ix. 577
The defence he made ix. 577
Sir John Strange's obſervations upon it ix. 578
Found guilty, and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 578
Some account of him ix. 578

BRADSHAW, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
Lord preſident on the trial of king Charles the firſt, for treaſon i. 1011, 1012
His addreſs to the king i. 986
His anſwer to the king i. 987
His ſpeech before ſentence i. 992, 1038
His ſpeech to his majeſty i. 986
Lord preſident on the trial of James duke of Hamilton ii. 1
His warrant for committing Euſebius Andrews, dated two months after the commitment vii. 328
Of counſel for John Lilburne, at the bar of the houſe of lords vii. 273

* BRAMBRE, NICHOLAS,
* Proceedings in parliament againſt him, the archbiſhop of York, the duke of Ireland, the earl of Suffolk, and lord chief juſtice Treſilian, for high-treaſon i. 1
* Articles againſt them i. 6
* None appearing but Brambre, the other four are attainted i. 12
* Brambre deſires trial by combat; which is refuſed i. 12
* He is condemned and executed i. 13
* A remarkable circumſtance before his execution i. 13
* Belknap, Holt, Fulthorpe, W. Burgh, Carey, and Lockton, tried i. 14
* They confeſs, and beg mercy i. 14
* Their lives are ſaved; but tranſported i. 14
* Blake and Uſke condemned and executed i. 14
* Treſilian takes lodgings at Weſtminſter in diſguiſe i. 12
* Is diſcovered lying under a table covered with baize, and brought before the lords i. 12
* Is drawn to execution i. 13
* Refuſes to confeſs any thing i. 13
* Will not climb the ladder, till beaten with ſtaves i. 13
* Is ſtript; the names and images of devils found under his clothes i. 13
* Is hanged i. 13
* Afterwards his throat cut i. 13
* Buried at the Grey Friars i. 13
* Biſhop of Chicheſter tried; but his judgment reſpited i. 15
* Simon de Burleigh, Beauchamp, Baroverſe, and Saliſbury, tried and executed i. 15

BRAMSTONE, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His argument in the King's-Bench, on the habeas corpus brought by ſir Thomas Darnell and others vii. 116
Takes exceptions to return of habeas corpus, and moves to have ſir Thomas Darnell bailed, who was impriſoned for refuſing to lend money upon commiſſions for loans vii. 116, 117

BRAMSTONE, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
His argument, reaſons, and opinion, for the king, againſt John Hampden, Eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 691

BRANTHWAYTE, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Arundel Coke, for maiming vi. 213

BREACH of the PEACE.
Member of parliament may be committed by a juſtice for a breach of the peace viii. 162

BRERETON, WILLIAM. See NORRYS HENRY.

BREWER,
His ſpeech in the houſe of commons, in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 93
* BREWSTER, THOMAS, ii. 528. See TWYN, & al.
BRIBERY and CORRUPTION. See BACON, FRANCIS, Lord.
BRIDGEMAN, Sir ORLANDO, Baronet, Chief Baron,
His charge to the grand jury reſpecting the regicides ii. 304
His charge to the jury on Harriſon the regicide's trial ii. 323
His charge to the jury on the trial of Scroop, the regicide ii. 329
His ſpeech on paſſing ſentence on Scroop, &c. regicides ii. 340
His charge to the jury on Cook the regicide's trial ii. 352
His charge to the jury on Peters the regicide's trial ii. 365
His ſpeech before ſentence on Cook's trial ii. 368
His charge to the jury on Axtell the regicide's trial ii. 381
His charge on Hacker the regicide's trial ii. 382
His charge on Hulet the regicide's trial ii. 389
His charge on Smith the regicide's trial ii. 395
His ſpeech before judgment againſt ſir Hardreſs Waller, &c. regicides ii. 403
BRIEFS. See CHARITY.
BRITONS.
In the time of the Britons, the pope had no juriſdiction in England xi. 71
BRITISH MUSEUM.
There is a manuſcript copy of a treatiſe on the court of Star-chamber in this Muſeum xi. 329. See BOLEYN ANNE, queen of ENGLAND. FISHER JOHN, biſhop of ROCHESTER.
BRITTON.
This treatiſe was publiſhed about 13 Edw. I. in the king's name, and by his authority xi. 332
BRITTON, RICHARD. See DENEW NATHANIEL.
BROADFOOT, ALEXANDER,
Was tried for murder, Aug. 30, 1743, 16 Geo. II. xi. 349
The caſe xi. 349
The recorder of Briſtol (ſir Michael Foſter, J. B. R.) directs the jury to acquit the priſoner xi. 349. See PRESSING.
BRODERICK, JOHN,
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Richard Hathaway, an impoſtor, March 24, 1702, 2 Ann. v. 483
His argument for John Tutchin in arreſt of his judgment for publiſhing "The Obſervators," Mich. Term, 3 Ann. v. 554
* BRODWAY, GILES i. 396. See AUDLEY, MERVIN, lord.
BROGRAVE, Sir JOHN,
Was one of the commiſſioners on the trial of Babington for treaſon i. 127
* BROMWICH ANDREW,
* His trial at Stafford aſſizes, for high-treaſon, Aug. 13, 1679, 31 Car.II. ii. 965
* Some of the jurors diſcharged for being thought popiſhly affected ii. 965
* The indictment, for that, being a ſubject of this crown, he took popiſh orders, and reſided in England ii. 966
* Evidence of the priſoner's adminiſtering the ſacrament after the popiſh manner ii. 966
* The chief juſtice directs the jury, that if they believe the priſoner to be a prieſt from the circumſtances, they might find him guilty, tho' there were not two witneſſes that ſwore it poſitively ii. 968
* The priſoner convicted and condemned ii. 968
BROOKE GEORGE. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.
BROOKESBY BARTHOLOMEW. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.
* BROOKS, NATHAN, ii. 530. See TWYN, & al.
BROTHERTON, Counſellor at Law,
Made a very novel argument reſpecting the attainder againſt Sir John Fenwick v. 114
BROWNE, SAMUEL,
Sums up the evidence, and makes his obſervations on it for the commons, on the trial of William Laud, archbiſhop of Canterbury, for treaſon i. 937
Delivers a ſummary of the charge againſt him in the houſe of commons i. 943
His reply i. 947
Browne opens the indictment againſt Anneſley and Redding ix. 317
BRUCKLIE, JOHN, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
BUCK, PETER,
Ordered to be proſecuted for publiſhing ſome of Fuller's libels. See FULLER WILLIAM.
BUCKHURST, THOMAS, Lord Treaſurer, Lord High Steward,
His charge to the peers on the trial of Robert earl of Eſſex and Henry earl of Southampton for treaſon i. 197
His addreſs to the noble priſoners, after their trial, and previous to his pronouncing ſentence of death on them i. 207, 208
BUCKINGHAM, EDWARD Duke of,
His trial for treaſon, in the court of the lord high ſteward of England, May 13, 1522, 13 Hen. VIII. xi. 4
Duke of Norfolk preſided xi. 5, 21, 22
Accuſed xi. 5
Principal points of his indictment xi. 4, 5
Committed to the Tower xi. 4
Tried by his peers xi. 4, 5, 6
The evidence produced by the attorney-general xi. 4, 6
The defence xi. 5, 6
The ſentence xi. 5
The king mitigated his ſentence to beheading xi. 5
In this duke the place of high conſtable of England became extinct xi. 5
The publication at the degrading the duke from the order of the garter xi. 6
The ceremony of performing it xi. 6
Some of the titles of this noble family now dormant xi. 6
BUCKINGHAM, GEORGE Duke of,
Notorious conſpiracy and ſubornation againſt the life and honour of this duke in charging his grace with ſodomy, puniſhed by a ſlight fine and pillory iii. 220. vii. 483
* BUCKNER, WILLIAM, i. 396. See PRYNNE, & al.
* BUGGERY, i. 388.
* The perſon proſtituting himſelf adjudged guilty of this felony i. 396
* Emiſſion without penetration in the attempt, adjudged the offence was complete; and ſo in a rape i. 393
BULLER, FRANCIS,
His argument for Moſtyn on error, in cauſe of Fabrigas and Moſtyn xi. 186
His reply xi. 194
Opens information againſt John Horne, eſquire, for a libel xi. 266
* BULLS.
* A papal bull i. 956
BURGH, HUBERT DE,
No ſooner was magna charta paſſed than Hubert de Burgh, chief juſtice in that day, perſuaded the king he was not bound by it, becauſe under age when it paſſed; but this ſort of inſolence the next parliament reſented, to the ruin of the pernicious chief juſtice iii. 222. vii. 480
He was the laſt great juſticiary xi. 142
BURGH, WILLIAM DE, Juſtice C. B.
Was arreſted ſitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and ſent priſoner to the Tower i. 5. n.
Tried for high treaſon, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14
Confeſſes, and begs mercy i. 14
Life ſaved, but tranſported to the city of Dublin, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, and liberty of going two miles for his recreation i. 14. n. * See BRAMBRE.
* BURGLARY.
* Where one comes into a houſe by day, the doors being open, and opens the door to get out at night, it is burglary. ii. 524. See TURNER's Trial.
* One who aſſiſts at breaking a houſe, is not guilty of burglary, unleſs he enters vi. 224, 225, 227
Rogues influence a conſtable to break open the door of an houſe, and thereupon they enter and rifle it; this was adjudged burglary x. 434
Burglary in an apartment in the African Houſe, it muſt be laid to be the manſion-houſe of the company x, 575. n.
* BURN, JAMES, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
BURNET, GILBERT, Biſhop of Saliſbury,
His account of Gregg's treaſon x. 77. Ap.
Extracts from his Hiſtory of the Reformation xi. 11, 13, 19, 20, 22
His account of Collier, Cook, and Snat, clergymen, their abſolving ſir William Perkyns and ſir John Freind, at Tyburn x, Ap. 43
BURNING.
William Sawtre executed in the year 1401, was the firſt perſon burnt in England for hereſy. vii. Ap. n. See BEHEADING. GAUNT ELIZABETH. OLDCASTLE Sir JOHN.
* BURTON, HENRY,
* His trial for ſeveral libels. See BASTWICK.
His petition to the long parliament i. 503
BURY, JOHN,
His caſe of divorce for impotency x. 22, 23. Ap.
BURY, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Baron,
His charge to the jury, on the trial of Francis Francia, for treaſon vi. 98, 101
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 300, 302
* BUSBY, GEORGE,
* His trial for high-treaſon, in accepting popiſh orders, at the aſſizes for the county of Derby, July 25, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 328
* His arraignment iii. 328
* The priſoner inſiſts he has a habeas corpus to remove him to the King's-Bench, and could not be tried in the country iii. 328
* The court rule, that the grand jury having found the bill, he muſt be tried here iii. 328
* The indictment iii. 328
* Mr. Combes's ſpeech before evidence iii. 329
* Evidence of the manner of his apprehenſion iii. 330
* Buſby objects that he is an alien, and ſo not within the ſtatute againſt taking popiſh orders iii. 332
* The act for naturalizing the children of ſubjects born in foreign countries during the late rebellion, read iii. 332
* Evidence of the priſoner's officiating as a prieſt iii. 333
* Mr. baron Street directs the jury iii. 338
* Tells them, that the officiating as a prieſt is ſufficient evidence of his being in orders iii. 339
* Buſby is convicted, and ſentence paſſed upon him iii. 339
* BUTLER, alias STRICKLAND, MARY,
* Her trial for forgery at the Old-Bailey, Oct. 12, 1699, 11 W. III. v. 232
* The indictment v. 232
* Mr. ſerjeant Wright and Mr. Northey open the evidence v. 233
* The evidence againſt the priſoner v. 234
* The bond produced and read v. 235
* The priſoner's counſel enter upon her defence v. 236
* The priſoner's witneſſes called v. 237
* Lord chief juſtice Holt ſums up the evidence v. 237
* The priſoner convicted; and ſentence paſſed v. 238

C.

CALTHORP, CHARLES,

His argument in B. R. on habeas corpus brought by ſir Thomas Darnel and others vii. 122

For Benjamin Valentine, on information againſt him for ſeditious ſpeeches in parliament vii. 245

For ſir John Corbet, impriſoned for refuſing to lend money upon the commiſſions for loans vii. 122

CALVERT, Doctor. See KINGSTON, Ducheſs of.

CALVIN.

Sir Francis Bacon's ſpeech for him in Exchequer-chamber xi. 79

Lord chancellor Elleſmere's ſpeech on that occaſion xi. 97. See ii. 9

CAMBRIDGE,

Franchiſes thereof ſeized for a notorious riot iii. 590

* CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY,

* Proceedings againſt them, 1687, 3 Jac. II. iv. 254

* The ſubſtance of the king's letter to them, to give father Francis, a monk, his degree, without adminiſtering the oaths to him iv. 254

* They refuſe to admit him iv. 254

* A ſecond letter to the univerſity iv. 254

* The univerſity apply to the duke of Albemarle, their chancellor iv. 255

* The vice-chancellor and ſenate ſummoned before the high commiſſion iv. 255

* The perſons deputed by the ſenate to attend iv. 255

* They have time allowed them to anſwer iv. 256

* Their anſwer iv. 256

* Their hearing iv. 257

* The court decree that the vice-chancellor ſhall be deprived; and that he ſhould be ſuſpended from his maſterſhip iv. 260

* The ſenate are diſmiſſed with a reprimand iv. 261

* And ordered to ſend up copies of their ſtatutes iv. 261

* Balderſon elected vice-chancellor iv. 258. See PEACHEL JOHN.

CAMDEN, the Hiſtorian,

His writings no authority in Weſtminſter-Hall xi. 142

CAMDEN, Lord,

In his charge to a jury, told them, "that he did not wiſh the conviction of the defendant, if any man whatſoever doubted of his guilt" xi. 276

Encomium on that great lawyer xi. 276. See ATTORNEY-GENERAL

His ſpeech as lord chief juſtice of the Common-Pleas, in delivering the judgment of that court for the plaintiff in the cauſe of Entick and Carrington xi. 316. See KINGSTON, Ducheſs of. PRATT CHARLES.

CAMERON, Dr. ARCHIBALD,

Proceedings againſt him on the bill of attainder, May 17, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 202

The doctor's education, behaviour, and execution x. 202

Mr. juſtice Foſter's report of his caſe x. 203

CAMPBELL.

Inſtance in Scotland of a priſoner being tried by a Campbell for the murder of a Campbell, and eleven of the jury Campbells x. 73. n.

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER HUME, (Counſel for the Crown on the proſecution of Macdaniel and others)

His argument x. 433

Cited a caſe met with ſince laſt argument x. 437

His reply x. 442

Opens the evidence againſt Timothy Murphy x. 184

His reply x. 189

His reply on Anneſley and Redding's trial ix. 331

CAMPMAN, GEORGE. See HENDLEY WILLIAM, Clerk.

CANNING, ELIZABETH,

Her trial for perjury, May, 1754, 27 Geo. II. x. 205

Indictment againſt her x. 206

Mr. Gaſcoigne opens the indictment againſt her x. 211

Mr. ſerjeant Davy, counſel for the proſecution, ſtates the caſe, and opens the evidence x. 211

Mr. Willes's ſpeech on the ſame ſide x. 218

Agreed by the counſel, that the witneſſes ſhould be examined apart; and when examined, not return to the others, and they gave each a liſt of witneſſes x. 223

Mr. Gurney, the ſhort-hand writer, proves what ſhe ſwore at Mary Squires's trial x. 223

The ſeveral witneſſes againſt her examined, and croſs-examined all the way x. 227, &c.

Mr. Moreton's ſpeech for the priſoner x. 289

Serjeant Nares on the ſame ſide x. 298

Witneſſes for the priſoner, which were croſs-examined likewiſe x. 305, &c.

An evidence propoſed to be examined that was not in the counſel's brief; and it being agreed on both ſides, that no witneſſes ſhould be examined but what were in the briefs, court refuſed it x. 366

Mr. Davy objects to mr. Salt's evidence, as alſo to the confeſſion of mother Wells x. 367

Debate about it x. 367

Court allows evidence to be given of her confeſſion x. 367

Whether the juſtice ſhall be allowed to give evidence of Virtue Hall's confeſſion?—refuſed by the court x. 371

Further evidence in behalf of Canning x. 369, &c.

Mr. Moreton reſts the evidence on the teſtimony given x. 374

Mr. ſerjeant Davy's reply and obſervations x. 374

The recorder ſums up the evidence x. 390

Jury bring her in guilty of perjury, but not wilful and corrupt x. 406

Recorder ſaid, he could not receive that verdict, becauſe it was partial, and they muſt either find her guilty of the whole indictment, or acquit her x. 406

Jury withdrew again, and returned with a verdict, guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury x. 406

Two of the jurymen declare the verdict was not according to their conſciences x. 406

Foreman of the jury's account how the jury were divided, and at laſt agreed x. 406

Counſel moved for a new trial x. 406

Conſideration of it put off x. 406

Lord chief juſtice Willes's opinion, a new trial could not be granted x. 407

Her caſe laid before counſel, and mr. Emlyn's opinion on it; and that, on an indictment for perjury, it ought to be proved to be wilful and corrupt x. 407

Ordered to be tranſported, on a diviſion, nine againſt eight x. 407

Recorder paſſes ſentence upon her x. 390

Affidavits of two of the jurymen whereon motion was grounded for a new trial x. 408—410

Rev. mr. Rayner's certificate of her behaviour in Newgate x. 410

Elizabeth Canning's declaration after her ſentence x. 411

Tranſported to New-England x. 411

CAPITAL OFFENCES.

The law allows more favour to a priſoner in a capital, than to a defendant in a civil, matter iv. 191

Maliciouſly ſhooting at a perſon is a capital offence. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

The reaſon of that ancient law, that capital offenders had lupina capita, and might therefore by the juſtice of lex talionis, arte perire ſuâ, wherein the law followed naturæ ordinem ii. 8. See vii. 179. xi. 91

Though diſmembering was capital by the law of Scotland, mutilation was not ii. 629

CAPITULATION.

That terms of capitulation on ſurrender of a place were not complied with, no ſort of defence in a court of law ix. 550. See id. 547. n.

* CAREW, JOHN, i. 898. See REGICIDES.

CAREW, Sir NICHOLAS.

He was arraigned, attainted, and executed, for treaſon, Mar. 3, 30 Hen. VIII. xi. 25

CAREY, Sir JOHN, Baron of the Exchequer,

Was arreſted ſitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and ſent priſoner to the Tower. i. 5. and n.

He was tried for high-treaſon, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14

Confeſſes and begs mercy i. 14

Life ſaved, but tranſported to Waterford, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of 20l. during life, with liberty to go two miles and no farther, on pain of death i. 14. and n. * See BRAMBRE.

CARMARTHEN, THOMAS, Marquis of, Lord Preſident of the Council,

His proceſſion as lord high ſteward, on lord Mohun's trial iv. 510

His grace's commiſſion iv. 510

His addreſs to the noble priſoner previous to giving evidence iv. 512

His addreſs to him after trial, and on pronouncing the judgment of his peers iv. 554

CARNEGIE, JAMES,

His trial before the court of juſticiary in Scotland, held at Edinburgh, July 25, 1728, 1 Geo. II. for the murder of Charles, earl of Strathmore ix. 26

Information againſt him, for Suſannah, counteſs of Strathmore, by Charles Erſkine ix. 27

Information for him, by Robert Dundas ix. 34

His aſſize, or jury ix. 52

Evidence againſt him and for him ix. 53, &c.

Verdict not guilty ix. 59

* CARNWARTH, ROBERT, Earl of vi. 1. See DERWENTWATER, earl of.

* CARR, FRANCES. See SOMERSET, counteſs of.

* CARR, HENRY,

* His trial for a libel reflecting on the juſtice of the nation, at Guildhall, London, July 2, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 57

* The ſubſtance of the information iii. 57

* A tales pro defectu juratorum iii. 57

* Mr. recorder's (ſir George Jefferies) ſpeech at the opening the information iii. 58

* The evidence iii. 58, 59

* The exceptionable words read iii. 60

* Sir Francis Winnington, of counſel for the defendant, obſerves from the evidence, that the individual paper mentioned in the information is not proved to be the defendant's iii. 61

* 2dly, That admitting it to be his, it is not proved to be done maliciouſly iii. 61

* The priſoner calls witneſſes to ſhew he was well affected to the government iii. 61

* The recorder's reply to the defence made by the priſoner's counſel iii. 62

* The lord chief juſtice, in his direction to the jury, ſhews his reſentment at the noiſe and humming the party made in court iii. 63

* He tells the jury, they were not to expect ſuch ſtrict proof in this as in common matters iii. 63

* That preſumptive evidence is often taken even in capital matters iii. 63

* That it had been reſolved and ſubſcribed by all the judges, when his majeſty demanded their opinions concerning the regulation of the preſs, that to print or publiſh news books, or pamphlets of news, was illegal, and diſcovered a manifeſt intent to the breach of the peace iii. 64

* That if there were no ſcandal in it, the author ought to be convicted for publiſhing ſuch books without authority, that alone being illegal iii. 64

* He cenſures the folly of the age in being ſo fond of ſuch papers iii. 64

* Says, that it was ridiculous for the author to hope a court of juſtice would not underſtand what he deſigned all the reſt of the world ſhould underſtand iii. 64

* That if the jury found him guilty of the fact, the court would judge whether it implied malice iii. 64
* And the jury were not to trouble themſelves about that iii. 64
* That the jury, by finding the defendant guilty, do not take it upon their oaths abſolutely that he was the author, but that they believe him to be the author iii. 64
* The jury withdrew, and, after an hour's receſs, bring the priſoner in guilty iii. 64. See SCROGGS ſir WILLIAM.

* CARR, ROBERT. See SOMERSET earl of.

CARTE, THOMAS,
This hiſtorian a prerogative writer xi. 29
Extracts from his hiſtory of England xi. 34

CARTER, Sir LAURENCE, Baron of the Exchequer,
Sums up the evidence to the jury, on Acton's trials ix. 199, 208, 216, 224. See ix. 132

CARTER, WILLIAM. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

C A S E S,

Some of the principal cited, arranged in alphabetical order.

A.

Addinſhall and Bunting xi. 205, 215, 219
Alban's St. (lord) vii. 243, 357,— and Cox xi. 192
Alder xi. 328
Allen vii. 178
Alphonſo xi. 336
Ameſby (ſir John) v. 114
Andrews and Holt xi. 192
Angus (earl) ii. 13
Appleyard i. 214
Apſley vii. 225. xi. 336
Archer x. 436, 441
Armſtrong (ſir Thomas) iv. 198, 199, 204. x. 203
Arundel (earl) v. 83
——— (mayor) viii. 95. n.
Aſh and Smith iv. 199
Aſhby and White x. 136. Ap.
Aſhley and Harris x. 476
Aſhton (ſir William) iii. 776, 778
Ather and Biddulph xi. 207
Atkins, ſir Robert, and Holford, vii. 634
Atwood and Blanchflower iii. 780
Auriol viii. 358
Awater iii. 176
Ayleſbury men xi. 329, 337

B.

Bacon (lord chancellor) v. 357, vi. 597
Bagg vii. 181, 227, 237
Ball viii. 255. n.
Balliſter and Johnſon xi. 189
Balſhal iii. 768
Banbury (lord) xi. 336
Barker and Ramkiſſenſeat xi. 193
Barkham xi. 336
Barkſtead ix. 583, x. 203
Barnardiſton, ſir Samuel iv. 166
Barnardiſton and Soame iii. 782. viii. 98, 109. ix. 288, 292
Barnſby and Powell xi. 218
Barrington and Venables xi. 192
Barton xi. 2
Bartholomew and others vii. 139, 159, 164
Baſſet ii. 206
Bateman iv. 204
Bathurſt and Clews xi. 206, 213, 219, 228
Bear xi. 332
Beaumont (lord) ii. 11
Beawfrage vi. 737, 738, 740
Beckley vii. 138
Beckwith vii. 118, 135, 138, 158, 164, 168, 175, 186
Beecher vii. 219, 222
Belbarbe vii. 168
Belchier x. 437, 438, 441, 443, 445
Bell xi. 332
Bellamont xi. 193
Bellaſys (lord) vii. 358
Beomond vii. 159, 164
Berchett ix. 309
Beresford and Proſſer iii. 780
Berkley (lord) vii. 244
——— (the judge) ii. 209. viii. 566
Berry vi. 823
Bethel xi. 336
Biddulph and Ather xi. 207
Bildeſton vii. 157, 162, 173
Bilſton vii. 144
Bincks vii. 157, 162, 174, 237
Blackham xi. 206, 212, 219
Blague iv. 194
Blair vii. 358
Blanchflower and Atwood iii. 780
Bland and Robinſon xi. 188
Blaunsford vii. 111. ix. 310
Blunt (ſir Chriſtopher) iii. 788
Bolſworth iv. 166
Bondfield and Millar xi. 333
Booth vi. 737
Bow and Jones xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228
Boycot and others vii. 168
Boyle and Boyle xi. 216, 220, 223
Bradſhaw vii. 49
Brandon (lord) iv. 177. vii. 640
Brains and Watts ix. 64, 536
Branſby and Kerrick xi. 207
Brereton ix. 311
Brewſter ix. 286
Bridgewater (earl) vii. 357
Bright and Eynon xi. 220
Broch vii. 139, 159, 165
Brocket vii. 139, 159, 237
Brooke viii. 468
Brooks and Hitcham iii. 780
Broome vii. 138, 159, 165.
Browne v. 62. vii. 126, 135
Browne and Cowpe xi. 345
Browne and lady Mayo xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235
Brown and others vii. 139
Browning vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 174
Browning and Beeſton vii. 123
Brownſword and Edwards xi. 224
Brugge vii. 158, 164
Bryan vii. 169
Buckley and Rivers vii. 123
Buckner ix. 65, 534
Bunting and Addinſhall xi. 205, 215, 219
Burdett iii. 776
Burgen vi. 741
Burroughs and Jamineau xi. 207, 218
Burton vii. 159, 166, 175. iii. 776, 778
Buſhel iv. 743. ix. 294. xi. 336
Butts and Penny xi. 344

C.

Cæſar ii. 201. vii. 118, 139, 160, 166, 175, 177, 237
Calbot vii. 169
Calvin ii. 9, 11, 12. iii. 769. vii. 118, 124, 143. xi. 192
Carliſle (biſhop) i. 214. vii. 247
Carr xi. 223, 233
Carr (lady) iv. 197, 342
Cartwright xi. 344
Caſtle vi. 622
Caſtlehaven (earl) ii. 144. iv. 681. v. 62. vii. 421
Cataline v. 108
Cateſby vii. 158, 164, 175
Cawdry vii. 179, 226
Chamberlain and Harvey xi. 345
Charlſworth xi. 332, 333
Chambers xi. 337
Chauncey xi. 336
Chaſe vii. 237
Cherrie vii. 135, 137, 159, 160, 175
Chetwin ii. 203
Clarendon (lord) v. 110
Clarendon (ſir Roger) i. 214
Cleve vii. 168
Cleve and Gellye xi. 345
Clews and Bathurſt xi. 206, 213, 219, 228
Clipſham iii. 780
Cobb vii. 135
Codde xi. 336
Cobham (lord) ii. 162. iii. 765, 768, 775, 778, 791, 1062. viii. 68, 468
Cojimaul and Verelſt xi. 192
Coke vi. 804
Coleman iii. 776, 778. vi. 74, 75, 76
Colledge iii. 769, 776, 778. iv. 173, 186, 190, 194, 199, 204, 205. v. 120
Collingburne iii. 776, 778
Collins and Jeſſum xi. 219
Coningſmark (count) iv. 169, 199. v. 101
Conſtable iii. 769, 770. vii. 138, 158, 163, 174, 228. viii. 468, 776, 778
Conway vii. 168
Coppinger and Higgon xi. 220
Corbet x. 203. xi. 212, 218, 219
Cornelius and Hughes xi. 218
Cornwell x. 434. n.
Corniſh (alderman) iv. 177, 186, 200, 204, v. 75, 120, 130
Corton and Hitcham ix. 311
Coryhn vii. 169
Coſens (doctor) vii. 566
Cotton (ſir Robert) v. 128
Cowland ix. 533
Cowpe and Browne xi. 345
Cowte xi. 292
Cox and St. Albans xi. 192
Cranbank vi. 741
Crawley (ſir Francis, and judge) viii. 566
Creſſingham i. 819
Criſpe and Dalmahoy vii. 458
Crogate vii. 223
Crohagan iii. 778, 780
Cromwell (lord) iv. 314. vii. 219, 220, 223, 225, 237. v. 97
Croſby v. 79
Crutchley and Robins xi. 220, 227, 231
Cudart vii. 169
Culpeper xi. 305
Curle and Fleetwood iii. 1060
Curtis ix. 6. n.
Cutler and Dixy vii. 243

D.

Dacres (lord) i. 388. vi. 822. vii. 421
Da Coſta & Villareal xi. 207, 219
Danby (earl) vii. 358
Dangerfield iv 166
Darcy (lord) i. 197
Davis and Yale xi. 189
Deane and others vii. 168
Delamere (lord) iv. 314. v. 48, 61, 104, 177
Delaware (lord) ii. 13
Denning and Norris xi. 192
Devonſhire (lord) iv. 314
Devonſhire (earl) vii. 243
Derby xi. 309, 313, 316, 318
Derby (earl) xi. 189, 192, 193
Deſmaiſtres and others vii. 160, 166, 177, 237, 358. ii. 201
Dive and Maningham vi 740
Dixy and Cutler vii. 243
Drake vii. 358
Duffus (lord) ix. * 699. x. 188, Ap.
Dutton and Howell xi. 190, 193

E.

Earbury xi. 309, 316, 318, 324, 326, 329
Eaſt-India Company and Campbell xi. 189
Eaton ii. 12
Elliot vii. 358
—— (ſir John) viii. 4
Ellis vii. 169
Elmham (ſir William) i. 821
Eſſex i. 815
—— (earl of) v. 83
Eſſex and Southampton (earls) i. 758. ii. 162
Everard vii. 159, 166, 175
Exeter (marchioneſs) v. 86. xi. 25
Eynon and Bright xi. 220

F.

Fairchild vii. 169
Farr xi. 211, 217, 229
Felton v. 126
Ferham v. 125
Fermer xi. 224, 228, 234
Ferrers (ſir Richard) vii. 111
Figot (ſir Thomas) vii. 223, 229
Finch (lord keeper) vii. 357. viii. 566
Finch (ſir Moyle) vii. 109
Fiſhere vii. 169
Fitzgerald xi. 233
Fitzharris iii. 1062. iv. 166, 177, 178, 182, 186, 190, 198, 199.
331. vi. 74, 75, 76. vii. 331, 358.
Flaring (ſir Rowland) vii. 111. ix. 314
Fleetwood and Curle iii. 1060
Flowerdew ii. 206
Fogoſſa vii. 243
Fowth vii. 104, 114
Fox vii. 135
Foxworthy ix. 586. n.
Frere vii. 169
Froſt and Waldeck xi. 237
Fuller ix. 288, 303
Furſman and Furſman xi. 216

G.

Garbut (ſir John) vii. 220, 226
Gardell xi. 208
Garnet ii. 175
Garvan and Roach xi. 220, 224
Gelly and Cleve xi. 345
Germain iii. 776
Githerd vii. 169
Goffe xi. 333
Gomeney i. 816
Gooch vi. 737
Goodwin (ſir Francis) viii. 145
Goudet vii. 358
Gover vi. 740
Gould and Smith xi. 345
Grahme (ſir Richard) vi. 804
Gray. See Grey.
Greene vii. 168
Green and Waller xi. 52
Gregg x. Ap. 77. n. vi. 74. 75
Gregory vii. 246
Greville x. 440
Griepe vi. 330
Griffin (lord) x. 203. xi. 329
Grey ix. 533
Grey (lord) iii. 765, 768, 778. viii. 468
Groenvelt and Burwell, and others xi. 190

H.

Harris and Aſhley x. 476
Harris xi. 332. viii. 95. n.
Harriſon vii. 118, 126, 134, 138, 228
Harvey. See Kingſton, ducheſs, her trial.
Harvey and Stanley i. 214
Hatfield and Hatfield xi. 206, 207, 210, 219, 221, 226, 229, 231, 235
Hatton (lady) iv. 354
Hawkins ix. 575
Haxey (ſir Thomas) iii. 784. v. 86, 125. vii. 829
Heale xi. 329
Heaning vii. 135
Heber iii. 776, 778
Helliards xi. 317
Hemart i. 823
Hengham xi. 332
Herbert (lord) v. 114
Herbert (the attorney-general) viii. 566
Heveningham (ſir John) vii. 143, 161
Hairton vii. 168
Hale and Mullers ix. 314
Hales (ſir Edward) ix. 292
Halliday and Pit xi. 337
Halliday and Oxenbridge vii. 124
Hampden iv. 166, 172, 177, 198. v. 132. ix. 296.
Harcourt vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 175, 178
Harding iii. 780

Harray (ſir Raw.) v. 86
Harris and James x. 433
Hick (ſir Baptiſt) iv. 354. xi. 305
Higgon and Coppinger xi. 220
Hiron and Tanfield ix. 302
Hitcham and Brooks iii. 780
——— and Carton ix. 314
Holland vii. 222
Hollis viii. 110
Holloway iv. 198. ix. 63, 64, 531. x. 203.
Holt and Andrews xi. 192
Hughes and Cornelius xi. 218
Huntington and Roe x. 433
Huſſey (doctor) vi. 741

J.

James and Harris x. 433
——— and Rutlech iii. 1054
Jamineau and Burroughs xi. 207, 218
Jeffe ix. 314
Jeſſum and Collins xi. 219
Ingrey viii. 95. n.
Johnſon iv. 166. x. 582, 583. Ap. 188
Jones (ſir William) iv. 175
Jones and Bow xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228
Ivy (lady) iv. 30
Judges, 10 Rich. II. i. 706. ii. 289. vii. 236, 238

K.

Katrington i. 816
Kendal xi. 303, 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Kenn vii. 168. xi. 205, 211, 215, 219, 221, 226, 229
Kerrick and Branſby xi. 207
King xi. 332
Knox iv. 171
Koiver iii. 780

L.

Lake and Hatton xi. 305, 322
Llandaff (biſhop) vii. 357
Lane iv. 171
Larks i. 760
Latimer (lord) vii. 245
Laud (archbiſhop) ii. 160. vii. 566
Lawrence vii. 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Leeds (duke) vii. 358
Leiceſter (earl) and Mandy vi. 741
Lewis xi. 333
Lilburne ii. 203. iii. 345. xi. 344
Lindley vi. 740. vii. 168
Liſle (lady) v. 101
Littlepage vii. 135
Lloyd and Maddox xi. 220, 224, 228, 234
Loan vii. 237
London (biſhop) vii. 357
Long viii. 96
Lovat (lord) x. 436
Lovelace iv. 314
Luckup xi. 332

M.

Maccleſfield (earl) v. 282
Maddocks and Lloyd xi. 220, 228, 234
Magdalen College vi. 709
Man vii. 126, 135, 138
Mandike and Slint xi. 192
March (earl) v. 116
Maugridge ix. 20, 49
Mayo (lady) and Brown xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235
Matthews and Matthews xi. 212
Merfield iii. 780
Middleſex (earl) vii. 357
Meggot (ſir George) viii. 111
Melliſent and Melliſent xi. 214, 219
Mendez and Villa Real xi. 219
Melvin vii. 228
Monmouth (duke) v. 83, 125, 131, 133
Monſon (ſir Thomas) vii. 118, 134, 137, 139, 158, 164, 175
Monſon and Weſt x. 433
Moody and Thurſton xi. 218
Moore and North iii. 782
Mordaunt (lord) v. 66, 132
Morley (lord) xi. 263
Mullers and Hale xi. 314
Morris and Webber xi. 209, 221, 226
Mortimer (lord) i. 214. v. 47, 83, 97, 107,
Murphy xi. 223, 233
Murray x. 203. xi. 336, 338
Muſkerry (lord) xi. 329

N.

Nevill and Stroud viii. 98, 109, 110
New College xi. 218
Newport vii. 126, 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Nixon xi. 333
Noel vii. 358
Noel and Wells xi. 207, 218
Norfolk (duke) i. 758. iii. 769, 775, 778. v. 132. vii. 11, 243
Norfolk election viii. 145
North and Moore iii. 782
North and Stockwith vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Northampton ix. 287, 302
Northumberland (earl) i. 760. iii. 778, 792, 821. vii. 226
Norrys (lord) vii. 246
Norton ix. 333
Norwich (biſhop) i. 820. vii. 357

O.

Oates iv. 166, 177
Okey ix. 583, * 653. x. 203, 204
Oneal vii. 357
Onſlow viii. 94
Overbury ii. 26
Overbury (ſir Thomas) x. 439
Overton vii. 157, 163, 174
Owen iii. 769, 776, 778. vii. 227
Oxenbridge and Halliday vii. 124

P.

Page vii. 139, 160, 166, 175, 237
Paine vi. 415. vii. 138
Parker vii. 120, 123, 134, 138, 139, 157, 162, 174, 235
Partridge vii. 247
Paſton xi. 337
Pattere vii. 168
Peacham iv. 197
Peak and Paul vii. 220
Peak vii. 223
Pen (ſir William) vii. 358
Penn and Mead ix. 294
Penny and Butts xi. 344
Pepper vii. 169
Perry xi. 213
Peſtle vii. 168
Peterborough (earl) vii. 358
Petre (lord) vii. 358
Phillips and Badby vii. 225
Phillips and Bury xi. 207
Phillips and Prudham xi. 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
Pickering and Thornton xi. 220
Pinchman i. 424
Pine iii. 780. iv. 197
Pitt iii. 1062
Plowden vii. 243
Plunket iii. 765, 770. viii. 468, 782, 791
Pole (cardinal) iii. 111, 768, 776, 778. vi. 566. vii. 221
Pons and Johnſon xi. 189, 192
Pope vii. 220
Poulter vi. 737. vii. 226
Poulterer vii. 118
Powell and Barnſby xi. 218
Powis (earl) vii. 358
Poyning vii. 132, 154, 221, 237
Preſs and Beresford iii. 780
Preſton (lord) vi. 75, 804
Prudham and Phillips xi. 207, 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
Pym ix. 304

Q.

Quick iii. 780

R.

Radcliffe (ſir George) vii. 357
Raleigh (ſir Walter) iii. 111. iv. 169. viii. 468. x. 583, 768, 776, 778, 1062
Ramkiſſenſent and Barker xi. 193
Ratcliff x. 203
Ravaillac v. 126
Rawlin x. 440
Rayner vii. 118, 134, 135, 138, 159, 165, 186
Reading ix. 309
Regicides v. 82
Reynel ((ſir George) iii. 549, 550
Rhodes xi. 213, 219, 233
Richardſon xi. 223, 233
Rivers x. 434. n.
Rivers and Buckley vii. 123
Roach and Garvan xi. 220, 224
Roberts xi. 208
Robins and Crutchley xi. 220, 227, 231
Robinſon and Bland xi. 188
Roe xi. 303 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Roe and Huntington x. 433
Rogers vii. 135, 138
Rolph ii. 40, 173
Rookwood iv 743
Roſewell vii. 149, 177, 178
Rudyard xi. 304, 911
Rug vii. 237
Ruſſel (lord) iv. 169, 172, 177, 178, 186, 188, 190, 199, 200. v. 85, 88, 97, 120, 130. vi. 74. vii. 641. n.
Ruſſell vii. 228, 234, 235, 238
Ruſwell vii. 225. xi. 336
Rutland (counteſs) xi. 263
Rutlech and James iii. 1054

S.

Sacheverel vi. 74, 75, 76, 77
Saint Albans and Cox xi. 192
Saliſbury iv. 199. x. 584
Saliſbury (earl) vii. 358
Saltonſtall (ſir Samuel) vii. 160, 166, 167, 177, 178
Sanchar (lord) ii. 10. viii. 349, 437
Sanders i. 333. ix. 304. x. 433, 437
Sandis vii. 169
Savage vii. 216
Scots (Mary, queen of) ii. 11
Scrogs (ſir William) vii. 358
Scroop (lord) i. 87
Search xi. 336
Sedley (ſir Charles) x. Ap. 93. n.
Serle and Williams xi. 220, 260
Seven Biſhops ix. 288, 292, 302. xi. 304, 319
Seymour (ſir Edward) vii. 358
Seymour (lord) vii. 243
Seymour (ſir Thomas) v. 83, 131
Shafteſbury (earl) iv. 181, 183. xi. 336, 338
Sherave vii. 169
Sherburn vii. 146
Shirley ii. 11, 12, 13. vii. 233
Sidney iii. 1064. iv. 169, 172, 177, 186, 196, 342. v. 68, 79, 96, 103, 130. vi. 74, 75, 76.
Simmonds xi. 332
Sinclair and Fraſer xi. 221, 232
Smith ix. 310
Smith and Aſh iv. 199
Smith and Gould xi. 345
Smith and Mall vi. 740
Soame and Barnardiſton iii. 782. viii. 98, 109. ix. 288, 292
Somerſet (earl) i. 758. ii. 162. x. 444
——— (counteſs) xi. 264
Sorrel and Thomas iv. 384
Southampton and Eſſex (earls) i. 758. ii. 162. iii. 775, 778
Spademan vii. 168
Sparhawke iii. 776
Specot vii. 220
Spenſer (father and ſon) viii. 566
Spikeſworth i. 819
Spore vii. 169
Stafford i. 86. ii. 35. n. ix. 583. x. 203
Stafford (viſcount) iii. 345, 769, 776, 778
Stanley and Harvey xi. 345
Stanley (ſir Henry) i. 214
Stanley (ſir Rowland) v. 70
Stephenſon ii. 12, 13
Stirling xi. 223, 225, 229
Stockwith and North vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Storey (doctor) i. 516. iii. 764, 768, 770, 775, 778, 782, 791. v. 88. vii. 228. viii. 344, 468. See name in Index.
Stowell (ſir John) ii. 91
Strafford (earl) ii. 160, 198, 206. iii. 784. v. 49, 59, 83, 84, 95, 96, 97, 108, 483, 484. viii. 566
Stroude and Nevill viii. 98, 109, 110
Sturton (lord) iii. 775. vii. 94
Suffolk (duke) i. 214, 822. vii. 171, 238, 243
Suffolk (earl) i. 759
Summers xi. 305

T.

Tanfield and Heron ix. 302
Tankerville (lord) xi. 304, 305
Tankred viii. 111. n.
Tarquin x. 435
Taylor iii. 776
Terret (ſir Richard) ix. 314
Thickneſſe xi. 336
Thomas and Sorrel iv. 384. vii. 613, 617, 620, 626, 627, 632
Thornton and Pickering xi. 220
Thorp vii. 243
Thorp (ſir William) i. 705. vi. 496
Throgmorton ii. 27
Thurſton and Moody xi. 218
Timelbie vii. 237
Trelawny and Williams xi. 192
Trewynnard xi. 338
Trollop vii. 220
Tutchin ix. 287, 288, 297, 303, 304. xi. 333
Twyne vi. 737. xi. 233
Tyrone (earl) vii. 358

V.

Vane (ſir Henry) iii. 765, 769, 770, 775. viii. 468, 778
Vaughan vii. 358. viii. 255
Vaux i. 757. vii. 222. ix. 436. x. 436
Venables and Barrington xi. 192
Verelſt and Cojimaul xi. 192
Vernon (ſir Thomas) vii. 118, 134
Villa Real and Mendez xi. 219
Vincent xi. 207, 213, 219, 222, 223, 225, 226, 229, 236

U.

Unwin vii. 168
Upwell vii. 68
Urſwick vii. 136, 159, 166, 175

W.

Waldeck and Froſt xi. 237
Wallis ii. 11
Walſh iii. 603
Ward xi. 189
Ward (ſir Patience) iv. 172
Wardour (lord A.) vii. 358
Warrington (lord) v. 128
Warwick (lord) xi. 257, 259, 260
Watts and Brains ix. 64, 536
Weyland (ſir Thomas) i. 704
Webb vi. 737
Webb and Cook xi. 220
Webber and Morris xi. 209, 221, 226
Weld x. Ap. 24. n.
Wells v. 114
Wells and Nowel xi. 207, 218
Welcks vii. 111
Wendon vii. 118, 134, 138, 159, 165
Wentworth (lord) i. 823
Weſt and Monſon x. 433
Weſton i. 816
Wharton iv. 743. v. 282
White and Aſhby x. 136. Ap.
Whitebread iv. 190
Whitehead iv. 743
Widdrington iv. 199
Wigg vi. 741
Williams ix. 534, 535 n.
——— and Searle xi. 220, 260
——— and Trelawny iii. 1062. iv. 354. xi. 192
Wilmer iv. 172, 186
Wilkes xi. 336, 338
——— and Wood xi. 321
Winkfield vii. 121

* That if the jury found him guilty of the fact, the court would judge whether it implied malice iii. 64
* And the jury were not to trouble themſelves about that iii. 64
* That the jury, by finding the defendant guilty, do not take it upon their oaths abſolutely that he was the author, but that they believe him to be the author iii. 64
* The jury withdrew, and, after an hour's receſs, bring the priſoner in guilty iii. 64. See SCROGGS ſir WILLIAM.

* CARR, ROBERT. See SOMERSET earl of.

CARTE, THOMAS,
This hiſtorian a prerogative writer xi. 29
Extracts from his hiſtory of England xi. 34

CARTER, Sir LAURENCE, Baron of the Exchequer,
Sums up the evidence to the jury, on Acton's trials ix. 199, 208, 216, 224. See ix. 132

CARTER, WILLIAM. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

CASES,
Some of the principal cited, arranged in alphabetical order.

A.
Addinſhall and Bunting xi. 205, 215, 219
Alban's St. (lord) vii. 243, 357,—and Cox xi. 192
Alder xi. 328
Allen vii. 178
Alphonſo xi. 336
Amſly (ſir John) v. 114
Andrews and Holt xi. 192
Angus (earl) ii. 13
Appleyard i. 214
Apſley vii. 225. xi. 336
Archer x. 436, 441
Armſtrong (ſir Thomas) iv. 198, 199, 204. x. 203
Arundel (earl) v. 83
——— (mayor) viii. 95. n.
Aſh and Smith iv. 199
Aſhby and White x. 136. Ap.
Aſhley and Harris x. 476
Aſhton (ſir William) iii. 776, 778
Ather and Biddulph xi. 207
Atkins, ſir Robert, and Holford, vii. 634
Atwood and Blanchflower iii. 780
Auriol viii. 358
Awater iii. 176
Ayleſbury men xi. 329, 337

B.
Bacon (lord chancellor) v. 357, vi. 597
Bagg vii. 181, 227, 237
Ball viii. 255. n.
Balliſter and Johnſon xi. 189
Balſhal iii. 768
Banbury (lord) xi. 336
Barker and Ramkiſſenſeat xi. 193
Barkham xi. 336
Barkſtead ix. 583, x. 203
Barnardiſton, ſir Samuel iv. 166
Barnardiſton and Soame iii. 782. viii. 98, 109. ix. 288, 292
Barnſby and Powell xi. 218
Barrington and Venables xi. 192
Barton xi. 2
Bartholomew and others vii. 139, 159, 164
Baſſet ii. 206
Bateman iv. 204
Bathurſt and Clews xi. 206, 213, 219, 228
Bear xi. 332
Beaumont (lord) ii. 11
Beawfrage vi. 737, 738, 740
Beckley vii. 138
Beckwith vii. 118, 135, 138, 158, 164, 168, 175, 186
Beecher vii. 219, 222
Belbarbe vii. 168
Belchier x. 437, 438, 441, 443, 445
Bell xi. 332
Bellamont xi. 193
Bellaſys (lord) vii. 358
Beomond vii. 159, 164
Berchett ix. 309
Beresford and Proſſer iii. 780
Berkley (lord) vii. 244
——— (the judge) ii. 209. viii. 566
Berry vi. 823
Bethel xi. 336
Biddulph and Ather xi. 207
Bildeſton vii. 157, 162, 173
Bilſton vii. 144
Bincks vii. 157, 162, 174, 237
Blackham xi. 206, 212, 219
Blague iv. 194
Blair vii. 358
Blanchflower and Atwood iii. 780
Bland and Robinſon xi. 188
Blaunsford vii. 111. ix. 310
Blunt (ſir Chriſtopher) iii. 788
Bolſworth iv. 166
Bondfield and Millar xi. 333
Booth vi. 737
Bow and Jones xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228
Boycot and others vii. 168
Boyle and Boyle xi. 216, 220, 223
Bradſhaw vii. 49
Brandon (lord) iv. 177. vii. 640
Brains and Watts ix. 64, 536
Branſby and Kerrick xi. 207
Brereton ix. 311
Brewſter ix. 286
Bridgewater (earl) vii. 357
Bright and Eynon xi. 220
Broch vii. 139, 159, 165
Brocket vii. 139, 159, 237
Brooke viii. 468
Brooks and Hitcham iii. 780
Broome vii. 138, 159, 165
Browne v. 62. vii. 126, 135
Browne and Cowpe xi. 345
Browne and lady Mayo xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235
Brown and others vii. 139
Browning vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 174
Browning and Beeſton vii. 123
Brownſword and Edwards xi. 224
Brugge vii. 158, 164
Bryan vii. 169
Buckley and Rivers vii. 123
Buckner ix. 65, 534
Bunting and Addinſhall xi. 205, 215, 219
Burdett iii. 776
Burgen vi. 741
Burroughs and Jamineau xi. 207, 218
Burton vii. 159, 166, 175. iii. 776, 778
Buſhel iv. 743. ix. 294. xi. 336
Butts and Penny xi. 344

C.
Cæſar ii. 201. vii. 118, 139, 160, 166, 175, 177, 237
Calbot vii. 169
Calvin ii. 9, 11, 12. iii. 769. vii. 118, 124, 143. xi. 192
Carliſle (biſhop) i. 214. vii. 247
Carr xi. 223, 233
Carr (lady) iv. 197, 342
Cartwright xi. 344
Caſtle vi. 622
Caſtlehaven (earl) ii. 144. iv. 681. v. 62. vii. 421
Cataline v. 108
Cateſby vii. 158, 164, 175
Cawdry vii. 179, 226
Chamberlain and Harvey xi. 345
Charlſworth xi. 332, 333
Chambers xi. 337
Chauncey xi. 336
Chaſe vii. 237
Cherrie vii. 135, 137, 159, 160, 175
Chetwin ii. 203
Clarendon (lord) v. 110
Clarendon (ſir Roger) i. 214
Cleve vii. 168
Cleve and Gellye xi. 345
Clews and Bathurſt xi. 206, 213, 219, 228
Clipſham iii. 780
Cobb vii. 135
Codde xi. 336
Cobham (lord) ii. 162. iii. 765, 768, 775, 778, 791, 1062. viii. 68, 468
Cojimaul and Verelſt xi. 192
Coke vi. 804
Coleman iii. 776, 778. vi. 74, 75, 76
Colledge iii. 769, 776, 778. iv. 173, 186, 190, 194, 199, 204, 205. v. 120
Collingburne iii. 776, 778
Collins and Jeſſum xi. 219
Coningſmark (count) iv. 169, 199. v. 101
Conſtable iii. 769, 770. vii. 138, 158, 163, 174, 228. viii. 468, 776, 778
Conway vii. 168
Coppinger and Higgon xi. 220
Corbet x. 203. xi. 212, 218, 219
Cornelius and Hughes xi. 218
Cornwell x. 434. n.
Corniſh (alderman) iv. 177, 186, 200, 204, v. 75, 120, 130
Corton and Hitcham ix. 311
Coryhn vii. 169
Coſens (doctor) vii. 566
Cotton (ſir Robert) v. 128
Cowland ix. 533
Cowpe and Browne xi. 345
Cowte xi. 292
Cox and St. Albans xi. 192
Cranbank vi. 741
Crawley (ſir Francis, and judge) viii. 566
Creſſingham i. 819
Criſpe and Dalmahoy vii. 458
Crogate vii. 223
Crohagan iii. 778, 780
Cromwell (lord) iv. 314. vii. 219, 220, 223, 225, 237. v. 97
Croſby v. 79
Crutchley and Robins xi. 220, 227, 231
Cudart vii. 169
Culpeper xi. 305
Curle and Fleetwood iii. 1060
Curtis ix. 6. n.
Cutler and Dixy vii. 243

D.
Dacres (lord) i. 388. vi. 822. vii. 421
Da Coſta & Villareal xi. 207, 219
Danby (earl) vii. 358
Dangerfield iv. 166
Darcy (lord) i. 197
Davis and Yale xi. 189
Deane and others vii. 168
Delamere (lord) iv. 314. v. 48, 61, 104, 177
Delaware (lord) ii. 13
Denning and Norris xi. 192
Devonſhire (lord) iv. 314
Devonſhire (earl) vii. 243
Derby xi. 309, 313, 316, 318
Derby (earl) xi. 189, 192, 193
Deſmaiſtres and others vii. 160, 166, 177, 237, 358. ii. 201
Dive and Maningham vi 740
Dixy and Cutler vii. 243
Drake vii. 358
Duffus (lord) ix. * 699. x. 188, Ap.
Dutton and Howell xi. 190, 193

E.
Earbury xi. 309, 316, 318, 324, 326, 329
Eaſt-India Company and Campbell xi. 189
Eaton ii. 12
Elliot vii. 358
—— (ſir John) viii. 4
Ellis vii. 169
Elmham (ſir William) i. 821
Eſſex i. 815
—— (earl of) v. 83
Eſſex and Southampton (earls) i. 758. ii. 162
Everard vii. 159, 166, 175
Exeter (marchioneſs) v. 86. xi. 25
Eynon and Bright xi. 220

F.
Fairchild vii. 169
Farr xi. 211, 217, 229
Felton v. 126
Ferham v. 125
Fermer xi. 224, 228, 234
Ferrers (ſir Richard) vii. 111
Figot (ſir Thomas) vii. 223, 229
Finch (lord keeper) vii. 357. viii. 566
Finch (ſir Moyle) vii. 109
Fiſhere vii. 169
Fitzgerald xi. 233
Fitzharris iii. 1062. iv. 166, 177, 178, 182, 186, 190, 198, 199. 331. vi. 74, 75, 76. vii. 331, 358.
Flaring (ſir Rowland) vii. 111. ix. 314
Fleetwood and Curle iii. 1060
Flowerdew ii. 206
Fogoſſa vii. 243
Fowth vii. 104, 114
Fox vii. 135
Foxworthy ix. 586. n.
Frere vii. 169
Froſt and Waldeck xi. 237
Fuller ix. 288, 303
Furſman and Furſman xi. 216

G.
Garbut (ſir John) vii. 220, 226
Gardell xi. 208
Garnet ii. 175
Garvan and Roach xi. 220, 224
Gelly and Cleve xi. 345
Germain iii. 776
Githerd vii. 169
Goffe xi. 333
Gomeney i. 816
Gooch vi. 737
Goodwin (ſir Francis) viii. 145
Goudet vii. 358
Gover vi. 740
Gould and Smith xi. 345
Grahme (ſir Richard) vi. 804
Gray. See Grey.
Greene vii. 168
Green and Waller xi. 52
Gregg x. Ap. 77. n. vi. 74. 75
Gregory vii. 246
Greville x. 440
Griepe vi. 330
Griffin (lord) x. 203. xi. 329
Grey ix. 533
Grey (lord) iii. 765, 768, 778. viii. 468
Groenvelt and Burwell, and others xi. 190

H.
Harris and Aſhley x. 476
Harris xi. 332. viii. 95. n.
Harriſon vii. 118, 126, 134, 138, 228
Harvey. See Kingſton, ducheſs, her trial.
Harvey and Stanley i. 214
Hatfield and Hatfield xi. 206, 207, 210, 219, 221, 226, 229, 231, 235
Hatton (lady) iv. 354
Hawkins ix. 575
Haxey (ſir Thomas) iii. 784. v. 86, 125. vii. 829
Heale xi. 329
Heaning vii. 135
Heber iii. 776, 778
Helliards xi. 317
Hemart i. 823
Hengham xi. 332
Herbert (lord) v. 114
Herbert (the attorney-general) viii. 566
Heveningham (ſir John) vii. 143, 161
Hairton vii. 168
Hale and Mullers ix. 314
Hales (ſir Edward) ix. 292
Halliday and Pit xi. 337
Halliday and Oxenbridge vii. 124
Hampden iv. 166, 172, 177, 198. v. 132. ix. 296.
Harcourt vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 175, 178
Harding iii. 780

INDEX.

Harray (ſir Raw.) v. 86
Harris and James x. 433
Hick (ſir Baptiſt) iv. 354. xi. 305
Higgon and Coppinger xi. 220
Hiron and Tanfield ix. 302
Hitcham and Brooks iii. 780
——— and Carton ix. 314
Holland vii. 222
Hollis viii. 110
Holloway iv. 198. ix. 63, 64, 531. x. 203.
Holt and Andrews xi. 192
Hughes and Cornelius xi. 218
Huntington and Roe x. 433
Huſſey (doctor) vi. 741

J.

James and Harris x. 433
——— and Rutlech iii. 1054
Jamineau and Burroughs xi. 207, 218
Jeſſe ix. 314
Jeſſum and Collins xi. 219
Ingrey viii. 95. n.
Johnſon iv. 166. x. 582, 583. Ap. 188
Jones (ſir William) iv. 175
Jones and Bow xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228
Ivy (lady) iv. 30
Judges, 10 Rich. II. i. 706. ii. 289. vii. 236, 238

K.

Katrington i. 816
Kendal xi. 303, 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Kenn vii. 168. xi. 205, 211, 215, 219, 221, 226, 229
Kerrick and Branſby xi. 207
King xi. 332
Knox iv. 171
Koiver iii. 780

L.

Lake and Hatton xi. 305, 322
Llandaff (biſhop) vii. 357
Lane iv. 171
Larks i. 760
Latimer (lord) vii. 245
Laud (archbiſhop) ii. 160. vii. 566
Lawrence vii. 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Leeds (duke) vii. 358
Leiceſter (earl) and Mandy vi. 741
Lewis xi. 333
Lilburne ii. 203. iii. 345. xi. 344
Lindley vi. 740. vii. 168
Liſle (lady) v. 101
Littlepage vii. 135
Lloyd and Maddox xi. 220, 224, 228, 234
Loan vii. 237
London (biſhop) vii. 357
Long viii. 96
Lovat (lord) x. 436
Lovelace iv. 314
Luckup xi. 332

M.

Macclesfield (earl) v. 282
Maddocks and Lloyd xi. 220, 228, 234
Magdalen College vi. 709
Man vii. 126, 135, 138
Mandike and Slint xi. 192
March (earl) v. 116
Maugridge ix. 20, 49
Mayo (lady) and Brown xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235
Matthews and Matthews xi. 212
Merfield iii. 780
Middleſex (earl) vii. 357
Meggot (ſir George) viii. 111
Melliſent and Melliſent xi. 214, 219
Mendez and Villa Real xi. 219
Melvin vii. 228
Monmouth (duke) v. 83, 125, 131, 133
Monſon (ſir Thomas) vii. 118, 134, 137, 139, 158, 164, 175
Monſon and Weſt x. 433
Moody and Thurſton xi. 218
Moore and North iii. 782
Mordaunt (lord) v. 66, 132
Morley (lord) xi. 263
Mullers and Hale xi. 314
Morris and Webber xi. 209, 221, 226
Mortimer (lord) i. 214. v. 47, 83, 97, 107,
Murphy xi. 223, 233
Murray x. 203. xi. 336, 338
Muſkerry (lord) xi. 329

N.

Nevill and Stroud viii. 98, 109, 110
New College xi. 218
Newport vii. 126, 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Nixon xi. 333
Noel vii. 358
Noel and Wells xi. 207, 218
Norfolk (duke) i. 758. iii. 769, 775, 778. v. 132. vii. 11, 243
Norfolk election viii. 145
North and Moore iii. 782
North and Stockwith vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Northampton ix. 287, 302
Northumberland (earl) i. 760. iii. 778, 792, 821. vii. 226
Norrys (lord) vii. 246
Norton ix. 333
Norwich (biſhop) i. 820. vii. 357

O.

Oates iv. 166, 177
Okey ix. 583, * 653. x. 203, 204
Oneal vii. 357
Onſlow viii. 94
Overbury ii. 26
Overbury (ſir Thomas) x. 439
Overton vii. 157, 163, 174
Owen iii. 769, 776, 778. vii. 227
Oxenbridge and Halliday vii. 124

P.

Page vii. 139, 160, 166, 175, 237
Paine vi. 415. vii. 138
Parker vii. 120, 123, 134, 138, 139, 157, 162, 174, 235
Partridge vii. 247
Paſton xi. 337
Pattere vii. 168
Peacham iv. 197
Peak and Paul vii. 220
Peak vii. 223
Pen (ſir William) vii. 358
Penn and Mead ix. 294
Penny and Butts xi. 344
Pepper vii. 169
Perry xi. 213
Peſtle vii. 168
Peterborough (earl) vii. 358
Petre (lord) vii. 358
Phillips and Badby vii. 225
Phillips and Bury xi. 207
Phillips and Prudham xi. 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
Pickering and Thornton xi. 220
Pinchman i. 424
Pine iii. 780. iv. 197
Pitt iii. 1062
Plowden vii. 243
Plunket iii. 765, 770. viii. 468, 782, 791
Pole (cardinal) iii. 111, 768, 776, 778. vi. 566. vii. 221
Pons and Johnſon xi. 189, 192
Pope vii. 220
Poulter vi. 737. vii. 226
Poulterer vii. 118
Powell and Barnſby xi. 218
Powis (earl) vii. 358
Poyning vii. 132, 154, 221, 237
Preſs and Beresford iii. 780
Preſton (lord) vi. 75, 804
Prudham and Phillips xi. 207, 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
Pym ix. 304

Q.

Quick iii. 780

R.

Radcliffe (ſir George) vii. 357
Raleigh (ſir Walter) iii. 111. iv. 169. viii. 468. x. 583, 768, 776, 778, 1062
Ramkiſſenſent and Barker xi. 193
Ratcliff x. 203
Ravaillac v. 126
Rawlin x. 440
Rayner vii. 118, 134, 135, 138, 159, 165, 186
Reading ix. 309
Regicides v. 82
Reynel ((ſir George) iii. 549, 550
Rhodes xi. 213, 219, 233
Richardſon xi. 223, 233
Rivers x. 434. n.
Rivers and Buckley vii. 123
Roach and Garvan xi. 220, 224
Roberts xi. 208
Robins and Crutchley xi. 220, 227, 231
Robinſon and Bland xi. 188
Roe xi. 303 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Roe and Huntington x. 433
Rogers vii. 135, 138
Rolph ii. 40, 173
Rookwood iv. 743
Roſewell vii. 149, 177, 178
Rudyard xi. 304, 911
Rug vii. 237
Ruſſel (lord) iv. 169, 172, 177, 178, 186, 188, 190, 199, 200. v. 85, 88, 97, 120, 130. vi. 74. vii. 641. n.
Ruſſell vii. 228, 234, 235, 238
Ruſwell vii. 225. xi. 336
Rutland (counteſs) xi. 263
Rutlech and James iii. 1054

S.

Sacheverel vi. 74, 75, 76, 77
Saint Albans and Cox xi. 192
Saliſbury iv. 199. x. 584
Saliſbury (earl) vii. 358
Saltonſtall (ſir Samuel) vii. 160, 166, 167, 177, 178
Sanchar (lord) ii. 10. viii. 349, 437
Sanders i. 333. ix. 304. x. 433, 437
Sandis vii. 169
Savage vii. 216
Scots (Mary, queen of) ii. 11
Scrogs (ſir William) vii. 358
Scroop (lord) i. 87
Search xi. 336
Sedley (ſir Charles) x. Ap. 93. n.
Serle and Williams xi. 220, 260
Seven Biſhops ix. 288, 292, 302. xi. 304, 319
Seymour (ſir Edward) vii. 358
Seymour (lord) vii. 243
Seymour (ſir Thomas) v. 83, 131
Shafteſbury (earl) iv. 181, 183. xi. 336, 338
Sherave vii. 169
Sherburn vii. 146
Shirley ii. 11, 12, 13. vii. 233
Sidney iii. 1064. iv. 169, 172, 177, 186, 196, 342. v. 68, 79, 96, 103, 130. vi. 74, 75, 76.
Simmonds xi. 332
Sinclair and Fraſer xi. 221, 232
Smith ix. 310
Smith and Aſh iv. 199
Smith and Gould xi. 345
Smith and Mall vi. 740
Soame and Barnardiſton iii. 782. viii. 98, 109. ix. 288, 292
Somerſet (earl) i. 758. ii. 162. x. 444
——— (counteſs) xi. 264
Sorrel and Thomas iv. 384
Southampton and Eſſex (earls) i. 758. ii. 162. iii. 775, 778
Spademan vii. 168
Sparhawke iii. 776
Specot vii. 220
Spenſer (father and ſon) viii. 566
Spikeſworth i. 819
Spore vii. 169
Stafford i. 86. ii. 35. n. ix. 583. x. 203
Stafford (viſcount) iii. 345, 769, 776, 778
Stanley and Harvey xi. 345
Stanley (ſir Henry) i. 214
Stanley (ſir Rowland) v. 70
Stephenſon ii. 12, 13
Stirling xi. 223, 225, 229
Stockwith and North vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Storey (doctor) i. 516. iii. 764, 768, 770, 775, 778, 782, 791. v. 88. vii. 228. viii. 344, 468. See name in Index.
Stowell (ſir John) ii. 91
Strafford (earl) ii. 160, 198, 206. iii. 784. v. 49, 59, 83, 84, 95, 96, 97, 108, 483, 484. viii. 566
Stroude and Nevill viii. 98, 109, 110
Sturton (lord) iii. 775. vii. 94
Suffolk (duke) i. 214, 822. vii. 171, 238, 243
Suffolk (earl) i. 759
Summers xi. 305

T.

Tanfield and Heron ix. 302
Tankerville (lord) xi. 304, 305
Tankred viii. 111. n.
Tarquin x. 435
Taylor iii. 776
Terret (ſir Richard) ix. 314
Thickneſſe xi. 336
Thomas and Sorrel iv. 384. vii. 613, 617, 620, 626, 627, 632
Thornton and Pickering xi. 220
Thorp vii. 243
Thorp (ſir William) i. 705. vi. 496
Throgmorton ii. 27
Thurſton and Moody xi. 218
Timelbie vii. 237
Trelawny and Williams xi. 192
Trewynnard xi. 338
Trollop vii. 220
Tutchin ix. 287, 288, 297, 303, 304. xi. 333
Twyne vi. 737. xi. 233
Tyrone (earl) vii. 358

V.

Vane (ſir Henry) iii. 765, 769, 770, 775. viii. 468, 778
Vaughan vii. 358. viii. 255
Vaux i. 757. vii. 222. ix. 436. x. 436
Venables and Barrington xi. 192
Verelſt and Cojimaul xi. 192
Vernon (ſir Thomas) vii. 118, 134
Villa Real and Mendez xi. 219
Vincent xi. 207, 213, 219, 222, 223, 225, 226, 229, 236

U.

Unwin vii. 168
Upwell vii. 68
Urſwick vii. 136, 159, 166, 175

W.

Waldeck and Froſt xi. 237
Wallis ii. 11
Walſh iii. 603
Ward xi. 189
Ward (ſir Patience) iv. 172
Wardour (lord A.) vii. 358
Warrington (lord) v. 128
Warwick (lord) xi. 257, 259, 260
Watts and Brains ix. 64, 536
Weyland (ſir Thomas) i. 704
Webb vi. 737
Webb and Cook xi. 220
Webber and Morris xi. 209, 221, 226
Weld x. Ap. 24. n.
Wells v. 114
Wells and Nowel xi. 207, 218
Welcks vii. 111
Wendon vii. 118, 134, 138, 159, 165
Wentworth (lord) i. 823
Weſt and Monſon x. 433
Weſton i. 816
Wharton iv. 743. v. 282
White and Aſhby x. 136. Ap.
Whitebread iv. 190
Whitehead iv. 743
Widdrington iv. 199
Wigg vi. 741
Williams ix. 534, 535. n.
——— and Searle xi. 220, 260
——— and Trelawny iii. 1062. iv. 354. xi. 192
Wilmer iv. 172, 186
Wilkes xi. 336, 338
——— and Wood xi. 321
Winkfield vii. 121

Withypole (ſir William) x. 38
Winchester (biſhop) vii. 243
Woodburne vi. 804
Woolſey (cardinal) vi. 566
Wraynham ix. 314
Wyndham (ſir William) xi. 304, 315, 316

Y.

Yarley xi. 316
Yew vii. 139, 159, 165
York (archbiſhop) vii. 243

Z.

Zanchar (See Zanchar)

CASSELLS, ROBERT. See BERNARDI JOHN, Major.
CASTLEHAVEN, MERVIN Earl. See AUDLEY, MERVIN Lord.

* CASTLEMAINE, ROGER Earl of,

* His trial for high treaſon, June 23, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 36
* Indictment for high treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, the ſubverſion of the government, religion, &c. iii. 37
* Sir Creſwell Levinz, attorney-general, opens the evidence iii. 37
* Oates's evidence of ſeveral letters ſent and received by my lord Caſtlemaine about the plot iii. 38
* Oates's voyages to Spain and Flanders iii. 39
* Oates's evidence of a divorce between the lord Caſtlemaine and Barbara ducheſs of Cleveland iii. 42
* Dangerfield called as a witneſs for the king iii. 43
* Sixteen records of conviction againſt Dangerfield for a cheat iii. 44
* Upon which the priſoner objects to his being ſworn iii. 44
* The matter debated between the king's and the priſoner's counſel iii. 45
* The opinion of the court of common pleas aſked iii. 47
* Dangerfield admitted to be ſworn iii. 47
* He depoſed that my lord managed the St. Omer's witneſſes iii. 47
* Mentions a ſham-plot iii. 47
* Depoſes that my lord was angry with him becauſe he refuſed to kill the king iii. 48
* The lord Caſtlemaine enters upon his defence iii. 48
* Produces a record, and calls witneſſes to impeach Oates's credit iii. 49, 50
* Records of Dangerfield's being outlawed for felony, and ſeveral times pilloried for cheating iii. 52
* Mrs. Cellier's evidence of my lord's ill opinion of Dangerfield iii. 53
* The attorney general ſums up the evidence iii. 55
* The lord chief juſtice directs the jury iii. 55
* My lord Caſtlemaine acquitted iii. 57
* The proceedings in the houſe of commons againſt him, 1689, 1 W. and M. iv. 397
* Charged with going ambaſſador to Rome, and for ſitting in council not having taken the oaths iv. 397
* He anſwers, that there was no law againſt going to Rome; and he might not diſobey the king's commands iv. 397
* That he tranſacted nothing there concerning religion; and ſhews how ſerviceable he was to the Engliſh merchants while he reſided at Rome iv. 398
* As to his ſitting in council, the judges were of opinion, the king might diſpenſe with the oaths iv. 399
* Complains he was illegally impriſoned at the Revolution iv. 399
* He is committed to the Tower by order of the houſe of commons, and confined cloſe priſoner iv. 400
* He moves for a habeas corpus, and is admitted to bail iv. 400

CATESBY, Juſtice,

His opinion cited xi. 218

CATHERINE, Queen to CHARLES I.

Characteriſed by the earl of Dorſet and ſir John Finch i. 428

CATLIN, Sir ROBERT, Chief Juſtice B. R.

His ſpeech before judgment againſt Hickford for treaſon i. 118. See iii. 603
A perſon was indicted in B. R. for ſaying judge Catlin was an unjuſt judge vii. 111

CAVENAGH, MAURICE,

Edmund Poor, and William Bowland, their trial in Ireland, for felony in ſtealing cows, March 7, 1688-89, 1 W. and M. iv. 408
The evidence iv. 408
Poor and Bowland guilty iv. 408
Cavenagh not guilty iv. 408
The convicts are put to read for their clergy iv. 408, 409
The ordinary returns them both non legit iv. 409
Judge Keating's ſpeech before ſentence iv. 409
Copy of a protection or paſs given by an Iriſh officer to ſome notorious robbers of the county of Wicklow iv. 409
Letter ſent by the lord deputy to the judges of aſſize iv. 410
Anſwer to the foregoing letter being drawn up by the grand jury, and entered in a book, on preſentation of it to judge Lynch, he told them it was a reflection and ſcandal to their country; whereupon it was torn out of the book iv. 410

C A U S E S.

See ASHBY MATTHEW, and WILLIAM WHITE viii. 89
BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL, and Sir WILLIAM SOAME.
CALVIN ROBERT, and RICHARD SMITH, &c. xi. 86
CRAIG CAMPBELL, and the Earl of ANGLESEA.
EAST INDIA COMPANY, and THOMAS SANDYS.
ENTICK JOHN, Clerk, and NATHAN CARRINGTON and others.
FABRIGAS ANTHONY, and Governor MOSTYN.
GOODWIN Sir FRANCIS, and Sir JOHN FORTESCUE.
JAY JOHN, and JOHN TOPHAM viii. 1
LEACH DRYDEN, and JOHN MONEY and others.
MOORE HENRY, and CORPORATION of HASTINGS.
NORFOLK Duke of, and JOHN GERMAINE.
PACKINGTON Sir JOHN, and the Biſhop of WORCESTER.
PRITCHARD Sir WILLIAM, and THOMAS PAPILLON.
SHIRLEY Doctor, and Sir JOHN FAGG.
YORKE Duke of, and TITUS OATES iii. 987. * See alſo ACTION.

* CELLIER, ELIZABETH,

* Her trial for high treaſon, June 11, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 32
* The indictment for conſpiring the death of the king, and endeavouring to throw the plot upon other people iii. 32
* Gadbury the aſtrologer's evidence iii. 32
* Dangerfield called as a witneſs iii. 35
* Briſcoe's evidence againſt Dangerfield iii. 35
* His pardon adjudged defective by the court, as to the outlawry of felony iii. 36
* Mrs. Cellier is acquitted iii. 36
* Dangerfield is taken into cuſtody iii. 36
* Her trial at the Old Bailey, September 11, 1680, 32 Car. II. for a libel iii. 89
* The indictment for writing and publiſhing a libel called Malice defeated, reflecting on the king, the proteſtant religion, the government, magiſtrates, king's evidence, and the juſtice of the nation iii. 89. vi. 14. Ap.
* Particularly it charges the murder of king Charles I. on the principles of the proteſtant religion; the proſecutors of the popiſh plot as enemies to the crown; charges the government with uſing racks and tortures to compel Prance and Corral to commit perjury; ſays, that it is dangerous to ſpeak truth, and meritorious and gainful to give falſe evidence iii. 90
* Mr. Dormer's ſpeech before giving the evidence iii. 91
* John Penny gives evidence of his buying the book of her, and her owning herſelf to be the author iii. 92
* Downing the printer's evidence of his printing part of the book to fol. 22. by Mrs. Cellier's directions iii. 93
* Stephens's evidence of her acknowledging herſelf the author, and that ſhe dictated the words to an Amanuenſis iii. 93
* Fowler depoſes he bought two books of her, and atteſts it was all falſe that was in the libel concerning his being at Newgate with ſome great lords, and the threats and promiſes that were uſed to Corral there iii. 94
* His evidence that Corral ſaid, he ſaw ſir Edmondbury Godfrey's body in a ſedan, and they would have had him take the body into his coach iii. 94
* The book and the indictment compared in court iii. 95
* Prance depoſes he was never tortured, but was very well uſed in Newgate iii. 96
* Corral's wife depoſes, that ſhe was not ſuffered to ſee her huſband in Newgate; that he had holes in his legs when he came out, and was in danger of being ſtarved there iii. 96
* Mrs. Cellier complains ſhe had not time to get her witneſſes; and urges in her defence, that if ſhe had offended, it was ignorantly, for that ſhe apprehended it lawful to publiſh what others told her iii. 97
* To induce the court to be merciful, ſhe ſhews the hazards ſhe had run to ſerve his majeſty; and that ſhe loſt a father and a brother, both in one day, in his ſervice iii. 98
* Mr. baron Weſton directs the jury: he tells them, that to torture criminals was illegal, and never uſed in England ſince Campion the jeſuit was put upon the rack, in the 20th year of the reign of queen Elizabeth iii. 98
* The jury deſire to have the book with them out of court, but are told they could have no papers out of court, that were not under ſeal, without the priſoner's conſent; which ſhe refuſed iii. 100
* The jury, after a little time, returned, and brought the priſoner in guilty iii. 100
* Mrs. Cellier is committed, and carried priſoner to Newgate iii. 100
* Monday, September 13, 1680, mrs. Cellier being brought into court, mr. recorder, ſir George Jefferies, pronounced judgment on her iii. 101

CERTIORARI.

Certiorari moved for in B. R. to remove indictment againſt the Abbotſbury witneſſes, refuſed x. 242
Motion for ſuperſedeas thereto x. 242
Never ſuperſeded, becauſe lord chief juſtice Lee never came into court afterwards, and refuſed till that happened x. 242
CERTIORARI and RETURNS on the TRIALS of PEERS. See
BALMERINO, ARTHUR lord ix. 596*
BYRON, WILLIAM lord x. 517*
CROMARTIE, GEORGE earl of ix. 590*
FERRERS, LAWRENCE earl of x. 478
KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM earl of ix. 590*
KINGSTON, ELIZABETH ducheſs dowager of xi. 198
MOHUN, CHARLES lord iv. 512. v. 137
MORLEY, THOMAS lord vii. 222
WARWICK, EDWARD earl of v. 137

CHADWICK, THOMAS,

His trial for treaſon, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 555
Evidence againſt him ix. 556
His counſel aſked the witneſs, if he did not expect to ſave his life by ſwearing; the queſtion objected to ix. 556
Found guilty, and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 557
Some account of him ix. 558

* C H A L L E N G E.

* No challenge to a peer i. 388. vii. 18, 422. n.
* Juror challenged in Scotland for having pre-judged the cauſe i. 471
* At the Old-Bailey iv. 748
* Where a juror has a poſſibility of an intereſt in the cauſe, good cauſe of challenge i. 952
* None may aſſiſt the priſoner in his challenges ii. 41. iv. 608
* No peremptory challenge but in capital caſes ii. 808
* The king need not ſhew cauſe, till the pannel is gone thro' iii. 469
* Contra iv. 423. v. 195

* Challenge to the array iii. 631

* Challenge for want of freehold in London, not allowed iii. 135

* No challenge can be to the favour againſt the king iii. 825

* No challenge without cauſe, in caſe of a miſdemeanour iv. 1

* The having been upon the grand jury held to be a good cauſe of challenge iv. 2

* That a juror has given a verdict againſt another in the ſame indictment, no good cauſe of challenge iv. 704

* A ſuit at law between a priſoner and a juryman no good cauſe of challenge, unleſs proved by a record vi. 59

* A challenge for a miſnomer in the pannel over-ruled vi. 59

* The priſoner obliged to declare whether he will accept or challenge a juryman before the king's counſel take their exception vi. 247

* Two peremptory challenges allowed vi. 248

Priſoners refuſing to join in their challenges to be tried ſeparately iv. 423. x. 38

Agreeing to join, tried together ix. 720, x. 38

Refuſed, though requeſted, to be tried ſeparately, on ſevering in their challenges ix. 7

No peremptory challenges on collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583

Challenge to juror, becauſe he gave his dogs the names of Oates and Bedlow, the king's witneſſes; allowed a good exception to him iii. 317

Peremptory challenge of thirty-five in petit treaſon ix. 11. x. 38

Challenge to juryman after oath adminiſtered, but before he had kiſſed the book, over-ruled vii. 321

Priſoners may except to any of the jury for juſt cauſe, and in capital caſes to a large number without cauſe Em. Pref. iii.

One of the rebels, in 1746, challenged peremptorily, and for cauſe, ſo many of the jurors, that there was not a ſufficient number left on the pannel to proceed on his trial; when the court, ore tenus, ordered a new pannel, and adjourned ix. 587

On the day of adjournment, the ſheriff returned a pannel of the ſame jurors that had ſerved through the whole proceeding, thoſe who had been challenged by the priſoner, or ſworn before, included ix. 587. See JURY.

CHAMBERS, JAMES. See BERNARDI JOHN, Major.

CHAMBERS, RICHARD,

Proceedings againſt him in the Star-chamber, for ſeditious ſpeeches before the privy council, 5 Car. I. 1629 xi. 118

Subſtance of the information xi. 118

Subſtance of the defendant's anſwer xi. 118

Witneſſes examined, though defendant confeſſed xi. 118

Cauſe heard, and defendant convicted xi. 118

Sentence paſſed xi. 118

Great difference of opinion about the fine xi. 118

That difference ſtated xi. 118

The ſubmiſſion which defendant refuſed to acknowledge xi. 118

The king's writ impoſing the fine xi. 118

Defendant's plea thereto xi. 119

Order of Exchequer for deferring filing the plea xi. 119

Hab. Corp. and return, whereon Chambers was committed to the Fleet xi. 119

Chambers died in 1658, at ſeventy years of age, after twenty-ſix years impriſonment, troubles, and loſſes in ſtanding for the liberty of the ſubject xi. 120

One of the charges in the articles of treaſon againſt ſir Edward Berkley, juſtice B. R. was his declarations and conduct on the bench, on Chambers's action reſpecting ſhip-money i. 711

CHAMBERS.

Information amendable by judge at chambers xi. 333

*CHANCELLOR.

* The ſenſe of lord chancellor's oath diſputed i. 2. vi. 503, 620, 704, 736, 747

The chancellor is the keeper of the king's conſcience vii. 488

The chancellor, as ſuch, cannot commit iv. 555

Formerly chancellors took money for the places of the maſters in chancery vi. 650

Chancellors who have been committed, indicted, impeached, fined, removed, or otherwiſe proceeded againſt, or puniſhed for mal-practices, or crimes:

Arundel (archbiſhop)
Bacon (lord)
Clarendon (earl)
Jefferies (lord)
Macclesfield (earl)
More, ſir Thomas
Shafteſbury (earl)
Somers (lord)
Suffolk (earl)
Wolſey (cardinal)

See COVENTRY, Lord. FINCH, Sir JOHN. KEEPERS of the GREAT SEAL.

CHANCE MEDLEY.

Homicide in ſhooting at a wild fowl, wherein no man hath any property, is not felony, but only chance medley vi. 222

CHANCERY.

Chancery has power to renew a writ of appeal, if juſt ſo to do vii. 321. viii. 487

Eight judges of opinion, that the lord keeper was not bound by the opinions of the majority of the judges, by him called to his aſſiſtance, but was at liberty to give judgment according to his own opinion; and among theſe judges was lord chief juſtice Holt; three judges were of a contrary opinion xi. 159, 160

CHARACTER.

The nature and proper weight of evidence to character viii. 246

The reaſon why particular facts are not to be given in evidence to impeach the character of a witneſs vi. 76, 316

CHARITY. See BELISARIUS.

Lord chancellor Cowper encouraged charitable collections x. 88. Ap. See CAMPMAN. HENDLEY, Clerk.

It is illegal to collect charity money without letters patent or briefs, the ſame being an invaſion not only on the king's prerogative, but alſo upon the legiſlature; and though gathered on the biſhop's circular letter, unleſs the ſame be authorized by a letter from the king, under his ſign manual, directed to the biſhop, permitting him ſo to do x. 88, 91. Ap.

Indictment for collecting charity money x. 87. Ap.

CHARITY SERMONS. See CAMPMAN. HENDLEY, Clerk.

CHARLES the FIRST.

His misfortunes were occaſioned chiefly by the corruptions of the long robe iii. 222. vii. 480

In the time of Charles the Firſt the parliament took great offence at ſome attempts for free gifts to the crown x. 90. Ap.

The ſtatutes of 16 Car. I. are in ſome collections ſtiled ſtatutes of 16 and 17 Car. I. iv. 310. See * King CHARLES. SHIP MONEY. STUART FAMILY.

CHARLES the SECOND. See LANE JANE. WHITFORD Sir PAUL.

* CHARNELL, NATHANIEL iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* CHARNOCK, JOHN i. 126. See ABINGTON, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ROBERT iii. 515. See GREY, lord, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ANNE iii. 515. See GREY, lord, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ROBERT,

* Edward King, and Thomas Keyes, their trial for high-treaſon, in conſpiring to aſſaſſinate king William; March 11, 1695, 8 W. III. iv. 562

* Charnock inſiſts on the equity of being allowed counſel, a copy of the indictment, &c. according to the late act, which was then to take place in a few days; but is denied iv. 563

* The indictment read in Latin twice iv. 565

* The priſoners agree to join in their challenges, that they may be tried together iv. 566

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 567

* The priſoners deſire one witneſs may not hear what another depoſes; granted iv. 569

* Porter's evidence of the deſign'd aſſaſſination iv. 569

* Charnock objects againſt Porter's evidence, that he owns himſelf an accomplice iv. 572

* But is over-ruled iv. 573

* De la Rue's evidence iv. 575

* Pendergraſs's evidence iv. 580

* Charnock's defence, and remarks upon the evidence iv. 583

* Sir John Hawles, ſolicitor-general, his reply iv. 589

* Mr. Conyers and mr. Cowper on the ſame ſide iv. 590

* Lord chief juſtice ſums up the evidence iv. 591

* The priſoners convicted iv. 595

* Charnock's exceptions to the frame of the indictment iv. 596

* Sentence paſſed on the priſoners iv. 597

* Their dying ſpeeches iv. 598. x. 67. Ap. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.

CHARTERS.

All the charters of England were ſeized, and not regranted, but at exceſſive rates, to ſtarving the poor, who ſhould have been fed with the money where with the new charters were purchaſed iv. 172. See id. 165

Jefferies, who owed his preferments, amongſt the reſt of his miſcarriages, to the rape he committed upon the charter of the city of London, was obliged to be the meſſenger to carry it back again from whence it was taken iii. 628

The ſeizing the city and other charters, upon the pretences on which they were queſtioned, was without example. iv. 165. See QUO WARRANTO.

CHEAT.

Fitzharris was a cheat more than a traitor iv. 171

Records of proceedings againſt a cheat vi. 58, 59. Ap. See FULLER WILLIAM. HATHAWAY RICHARD. HURLEY PATRICK.

CHESSYRE, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Reaſon and Tranter, ſheriff's officers, for murder, vi. 197

His ſpeech on the trial of Edward Arnold viii. 292

His obſervations on the evidence viii. 313

His ſpeech againſt Bambridge for murder ix. 146, 235

His ſpeech againſt Huggins for murder ix. 113

His obſervations on Matthews's trial for treaſon ix. 706

CHETWYND, WILLIAM, Eſq.

His trial for the murder of Thomas Rickets, on three indictments, at the Old Bailey, in October 1743, 16 Geo. II. ix. 527

Counſel's names for and againſt him ix. 527

Evidence againſt him ix. 527, &c.

Caſes cited at length in his trial ix. 537

Opinions on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, in his caſe ix. 538

Counſel for the priſoner called no witneſſes, but made obſervations on the evidence ix. 532

Counſel for the crown made a reply ix. 535

Court was of opinion to have a ſpecial verdict found, which was done accordingly ix. 537

Caſe laid before Mr. Strange, for his opinion, whether murder or not, and if proper to bring an appeal, in caſe of a pardon ix. 538-9

Mr. Chetwynd's petition to lords juſtices ix. 539

Reference to attorney and ſolicitor-general ix. 540-1

He was pardoned, and pleaded the ſame at the King's Bench bar ix. 541

Mr. Strange's report of the caſe ix. 542

* CHICHESTER, THOMAS, Biſhop of, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.

CHIEF JUSTICES.

Reſolved by all the judges of England, that the chiefs were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward, in their collars of S. S. vii. 421

CHILD. See PARENT and CHILD.

CHIVALRY. See REA, Lord.

CHRISTMAS-DAY.

This day enjoined to be kept as a faſt i. 947

*CHURCH.

* The church to determine what is true doctrine, and not the parliament i. 935

* The clergy had a power heretofore of granting their own ſubſidies i. 851

CHURCHILL, Sir JOHN, Counſellor at Law,

Was ordered into cuſtody for a breach of privilege vii. 459

CHUTE, Mr. the Civilian,

Spoke learnedly and home for his grace James, duke of Hamilton ii. 5

CIRCULAR LETTERS. See CHARITY.

CIRCUMSPECTE AGATIS, vii. 194. See 13 Edw. I. ſt. 4. in chronological ſeries, under STATUTES.

CIVIL SUITS.

They are tedious and dilatory, and from what cauſe Em. Pref. iii.

CLARE, Earl of,

Proceedings in Star-chamber againſt him, for publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD, earl of.

CLARENDON, EDWARD* Earl of,

* Proceedings againſt him in the houſe of lords, 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 554

* Articles exhibited againſt him by the earl of Briſtol ii. 554

* The judges opinions, that the charge was not regularly brought in, nor contained matter of treaſon, if proved ; with their reaſons ii. 556, &c.

* With which reſolutions the houſe of lords concur ii. 558

* Proceedings againſt him on an impeachment by the commons, 1667, 19 Car. II. ii. 558

* The heads of the commons charge againſt the earl of Clarendon ii. 560

* Reſolved, that the houſe had ſufficient grounds to impeach the earl ii. 563

* Reſolved, to impeach him of high-treaſon on the 16th article, for betraying his majeſty's counſels to his enemies ii. 567

* Mr. Edward Seymour carries up the impeachment in general terms ii. 567

* The lords refuſe to commit the earl, becauſe the impeachment was for treaſon in general ii. 568

* The commons inſiſt that a peer ought to be committed on a general impeachment ii. 569

* Conference between the two houſes upon that point ii. 570

* The lords inſiſt upon their refuſal to commit him ii. 573

* Which the commons reſolve to be an obſtruction of public juſtice ii. 577

* A meſſage from the lords that the earl was withdrawn ii. 577

* The earl's petition to the houſe of lords communicated to the commons ii. 578

* He inſinuates that his eſtate was not ſo great as repreſented ii. 578

* And that he was not the author of thoſe counſels he was charged with ii. 578

* His petition voted ſcandalous and ſeditious ii. 580

* A bill brought into the houſe of lords for the earl's baniſhment ii. 582

* The commons agree to the bill for his baniſhment ii. 584. See viii. 387

His vindication of himſelf againſt the articles of treaſon, exhibited againſt him in parliament viii. 387

Mr. Seymour's ſpeech at the bar of the houſe of lords viii. 387

The articles viii. 388

His letter from Montpelier viii. 388

His anſwer to the firſt article, that he deſigned a ſtanding army viii. 389

To the ſecond, that he had ſaid the king was a papiſt viii. 392

To the third, ſetting forth the proceedings concerning the Canary patent viii. 392, 393

To the fourth, that he had procured the impriſonment of the ſubject againſt law viii. 397

To the fifth, of corruptly ſelling ſeveral offices viii. 397

To the ſixth, concerning the farming his majeſty's cuſtoms viii. 397

To the ſeventh, concerning receiving money from the vintners viii. 400

To the eighth, concerning procuring ſeveral grants to himſelf and relations viii. 400

To the ninth, concerning the introducing arbitrary government in his majeſty's plantations viii. 400

The caſe of the ſeveral grantees of the iſland of Barbadoes, fully ſtated viii. 401

To the tenth, for fruſtrating the propoſal for ſecuring St. Chriſtopher's, &c. and reducing the French plantations viii. 405

To the eleventh, concerning the ſale of Dunkirk viii. 405

To the twelfth, concerning the undue altering and erazing the inrollment of his majeſty's letters patent to one doctor Crowther viii. 407

To the thirteenth, for arbitrarily examining and threatening his majeſty's ſubjects viii. 407

To the fourteenth, for iſſuing quo warrantos againſt ſeveral corporations, and taking money to renew their charters viii. 407, 408

To the fifteenth, for procuring the bills of ſettlement for Ireland, and taking money for the ſame viii. 408

A narrative of the whole tranſaction viii. 409

The names of the commiſſioners for the bill of ſettlement viii. 416

The commiſſioners diſliked viii. 417

They attend his majeſty, and their defence viii. 418

The caſe of the marquis of Antrim viii. 419

To the ſixteenth, for betraying his majeſty in the treaties, &c. relating to the late war viii. 425

The treaty with the Dutch upon which the peace was made, its inducements, progreſs and concluſion, ſet forth viii. 426

To the ſeventeenth, for adviſing the fatal dividing the fleet, about June, 1666, viii. 432

His reaſons for withdrawing himſelf viii. 434

His commiſſion of lord high ſteward, on the trial of Thomas, lord Morley, in Latin vii. 422

His proceſſion on that ſolemn occaſion vii. 423

CLARINGDON.

The conſtitutions of Claringdon xi. 72

CLARK, ROBERT, Baron of the Exchequer,

His argument concerning impoſitions. See BATES JOHN.

CLARK, THOMAS,

Opens caſe for Henry Moore, againſt mayor, jurats and commonalty of town and port of Haſtings x. 138. Ap.

CLARK, WILLIAM. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

CLERK of ASSIZE.

He is conſtantly joined with the judges in the commiſſions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, for the trial of criminals, even for capital offences vi. 706

CLEMENT, GREGORY.* See REGICIDES.

*CLERGY.

* The caſe of a peer as to benefit of clergy, in buggery and rape i. 388

* A woman could not have the benefit of clergy ii. 502

* A peer who has his clergy, not to be burnt in the hand ii. 655

* One convicted of felony, and admitted to his clergy, is reſtored to his credit iii. 45

* Action lies for charging a man with a crime after he has had his clergy, or a pardon v. 168

* The king might pardon the burning in an appeal v. 169

* A clergyman was not to be burnt in the hand v. 170

* The original of clergy, and how it came to be extended to laymen v. 171

* Burning, as well as reading, was neceſſary to reſtore a man to his credit v. 171

Clergyman to be diveſted of his canonical habit by the eccleſiaſtical court only viii. 475

When canonical election began firſt in England xi. 72

In the time of king Hen. II. the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the ſecular power xi. 72

The proceedings on the ceremony of degrading a clergyman vii. 648

The judges bowed, in token of their conſent that a peer ſhould have the benefit of clergy vii. 428

Peereſs intitled to benefit of clergy, on conviction for bigamy xi. 264

COBBY, JOHN. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

COBHAM, Lord.

How his trial was managed does not appear vii. 63, 64, &c. See OLDCASTLE Sir JOHN.

COFFEE-HOUSES. See LIBELS.

COIN. See MONEY.

COKE, ARUNDEL*, Eſq.

* His trial at the aſſizes for the county of Suffolk, with John Woodburne, for disfiguring Edward Criſpe, gent. March 13, 1721, 8 Geo. I. vi. 212

This gentleman, who was of the long robe, pleaded, that his intent was to murder vi. 219. * See WOODBURNE JOHN. vi. 60. Ap.

COKE, Sir EDWARD,

Enforces the charge againſt the earls of Eſſex and Southampton for high treaſon i. 199

His ſpeech on the trial of ſir Walter Raleigh for high treaſon, in conſpiring to depoſe the king, and for publiſhing a book againſt his majeſty's title i. 214

Is interrupted by ſir Walter i. 214

Affirms, that circumſtantial evidence alone is ſufficient to convict a man of high treaſon i. 219

Gives ſir Walter ſcurrilous language i. 216, 220

Is reproved by the court i. 223. Em. Pref. i.

Jeffs was indicted for exhibiting an infamous libel againſt ſir Edward Coke, late chief juſtice B. R. i. 722. ix. 314

His books were publiſhed by ſpecial orders and authority of parliament for good law ii. 21, 288. v. 114. vii. 358

His inſtitutes cited ii. 89

A Gray's Inn poet tranſlated Coke upon Lyttelton into rhime iii. 773

Lord chief juſtice Coke differs from mr. attorney Coke iii. 775

The caſe between James and Rutlech, in 4 rep. 17. b. cited at large, reſpecting innuendos iii. 1054

The famous ſaying of queen Elizabeth of him as attorney general iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.

Gives an exact and particular account of the popiſh plot i. 235, 249, 250, 251

Shews the aggravation the crime of Garnet, tried for treaſon, in promoting the gun-powder plot, was attended with i. 249

Sir Edward's reply to his defence i. 260

Paſſes ſentence i. 248

His ſpeech, on paſſing ſentence on Weſton for murder i. 332

His ſpeech before ſentence, on the proceedings againſt ſir John Hollis, &c. for traducing the public juſtice i. 337

His ſpeech on the arraignment of ſir Thomas Monſon for murder i. 347

The lord chief juſtice was rebuked for his indiſcretion, having, on this arraignment, let drop ſome inſinuations, that Overbury's death had ſomewhat in it of retaliation, as if ſir Thomas Overbury had been guilty of the ſame crime againſt prince Henry; and before the next year expired, ſir Edward was removed from his poſt i. 347

A miſtake in his third inſtitute corrected vi. 735, 759

His ſpeech on the trial of ſir Chriſtopher Blunt, and others vii. 49

Urges a correſpondence between the earl of Eſſex, ſir Chriſtopher and Tyrone vii. 54

He told Henry Cuffe, that he was the arranteſt traitor that ever came to the bar ; and added, that he would give him ſuch a cuff as ſhould ſet him down, and thereupon called to have read the deceaſed earl of Eſſex's confeſſion vii. 59

His report of lord Sanquhar's caſe vii. 91

He informed againſt Fowth in the Star-chamber, ore tenus, for petitioning his his majeſty againſt lord chancellor Elleſmere, for granting an injunction for ſtaying of a ſuit at the common law, and being convicted, upon his own confeſſion, he received a ſharp cenſure vii. 104

His ſpeech on cenſuring Wraynham for ſlandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 108
The profeſſors of the law in all ages will be much bound to ſir Edward Coke vii. 146
Sir Edward Coke ſaid, that of his own knowledge, lord Anderſon's reports were of his [Anderſon] own hand, and no flying report of a young ſtudent vii. 148, 161, 178
Coke of one mind when a judge and in favour, and of another when out of court and of favour vii. 149. n.
His ſpeech in the houſe of commons, relating to the impriſoning the ſubject by the king's command vii. 144
His argument at a conference with the lords on the ſame ſubject vii. 169
His ſpeech at preſenting the petition of right vii. 197
He declared in the houſe of commons, that he thought the duke of Buckingham was the cauſe of all the miſeries in the reign of Charles the firſt vii. 214
His lordſhip adviſes defendant never to demur to declaration, if there be hopes of matter of fact vii. 450
The authority of his 12th report doubted vii. 634
The 12th part of his Reports cenſured xi. 30
His report of Calvin's caſe xi. 86
Informations in Star-chamber for libels began to be frequent about 42 and 43 Eliz. when that conſummate lawyer ſir Edward Coke was attorney-general to that renowned queen ix. 313
Lord-keeper Somers obſerved, that ſir Edward Coke, in his Reports, does not confine himſelf to the caſe before the court, but does generally lay together all the learning in the law which comes under that title, ſo as to make them in nature of common-places xi. 151, 152
The encroachment of the church of Rome on the king's eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction is hiſtorically diſcuſſed in lord Coke's caſe of the king's eccleſiaſtical law, in 5th rep. xi. 75
His active zeal as attorney-general in the proſecution of the conſpirators in the gunpowder plot, gave occaſion to a volume of animadverſions by the famous Jeſuit, the father Parſons; but the aſperity with which lord Coke was treated did not provoke a reply, only a ſhort notice of the work in the preface to the 6th report xi. 75

COKE, Lord,
His ſpeech on lord Lovat's trial for treaſon ix. *629

COLE, JOHN*,
* His trial for the murder of doctor Clenche, Sept. 2, 1692, 4 W. and M. iv. 506
* The indictment. [See the trial of Harriſon] iv. 488
* The witneſs depoſes what her deceaſed huſband told her iv. 507
* Which is contradicted by another witneſs iv. 507
* Mr. juſtice Dolben directs the jury iv. 509
* The priſoner is acquitted iv. 509

COLEMAN, EDWARD*,
* His trial for high-treaſon at the King's-Bench bar, Nov. 27, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 660
* The priſoner makes no challenges to the jurors ii. 660
* Indictment for compaſſing the death of the king, and conſpiring to ſubvert the eſtabliſhed religion and government ii. 660
* The overt-act, writing to Le Chaiſe to procure the French king's aſſiſtance in it ii. 661. See vi. 330
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard opens the evidence in general ii. 662
* Sir William Jones, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence ii. 663
* The people greatly prejudiced againſt the papiſts at this time ii. 665
* Oates depoſes that he carried the letters which Coleman wrote into France ii. 666
* Oates's evidence of the conſult at the White Horſe tavern ii. 667
* The deſign of murdering the king communicated to mr. Coleman ii. 667
* The Iriſh in the conſpiracy ii. 668
* Coleman privy to the deſign of murdering the king at Windſor ii. 668
* To the deſign of poiſoning the king by ſir George Wakeman ii. 669
* Coleman's commiſſion to be ſecretary of ſtate ii. 669
* Coleman objects, that Oates ſaid before the council he did not know him; and now depoſes he was very intimate with him ii. 670
* Oates's anſwer to that objection ii. 670
* Bedloe depoſes he had carried letters from Coleman to Le Chaiſe ii. 673
* Coleman's letters and papers proved ii. 674
* Mr. Coleman's firſt long letter to Le Chaiſe, of the ſtate of affairs in England ii. 675
* Penal laws, how they came to be put in execution ſo ſeverely in king Charles's reign ii. 678
* Le Chaiſe's letter to Coleman, in anſwer to Coleman's long letter ii. 681
* Another letter prepared by Coleman in the name of the duke ii. 684
* Coleman tells Le Chaiſe, they have great hopes of ſubduing the northern hereſy ii. 685
* Mr. ſolicitor ſums up the evidence ii. 687
* The chief juſtice's directions to the jury ii. 689
* Coleman is convicted ii. 692
* Receives ſentence the day following ii. 692
* Before it is pronounced, the chief juſtice makes a ſpeech to the priſoner ii. 693
* Shews him, that he who brings in popery, conſequently brings in a foreign authority; and that he who enters on an ill action, is anſwerable for all the conſequences ii. 693
* Shews him, that there was no hope of pardon, the nation was ſo alarmed ii. 694
* Mr. Coleman makes a ſpeech in anſwer to the chief juſtice's ii. 694
* Denies any deſign againſt the king's life, or to ſubvert the government ii. 695
* His behaviour at execution ii. 695
* The record of his conviction in Engliſh at large iii. 120

COLLARS of S. S.
Reſolved by all the judges of England, that the chiefs were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward, in their collars of S. S. vii. 421. See ROBES.

COLLATERAL ISSUES.
No peremptory challenges on collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583
Counſel allowed upon collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583

COLLEDGE, STEPHEN*,
* His trial for high-treaſon before the lord Norreys, the lord chief juſtice North, mr. juſtice Jones, mr. juſtice Raymond, and mr. juſtice Levins, at Oxford, Auguſt 17, 1681, 33 Car. II. by a ſpecial commiſſion of oyer and terminer iii. 341. See iv. 173
* His petition to his majeſty while he was in the Tower, that Smith and Weſt might come to him, and that he might have pen, ink, and paper, in order to prepare for his trial iii. 340
* An order of council that he ſhould have what he petitioned for iii. 341
* His petition that he may have a copy of his indictment, and counſel and a ſolicitor aſſigned him iii. 340
* An order of council that his friends and relations may come to him iii. 340
* The indictment for conſpiring the king's death, and the ſubverſion of the government; the overt-acts, his providing arms at Oxford, and declaring his intentions to ſeize the king's perſon, &c. iii. 341, 342
* Notice of trial not neceſſary in capital caſes iii. 343
* His papers which he had prepared for his defence, taken from him as he was brought into court iii. 343
* The court tell him they knew nothing of it, but that nobody had any thing to do to give him papers; and that no one can ſolicit for one accuſed of high-treaſon, unleſs he be aſſigned by the court iii. 344
* He urges, that if he had his papers, he ſhould offer ſome matter of law as to the ſufficiency of the indictment; and ſays, the keeper who took them from him, took them under a pretence of bringing them to his lordſhip iii. 345
* A perſon ſtanding mute in high-treaſon, ſhall have judgment as a traitor iii. 345
* One indicted of high-treaſon, for ſoliciting for one who was accuſed of high-treaſon iii. 347
* Colledge objects, that he is indicted with the addition of carpenter, whereas in truth he is a joyner; but it was pretended, the law knows no difference between a carpenter and a joyner iii. 347
* Having inſiſted ſtrenuouſly for a long time that he might have his papers again, and the court perſiſting in refuſing them; at length he pleads not guilty iii. 348
* Having pleaded, he renews his requeſt for his papers, and the court command them to be brought into court, that they might peruſe them; and finding directions in them from a third hand for what he ſhould inſiſt on as to matter of law, and ſeveral libels upon the government, they ordered them to be lodged in the hands of the ſheriff's ſon; and that the priſoner ſhould have recourſe to ſuch of them as were neceſſary to his defence, and might take copies of them, but not of the libels: and Aaron Smith, the priſoner's ſolicitor, who brought them to him, is made to give ſecurity to attend the court during the trial, and to anſwer the miſdemeanour; and Starkey, his other ſolicitor, is ſent for into court iii. 349
* The court adjourn till the afternoon iii. 350
* Mr. North opens the indictment, and mr. attorney the evidence iii. 351
* The king's witneſſes called iii. 352
* They are ordered to be examined apart, at the priſoner's requeſt iii. 352
* Dugdale's evidence iii. 352
* Evidence of the priſoner's affirming the king himſelf was concerned in the popiſh plot, and in Godfrey's death iii. 353
* The priſoner gave the king the nickname of Rowley iii. 353
* Ribbons wore by the conſpirators, with the words 'no popery, no ſlavery,' in them iii. 354
* Several ballads and libels of the priſoner's upon the government produced in evidence againſt him iii. 354
* Smith's evidence of ſeveral warm expreſſions uſed by the priſoner iii. 359
* Haynes's evidence to the ſame purpoſe iii. 360
* Turberville's evidence that he ſaid, if the king began, they had ſeveral at Oxford ready to ſecure him iii. 363
* Mr. Maſters and ſir William Jennings's evidence iii. 364, 365
* Colledge enters upon his defence iii. 365
* He objects that the witneſſes prove facts done in another county iii. 366
* The opinion of the court thereupon iii. 366
* He calls his witneſſes iii. 368
* To the diſcredit of Haynes iii. 368
* To the diſcredit of Turberville iii. 372
* Dr. Oates teſtifies againſt all the king's witneſſes iii. 374
* Which they all contradict upon their oaths iii. 375
* Evidence againſt Smith iii. 376
* The chief juſtice tells him, he muſt not call one witneſs to diſprove what another of his witneſſes had depoſed iii. 373
* Colledge demands of the court, if the king's counſel may whiſper among themſelves iii. 390
* The king's counſel call more witneſſes iii. 390
* He makes his obſervations on the evidence iii. 391
* The court order him to keep to the point, and not open things he had no evidence of iii. 393
* The facts may be proved either before or after the time laid in the indictment iii. 394
* The priſoner juſtifying the rebellion of the parliament, was told by the

the court they were declared rebels by act of parliament iii. 396
* The priſoner's deſign to aſſiſt in ſeizing the king at Oxford, proved by Dugdale and Turberville iii. 398
* Mr. ſolicitor ſums up the evidence for the king iii. 399
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies's obſervations of the evidence for the king iii. 403
* Evidence given of facts out of the county where the indictment is laid iii. 403
Oates produced as a witneſs for the priſoner to invalidate the teſtimony of Dugdale, Turberville, and Smith, who were formerly brought to ſupport his own credit as to the popiſh plot iii. 404
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies obſerves, that, notwithſtanding the cry of the Iriſh and popiſh evidence againſt the priſoner, the king's witneſſes were all proteſtants, and but one of them an Iriſhman iii. 405
* The chief juſtice directs the jury iii. 406
* He tells them, that whoever imagine to depoſe the king, or to impriſon him, are in law guilty of imagining the king's death iii. 406
* That if one witneſs gives evidence of an overt-act of treaſon in the county where the criminal is indicted, and another witneſs gives evidence of another overt-act of the ſame treaſon in another county, theſe are two witneſſes, as the law requires, and ſufficient to ſupport the indictment iii. 407
* Colledge complains that mr. attorney and mr. ſolicitor were an hour and a half with the grand jury iii. 408
* The jury have two bottles of ſack at the bar before they go out iii. 408
* He is convicted iii. 408
* Lord chief juſtice's ſpeech before ſentence iii. 408
* Judgment is pronounced on him as a traitor iii. 409
* He is executed a fortnight after iii. 409
* His behaviour at execution, and dying ſpeech iii. 410. See viii. 64. n.
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 173, 176, 177, 185, 186, 190, 191, 194, 203, 204, 205
Colledge was tried on a vicious indictment iv. 177. See iii. 769
" That innocence would defend," was a ſaying as mortal to him as was the letter Θ amongſt the Greeks iv. 177. See ix. 310
His trial was ſigned for publication by lord chief juſtice North iv. 189
The caſe of Colledge every one hath thought hard and barbarous vi. 428. See iii. 343. n.

COLLIER, JEREMY, a Nonjuring Parſon,
Proceedings againſt him, for abſolving ſir W. Parkins and ſir John Friend at Tyburn, 3 Ap. 1696, 7 Will. III. x. 43. Ap.

COLLINS, DARBY. See GOLDING.

COLLINS, JOHN. See POTE Sir GEOFFREY.

COLPEPER. See DENEW.

COMBAT. See REA, Lord.

COMBES, ———,
His ſpeech before evidence, on Buſby's trial iii. 329

COMINES, PHILIP,
Paſſages from that French hiſtorian xi. 54, 61

COMMENTARIES.
The commentaries of Plowden aſcertain of what authority thoſe ancient writers, Bracton, Glanville, and Hengham, are in the law vii. 235. See BRACTON. GLANVILLE. HENGHAM.
The commentaries of mr. juſtice Blackſtone commended xi. 251
They give the riſe, and a ſhort hiſtory of the doctrine of amendments xi. 332

COMMISSIONS.
The commiſſion of Mary queen of Scots to try James earl Bothwel, for the murder of her huſband Henry lord Darnley i. 77
Commiſſion for the trial of Mary queen of Scots i. 145
Commiſſion for the execution of Mary queen of Scots i. 161
Peer may be tried by commiſſion, during prorogation of parliament iv. 212
Lord high ſteward to be judge on trial by commiſſion iv. 215
On trial by commiſſion lords cannot adjourn or ſeparate, till they have given a verdict iv. 232
Commiſſions wherein the maſters in chancery are joined with the judges, to hear and determine cauſes in abſence of the chancellor, to puniſh contempts, to execute and adminiſter the juriſdiction in the Chancery iv. 505, 506
Commiſſions of judges v. 421. ix. 280

COMMISSIONS of HIGH STEWARDS.
The commiſſion of Edward earl of Clarendon, lord chancellor, for the trial of Thomas lord Morley, for murder, in Latin vii. 422
The commiſſion to Thomas marquis of Carmarthen, preſident of the council, for the trial of Charles lord Mohun, for murder, in Latin iv. 510
The commiſſion of John lord Somers, chancellor, for the trial of Edward earl of Warwick, and of Charles lord Mohun, for murder, in Latin v. 137
The commiſſion of William lord Cowper, chancellor, for the trial of James earl of Derwentwater, William lord Widdrington, William earl of Nithiſdale, George earl of Winton, Robert earl of Carnwath, William viſcount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn, upon an impeachment of the commons for treaſon, in Latin v. 5
His lordſhip's commiſſion for the trial of Robert earl of Oxford, upon impeachment for treaſon, in Latin v. 102
The commiſſion of Philip lord Hardwicke, chancellor, for the trial of William earl of Kilmarnock, George earl of Cromartie, and Arthur lord Balmerino, upon a ſpecial act of parliament, for treaſon, in Engliſh ix. *590
His lordſhip's commiſſion for the trial of Simon lord Lovat, upon an impeachment of the commons, for treaſon, in Engliſh ix. *621
The commiſſion of Robert lord Henley, keeper, for the trial of Lawrence earl Ferrers, for murder, in Engliſh x. *479
The commiſſion to his lordſhip, as earl of Northington, and chancellor, for the trial of William lord Byron, for murder, in Engliſh x. *517
The commiſſion to Henry earl Bathurſt, chancellor, for the trial of Elizabeth ducheſs dowager of Kingſton, for bigamy, in Engliſh xi, 198, 199

*COMMITMENT.
* A peer impeached for treaſon generally, the lords refuſe to commit him ii. 567, 735
* One committed by the houſe of peers refuſed to be bailed by the King's-bench ii. 622, 754
* The cauſe of commitment ought to appear ii. 618
* A peer may be committed for treaſon, felony, or a breach of the peace iv. 315
* Whether a commitment to the cuſtody of a meſſenger be legal iv. 557. See KENDALL.
For publiſhing ſeditions, too general i. 210
Though commitment by lords is ill, it cannot be examined by court of K. B. ii. 622
In caſe ſeſſions of parliament be concluded, peer committed by houſe of lords may be diſcharged ii. 622
Every commitment preſumed to be purſuant to power of party committing iv. 311
Commitment always upon accuſation made on oath in hearing of party accuſed iv. 177, 181
The remedies for an illegal commitment Em. Pref. iv.
Chancellor, or keeper of the great ſeal, cannot commit iv. 555
Several copies of commitments x. 71. Ap. See CROSBY BRASS, mayor of London.

COMMON COUNCIL.
Act of common council not act of corporation iii. 572
Common council choſen by non-freemen as well as freemen iii. 572

COMMON FAME.
Whether common fame be ſufficient for a parliamentary accuſation ii. 559. See ii. 641.
Common fame is but of little weight vi. 414

COMMON LAW.
Though acts of parliament may give a remedy, they take not away the common law remedy vii. 432, 440
A general immemorial uſage, not inconſiſtent with any ſtatute, eſpecially if the reſult of evident neceſſity, and tending to public ſafety, ſeems to be part of the common law of England xi. 350, 351

COMMONS.
Vote of commons cannot alter the law iii. 289. iv. 170
Jury doubt whether they may try a matter which the commons voted ſhould not be tried by any inferior court iii. 227, 228. See id. 288
Their petition of grievances xi. 62. * See PARLIAMENT.

COMPARISON OF HANDS. See SIDNEY ALGERGON.

* COMPTON, Dr. HENRY, Lord Biſhop of LONDON,
* His trial before the High Commiſſion Court, 1686, 2 Jac. II. iv. 247
* The eccleſiaſtical commiſſion iv. 247
* The king's letter, enjoining him to ſuſpend Dr. Sharp for diſobedience to the king's orders iv. 249
* The biſhop's anſwer iv. 249
* Dr. Sharp's petition iv. 249
* The biſhop appears before the commiſſioners iv. 250
* Dr. Oldys's ſpeech in behalf of the biſhop iv. 252
* Dr. Hodges on the ſame ſide iv. 252
* Dr. Price for the biſhop iv. 252
* Dr. Newton on the ſame ſide iv. 253
* The biſhop ſuſpended iv. 253. See v. 748

COMYN, Mr. Baron,
His opinion reſpecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229

CONFERENCE.
A peer's ſpeech at a free conference, reſolved ſcandalous, and reflecting on the houſe of commons viii. 530

CONFESSIONS.
Confeſſions of attainted perſons read i. 130, 136, &c.
Priſoner's confeſſion out of court will not convict him in Scotland ii. 629
Confeſſion ſtrongeſt evidence againſt the party, in Scotland ii. 631
Confeſſion muſt be taken entire, or not at all iii. 474. n. See MAXIMS.
Lord chancellor Bacon's confeſſion of his bribery and corruption i. 382. * See ARNOLD EDWARD. * EVIDENCE.

CONINGSMARK, CHARLES JOHN Count,
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial and of others iv. 199
Though he was the moſt guilty, he eſcaped puniſhment iv. 199
Count Coningſmark had a bad cauſe and a great deal of money v. 101. See * iii. 466. * BOROSKI.

CONSCIENCE.
The juſtification of Felton, who killed the duke of Buckingham, was, that he was perſuaded in conſcience that he did well in ſo doing v. 126. See FELTON.
Ravaillac, who killed Henry the IVth of France, juſtified the murder by his conſcience, and ſaid he had done a good thing v. 126

CONSERVATORS OF THE PEACE.
By common law, there were only conſervators of the peace, whoſe power was very ſhort of that of juſtices now-a-days iv. 562. n. xi. 319

CONSPIRACY.
Lane and Knox were puniſhed very mildly for a conſpiracy iii. 220. iv. 171. vii. 477, 483
Notorious conſpiracy againſt the life and honour of the duke of Buckingham, in charging his grace with ſodomy, puniſhed only by a ſlight fine and pillory iii. 220. vii. 483
An ambaſſador is not privileged for a conſpiracy againſt the ſtate, in the judgment of lord Bacon ii. 8
A conſpiracy to procure two perſons to rob one of the conſpirators, with intent to cauſe them to be convicted of, and executed for, the ſaid robbery, in order to obtain the rewards for apprehending highwaymen, not a capital offence x. 448
Indictment for aſſault and conſpiracy with intent to wound and beat viii. 178. See ATTERBURY FRANCIS. BRITON RICHARD. DANEW

DANEW NATHANIEL. MEAD WILLIAM. MERRIAM JOHN. PEN WILLIAM. PLUNKETT JOHN. SCOTS, MARY Queen of.

CONSTABLE, Sir ROBERT,

Sir John Bulmer and his lady, ſir Francis Pigot, ſir Stephen Hamilton, ſir Thomas Piercy and Aſh, with the abbots of Whalley, Jerveux, Eridlington, Lenton, Woburn, and Kingſtead, and Mackrall the monk, with ſixteen more, were indicted of treaſon for the Lincolnſhire rebellion xi. 24
Subſtance of indictments xi. 24
They were all found guilty, and had judgment of treaſon xi. 24
They were executed xi. 24
Lady Bulmer was burnt xi. 24

* CONSTABLE, JOHN, v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.

* CONSULT. See OVERT ACT.

CONTEMPT.

Priſoners fined for ſtanding before court with their hats on ii. 611
Proceedings againſt the counteſs of Shrewſbury for refuſing to anſwer before a ſelect council, or to ſign her examination i. 338. xi. 108
Proceedings againſt Whitelocke for contempt of prerogative xi. 106
In caſes of contempt to courts of juſtice, no preſentment is neceſſary, not even to convict; for if done in facie curiæ, a record may be made of it, and puniſhment judicially inflicted and executed immediately ix. 309
A peer was committed by the court for ſaying, "I am ſorry to ſee rhetorick rule where law ſhould" vii. 111. ix. 310. See ATTORNIES AT LAW. DAWSON. DE BRUCE. HARRISON THOMAS. LEECH BENJAMIN.

CONTRACT.

The rules of law are againſt ſlavery by contract xi. 344. See NEGRO. SLAVERY. SOMERSET. VILLENAGE.

CONVICTION.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for a ſecond offence, indictment muſt recite record of firſt conviction, which muſt be proved, but matter of it ſhall never be re-examined x. 435. * See TRIAL.

CONVOCATION.

The convocation, as the law now ſtands, may proceed in examining, cenſuring, and condemning ſuch tenets as are declared to be hereſy by the laws of this realm, together with the authors and maintainers thereof; ſo reſolved by all the judges of England viii. 570
The addreſs of the biſhops to the queen, for the opinion of the judges, how far the convocation might go in examining, cenſuring, and condemning ſuch tenets as were declared by law to be hereſy, with the authors and maintainers of them viii. 569
The opinions of the judges delivered in to the queen, purſuant to that addreſs viii. 570

CONYERS, TRISTRAM,

Of counſel for the crown on the trial of Charnock iv. 590
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Hathaway v. 483

COOK, Mr. Secretary of State,

His ſpeech on ſentencing Prynne for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 426

COOK, JOHN, Solicitor General to the Commonwealth,

Maintained that all juſt power was derived from the people i. 998
That all princes who claim by conqueſt are tyrants, for that conqueſt and long deſcent cannot create a title; and that till people conſent, and voluntarily ſubmit to government, they are ſlaves, and may free themſelves when they can i. 998
That poſſeſſion is a vain plea when matter of right is the queſtion, for right can never die i. 1002
That there cannot be two ſupreme or co-ordinate powers in one nation i. 1002
That the people are the king's liege lords, and that it is treaſon in his majeſty to ſet up his ſtandard againſt the people i. 1003. See RESISTANCE.
His ſpeech as ſolicitor general for the commonwealth, which he intended to have delivered on king Charles the firſt's trial, if his majeſty had pleaded i. 997
Opens the evidence on the trial of Love ii. 92

COOKE, JOHN,

His ſpeech for Lilburne at the bar of the houſe of lords vii. 276. See * ii. 341. * REGICIDES.

COOK, PETER*,

* His trial for high treaſon, at the Old Bailey, May 9, 1696, 8 W. III. iv. 738
* The indictment for compaſſing the king's death, and adhering to the king's enemies iv. 753
* The overt-acts, conſulting and agreeing to promote an invaſion and inſurrection, and ſending Charnock to invite over foreign troops, and providing arms, &c. iv. 753
* Jurors examined whether they have a freehold iv. 738
* In London of ten pounds a-year iv. 750
* The trial put off for want of jurors iv. 741
* The priſoner's counſel object, that there ought not to have been a new pannel, but a tales awarded iv. 741
* Which is over-ruled iv. 745
* Exceptions taken to the indictment iv. 745
* He offers to aſk every man before he is ſworn, whether he has ſaid he believes him guilty iv. 748
* But upon debate the queſtion is refuſed iv. 749
* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 754
* Captain Porter's evidence, that he met ſir John Fenwick and others at two meetings, and agreed to invite king James over iv. 755, 756
* Goodman's evidence to the ſame purpoſe iv. 757
* Mr. ſerjeant Darnel's defence of the priſoner iv. 758
* A record of conviction read againſt Goodman, for conſpiring to poiſon the dukes of Grafton and Northumberland iv. 759
* Evidence to prove that the company was broke up at one of the meetings, before Goodman came in iv. 761
* The king's and priſoner's witneſſes confronted iv. 766
* Sir Bartholomew Shower's defence of the priſoner iv. 767
* The priſoner's own defence iv. 769
* Sir John Hawles, ſolicitor-general, his reply for the king iv. 770
* Lord chief juſtice's directions iv. 772
* The priſoner convicted iv. 775
* Receives ſentence iv. 776
* Afterwards pardoned, upon condition of tranſporting himſelf for life iv. 776

COOK, the Reverend SHADRACK, a Nonjuring Clergyman,

Proceedings againſt him for abſolving traitors at the gallows, April 3, 1696, 7 Wil. III. x. 43. Ap.

COPIES,

Never allowed as evidence, unleſs made by a proper ſworn officer, known in the law, and to which any one may have acceſs i. 744. vi. 517. See viii. 464, 470, 471.

COPLEY, ANTONY. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

COPY OF INDICTMENT.

Arguments on motion for copy of indictment iii. 1052
When court declare their opinion that a proſecution is malicious, they frequently order the priſoner a copy of his indictment ix. 385

CORBET, Colonel, one of the Regicides,

Seized at Delſt, and brought to England viii. 370
His account of the proceedings againſt him at Weſtminſter viii. 372
His ſpeech at his execution viii. 377

CORBET, Sir JOHN. See DARNEL Sir THOMAS.

CORBET, RICHARD,

Proceedings againſt him on appeal for murder ix. 151

* CORKER, JAMES, ii. 919. See viii. 453. WAKEMAN, & al. ANDERSON, & al.

* CORNISH, HENRY, Eſq. iii. 630. See EXAMINATIONS. PILKINGTON, & al.; alſo viii. 64. n.

CORNISH, HENRY*, Eſq.

* John Fernley, William Ring, and Elizabeth Gaunt, their arraignment, the 19th of October, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 130
* John Fernley indicted for high-treaſon, in harbouring and concealing John Burton, a traitor iv. 131
* William Ring indicted for high-treaſon, in harbouring Joſeph Kelloway and Henry Lawrence, traitors and rebels iv. 131
* Henry Corniſh ſet to the bar; he objected that he had not half a day's notice of trial; but was told he muſt plead, before he could offer any thing iv. 132
* The indictment read, being for high-treaſon, in promiſing to be aiding and aſſiſting to the duke of Monmouth, lord Ruſſell, and others attainted of treaſon iv. 132
* Ring's trial comes on iv. 134
* A copy of the record of the conviction of Kelloway and Lawrence, whom the priſoner harboured, produced and ſworn, and proved he received them between the time of the treaſon committed, and their conviction iv. 134
* Ring's examination before the lord mayor read againſt him iv. 135
* Richardſon proves that the perſons convicted were the ſame perſons that the priſoner harboured iv. 136
* The priſoner in his defence ſaid, he did not know the perſons ſo harboured were rebels iv. 136
* Fernley's trial comes on iv. 137
* The record of Burton's outlawry for high-treaſon, whom the priſoner harboured, was produced iv. 137
* Burton himſelf an evidence that Fernley the priſoner harboured him iv. 137
* Burton's pardon produced, to qualify him to be an evidence iv. 139
* He pleads in his defence, that he intended to diſcover Burton, and get the reward iv. 139
* Elizabeth Gaunt arraigned iv. 142
* She was indicted for high-treaſon, in concealing the ſaid Burton, aſſiſting him to eſcape, and giving him 5l. in money iv. 142
* Ring and Fernley convicted iv. 142
* Mr. Corniſh moves to put off his trial, having had but ſhort notice; and is told by the court, that a priſoner cannot inſiſt upon any notice iv. 143
* Pen and ink never allowed the priſoner, but upon petition iv. 143
* The court tell him they cannot defer the trial, without the king's counſel conſent iv. 143
* Mr. Corniſh is ſet aſide iv. 144
* Mrs. Gaunt's trial comes on iv. 144
* Burton's account of his concern in the Rye-Houſe plot, and of Mrs. Gaunt's aſſiſting him to eſcape iv. 144
* Mrs. Gaunt's defence iv. 146
* She is convicted iv. 147, 156
* Mr. Corniſh's trial comes on iv. 147
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 147
* Rumſey depoſes he ſaw the priſoner at the conſult with the duke of Monmouth, lord Ruſſel, &c. at mr. Sheppard's; and that the declaration was read to him, and he approved it, and ſaid, That poor intereſt he had he would join with it iv. 148
* An accomplice in treaſon a good witneſs, till he is indicted iv. 149
* Goodenough, who was outlawed and pardoned, allowed to be a witneſs, though the priſoner objected, nothing could reſtore him to his credit but an act of parliament, unleſs the outlawry were reverſed iv. 149
* Goodenough depoſes, that, talking of an inſurrection, and ſeizing the Tower, the priſoner ſaid he would do what he could iv. 149
* Mr. Corniſh's defence iv. 150
* He calls witneſſes to his reputation iv. 151
* A trial printed by authority not admitted as evidence iv. 153
* Sir Thomas Jones, lord chief juſtice, his charge to the jury iv. 154
* A witneſs examined, after the jury had withdrawn and returned iv. 156
* Sheppard depoſes the priſoner was at his houſe but once when the duke of Monmouth was there; and then no paper was read to him, for they did not take him to be one of the company iv. 157

* And that he knew nothing of the deſign iv. 157
* Rumſey ſwears, on the contrary, that mr. Sheppard held the candle while the declaration was read to him iv. 157
* Corniſh convicted, and the jury find 140l. due to the priſoner from mr. Sheppard iv. 159
* Eliz. Gaunt receives ſentence iv. 159
* Sir Thomas Jenner, recorder, his ſpeech before judgment iv. 160
* Sentence pronounced upon Ring, Fernley, and Corniſh iv. 160
* The dying ſpeeches of mr. Corniſh and mrs. Gaunt iv. 160
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 177, 186, 200
" That innocence would defend" was a ſaying as mortal to him, as was the letter Θ among the Greeks iv. 177
His trial was ſigned by lord chief juſtice Jones for publication iv. 189
The uſage of Corniſh was very rigorous iv. 204
The legiſlature declared, that the treaſon committed by mr. alderman Corniſh was a pretended treaſon, that being arraigned on Oct. 19, on commitment Oct. 13, having notice of trial the 17th of the ſame month, and being kept cloſe priſoner from the time of commitment to that of trial, he could not poſſibly prepare himſelf for his defence; and that he was convicted on the evidence of an incompetent and incredible witneſs viii. 474

*CORNWALLIS, CHARLES Lord,
* His trial for murder, 30 Car. II. 1678 ii. 725
* Earl of Nottingham, lord high ſteward, his ſpeech to the priſoner ii. 725
* His charge to the peers ii. 726
* The fact ſtated by ſir William Jones, attorney-general ii. 726
* Perſons indicted for the ſame offence and acquitted, good witneſſes ii. 728
* My lord's defence ii. 728
* Sir Francis Winnington, ſolicitor-general, his ſpeech ii. 728
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard's ſpeech ii. 729
* The counſel urge that my lord, being preſent, and not ſhewing he either diſapproved or endeavoured to prevent the murder, ought to be deemed guilty of it ii. 729
* That where many are engaged in an unlawful deſign, and one of them murder a man, the reſt are guilty, though at a diſtance ii. 729
* Where any queſtion in point of law ariſes, it ought to be put in the priſoner's preſence ii. 729
* Many perſons doing an unlawful act, whereby a manſlaughter enſues, all who are engaged in that unlawful act are as guilty as the perſon who kills the man ii. 730
* The priſoner is acquitted ii. 730

CORONER. See EVIDENCE. WITNESSES.

CORPORATION.
Record on a mandamus for admiſſion into the freedom of a corporation x. 138, 139. Ap.
Corporation-man, though he votes, is a legal witneſs as to the election of mayor x. 150. Ap.

CORRECTION.
If parent or maſter be provoked to a degree of paſſion by ſome miſcarriage of the child or ſervant, and he corrects with a moderate weapon, and chances to kill, it is but miſadventure; but if he uſes an improper inſtrument in the correction, and kills the child or ſervant, it is murder ix. 64

*CORRUPTION of BLOOD. See PARDON.

COSTS.
The crown pays no coſts xi. 271, 329, 333
Coſts recovered bear no proportion to the expence of civil ſuits Em. Pref. iii.

COTTINGTON, FRANCIS Lord, Chancellor of the Exchequer,
His ſpeech on paſſing cenſure on Prynne, for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 423
The ſentence propoſed by him on Prynne i. 424
On Buckner i. 424, 425
On Sparkes i. 425

* COTTON, EDWARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

COTTON, Sir ROBERT,
Proceedings againſt him in Star-chamber, May 29, 1630, 6 Car. I. for publiſhing a ſeditious writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD, earl of.

*COVENTRY ACT.
Two tried and convicted on it vi. 212. See WOODBURNE JOHN.

COVENTRY, THOMAS, Lord Keeper,
His ſpeech as high ſteward on the trial of Mervin lord Audley, earl of Caſtlehaven, for rape and ſodomy, to the noble priſoner, previous to the examination of the witneſſes i. 390
His lordſhip's reply i. 390
His charge to the lords i. 390
His advice to the priſoner i. 392
His ſpeech to him after the examination of the witneſſes i. 394
His lordſhip's further ſpeech and exhortation to the priſoner previous to pronouncing ſentence upon him i. 394, 395
Dialogue between him and William Prynne i. 483
Dialogue between him and John Baſtwick i. 484
Dialogue between him and Henry Burton i. 486
Parliament reſolve, that warrant under the hand of Thomas lord Coventry, lord keeper of the great ſeal of England, whereby William Prynne was impriſoned, is unjuſt and illegal, and that he ought to give him ſatisfaction for damages ſuſtained by his impriſonment i. 504
His ſpeech for a mild ſentence on Hen. Sherfield, Eſq. convicted by information in Star-chamber for breaking a painted glaſs window in a church i. 417
His charges to the judges in the caſe of ſhip-money i. 505, 507
Speech by the king's command to both houſes of parliament vii. 189
Ordinance of lords and commons for raiſing 3000l. out of the late lord Coventry's eſtate, for the reparation of John Lilburne, thrown out on ſecond reading vii. 281, 305. See vii. 303, 306, 307

*COUNSEL.
* One may not be of counſel with a criminal in treaſon or felony, till he is aſſigned ii. 826. iv. 416
* Counſel aſſigned to a peer impeached of high-treaſon, who are permitted to be in court and hear the evidence iii. 122. ix. 618*
* Counſel not admitted to argue concerning the law and courſe of parliaments iii. 208
* Counſel aſſigned a priſoner cannot be diſcharged but by his client's conſent iii. 233
* A priſoner ſhall not have any inſtruction from counſel in writing, or otherwiſe, for the management of his defence in capital caſes iii. 263
* One permitted to adviſe with counſel, who is accuſed of high-treaſon iii. 706
* Where one is allowed counſel, he ought not to ſpeak himſelf iii. 875
* Counſel not to be aſſigned in treaſon or felony to argue a point of law, but where the court is in doubt iv. 417, 601
* A priſoner may not adviſe with counſel in capital caſes, unleſs he aſſign ſome point of law which the court think fit to be argued iii. 1003. iv. 601
* Where the priſoner may have counſel, the court will not be of counſel with him iv. 705
* Counſel aſſigned a pirate to adviſe with v. 289
Aſſigned by court ii. 39
Not to be aſſigned till plea, and evidence given ii. 88, 91
Not heard at the bar, till they had taken the engagement ii. 159
Their aſſiſtance deſired i. 86
King's counſel may privately manage evidence to grand jury ii. 302
If counſel are allowed to argue law, fact muſt be admitted iii. 722
Counſel may be had in appeal ii. 253
A counſellor at law ſhould be a man of knowledge, able to adviſe, a miniſter of juſtice, aſſiſt the court wherein he pleads, and ought to be a perſon of untainted fidelity, that he may keep his client's ſecrets ii. 828
One reaſon why priſoners for capital offences are not allowed counſel for matter of fact ii. 349, 726. iv. 174
Sir Bartholomew Shower was one of the firſt counſel that was aſſigned by the court under ſtat. 7 William III. chap. 3. iv. 663
A counſel, even againſt his client (provided it be not of a ſecret communicated to him by his client) may be a witneſs iv. 202
Meſſrs. Maynard, Hales, Twiſden, Wilde, Philips, Baldwin, Drury, and Boynton, of counſel for the commonwealth vii. 345
Meſſrs. Windham, Latch, Lechmere, and Haggat, pleaded in Oliver Cromwell's courts of juſtice vii. 349
Though a counſellor at law may plead his client's cauſe againſt the king, yet if, under colour of that, he takes upon him to vent ſedition, he is to be puniſhed ix. 312
Counſel ſhould be ready to maintain by law the advice they give iii. 204
Counſel have the protection of courts of juſtice for the advice they give in point of law iii. 204
The unjuſt and upright counſellor characteriſtically diſtinguiſhed i. 213. iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.
Fees to counſel exorbitant Em. Pref. iii.
Exceptions to inſufficient indictment refuſed, not being ſigned by counſel vii. 366
Priſoner deſired counſel upon a point of law iii. 983. n.
Counſel for the proſecution have a right to be the laſt ſpeaker iii. 816. iv. 40, 162. ix. 162*, 742*. x. 517.
Counſel allowed upon collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583
Henry Blaunsford, a counſellor at law, was committed to the Fleet, and fined, for falſe reporting the opinion of lord Leiceſter and ſecretary Cecil, in theſe words; " humanum eſt errare" vii. 111. ix. 310
Lord chancellor Nottingham occaſionally ſaid, counſel ſhould not ſpeak as if they would abet the guilt of their clients, rather than as advocates for their innocence iii. 567. ix. 309
The gentlemen at the bar did pray that the gown of one of the long robe, who had been ſet in the pillory, might be pulled over his ears; which was ordered, and executed in court ix. 309
Lord chief juſtice North ſaid, that it is a great credit and benefit to the profeſſion, that the members of it who offend in their practice, ſhould be dealt with more ſeverely than others ix. 309. See READING NATHANIEL.
A counſellor's extraordinary manner of pleading for his fee iii. 766
Opening counſel ſhould open no more than the record ix. 208
Counſel may examine witneſſes for priſoner in felony xi. 239
But not permitted to examine them in treaſon ix. 638*
Counſel threatened if they ſpoke to points of law ii. 744
Their characters may be found in this collection of trials Em. Pref. i.
Prejudice Fitzharris received from not having counſel iv. 169
Counſel ſhould not be admitted to grand juries iv. 173
In appeal for capital matters counſel are allowed on trial iv. 174
Sir Robert Atkyns always thought it a ſeverity in our law, that a priſoner for his life is not allowed the aſſiſtance of a lawyer to make his defence for him, even as to fact as well as law; he knew it is ſaid, the court is of counſel for the priſoner; but for his part, he ſhould never deſire to depend upon that only; he knew what it was by experience iii. 758. See iv. 130, 174.
Counſel who have been arrreſted in Weſtminſter-hall, committed, degraded, proſecuted, expelled, executed, or otherwiſe cenſured, proceeded againſt, or puniſhed, for mal-practices or crimes:
Andrews, Euſebius
Aſhley, ſir Francis, ſerjeant at law
Atwood, William
Churchill, ſir John
Cowper, Spencer
Denton, Thomas
Heath, ſir Robert
Hudſon, William
Layer, Chriſtopher
Lechmere, Nicholas
Morgan, David
Mountague, James
Page, Francis
Peck, Edward
Pemberton, Francis, ſerjeant at law
Porter, Charles
Prynne, William
Reading, Nathaniel
Rotheram, Thomas
Saunders, Edmund
Sherfield, Henry
Wallop, Richard
Whitelock, James
Williams, William.

See their reſpective Names. EVIDENCE. HAMILTON, Duke of. KING's COUNSEL. RUSSELL Lord. STRAFFORD, Earl of.

COUNTER, JAMES. See BERNARDI JOHN.

COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARDS of ENGLAND for the TRIAL of PEERS of this Realm.

The lord high ſteward after verdict given may take time to adviſe for any point of law; and though his office continues till judgment, it is but a commiſſion pro hâc vice notwithſtanding. So reſolved by all the Judges. i. 388

The lord high ſteward, when he ſits by commiſſion, has no vote iv. 211, 233

Lord high ſteward conſulted by lords in abſence of priſoner i. 394

During a prorogation the proceedings are always by commiſſion, before the lord high ſteward iv. 213

The lord high ſteward is ſole judge, and need not adviſe with the peers about the method or order of trial, or about a plea to the juriſdiction iv. 211, 215, 233. x. 209

All queſtions to be directed to and propounded by the lord high ſteward, in this court iv. 216

Queſtion to the judges, whether court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231

The lords cannot legally adjourn or ſeparate after evidence given, till they have given a verdict, they being in nature of a jury in this court iv. 231, 232

The lords triers can aſk no queſtions of the lord ſteward in priſoner's abſence, nor can he withdraw with them iv. 232

It is not uſual for the lord high ſteward to repeat or obſerve upon the evidence iv. 246

If error be committed in the proceedings of this court, they ſhall be reverſed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248

The diſtinction between the proceedings in the court of the high ſteward, and that before the king in parliament x. 209. Ap.

Reſolutions of all the judges of England in reſpect of the proceedings in this court:

1. That in this court the peers are the triers vii. 421
2. That the former are to attend upon the letter of the lord high ſteward in their ſcarlet robes, and the chiefs in their collars of S. S. vii. 421
3. That in caſe, after the evidence given, the priſoner withdrawn, and the peers gone to conſult of their verdict, they ſhould ſend for them, if the lord ſteward requires it, they are to go to them; but not to deliver any opinion without conference, and only openly in court vii. 421
4. That if the lord ſteward ſhould in open court demand any of their opinions, though in the abſence of the priſoner, they were to give it vii. 421
5. That the demand of any queſtion is referred to the direction of the high-ſteward vii. 421

Peers who have preſided in this court.

Buckhurſt, Thomas lord i. 197

Clarendon, Henry earl of vii. 422

Coventry, Thomas lord i. 390

Derby, Henry earl of i. 164. xi. 27

Elleſmere, Thomas lord i. 348, 351

Jefferies, George lord iv. 211

Norfolk, Thomas duke of xi. 5, 10, 12, 26

Nottingham, Heneage earl of ii. 725

Shrewſbury, George earl of i. 82

Trials in this court.

Anna Boleyn, queen xi. 10

Arundel, Philip earl of i. 64. xi. 27

Audley, Mervin lord i. 390

Buckingham, Edward duke of xi. 4

Cornwallis, Charles lord ii. 725

Dacres, William lord xi. 10

Delamere, Henry lord iv. 211

Eſſex Robert, Southampton Henry, earls of i. 197

Morley, Thomas lord vii. 422

Norfolk, Thomas duke of i. 82

Northampton, William marquis of xi. 26

Northumberland, John duke of xi. 26

Somerſet, Robert earl of i. 351

———, Frances counteſs of i. 348

Warwick, John earl of xi. 26. See HIGH STEWARD.

COURTS of JUSTICE.

Our courts of juſtice, contrary to thoſe of other countries, are held publicly and in open view Em. Pref. iii.

The higher a court is, the more juſt it ought to be, to give example to inferior courts ii. 201, 208. v. 83, 106, 107. xi. 25

Whoever obeys a court that exceeds its juriſdiction is puniſhable ii. 328

Court of juſtice miſdirecting a grand jury, puniſhable iv. 184

Improper adjournment of court of juſtice, cenſured iv. 176

The difference between the high court of juſtice in the time of the uſurpation, and that of Oyer and Terminer ii. 87

How one court of juſtice aſks the opinion of another iii. 47

COURT of ROME. See POPE.

COURTNEY, HUGH.

Lord Abbot complained that Hugh Courtney, chief juſtice, had confederated to give judgment againſt him; and the abbot, becauſe a lord, eſcaped puniſhment vii. 108

COWARDICE.

* Caſes of cowardice i. 816. See CONSTABLE JOHN. FIENNES NATHANIEL. FOGG CHRISTOPHER. KIRBY RICHARD. VINCENT SAMUEL. WADE COOPER.

COWLAND, JOHN, Gent.

Was tried on three indictments for the murder of ſir Andrew Slanning, bart. and found guilty only on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, and executed ix. 534

COWPER, SPENCER,

Of counſel for the crown, on the trial of Charnock and others for treaſon iv. 590

His reply on the trial of ſir John Friend for treaſon iv. 622

His ſpeech on the trial of ſir William Parkyns, for treaſon in aſſaſſination plot iv. 653

His way of arguing in houſe of commons, on debating ſir John Fenwick's bill of attainder, gave diſſatisfaction v. 133

The lords wiſhed him to ſupply ſir John Hawles the ſolicitor-general's place, on the trial of lord Mohun, on account of ſir John's weak voice v. 191

His argument in maintenance of the ſecond article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons to the lords, againſt Henry Sacheverel, D. D. for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 691

His reply to the defence of the ſecond article v. 812

Sums up the evidence in the houſe of peers on the trial of earl Wintoun for treaſon, and rebellion vi. 44, 53

His reply on the trial of Francia for treaſon vi. 96

His parliamentary ſpeech relative to Aſhby and White viii. 114

COWPER, SPENCER*, Eſq.

* John Marſon, Ellis Stevens, and William Rogers, their trial for murder at Hertford aſſizes, July 16, 1699, 11 Will. III. before mr. baron Hatſell v. 194

* The indictment for ſtrangling and murdering mrs. Sarah Stout v. 194

* The priſoners agree to join in their challenges; and are tried together v. 195

* The counſel for the king having challenged a juror, and the pannel being gone through, and there wanting jurors, mr. Cowper deſired the counſel for the king might ſhew their cauſe of challenge v. 195

* Mr. baron Hatſell was of opinion, the king's counſel ought to ſhew cauſe; but mr. Cowper not inſiſting on it, another was ſworn v. 195

* Mr. Jones opens the evidence v. 196

* The witneſſes for the king called v. 197

* Evidence that Mr. Cowper was laſt in the deceaſed's company v. 197

* Evidence of the manner in which ſhe was found v. 199, 214

* The phyſicians and ſurgeons called, who inſpected the body of the deceaſed v. 203

* Evidence of ſailors about the floating of dead bodies v. 207

* Evidence againſt Marſon, Stevens, and Rogers v. 208

* The examination of Marſon (before the lord chief juſtice Holt) read as evidence againſt him v. 210

* Mr. Cowper enters upon his defence v. 211

* He calls his witneſſes v. 214

* Dr. Garth, doctor Sloane, &c. examined as to the floating of a dead body in the water v. 217

* Mr. William Cowper, the anatomiſt, his evidence and learned obſervations in behalf of the priſoner v. 219

* Mr. Cowper the priſoner's attempts to prove by further evidence that mrs. Stout drowned herſelf x. 221

* Mrs. Sarah Stout's letter to Mr. Cowper the priſoner (directed to Mr. Marſhall) v. 224

* Mr. William Cowper atteſts her fondneſs for his brother v. 225

* Mr. Marſon, mr. Stevens, and mr. Rogers enter upon their defence v. 228

* Mr. baron Hatſell directs the jury v. 231

* All the priſoners were acquitted v. 232

His caſe, for the murder of Sarah Stout, publiſhed by them viii. 485

The appeal ſued out in the name of an infant, without notice to the mother, its guardian viii. 486

The infant and its mother demand the writ from the ſheriff, who was fined 200 marks for delivering it viii. 487

The judges of opinion, that the Chancery has power to renew a writ of appeal, if juſt ſo to do, but in this caſe refuſed viii. 487

The caſe of mrs. Mary Stout viii. 488

The Hertford Letter, containing ſome obſervations on the printed trial for the murder of mrs. Sarah Stout viii. 490

Obſervations concerning drowned bodies admitting water viii. 491

Why bodies, thrown dead into the water, do not ſink viii. 491

The certificate of the ſurgeons who opened her body viii. 496

Reply to the Hertford Letter, wherein mr. Cowper is vindicated viii. 497

Some obſervations on their trials viii. 506

Account of the acquaintance of mr. Cowper and mrs. Stout viii. 507

What paſſed the night of her death viii. 508

Some obſervations on the evidence viii. 510

COWPER, WILLIAM, Lord Chancellor,

His proceſſion as lord high ſteward to the trials of James earl Derwentwater, William lord Widdrington, William earl Nithiſdale. Robert earl Carnwarth, William viſcount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn vi. 5

His majeſty's commiſſion of appointment to that high office vi. 5

His addreſs to the noble priſoners on their confeſſion, previous to paſſing judgment vi. 14

His commiſſion in Latin, as lord high ſteward, on the trial of Robert earl Oxford and Mortimer, on an impeachment for high treaſon, and other high crimes and miſdemeanors vi. 102

His proceſſion on doctor Sacheverel's trial v. 641

His addreſs to the priſoner v. 641

King's commiſſion appointing him lord high ſteward on trial of George earl of Wintoun, before the houſe of peers, on impeachment for treaſon vi. 28

His ſpeech to him previous to his trial vi. 28

His ſpeech before judgment vi. 56

His declaration, ſigned by him, ſhewing, that ſome matters contained in ſome hearſays in Chriſtopher Layer's examination, are falſe and groundleſs viii. 571

He is ſaid to have been a great encourager of charitable collections x. 88. Ap.

COX,

Extracts from his Hiſtory of Ireland xi. 17

CRANBURNE, CHARLES*,

* His trial for high treaſon, Tueſday, April 21, 1696, 8 Will. III. iv. 698

* He was indicted together with Knightley, Lowick, and Rookwood, for the aſſaſſination; but beſides the overt-acts they were charged with, he was particularly charged with carrying a liſt of the conſpirators names from one to another iv. 661

The indictment vi. 56. Ap.

* The priſoner's irons ordered to be taken off during the trial. iv. 698

* Exceptions taken to the indictment after plea pleaded iv. 698

* Five exceptions taken to the indictment, and argued iv. 698
* But over-ruled iv. 701
* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 706
* Captain Porter's evidence of the priſoner's carrying a liſt of the conſpirators from the one to the other iv. 707
* Pendergraſs's evidence to the ſame effect iv. 712
* The defence made by the priſoner's counſel iv. 713
* Lord chief juſtice Holt ſums up the evidence iv. 716
* He is convicted iv. 717

CRAWLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Judge of the Common Pleas,
His argument and reaſons for his opinion for the king, in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 615
Mr. Waller's ſpeech in the houſe of commons, on impeaching ſir Francis for the above opinion i. 717
The articles of impeachment i. 717. viii. 566

CREIGHTON, ROBERT. See SANQUHAR Lord.

CRESWELL, RICHARD,
His ſpeech in parliament, on the liberty of the ſubject vii. 144

CREW, Sir RANULPH,
The cauſe of his removal from the office of lord chief juſtice of the court of King's-Bench; and who ſucceeded him vii. 114, & n.
Mr. Hollis's ſpeech in the houſe of commons, for a reward to be voted to ſir Ranulph Crew, chief juſtice B. R. for his loſs in being removed on giving his voice againſt the loan in Charles the firſt's reign i. 715, 716

CREW, Sir THOMAS, King's Serjeant,
His charge againſt the priſoner, on the trial of lord Audley i. 390

CRIMES.
Of their puniſhments in general Em. Pref. ix. x. xi.
No ſtatute of jeofail extends to criminal caſes viii. 58. See ADULTERY. MURDER. THEFT.

CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.
Jury had ſevere reprimand from court, for giving his grace of Norfolk only one hundred pounds damages on a verdict for crim. con.; they were ſo ſmall and ſcandalous, that the ſlightneſs of the ſatisfaction was conſidered almoſt as great a reproach as the crime itſelf viii. 36
It ſeems, that facts alledged as proof of inceſt would not be admitted as proof of crim. con. to entitle the huſband to damage on an action of treſpaſs x. 518. n.
There does not ſeem in our law any preſumption of crim. con. which operates in any circumſtance, but that of being ſolus cum ſolâ, and nudus cum nudâ x. 518. n. See ADULTERY. NORFOLK Duke of, and GERMAINE Sir JOHN.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.
The excellency of the Engliſh laws conſiſts in them Em. Pref. iii.
Our law has provided no paper ſearch in criminal caſes to help forward the conviction xi. 323

CRISP and DALMAHOY,
Their caſe reported from the lords journals vii. 458

CROFTS, GEORGE. See POTE Sir GEOFFREY.

CROKE, Sir GEORGE, Juſtice B. R.
His argument and opinion for the defendant, at the ſuit of the king, in the cauſe of ſhip-money, with his reaſons i. 638, 644
He ſubſcribed the opinion in ſhip-money for conformity only, becauſe the major number of the judges had ſubſcribed i. 711
His report of the caſe of ſir John Elliot, Denzil Hollis, and Benjamin Valentine, in Cro. Car. 130, is cenſured as unfairly ſtated vii. 252, 253. See vii. 250. BERKLEY Sir ROBERT.

CROKE, Sir JOHN, King's Serjeant at Law,
Opens the charge againſt Garnet for high treaſon, in promoting the Gunpowder-plot i. 248

CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of,
The whole proceedings in the houſe of peers, upon the indictment againſt him, for high treaſon, in levying war againſt his majeſty, in July and Auguſt, 1746, 10 Geo. II. ix. 587
The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner ix. *595
Pleads guilty ix. *595
Lord Cromartie's ſpeech on the lord ſteward's aſking him, why judgment of death ſhould not paſs upon him ix. *611
Lord ſteward's ſpeech previous to his paſſing judgment ix. *611
His caſe as laid before the king x. 186. Ap.
He is pardoned x. 187. Ap.

CROMWELL, THOMAS Lord,
Was attainted without being heard v. 97
Was the firſt man that promoted attainders in Hen. VIIIth's reign, and the advice he gave his maſter for the ruin of others proved fatal to himſelf v. 125. See ATTAINDER.

CROMWELL, OLIVER.
It was ſaid, that had the protector taken upon him the name of king, no treaſon would have been committed againſt the king de jure, out of poſſeſſion ii. 445
In his days, all law proceedings were in the vulgar tongue Em. Pref. vii. See WHITFORD Sir PAUL.

CRONE, MATTHEW,
Proceedings againſt him for treaſon, May 19, 1690, 1 W. and M. x. 40. Ap.
The jury found him guilty, after ſitting up all night x. 40. Ap.
Priſoner being aſked why ſentence of death ſhould not be paſſed upon him, ſaid, there was an error in the indictment before the grand jury, that the bill was indorſed billa verra, inſtead of vera x. 40. Ap.
His plea argued and over-ruled, and he received ſentence of death x. 41. Ap.
Received ſeveral reprieves x. 41. Ap.
Lay a long time in priſon x. 41. Ap.
Pardoned x. 42. Ap.
Some account of him x. 42. Ap.

CROOK, JOHN*,
* Tried at the Old-Bailey, with Iſaac Grey and John Bolton, for refuſing to take the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy, June 25, 1662. 14 Car. II. ii. 463
* He is tendered the oaths the firſt day of the ſeſſions ii. 463
* He complains of his long impriſonment, and will give no other anſwer ii. 463
* He is brought again to the bar, and will not ſwear ii. 464
* He is indicted for recuſancy ii. 465
* He wrangles with the court, and refuſes to plead to his indictment ii. 466
* He pleads not guilty ii. 467
* Iſaac Grey and John Bolton being tendered the oaths, and refuſing to ſwear, are alſo indicted ii. 468
The indictment vi. 11. Ap.
* They plead not guilty ii. 468
* They are brought to trial ii. 468
* After making a great noiſe and clamour in the court, they are found guilty ii. 470
* They receive ſentence of præmunire ii. 470

CROSBY,
His caſe for high treaſon x. 42. Ap.
Debated, whether Aaron Smith ſhould be admitted an evidence againſt him, becauſe he had ſtood in the pillory x. 42. Ap.
Was admitted x. 42. Ap.
But the principal point of treaſon charged on the priſoner was writing treaſonable papers, which was endeavoured to be proved by ſimilitude of hands (having no other evidence); on which the priſoner produced the act for reverſing the attainder of Algernon Sidney, eſq. in which it is declared, that the compariſon of hands is not legal evidence; on which he was found not guilty x. 42. Ap. See vi. 402, 415

CROSBY, BRASS, Eſq. Lord Mayor of London,
His caſe on a commitment by the houſe of commons, C. B. E. Term. 11 Geo. III. 1771 xi. 335
Hab. Corp. and return xi. 335
Argument for diſcharge of priſoner xi. 335
Lord chief juſtice De Grey's argument on giving his opinion xi. 337
Mr. juſtice Gould's xi. 338
Mr. juſtice Blackſtone's xi. 338
Mr. juſtice Nares's xi. 338
The lord mayor was remanded to the Tower xi. 338

CROWN.
The firſt uſurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England, began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71. See JOHN, king of ENGLAND. ROYAL FAMILY.
The right of impreſſing mariners for the public ſervice is a prerogative inherent in the crown xi. 350

CROWN PRISONERS. See PRISONERS.

CUFFE, HENRY*,
His trial i. 209. vii. 47
Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, his unfeeling conduct towards him on his trial for treaſon vii. 59. * See BLUNT Sir CHRISTOPHER.

CURL's CASE,
On an information againſt him for publiſhing an obſcene book, intituled, "Venus in a Cloyſter, or, the Nun in her Smock," x. 92. Ap.
The opinion of the court, whether an obſcene book is puniſhable as a libel x. 93, 94. Ap.
Judgment given for the king, and he ſtood in the pillory x. 94. Ap.

CURTIS, MARY*,
* Her trial for publiſhing a libel againſt the government, reflecting chiefly upon my lord chief juſtice Scroggs, 31 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1042. iii. 220. vii. 484
* She ſubmits, and is convicted ii. 1042

CUSTOMS.
There were no cuſtoms by common law but of three things, wool, woolfel, and leather vii. 495. See IMPOSITIONS.

CUTTING OFF THE HAND. See KNEVET Sir EDMUND.

D.

DACRES, WILLIAM Lord, of the North,
His trial for treaſon, July 9, 1535, 26 Hen. VIII. xi. 10
Arraigned xi. 10
Found not guilty xi. 10

DALGLEISH, GEORGE,
His depoſition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, huſband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 328
He is condemned viii. 332

DALMAHOY. See CRISP.

*DAMAGES.
* Damages directed to be given according to the miſchief intended, and not according to what the plaintiff ſuſtained iii. 1094
The firſt outrageous damages that were taken notice of, were thoſe given to Bolſworth; yet in a little time for matters of like kind, were quickly improved, in the reign of the Stuart family, to 10,000l. 20,000l. 40,000l. and 100,000l. iv. 165
Where a man is injured, if he cannot bring his action to recover the thing itſelf, the law will always give him damages in lieu thereof viii. 131
Parliament never gives damages viii. 98
Lord Holt ſeverely reprimanded a jury for giving trifling damages to a peer on a cauſe for crim. con. viii. 36. See OATES TITUS. PAPILLON THOMAS.

DAMMAREE, DANIEL,
His trial for high treaſon, in levying war, &c. under pretence of pulling down meeting-houſes, 9 Ann. 1710 viii. 218
Pleads not guilty viii. 219
Mr. Thompſon opens the indictment viii. 221

Mr.

Mr. attorney-general's ſpeech viii. 221
Tolboy's evidence of their intention to pull down the meeting-houſes viii. 222
Captain Orrel's evidence of Dammaree's leading the mob in Lincoln's-inn-fields viii. 223
Collier's evidence of Dammaree's bringing a branch out of the meeting-houſe viii. 224
Evidence of his hallooing and rejoicing round the fire viii. 225
Mr. Whitaker for the priſoner viii. 227
Mr. Darnell on the ſame ſide viii. 228
That the priſoner was forced to halloo viii. 228
That the caſe does not amount to levying war viii. 228
Evidence for the priſoner viii. 230
And to his character viii. 236
Mr. Whitaker's ſpeech; that being forced to comply with the mob, will not make him guilty of high treaſon viii. 237
Deſires the point, whether it ſhall be eſteemed levying war, may be ſaved, it not being ſettled in Keyling's Reports viii. 239
Mr. Darnell, that this caſe comes ſhort of the caſes in Keyling's Reports, the intention of Dammaree not being proved viii. 239
Mr. attorney-general's reply viii. 239, 240
That the intention of every man that acts with an aſſembly of people, ſhall be judged to be the ſame as the deſign of that meeting viii. 241
Mr. ſolicitor general's reply viii. 241
Mr. Thompſon on the ſame ſide viii. 242
Lord chief juſtice Parker ſums up the evidence viii. 243
The nature and proper weight of evidence to any one's reputation viii. 246
That the intention was general, therefore not a riot, but levying war viii 247
The jury find him guilty viii. 248
Serjeant Richardſon's ſpeech at pronouncing ſentence viii. 249
Dammaree afterwards pardoned viii. 249
Solemn argument on his caſe viii. 289

* DANBY, THOMAS Earl of,

* Proceedings againſt him on an impeachment for high-treaſon before the houſe of lords, the 23d of December, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 731
* Two letters of the earl's ii. 731
* The ſix articles againſt him ii. 731
* The earl's ſpeech upon bringing up the articles ii. 732
* Mr. Powle's ſpeech and motion that the earl be committed ii. 734
* A meſſage to remind their lordſhips of the earl's impeachment, and that he might be committed ii. 735
* A meſſage from the lords that the earl was withdrawn ii. 735
* Sir Francis Winnington's ſpeech on the queſtion, if a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment? ii. 735
* Addreſs for a proclamation to apprehend the earl ii. 736
* He pleads his majeſty's pardon ii. 737
* The earl ſurrenders on a bill brought in to compel him to appear, and is committed ii. 739
* The commons queſtion if a pardon can be pleaded in bar of an impeachment ii. 739
* The commons reſolve, that no commoner ſhall be of counſel with the earl to maintain his pardon ii. 740
* Reaſons given by the commons, at a conference, why they could not proceed to the trial of the earl and the five lords, at the times appointed by the houſe of peers ii. 740
* The commons deny a high ſteward is neceſſary at a trial upon an impeachment ii. 740
* The lords reſolve that the biſhops may vote in matters previous to trials in capital caſes ii. 742
* The earl's argument at the King's-Bench bar, why he ought to be admitted to bail ii. 743
* An indictment againſt the earl as acceſſary to the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey ii. 744
* The earl ſhews the hardneſs of his caſe ii. 744
* Accuſed without oath ii. 744
* No particular treaſon ſpecified ii. 744
* Counſel threatened, if they ſpoke to matter of law ii. 744
* Urges that he has his majeſty's pardon ii. 744
* And his majeſty's declaration of his innocence ii. 744
* Kept priſoner forty months without proſecution ii. 744
* The king directs the attorney-general to conſent to his being bailed; and yet he is refuſed ii. 744
* Appeals, writs of error, and impeachments, need not be begun de novo on calling of a new parliament, but remain in the ſame ſtate they were at the diſſolution of the old ii. 747
* But inferior courts may proceed to grant execution, &c. on a prorogation or diſſolution, notwithſtanding ii. 748
* And the houſe of lords never proceed ex officio, without the parties petition to revive the cauſe ii. 748
* Said that the king may impeach ii. 749
* Whether an order of parliament is of any force after a prorogation or diſſolution? ii. 749
* Perſons accuſed of capital offences diſcharged from their impriſonment, by the king's writ to the King's-Bench declaring them innocent ii. 750
* On a defective pardon, the court order the criminal to procure another, in regard to the king's intentions ii. 750
* The lord chief juſtice Pemberton delivers his opinion ii. 752
* That though this court could bail for treaſon, yet the earl being impriſoned by a higher hand, they could not meddle with it ii. 752
* Reſolved by all the judges, that the king could not permit the earl to go to his country-houſe with a guard ii. 753
* The judges reſolve, that the popiſh lords could not be bailed by the King's-Bench ii. 753
* Whether, if a man pleads a defective pardon, he may plead over? ii. 754
* Three of the judges of opinion the earl could not be bailed ii. 754
* The other doubted ii. 754
* The earl is remanded to the Tower ii. 754
* He is brought to the King's-Bench bar a ſecond time ii. 754
* His ſpeech ii. 754
* He is remanded ii. 760
* But afterwards bailed ii. 760

* DANEGELT,

* The tax ſo called i. 571, 580, 584

DANGERFIELD, THOMAS,

His repeated pilloryings and whippings were puniſhments monſtrouſly cruel Em. Pref. xii.
And as they were againſt law, ſo they were without precedent iv. 166. See iv. 681.

DARBY, LEONARD. See MORRIS JOHN.

DARCY, Lord,

Was tried for the Lincolnſhire rebellion by his peers, the marquis of Exeter ſitting ſteward xi. 24

DARNELL, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech on arguing ſpecial verdict againſt Oneby for murder ix. 17
His ſpeech for Corbet, on appeal of murder ix. 167
His ſpeech in favour of William Hales x. 112. Ap.
Of counſel for the king, on an information againſt John Gibbon x. 119, 120. Ap.
For the defendant Richard Elles x. 129, 134, 136. Ap.
His defence of Giles, for attempting to commit a murder iii. 71
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Harriſon for murder iv. 489
His defence of Cook iv. 758
Opens the evidence, on the trial of Haagen Swenſden, indicted for a forcible marriage v. 450
Opens the evidence on Denew's trial viii. 179
Is of counſel for Dammaree viii. 228
His ſpeech for Willis, on a charge of treaſon viii. 256, 261
His ſpeech for Purchaſe, charged with a ſimilar offence viii. 273, 280

DARNELL, Sir THOMAS,

Proceedings upon the Habeas Corpus brought by him, ſir John Corbet, ſir Walter Earl, ſir John Heveningham, and ſir Edmund Hampden, 3 Car. I. vii. 114
Impriſoned for refuſing to lend upon the commiſſions for loans vii. 114
The return of the Habeas Corpus, that he is detained by warrant of two privy counſellors, ſignifying the ſpecial command of his majeſty vii. 115
Deſires time to conſider, and is remanded vii. 116
The other four brought to the bar, and the returns read vii. 116
Serjeant Bramſtone takes exceptions to the return, and moves to have them bailed vii. 116, 117
That the return is inſufficient, both as to the cauſe, and time of the firſt impriſonment vii. 117
To the matter of the return, viz. ſpeciale mandatum domini regis vii. 118
Precedents of perſons bailed upon commitments by the ſpecial command of the king, or by king and lords together vii. 118
Mr. Noy's argument for ſir Walter Earl vii. 119
The writ and return vii. 119
That the return muſt be of an officer's own act, or the act of another, not what he is certified of by another vii. 119
Mr. Selden's argument for ſir Edmund Hampden vii. 121
That the return is contradictory, therefore void vii. 121
The meaning of the words, per legem terræ vii. 122
Mr. Calthrop's argument for ſir John Corbett vii. 122
Impriſonment by command of the king, where utterly unlawful, and where, though lawful, yet continuance without bail unlawful vii. 123
Per ſpeciale mandatum regis, how to be expounded vii. 125
The juriſdiction of the privy council, a limited juriſdiction, and therefore the cauſe of their commitment ought to appear vii. 126
The counſel ordered to attend with precedents vii. 128
Mr. attorney-general's reply to the form of the return vii. 128
To the matter vii. 129
That a perſon committed per ſpeciale mandatum domini regis, is not bailable vii. 132
Anſwers the precedents of perſons bailed, who were committed by the ſpecial command of the king vii. 134
Lord chief juſtice Hyde's ſpeech at delivering the opinion of the court, vii. 136
Denies the precedents of perſons bailed, or delivered, when impriſoned by the king's ſpecial command, and no cauſe ſhewn vii. 137
Precedents e contra vii. 139
They are remanded vii. 140
They are releaſed by the king's command, and returned to ſerve in parliament vii. 140
Opened in the houſe as a grievance to be redreſſed. Sir Francis Seymour's ſpeech thereon vii. 140
Sir Thomas Wentworth and ſir Benjamin Rudyard's ſpeeches vii. 141
Mr. ſecretary Cook's vii. 142
Sir Robert Philips's vii. 142
Sir Edward Coke's ſpeech, relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 144
Cites precedents, that the command of the king is not ſufficient to impriſon a man, without cauſe ſhewn vii. 144
Mr. Creſwell's ſpeech vii. 144
Lord chief juſtice Anderſon's report read, and the articles, to which all the judges ſubſcribed their names vii. 147
Mr. Selden's ſpeech vii. 148
Reſolutions of the houſe of commons relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 150
Conference between the lords and commons on the ſame ſubject vii. 150
Sir Dudley Digges's ſpeech vii. 150
Sir Edward Littleton's argument, made by command of the houſe of commons vii. 151

Difference between rep'eviable and bailable vii. 153
Mr. Selden's argument on the ſame occaſion vii. 155
Precedents cited by him, that perſons committed by the king's command are bailable vii. 156
Anſwers precedents brought againſt him vii. 158
The true copy of the precedents of record vii. 162
True copy of the records not printed, which were uſed by ſir Edward Littleton vii. 167
Sir Edward Coke's argument on the ſame occaſion vii. 169
The attorney-general's objections to the arguments vii. 172
Serjeant Aſhley's ſpeech on behalf of his majeſty vii. 179
Objections by the king's counſel, and anſwers thereto vii. 180
Earl of Suffolk charged with ſpeaking ſcandalouſly of mr. Selden; and proceedings thereon vii. 182
Mr. Noy's anſwer to the attorney's objections vii. 183
The judges of the King's-Bench called to give an account of the judgment paſſed vii. 184
The earl of Warwick's ſpeech vii. 186
Five propoſitions offered by the lords, to be preſented to his majeſty vii. 187
Mr. Selden's ſpeech about them vii. 188
Diſliked by the commons vii. 189
The lord keeper's ſpeech, by the king's command, to both houſes of parliament vii. 189
Sir Benjamin Rudyard's ſpeech vii. 190
Biſhop of Exeter's letter to the houſe of commons vii. 191
Mr. Hackwell's ſpeech vii. 192
Mr. Maſon's ſpeech concerning the bill for magna charta vii. 194
The ſpeaker's ſpeech to the king, in anſwer to ſeveral meſſages vii. 196
The petition of right preſented to the lords by ſir Edward Coke vii. 197
A letter from the king to the lords, by the lord keeper, communicated to the commons at a conference vii. 198
The lords propoſe an addition to the petition of right vii. 199
Several ſpeeches thereon vii. 199
Mr. Maſon's ſpeech, taking the lords additions apart vii. 200
Mr. Glanvill's ſpeech thereon vii. 202
Sir Henry Martin's ſpeech vii. 208
The lords agree to the petition vii. 211
The petition, and the king's anſwer vii. 212
Not approved of by the commons vii. 213
Both houſes join in a petition to his majeſty, to give a ſatisfactory anſwer to the petition of right; and his majeſty's anſwer vii. 215
The king's ſpeech at proroguing the parliament vii. 216

DARNLEY, HENRY Lord, Huſband to Mary Queen of Scots. See BOTHWELL JAMES Earl of. POWRIE WILLIAM.

DAVENPORT, HUMPHRY, Serjeant at Law,
His argument for return of habeas corpus in William Stroud's caſe vii. 223
The houſe of commons reſolve, that ſir Humphry Davenport his ſubſcribing his name to an information exhibited in the court of Star-chamber againſt mr. Hollis and the reſt for matters done by them in parliament, and the ſame ſo appearing in the information, is guilty thereby of the breach of privilege of parliament vii. 250

DAVENPORT, Sir HUMPHRY, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
His argument and opinion for the king againſt Hampden, in the cauſe of ſhip-money, with his reaſons i. 672

DAVENPORT. See WILKES JOHN.

DAVENTRY, HENEAGE, Lord FINCH, Baron DAVENTRY, Lord Chancellor.
His proceſſion as lord high ſteward on viſcount Stafford's trial for treaſon iii. 101
His addreſs to the noble priſoner before examination of witneſſes iii. 102
His lordſhip's ſpeech to the priſoner previous to his pronouncing judgment on him iii. 213
Over-rules motion for habeas corpus to Francis Jenkes vii. 471 Refuſes him a writ of mainprize vii. 474. See FINCH ſir HENEAGE. NOTTINGHAM earl of.

* DAVERS, Sir CHARLES,
His trial i. 209. See BLUNT ſir CHRISTOPHER.

DAVIS, Sir JOHN,
His trial i. 209. See BLUNT ſir CHRISTOPHER.

DAVIS, Sir JOHN, King's Serjeant at Law,
So juſtly admired for his writings about Ireland, compoſed a treatiſe to prove the right of the crown reſpecting impoſitions on merchandizes by prerogative xi. 29
Tranſcript of part of his argument xi. 34
His reports cited vii. 146
Extracts from them xi. 65, 69

DAVISON, Mr.
His arraignment in the Star-chamber for contempt and miſpriſion, 30 Eliz. vii. 20
Accuſed of delivering the warrant for the execution of the queen of Scots to the lords, without her majeſty's privity vii. 21
His defence vii. 21
The trial by another hand vii. 21
Sir Walter Mildmay, one of the commiſſioners, his ſpeech vii. 23
The ſpeeches of the reſt of the commiſſioners touching his puniſhment vii. 24, &c.
Is fined 10,000 marks, and impriſoned during her majeſty's pleaſure vii. 24, 27
Daviſon's excuſe, in an apologetical diſcourſe to Walſingham vii. 28
A letter from Walſingham and Daviſon to ſir Amias Pawlett and ſir Drew Drury, blaming their want of zeal in relation to the queen of Scots death vii. 29
The anſwer vii. 29

DAVY, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech to the court on behalf of the Abbotſbury witneſſes, who ſwore on the trial of Mary Squires, indicted for perjury x. 246
Opens caſe againſt William Barnard, tried on the Black Act for ſending a letter in a fictitious name to Charles duke of Marlborough, demanding a genteel ſupport for life x. 447
His reply on ſame trial x. 460
States the caſe, and opens the evidence, as counſel for the proſecution againſt Elizabeth Canning x. 211
Objects to mr. Salt's evidence, as alſo to the confeſſion of mother Wells, in ſame proſecution x. 367
His reply and obſervations on ſaid proſecution x. 374
Argument as counſel for Macdaniel and others x. 438
Of counſel for Timothy Murphy x. 188
His complimentary ſpeech reſpecting the conduct of ſir Criſpe Gaſcoigne, lord mayor of London, in procuring a pardon for Mary Squires, a gypſey, convicted of robbing Elizabeth Canning x. 248

* DAWSON, JOSEPH,
* Edward Foreſeith, William May, William Biſhop, James Lewis, and John Sparkes; their trials for piracy at the Old-Bailey, Oct. 19, 1696, 8 Will. III. v. 1
* The indictment for piratically taking the ſhip Gunſway in the Eaſt-Indies v. 1
* Dawſon pleads guilty v. 2
* The reſt are acquitted v. 2
* Charge to the grand jury by ſir Charles Hedges, upon other indictments preferred againſt the priſoners v. 2
* Probable evidence ſufficient to induce them to find a bill v. 3
* The former petty jury occaſionally reflected upon v. 3, 5, 6, 14
* A ſecond indictment found againſt the priſoners for piratically taking the Charles the Second, captain Gibſon commander v. 4
* Dawſon pleads guilty v. 5
* Two other indictments found againſt the priſoners; one for taking a Mooriſh ſhip; the other for taking two Daniſh ſhips v. 5
* Evidence of their abetting and aſſiſting Captain Avery in running away with the Charles the Second v. 6
* And of their running away with the James boat v. 6
* Want of wages the occaſion of their turning pirates v. 8
* Evidence of all the piracies laid in the ſeveral indictments to have been committed by the priſoners v. 8, &c.
* They burn the town of Meat in the Red Sea v. 9
* Five other Engliſh pirates join them there, and they lie in wait for the Mocha fleet, and ſurpriſe ſome of them, and ſhare the treaſure v. 9
* Negroes who come to trade with them robbed of their gold, and made ſlaves v. 10
* The priſoners enter upon their defence v. 11
* Lord chief juſtice Holt directs the jury, that thoſe on board a pirate-ſhip are to be preſumed to concur with him, unleſs they can make the contrary appear v. 14
* They are convicted, and the jury commended v. 15
* The ſame priſoners tried and convicted on the two other indictments, for piracy on the Mooriſh ſhip and the two Daniſh ſhips, by the ſame evidence as in the trial for taking the Charles the Second v. 15
* They all receive ſentence; and are executed v. 17

DEACON, THOMAS THEODORUS,
His trial for treaſon, July 17, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 558
Evidence againſt him ix. 558
His caſe ſtated by mr. J. Foſter, on all points ix. 558
Lord chief juſtice Willes declined giving any opinion on the ſecond point ix. 558
Executed at Kennington-Common ix. 559
Some account of him ix. 559
Part of his dying ſpeech ix. 565

* DEAGLE, JOHN iii. 650. See PILKINGTON, & al.

DEATH.
The reaſon why in criminal matters perſons by ordinary courſe of law cannot be convicted after their deaths iv. 205
Depoſitions of perſons executed for ſame treaſon admitted in proof in treaſon by the law of Scotland vii. 34
Citing dead perſons is among the legal forms preſcribed both by the laws of Scotland and thoſe of ſeveral other nations vii. 86

DEATH-BED,
Declarations upon it, as to an actual fact, is evidence x. 161
If record avers death of party, court will not admit his appearance to falſify the record x. 433

DE BRUCE,
Of noble family, was ordered to go looſely attired and bare-headed, from the court of King's-Bench, in Weſtminſter-Hall, when full, to the Exchequer, and there aſk pardon of Roger de Higham, one of the barons of the ſaid Exchequer, for taxing him with injuſtice in giving judgment againſt the ſaid De Bruce, who was then committed to the Tower during the king's pleaſure i. 722. See HARRISON THOMAS, clerk. WRAYNHAM.

DECLARATIONS.
Declaration in an action of falſe impriſonment, in cauſe of Pritchard and Papillon vi. 50. Ap.
Declaration between Paty and White concerning the election of members of parliament viii. 135
Lord Coke adviſes defendant never to demur to declaration, if there be hopes of matter of fact vii. 450. See PLEADING and PLEAS.

DECREE.
Inſtance of a lord keeper reverſing his own decree vii. 109

DEE,
His argument in behalf of doctor Sacheverel, as to the firſt article in his impeachment for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 727
As to the ſecond article v. 756
As to the third article v. 767
As to the fourth article v. 779

DEED.
Contents of a deed or writing are not to be given in evidence, without producing the writing, or true copy of it iv. 194. vi. 293
Deed of entail humouroufly defcribed iv. 194
Neceffary that deed fhould be delivered x. 476
*DEFENCE. See TRIAL.
DEGRADATION of a CLERGYMAN.
The proceedings on performing that clerical ceremony vii. 648
DEGRADATION of a KNIGHT of the GARTER.
The publication at the degrading Edward duke of Buckingham, knight of that moft noble order, for treafon, and the method of proceeding on that occafion xi. 6
DE GREY, Lord Chief Juftice of the Common-Pleas,
His fpeech on motion for new trial, where 3000l. damages had been given againft a plantation governor, for falfely imprifoning and banifhing a fubject of this country, accompanied with circumftances of peculiar hardfhip and cruelty xi. 184. See SOLICITOR-GENERAL. WILKES JOHN.
DE HARTLEY, CONSTANTINE. See GOLDING, & al.
DELAMERE, HENRY* Lord,
* His trial for high-treafon, 1685, 1 Jac. II. lord Jefferies lord high fteward iv. 210
* Lord high fteward's fpeech to the prifoner iv. 211
* The prifoner infifts that a peer need not hold up his hand when he is arraigned iv. 211
* Lord high fteward is judge, and has no vote among the lords triers, where the trial is by commiffion out of parliament iv. 211
* The indictment for high-treafon, in confpiring the death of the king, raifing a rebellion, &c. iv. 211. vi. 55. Ap.
* The prifoner delivers a plea to the jurifdiction of the court, fetting forth that he ought to be tried by the whole body of the peers, the parliament not being diffolved iv. 212
* And for that the houfe of lords were already poffeffed of the caufe iv. 212
* The king's counfel infift, that during a prorogation, the proceedings are always before the lord high fteward by commiffion iv. 213
* And that the houfe of lords were not poffeffed of the caufe, they having only petitioned his majefty that the prifoner might be brought to his trial iv. 213
* Alfo, that his plea was in paper, and in Englifh, without counfel's hand, and therefore not neceffary formally to demur to it iv. 214
* The prifoner defires counfel, and time to draw up his plea iv. 214
* He is anfwered, that in a plea to the jurifdiction, the party ought to be ready to maintain it prefently iv. 214
* The lord high fteward infifts that he is fole judge in this court, and need not advife with the peers about it iv. 215
* The plea is over-ruled ; and he pleads not guilty iv. 215
* Lord high fteward's charge to the peers iv. 215
* All queftions to be directed to and propounded by the lord high fteward, where the trial is by commiffion iv. 216
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his fpeech before evidence iv. 216
* Lord Howard gives a general account of the lord Shaftefbury's plot iv. 218
* Lord Grey's evidence of the fame plot, and the duke of Monmouth's progrefs into Chefhire iv. 221
* Lord Grey's evidence concerning Monmouth's rebellion, and the dependence he had on the prifoner's affiftance iv. 221
* Evidence of fome fufpicious circumftances againft the lord Delamere iv. 226, &c.
* Saxon's evidence of the prifoner's employing him to ftir up the people, and fending him to the duke of Monmouth in the weft iv. 229
* The prifoner moves the court to adjourn till the next morning, that he might review his notes, and prepare for his defence, it growing late iv. 230
* The lord high fteward propofes it to the judges, whether the court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231
* The lords withdraw, and the judges likewife, to confider of it iv. 231
* The judges declare, there has been no precedent of the peers feparating after the evidence given iv. 232
* That a jury, once charged, are not to be difcharged till they have given their verdict iv. 232
* That indeed, at the trial of a peer in parliament, the houfe may, and often has adjourned ; but there the lords are judges : in this cafe, they are in the nature of a jury iv. 232
* The lords triers may confult the judges in the prifoner's abfence ; but they can afk no queftions of the lord high fteward in his abfence, nor can he withdraw with them iv. 232
* At a trial in full parliament it is otherwife iv. 233
* In a full parliament the lord high fteward has a vote ; but when he fits by commiffion he has none iv. 233
* The lord high fteward refufes to adjourn ; and directs the prifoner to proceed in his defence iv. 233
* The prifoner permitted to charge the king's evidence with particular crimes iv. 234
* The prifoner proves that fir Robert Cotton, mr. Offley, and himfelf, were none of them at his houfe when the king's evidence depofed they were iv. 236, &c.
* Mr. folicitor-general Finch fums up the evidence iv. 243
* It is not ufual for the high fteward to repeat, or obferve upon, the evidence iv. 246
* One witnefs who fwears directly to the treafon, and another to a circumftance, affirmed to be two witneffes in law iv. 246. See vi. 427
* The prifoner is acquitted iv. 246. v. 204
Lord Delamere the only perfon who efcaped in a trial of treafon, where there was a defign againft his life ; and if he had not had witneffes to have proved the perfons mentioned to be with him at the place and time fwore againft him, to be in other places, his denial would not have ferved his turn ; or had he been tried by a jury of commoners packed, as in reign of Jac. II. they ufually were, he had not efcaped iv. 177
DE LA POLE, MICHAEL. See vi. 566. SUFFOLK Earl of.
DELMAHOY. See CRISPE Sir NICHOLAS.
*DEMURRER. See PLEA and PLEADINGS.
DENEW, NATHANIEL,
John Meriam, and Richard Britton ; their trials for a confpiracy and affault on mr. Colepeper, 1703-4 viii. 178
The indictment againft them viii. 178
Mr. ferjeant Darnell opens the evidence viii. 179
Mr. Colepeper's evidence viii. 180
Sir Jacob Banks ordered by the queen to be profecuted, for ftriking mr. Colepeper at Windfor viii. 180
Sir George Rook challenges mr. Colepeper, and they agree to meet on the coaft of Holland viii. 181
Mr. Denew affaults mr. Colepeper viii. 182
Other evidence for the queen viii. 185
Mr. Wells for the defendants viii. 189
Several lords called to the defendants characters viii. 191
Meriam found not guilty ; Britton not guilty of the confpiracy and affault, but guilty as to the reft ; Denew not guilty of the confpiracy, but guilty of the reft of the indictment viii. 194
Denew fined two hundred marks ; Britton one hundred pounds viii. 195
DENHAM, Sir JOHN, Baron of the Exchequer,
His opinion, with his reafons, for Hampden, in the caufe of fhip-money i. 672
DENISON, Sir THOMAS, Juftice B. R.
Was free from connections and ambitions of every kind xi. 338
DENTON, ALEXANDER,
Ordered into cuftody, for pleading on return of hab. corp. on parliamentary commitment viii. 139
Writ of hab. corp. ferved on ferjeant at arms, on behalf of mr. Denton, to bring him before the lord keeper viii. 142
His argument on hab. corp. brought by the Aylefbury men viii. 159
*DEPOSITIONS. See EVIDENCE.
DERBY, HENRY STANLEY Earl of,
His proceffion as lord high fteward of England on the trial of Philip Howard, earl of Arundel i. 164. xi. 27
DERWENTWATER, JAMES* Earl of,
* Proceedings on an impeachment of high-treafon againft him, William lord Widdrington, William earl of Nithifdale, Robert earl of Carnwarth, William vifcount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn, 1715, 2 Geo. I. vi. 1
* Mr. Lechmere's fpeech in the houfe of commons upon his motion for the impeachment vi. 1
* They are impeached, with George earl Wintoun, and articles fent up vi. 5
* All plead guilty, except the earl of Wintoun vi. 5
* The king's commiffion, appointing William lord Cowper lord high fteward vi. 5
* The articles read vi. 6
* Earl of Derwentwater's anfwer vi. 8
* Lord Widdrington's anfwer vi. 9
* Earl of Nithifdale's anfwer vi. 10
* Lord Nairn's petition vi. 11
* Earl of Derwentwater's fpeech vi. 12
* Lord Widdrington's fpeech vi. 12
* Earl of Nithifdale's fpeech vi. 13
* Earl of Carnwarth's fpeech vi. 13
* Lord Kenmure's fpeech vi. 14
* Lord Nairn's fpeech vi. 14
* Lord high fteward's fpeech before judgment vi. 14
* Sentence paffed upon them, as in cafes of high-treafon vi. 16
* Earl of Derwentwater's dying fpeech vi. 16
* He is beheaded, with the lord Kenmure vi. 17
DEVIL.
Whether the devil can enable a man to faft beyond the time nature allows v. 501
DEVONSHIRE, WILLIAM Earl of
His cafe, on information in B. R. A. D. 1687, for affaulting colonel Culpepper in the king's palace xi. 133
Occafion of the affault xi. 133
Obliged to give bail for his appearance in B. R. xi. 133
His appearance recorded xi. 133
The earl pleads to the information his privilege as a peer of England xi. 133
This plea is over-ruled xi. 133
He pleads guilty to the information xi. 133
Is fined 30,000l. and committed till paid xi. 133
Argument to fhew, that the earl's plea of privilege ought not to have been over-ruled xi. 133, 134
That the fine was exceffive xi. 133, 134
That the commitment was illegal xi. 133, 135
Proceedings in the houfe of lords thereon after the Revolution xi. 135
DIARY.
Archbifhop Laud's diary was printed in folio, and given to every lord i. 933
Extracts from lord Clarendon's diary x. 40. Ap.
DIGBY*, Sir EVERARD i. 244. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.
DIGEST of the LAW concerning LIBELS.
An extract from that publication xi. 304
*DISABILITY. See WITNESS.
DISCONTINUANCE of PROCESS.
Diftringas tefted day after return of venire, a difcontinuance v. 547
* Whether this be amendable v. 574. See DISTRINGAS.

DISGUISE viii. 313. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

DISNEY, WILLIAM, Eſq.

His trial for high treaſon, 1685 vii. 611

Evidence of his having printed the duke of Monmouth's declaration vii. 611

His ſpeech at his execution vii. 611

DISPENSING POWER. See iv. 399. ix. 292. xi. 91. n.

Diſpenſing with the teſt and penal laws, was as miſchievous as illegal iv. 166, 172

Eleven judges agree to the diſpenſing power vii. 616. See v. 747

If the penalty forfeited upon a penal ſtatute, be given to the poor of the pariſh where the offence is committed, the king cannot diſpenſe with the penalty for that offence, becauſe the poor have an intereſt therein; but if the penalty be given part to the king, and part to the poor, the king may diſpenſe with his own part, but not with the part of the poor i. 662. See ATKYNS Sir ROBERT. ATWOOD WILLIAM. * BISHOPS the SEVEN, their Trial, iv. 304. HALES Sir EDWARD.

DISTRINGAS.

Diſtringas teſted day after return of venire, diſcontinuance of proceſs, and not amendable in a criminal caſe. iv. 568, 569, 570, 571. See WRITS.

DIVORCE.

A verdict at law, a previous ſtep neceſſary in order to obtain a divorce in parliament viii. 35. n. See v. 239

Whether divorce for impotency authorizes a ſecond marriage x. 23. Ap.

Queen Anna Boleyn's divorce and attainder for adultery contradictory xi. 12. See ADULTERY. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION. ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and Lady FRANCES his Counteſs. * HOWARD, Lady FRANCES, Counteſs of ESSEX, and ROBERT Earl of i. 315. NORFOLK, HENRY Duke of, and Lady MARY MORDAUNT, his Ducheſs.

DODD, SAMUEL,

His ſpeech on the bill of divorce between Henry Howard, duke of Norfolk, and lady Mary Mordaunt his ducheſs, in the houſe of commons v. 277

His argument in defence of doctor Sacheverel, on the firſt article of his impeachment before the lords, for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 717

As to the ſecond article v. 752

As to the third article v. 762, 763

As to the fourth article v. 775

DODDERIDGE, Sir JOHN,

His ſpeech, when one of the juſtices of the court of King's-Bench, to the houſe of lords, for remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for refuſing to pay the loan to king Charles the Firſt vii. 185, 186

DOLBEN, Sir GILBERT,

His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 119

DOLBEN, Sir WILLIAM, J. B. R.

Declines giving his opinion on earl Danby's caſe, who moved, on commitment by lords, to be bailed ii. 754

Refuſed to bail his lordſhip ii. 760

Shews the reaſonableneſs of making ſtatute 27th Eliz. chap. 2. and of putting it in force at that time ii. 1018

Made a ſpeech as recorder of London, previous to B. Harris's trial ii. 1037

Doubted whether the plea of Fitzharris, to ouſt court of juriſdiction, was ſufficient iii. 261

On the trial of lord Gray, for ſeducing, carrying away, and adulterouſly ſoliciting lady Henrietta Berkley, ſir William held, no court of juſtice could diſpoſe of a man's wife; and queſtioned whether the court had power to commit a peer on an homine replegiando iii. 544

He directs the jury on the trial of ſir Miles Stapleton, baronet, for treaſon iii. 327

Directs the jury, on the trial of Towyng and Preſſicks, for treaſon iii. 87

Examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 42

His charge to the jury on the trial of John Cole iv. 509

What was declared by him in King's-Bench court, concerning the many libellous pamphlets publiſhed in 1679, 30 Car. II. viii. 457. See ANDERSON LIONEL. TASBOROUGH JOHN.

* DONN, HENRY i. 128. See BABINGTON, & al.

DORMER, ROBERT,

His ſpeech before giving the evidence on the trial of Elizabeth Collier, for a libel iii. 91

His parliamentary ſpeech relative to Aſhby and White viii. 108, 109

Juſtice of the Common Pleas, his argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 295, 296, 299

His opinion xi. 300, 302

DORSET, EDWARD Earl of,

His ſpeech on cenſuring and ſentencing William Prynne and others, in Star chamber, for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 427

Characterizes Catherine queen to Car. I. i. 428

Parliament reſolve, that warrant under his hand for impriſonment of William Prynne, is illegal i. 504

DORSLAUS. See WHITFORD Sir PAUL.

DOUBLE TOM, returned out of the Country; or, the true Picture of a modern Whig,

Cenſured as falſe, ſcandalous, and tending to diſturb the peace of the kingdom vii. 80

* DOVER, SIMON ii. 529. See TWYN, & al.

* DOWNES, JOHN ii. 396. See REGICIDES.

DRAKE, Dr.

Acknowledges himſelf author of a book entitled, "The Hiſtory of the laſt Parliament, begun 1700," viii. 78

Preface cenſured as falſe and ſcandalous, and doctor ordered to be proſecuted viii. 79

DROWNING. See COWPER SPENCER. STANDFSIELD PHILIP.

DRUNKENNESS.

The law reputes a drunkard voluntarius dæmon, and he is not at all the leſs excuſable for committing a crime ii. 7

DUCK, ARTHUR. See REA Lord.

DUDLEY, Sir ANDREW. See GATES Sir JOHN.

DUDLEY, EDMUND, Eſq.

His trial for treaſon, at Guildhall, London, July 16, 1509, 1 Hen. VIII. xi. 3

He was a gentleman of birth, and ſpeaker of the parliament houſe xi. 3

Is committed to the Tower xi. 3

Accuſed in general for endeavouring to ſubvert the government xi. 3. See vii. 488. xi. 45

Found guilty xi. 3, 4

His head ſtruck off xi. 4. See xi. 45

DUDLEY, JOHN. See NORTHUMBERLAND Duke of.

DUELS.

In a ſet duel, there are mutual paſſes made between the combatants; yet if there be original malice between the parties, it is not the interchange of blows will make an alteration, or be any mitigation of the offence of killing ix. 63. By Holt, ch. j.

If two be fighting a duel, though upon malice prepenſe, and one comes and takes part with him who he thinks may have the diſadvantage in the combat, or that he is moſt affected to, not knowing of the malice, it is but manſlaughter ix. 65. * See MURDER.

DUNNING, JOHN. See KINGSTON Ducheſs Dowager of.

DURESS.

A man dies by it, it is murder in the gaoler ix. 177

DYER, Sir JAMES.

A perſon was puniſhed for depraving the good judge ſir James Dyer vii. 111

Famous Dyer gave judgment in C. B. which was reverſed in B. R. yet he diſcharged his conſcience, and the reverſal indicated no injuſtice in the judge vii. 109

E.

EARL, Sir WALTER,

Impriſoned for not ſubſcribing to a loan, brings his hab. corp. vii. 114. See DARNEL Sir THOMAS.

* EARLES, JOHN, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

EAST INDIA COMPANY. See MONOPOLIES.

ECCLESIASTICAL AFFAIRS. See COMPTON HENRY.

ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

The excellency of the Engliſh laws is not to be found in them Em. Pref. iii.

When the diſtinction of eccleſiaſtical and ſpiritual cauſes, from civil and temporal cauſes, began in the world xi. 74. See APPEAL. CONVOCATION.

* EDMONDSTON, PATRICK v. 634. See STIRLING JAMES, & al.

EDUCATION. See ROYAL FAMILY.

EDWARD the FIRST.

King Edward the firſt oppoſed the pope's uſurpation xi. 73

EDWARD the SECOND.

Edward the ſecond ſuffered the pope to uſurp after Edward the firſt's oppoſition xi. 73

EDWARD the THIRD.

This king reſiſted the uſurpation of the pope xi. 74

EDWARD the SIXTH.

The commons had no journals before his reign xi. 54. n.

EGAN, JAMES. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN, & al.

EGERTON, THOMAS, Solicitor General,

When made attorney-general i. 194

EGERTON, THOMAS Lord, Lord-keeper,

His declaration on trial of the earls of Eſſex and Southampton, for treaſon, againſt Eſſex i. 200. See ABINGTON EDWARD. ELLESMERE.

EJECTMENT. See IVY Lady. NEAL THOMAS.

ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT. See PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

ELIZABETH, Queen.

* A noble ſaying applauded by her, concerning diſreſpectful words ſpoken of princes i. 197

Lord Bacon remembered for the efficacy of the phraſe, what was ſaid by a principal judge, viz. "That he would never allow that queen Elizabeth ſhould be a ſtatute queen, but a common law queen xi. 80

The prerogative grew arbitrary, and encreaſed very faſt towards the end of this queen's reign xi. 318

The famous ſaying of queen Elizabeth beſt explains the words for the king, in the opinion of ſir John Hawles; for the lord Burleigh, ſeeing ſir Edward Coke, the then attorney-general, coming towards her, he ſaid, Here is your attorney-general, qui pro dominâ reginâ ſequitur. Nay, ſays ſhe, I'll have the words altered, for it ſhall be, qui pro dominâ veritate ſequitur iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.

ELOQUENCE.

This collection of trials affords many inſtances of eloquence Em. Pref. i.

ELLES, RICHARD,

His trial on information in nature of quo warranto, by the king's attorney againſt him, to ſhew by what authority he claims to be mayor of New Romney, at the relation of B. Mann, at Maidſtone aſſizes, Aug. 6, 1734, before lord chief juſtice Eyre x. 127. Ap.

Mr. Knowler opens the information, and acquaints the jury, that the firſt iſſue they were to try, is, whether Richard Elles was one of the jurats of of New Romney in manner and form as alledged by his plea; and 2. Whether the major part of the jurats and commonalty did chuſe him mayor x. 128. Ap.

Serjeant Darnell, for the defendant, complains of the art uſed againſt him x. 129. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Baynes, on the ſame ſide, mentions this information was granted by the court of King's-Bench, to be tried on five iſſues x. 129. Ap.
Debate about what is a jurat x. 129. Ap.
Corporation books produced and read x. 130. Ap.
Liſt of voters at the election of mayor x. 130. Ap.
Mr. Marſh's objections to the evidence x. 131. Ap.
Mr. Lacy ſtates the iſſue to be tried x. 131. Ap.
Lord chief juſtice Eyre and Mr. Papillon had a diſpute, whether the ſhort-hand writer ſhould take notes x. 132. Ap.
Mr. Papillon ſays he ordered him, but his lordſhip might do as he would x. 132. Ap.
Chief juſtice then bid him go on x. 132. Ap.
Several witneſſes examined x. 132. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Darnell, in ſupport of the election x. 134. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Baynes, on ſame ſide x. 135. Ap.
Mr. Marſh mentions a point of law, which he deſired might be ſaved x. 135. Ap.
Mr. Lacy againſt it x. 136. Ap.
Mr. Smith on the ſame ſide x. 136. Ap.
Lord chief juſtice ſtates the queſtion to the jury, who find for the defendant x. 136. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Darnell, on the next iſſue, that he was not duly ſworn x. 136. Ap.
Evidence relating to it x. 136. Ap.
A man is guilty of perjury, if a clerk will adminiſter an oath when a court forbid him x. 137. Ap.
Lord chief juſtice ſtates the queſtion on this iſſue to the jury, who find for the king x. 138. Ap.

ELLESMERE, THOMAS, Lord Chancellor,
His proceſſion, as lord high ſteward of England, to the trial of the counteſs of Somerſet i. 349
His charge to the peers on the trial of the earl of Somerſet i. 351
His grace's directions to the king's counſel i. 351
His addreſs to the counteſs on paſſing ſentence of death on her i. 352
His addreſs to the earl on his arraignment i. 352
Paſſes ſentence of death on him i. 365
His ſpeech in the Exchequer-chamber in the caſe of the poſtnati xi. 97
He ſays, that power and might of ſome potent perſons oppreſſed juſtice and faithful judges, in Richard the ſecond's time, for expounding the laws ſoundly and truely xi. 99. See vii. 238. EGERTON THOMAS.

* ELLIOT, EDMUND, iv. 410. See GRAHAM Sir RICHARD. PRESTON Lord.

ELLIOT, Sir JOHN,
Proceedings againſt him, Denzil Holles, and Benjamin Valentine, eſqrs. for ſeditious ſpeeches in parliament vii. 242
The words for which the information was brought vii. 242
They plead to the juriſdiction, and the attorney-general demurs vii. 242
Mr. Maſon for the defendants, that the ſpeeches contained matter of accuſation againſt ſome great peers of the realm, therefore not cognizable out of parliament vii. 242
That the king cannot adjourn the houſe by verbal meſſage, ſo no contempt in diſobeying it vii. 244
That the detaining the ſpeaker is only puniſhable in parliament vii. 244
Mr. Calthorp for mr. Valentine vii. 244
The king ſhall not have his election of court, where the common law makes a prohibition vii. 246
Sir Robert Heath, attorney-general, for the king vii. 246
The judges agree, they have a juriſdiction to puniſh offences committed in parliament vii. 247
Their ſeveral ſpeeches at delivering their opinions vii. 248
Defendants refuſe to put in any other plea, and judgment upon a nihil dicit vii. 249
Defendants impriſoned during the king's pleaſure; ſir John Elliot fined 2000l. mr. Holles 1000 marks, and mr. Valentine 500l. vii. 249
Theſe proceedings reſolved a breach of privilege vii. 249
Five thouſand pounds awarded to each for his damages vii. 251
The judgment reſolved illegal vii. 251
The information, plea, and demurrer, and writs of error vii. 253
Reverſed by the lords vii. 259

ELLIS, Sir WILLIAM, Judge of the Common-Pleas,
His argument in the Exchequer-chamber, for affirming the judgment of the court of King's-Bench in the cauſe of ſir Samuel Barnardiſton and ſir William Soame vii. 431

* ELWES, Sir JERVIS,
* His trial as acceſſary before the fact to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, Nov. 16, 1615, 13 Jac. I. i. 341
* Sir Jervis's defence i. 342
* He urges, that, though he did ſuſpect a deſign of poiſoning the deceaſed, the concealing of ſuch ſuſpicion would not make him acceſſary before the fact i. 343
* Franklin's confeſſion read againſt him i. 344
* He is convicted, and ſentence paſſed i. 344
* His execution i. 344

* EMBASSADOR. See AMBASSADOR.

EMLYN, SOLLOM, Counſellor at Law,
Was editor of Hale's Hiſt. Plac. Cor. and of State Trials, 6 volumes, folio edition, 1742; and of the admirable preface prefixed to that edition x. 406. n.
His opinion on the caſe of Elizabeth Canning x. 406, 407

EMPSON, Sir THOMAS, Knight,
His trial for high-treaſon, at Guildhall, London, Oct. 1, 1509, 1 Hen. VIII. xi. 3
His ſpeech to the counſel xi. 3
Anſwer to it xi. 3
Reported to be a ſieve-maker's ſon xi. 3
He is committed to the Tower xi. 3
Accuſed in general for endeavouring to ſubvert the government xi. 3. See vii. 488. xi. 45.
Found guilty xi. 3, 4
His head ſtruck off xi. 4. See xi. 45

* ENEMIES.
* Where the ſubjects of a foreign prince ſhall be deemed enemies, though the prince himſelf be in amity with this crown i. 115. v. 34
* Lawful for private men to arm themſelves to oppoſe a common enemy ii. 593
* What ſhall be conſtrued an adhering to the king's enemies i. 733

ENGLESHIRE.
The law called 'Engleſhire' explained ix. 61

ENGLISH.
All law proceedings muſt be in the Engliſh language, and wrote in a common legible hand and character, and in words at length Em. Pref. vii. n.

* ENQUEST. See JURY.

ENTICK, JOHN, Clerk,
Againſt Nathan Carrington and three others, meſſengers in ordinary to the king, court of C. B. Mich. Term, 6 Geo. III. 1765 xi. 313
Treſpaſs for breaking and entering plaintiff's houſe, &c. xi. 313
Special juſtification under the warrant of the ſecretary of ſtate xi. 313
Replication of his own wrong xi. 313
Special verdict xi. 313
Information before a juſtice of peace xi. 314
Secretary of ſtate's warrant to take plaintiff and his books and papers xi. 314
Delivered to defendants to be executed, who did execute the ſame without a conſtable xi. 314
They carried the books and papers to the law clerk, a juſtice of peace xi. 314
Like warrants have iſſued ſince the Revolution xi. 314
No demand made by plaintiff of copy of warrant xi. 314
No action brought within ſix months xi. 314
Concluſion of ſpecial verdict xi. 314
Damages found, and laſt iſſue for plaintiff xi. 314
Arguments on ſpecial verdict by ſerjeant Leigh and Glynn, counſel for plaintiff xi. 314
Arguments thereon by Burland and Nares, king's ſerjeants, counſel for defendants xi. 315
Replication of counſel for plaintiff xi. 315
Obſervations of the lord chief juſtice xi. 315, 316
Arguments of counſel for the defendants on the ſecond argument xi. 316
Argument of lord chief juſtice Camden, on delivering the judgment of the court xi. 316
Judgment for plaintiff xi. 316

ENVY.
Envy properly is a repining or being grieved at the happineſs and proſperity of another. By Holt, chief juſtice ix. 63

ERROR.
No writ of error but in parliament, till ſtat. 27 Eliz. chap. 8. i. 553
Writ of error in treaſon vi. 42. Ap.
If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward, they ſhall be reverſed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248
Why writs of error lie in B. R. of England, to reverſe erroneous judgments in the courts and parliament of Ireland viii. 347
Writ of error for the reverſal of a judgment in felony or treaſon, is the right of the ſubject, and ought to be granted at his deſire, and is not an act of grace or favour, to be denied or granted at pleaſure iii. 986
Error lies not in proceedings on habeas corpus viii. 157
Error lies from B. R. to parliament, only for error in point of law, not in matter of fact viii. 62
Error lies in the King's-Bench in England to reverſe a writ of error in parliament in Ireland i. 664. xi. 93. See ASHBY and WHITE. LEACH DRYDEN.
Attainder of treaſon reverſed for error in omitting words in the entry of the judgment iii. 752

ESCAPE.
Bringing up witneſſes in execution is an eſcape iv. 2
Priſoner not to be ſhackled, but for fear of eſcape Em. Pref. xv.
Royal licence for priſoner in execution for debt, being a man very neceſſary for war, to go for defence of a place, held by all the judges not good i. 530, 531. See PRISONERS.

* ESSEX, ARTHUR Earl of,
His death in the Tower. See BRADDON.

* ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and HENRY Earl of SOUTHAMPTON,
* Their trial for high-treaſon in conſpiring the deſtruction of the queen, and raiſing an inſurrection, Feb. 19, 1600, 43 Eliz. i. 197
* No challenge to a peer i. 198
* Serjeant Yelverton's ſpeech i. 198
* Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, aggravates the charge i. 199
* Witherington's depoſition read as evidence, and the earl's anſwer i. 200
* Lord-keeper, earl of Worceſter, and lord chief juſtice, their declaration i. 200
* Sir Walter Raleigh's evidence i. 201
* Sir Ferdinando Gorges' confeſſion read i. 202

* Evidence

* Evidence of the priſoner's deſign to ſurpriſe the court, take the Tower, &c. i. 202
* Davers's and others confeſſion to the ſame effect i. 203
* Eſſex deſigns to call a parliament i. 203
* And to have altered the government i. 203
* Eſſex's pretence that England was ſold to the Spaniards i. 203
* Eſſex charges ſir Robert Cecil with ſaying, that none but the infanta of Spain had a right to the crown of England; upon which enſues a ſevere expoſtulation between them i. 205
* The earls conclude their defence i. 206
* The terms Eſſex ſurrendered upon i. 207
* The judges deliver their opinion to the peers after they were withdrawn i. 207
* The priſoners are convicted i. 207
* Sentence paſſed i. 208
* Earl of Eſſex's execution i. 208

* ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and his Wife,

* Their divorce i. 315. x. 4. Ap. See HOWARD lady FRANCES.

ESTOPPEL.

Wherever a deed operates by way of eſtoppel, and the jury find it prout in a ſpecial verdict, it muſt be conſidered as an eſtoppel x. 433. See PLEA and PLEADINGS.

*EVIDENCE.

* Depoſitions of a perſon abſent read in evidence, in a capital caſe i. 172
* Contra v. 118
* Circumſtantial evidence allowed as good proof againſt a puritan miniſter i. 183
* Urged in like manner by ſir Edward Coke againſt ſir Walter Raleigh i. 220
* Allowed and urged by the court againſt a popiſh prieſt ii. 997
* Verbal confeſſions of criminals may be offered as evidence againſt them ii. 1005
* A letter read in evidence that was neither written to or by the priſoner ii. 714
* A popiſh prieſt performing the function of a prieſt, evidence of his being in orders ii. 802, 962, 966
* A ſolemn reſolution, that in a caſe of treaſon there muſt be two witneſſes believed by the jury iii. 56
* What was ſworn againſt a criminal at the trial of another, ought not to be given in evidence againſt him ii. 863. v. 73, 118
* Evidence given that had no relation to the priſoners in particular, but only to the plot in general iii. 109, 798
* Letters or certificates on a priſoner's behalf cannot be read as evidence ii. 1010
* In caſe one witneſs proves an overt-act in one county, and one in another, it is good proof in either iii. 366
* Two witneſſes to every overt-act not neceſſary iii. 419
* The hand-writing of a criminal proved, by comparing it with other writings of his; and by the witneſſes ſwearing they believed it to be the priſoner's hand iii. 802. iv. 337, 447
* Bail cannot be a witneſs for his principal iii. 842
* What the defendant has ſaid, no evidence for him iii. 843
* In an indictment for forgery, another forgery was not allowed to be given in evidence iii. 844
* A trial printed by authority no evidence iv. 29, 153
* Where the priſoner would give in evidence any thing that was ſaid or done at another trial, he ought to produce the record iv. 41
* A narrative ſworn in the houſe of peers admitted in evidence iv. 46
* The journals of the lords and commons, votes, and addreſſes, given in evidence iii. 152. iv. 376, 388
* All people ſhall be allowed copies of ſuch records as may be evidence for them iv. 417
* Treaſonable papers found on a perſon, the jury may from the circumſtances judge of the party's being privy to the deſign, though there be no direct evidence of it iv. 481
* Evidence may be given of facts done before or after the time laid in the indictment, ſo it be before the indictment preferred iii. 394. iv. 569
* No exception can be made to the proof after verdict iv. 596
* Evidence may be given of treaſon committed in another county than that where the indictment is found iii. 403. iv. 639, 640
* No evidence ought to be given without firſt opening it iv. 692. ix. 385
* So the evidence be probable, it is ſufficient for the grand jury to find the bill iii. 419. v. 3
* No evidence ought to be given in capital caſes, but in the priſoner's preſence v. 85, 118
* Whether there ought not to be as full evidence on a bill of attainder as in other caſes? v. 114, 124, 132
* The ſame evidence required on impeachments as in inferior courts v. 119
* No evidence ought to be given of an overt-act not laid in the indictment, unleſs it tend to prove ſome overt-act that is laid in the indictment iv. 691, 697. v. 22
* No evidence ought to be given of the contents of a letter, unleſs the letter be produced iv. 194. v. 31
* The examination of a criminal before a magiſtrate given in evidence againſt him at his trial iv. 135
* The grand jury may not ſend for other evidence than is produced on the part of the king v. 423
* The actions of another given in evidence againſt the defendant v. 488
* Evidence given of facts done after the information exhibited v. 492
* A printed proclamation not to be admitted in evidence v. 510
* Extracts out of printed books admitted to be given in evidence v. 728
* Examinations of witneſſes, who might have been produced viva voce, frequently given in evidence againſt a criminal anciently i. 95, 315, 347.
* Contra v. 64.
* Examinations taken in another court where they ſhall be read in evidence ii. 945. iii. 152
* Examination of a witneſs withdrawn read in evidence againſt a criminal iv. 496. v. 68
* Examination of a witneſs before the coroner read at the trial againſt the priſoner, though the witneſs gave his evidence viva voce in court iv. 534
* In what caſes a juror may be examined by the priſoner iv. 748
* If an examination in writing be taken by a juſtice of peace, no evidence can be given of what paſſed at that examination, unleſs the writing be produced vi. 203
* The confeſſion of a priſoner can only affect himſelf, and not any perſon joined with him in the accuſation iii. 474. iv. 195. vi. 218
* Examinations of others and of priſoner read againſt him i. 330. ii. 547

Examination not ſigned by party adjudged evidence againſt a third perſon i. 218

Wife's actions given in evidence againſt her huſband i. 361

An old prophecy given in evidence i. 106

Wife may be a witneſs againſt her huſband in rape; ſo reſolved i. 388; but not otherwiſe v. 476

Examinations taken without oath, unleſs of the party to be tried, cannot be uſed; ſo ruled by all the judges i. 388. See i. 360.

Earl Somerſet's petition to the king, read in evidence againſt him on his trial i. 358

* Perſons convicted on circumſtantial evidence i. 182. ii. 968. v. 115

One witneſs, with concurring circumſtances, ſufficient in treaſon ii. 78

* Hearſay not to be admitted in evidence ii. 279. iii. 757, 841, 883. vi. 414, 415, 475, 644
* Admitted i. 222. ii 251, 387, 881. iii. 798. vi. 803

Hearſay evidence admitted for the king, but not for the priſoner iii. 718, 723

Hearſay evidence admitted to confirm another's teſtimony iv. 48

A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cauſe iii. 141

Any act diſcovering imagination to depoſe, deſtroy, or impriſon the king, is evidence of compaſſing his death iii. 817. See TREASON.

Juſtices who took examination of priſoners, not allowed to read examination as evidence iii. 474, 476

Votes of the houſe of commons no evidence iv. 39

Examination of witneſs before privy council, ſhewn him to refreſh his memory at the trial iii. 478

Any thing under the great ſeal is evidence iv. 335

Rules of evidence diſpenſed with by court and counſel iii. 842, 843

A printed hiſtory is no evidence in a court of law vii. 601

No authority that any thing ſhould be permitted to be given in evidence on the trial of civil matters, which ſhould not be permitted to be given in evidence in treaſon iv. 194

Indictment muſt expreſs, that party publiſhed writing, in order to give it in evidence in treaſon iv. 197

When books, papers, writings, deeds, letters, or any written or printed matters are read in evidence, they ſhould be wholly and not partially read iv. 198, 202

Examination of priſoner read in evidence againſt him on trial iv. 135. v. 210

Of all evidence, the finding of papers in party's poſſeſſion, the weakeſt iv. 182

Papers found in cuſtody of party accuſed, read in evidence as overt act of treaſon he is charged with x. 77. n.

Circumſtantial evidence admitted of high-treaſon in Scotland iv. 295

Though examinations are no evidence againſt any but the examinant, they are not yet to be ſuppreſſed, becauſe naming others; but ought to be read, with above caution to jury iii. 474. n.

Lord chancellor Cowper's ſpeech, where evidence depended on circumſtances x. 56

Evidence admitted of what was done after information exhibited v. 492

To convict a perſon upon the evidence of probabilities, in capital matters, eſpecially in treaſon, is moſt dangerous and unwarrantable iv. 204

Bare opinion, no proof iii. 757. See WITNESSES.

The nature and weight of the evidence of character viii. 246

On plea of the ſtatute of limitations of actions, lord Holt ſaid, matters before ſix years may be given in evidence, to explain occurrences ſince, but to no other purpoſe viii. 35

Quere, the evidence of London Gazettes viii. 213

Priſoner may give in evidence what was ſworn at another trial in his defence v. 74

Likeneſs of hands no evidence of a man's hand-writing in criminal caſes iv. 342. v. 79. See SIDNEY.

Unleſs letter be produced, no evidence ought to be given of contents thereof v. 31

Examination taken by juſtices of peace as entered in lords journal, read as evidence for priſoner iii. 156

Perſons convicted on preſumptive evidence in inferior courts v. 115

Care of legiſlature to no purpoſe in providing two witneſſes, if bill may attaint upon one only v. 118

No two nations agree in manner of proof v. 120

Evidence may be legal in parliament, that is not ſo in courts below v. 134

Letters though not particularly laid in indictment, may be given in evidence to prove high-treaſon vi. 77

Violent preſumption, what i. 220. viii. 69

Improbability not of weight againſt poſitive evidence iii. 28

Whether what deceaſed ſaid on his death-bed, examination not being produced, may be given in evidence? vi. 203. ix. 161. x. 504

How far confeſſion may be given in evidence of treaſon viii. 255

Sentence in ſpiritual court againſt a marriage in ſuit of jactitation of marriage, is not concluſive evidence xi. 262

Examination of witneſſes taken by coroner, they being ſince dead or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of coroner, that it is the ſame without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421. See Id. 424
Examination of a witneſs taken by coroner, the former being abſent by means of priſoner, upon proof that witneſs was ſo detained, the ſame may be read; but oath that all endeavours uſed to find out ſuch witneſs were vain, is not ſufficient to authorize the reading ſuch examination vii. 421. See Id. 424
The king's counſel may privately manage the evidence to the grand inqueſt, in order to the finding the bill of indictment ii. 302
Whether paper ſigned by priſoner may be read againſt him ix. 702, 703
No other evidence being given againſt priſoner, but ſimilitude of hands, to convict him of writing treaſonable papers, he produced the act for reverſing Sidney's attainder, wherein the legiſlature declared that compariſon of hands was not legal evidence in treaſon, which was read, and priſoner acquitted x. 42. Ap.
If original corporation book is produced, copy thereof cannot be read x. 142
No law can force evidence out of the owner's cuſtody by proceſs xi. 323
Where adverſary has got poſſeſſion, by force or fraud, of your own proper evidence, there is no way to get at it, but by action xi. 323
Lord Bacon obſerved, that evidence was the lanthorn of juſtice i. 352
A direct ſentence in a ſuit upon promiſe of marriage againſt the contract, is evidence againſt ſuch contract, in an action upon the promiſe for damages. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261
A ſentence of nullity of marriage is concluſive evidence in a perſonal action, againſt a defence founded upon a ſuppoſed coverture. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261
Sentence of nullity, and ſentence in affirmance of marriage, concluſive evidence on a queſtion of legitimacy, ariſing incidentally upon a claim to a real eſtate. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261
Sentence in cauſe of jactitation is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence againſt a marriage; and ſo it is in perſonal actions immediately founded on a ſuppoſed marriage. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261. See EXAMINATIONS. OVERT ACT. TREASON. WITNESSES.

EVIOT, PETER. See GOWRIE Earl of.

EXAMINATIONS.

Examinations upon oath, before a committee of lords, concerning the proſecution of lord Ruſſel, Algernon Sidney, ſir Thomas Armſtrong, Henry Corniſh, alderman, &c. viii. 476. * See EVIDENCE. POWRIE WILLIAM.

* EXCEPTIONS

* To an indictment ought to be taken before plea pleaded ii. 89. v. 18
* Exceptions taken to an indictment, after plea pleaded iv. 694
Why priſoners ſhould be permitted to make even captious exceptions Em. Pref. viii.
Exceptions to indictments for treaſon muſt be taken before plea pleaded, tho' ſtat. 7 W. III. chap. 3. ſays before jury ſworn v. 18

EXCETER, Marquis of,

Tried by his peers, 2 December 1539, 30th Henry VIII. xi. 24
Sent to the Tower xi. 24
Accuſed xi. 24
Pleaded not guilty xi. 25
Found guilty xi. 25
Judgment xi. 25
His counteſs attainted for treaſon xi. 25
She died a natural death xi. 25

EXCHEQUER and EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

Caſe of the bankers, in Exchequer xi. 138
In Exchequer-chamber xi. 141
Sir Francis Bacon's ſpeech for Calvin (poſtnati cauſe) in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79
Lord chancellor Elleſmere's ſpeech in ſame cauſe xi. 97. See BANKERS CASE. BATES JOHN. BATHURST CHARLES. POSTNATI.

EXCOMMUNICATION.

This puniſhment was formerly greatly dreaded, but now, from the abuſe of it, ſlighted and deſpiſed Em. Pref. iii.

*EXECUTIONS.

* Three gentlemen tried and fined for tampering with a priſoner at the place of execution i. 333
The trumpets were ordered to ſound, to prevent ſir Henry Vane being heard on his addreſſing the people on the ſcaffold, juſt previous to his execution ii. 461. See ii. 640
Execution Dock, the uſual place for the execution of pirates v. 18
Writ for the execution of ſir John Fenwick, in Latin v. 136
An account of what paſſed at the execution of ſir William Parkyns and ſir John Friend, on their being abſolved at Tyburn x. 43. Ap.
Mr. ſheriff Janſſen commended for refuſing the aſſiſtance of the military in the execution of criminals xi. 282
In foreign countries, magiſtrate always preſent at execution of ſentence, and gives directions Em. Pref. xii.
After a traitor had been hung ſix minutes, he was cut down, and having life in him as he lay upon the block to be quartered, the executioner gave him ſeveral blows on the breaſt; which not having the deſired effect, he immediately cut his throat; after which he took his head off, then ripped him open, and took out his bowels and heart, and threw them into a fire which conſumed them; then he ſlaſhed his four quarters ix. 552
A traitor was cut down and bowelled with great cruelty while he was alive; another was taken down from the gallows alive too, and cut up; a third broke the rope, and fell down from the gallows, and was preſently ſeized on by the executioner, his privities cut off, and his bowels taken out while he was alive; four others were executed with equal cruelty i. 141
Queen Elizabeth being informed of the ſeverity uſed in the above executions, and deteſting ſuch cruelty, gave expreſs orders for more favourable uſage; and accordingly other traitors were permitted to hang till they were quite dead, before they were cut down and bowelled i. 142
One of the regicides was cut down alive; for after he was opened, he mounted himſelf, and gave the executioner a box on the ear ii. 407, 408
One of the ſheriff's men, by orders, brought a regicide, that he might ſee another who had been juſt cut down and brought to be quartered; and the hangman came to him all beſmeared in blood, and rubbing his bloody hands together, tauntingly aſked him how he liked this work ii. 413
Execution in different county to that wherein crime was committed i. 197, 209, 211, 227. vi. 332. x. 378
If priſoner after ſentence paſſed is reſpited, he cannot be executed by virtue of any warrant from the king; but a new rule muſt be made in the court of King's Bench for his execution vi. 332
The earl of Eſſex was not diſpatched till the third ſtroke i. 210
Nor lord Balmerino x. 185
If a man die in execution, the law is ſatisfied, and his creditor is without remedy vi. 415
A convict, after he had hanged a pretty while, clapt his hands together aloud three times i. 314
Lord chief juſtice Treſilian, after being hanged, had his throat cut i. 13
A parricide was thus executed in Scotland; he was hanged on a gibbet till dead; his tongue cut out and burnt upon a ſcaffold; his right hand cut off and affixed on a public place; and his body hung in chains iv. 304
An extraordinary execution of a criminal by the mob in Scotland vi. 794.
Charles's head would have been brought down to the block by violence, had he not patiently ſubmitted i. 1044. See BEHEADING. BURNING.
The execution may vary from the judgment i. 63, 394. iii. 215. iv. 129. vi. 16. See GRAY lady JANE HOWARD CATHARINE, queen to Henry VIII. LISLE lady ALICIA. MORE ſir THOMAS. SALISBURY counteſs of. STAFFORD lord viſcount.

EXETER, Biſhop of,

His letter to the houſe of commons on their debates relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 191

EXMENCE, WILLIAM. See MIDDLEMORE HUMPHRY.

EXTORTION.

Extortion is taken for any oppreſſion by extort power, or by colour of pretence of right vi. 740. See MACCLESFIELD Earl of.

EYRE, JAMES, Recorder of LONDON. See WILKES JOHN.

EYRE, Sir ROBERT, Solicitor General,

His ſpeech in maintenance of the firſt article in the impeachment againſt doctor Sacheverel for preaching ſeditiouſly, and of the inſufficiency of the doctor's anſwer thereto v. 669
His reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the ſaid article v. 798

EYRE, Sir ROBERT, Juſtice B. R.

Cenſures reſolution of judges in dr. Sacheverel's caſe as erroneous and againſt law vi. 330, 331
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 296
His chancellor xi. 299
His opinion xi. 300, 302

EYRE, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.

Sums up evidence on Bambridge's trial ix. 248
A charge againſt him preſented to the houſe of commons, for perſonally viſiting Thomas Bambridge, late warden of the Fleet, while priſoner in Newgate under a commitment of that houſe ix. 251
Honourably cleared ix. 254
His opinion on a queſtion againſt John Gibbon, at the ſuit of the crown x. 119. Ap.
Sums up the evidence x. 126. Ap.
Diſputes the right of taking notes by a ſhort-hand writer x. 132. Ap.
States the queſtion to the jury x. 136, 138. Ap.

EYRE, SAMUEL, Juſtice B. R.

Attends houſe of lords, and gives his reaſons for receiving plea of Charles Knowles, that he was earl of Banbury, after the reſolution of the houſe that he had no title to that honour viii. 55

EYRES, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech for Corbet on appeal of murder ix. 168
Of counſel for Kinnerſley, tried for forgery ix. 83, 93
Of counſel for Oneby on arguing ſpecial verdict for murder ix. 18
Moves in arreſt of judgment for the rebels convicted in 1746 ix. 560
1. That the teſte of the commiſſion is not ſet forth in the caption of the indictment,
2. It is not alledged in the indictment, that the priſoners were in cuſtody at the time of the indictment, agreeably to the words of the act of parliament ix. 560
Over-ruled ix. 560

F.

FABRIGAS, ANTHONY,

Proceedings in action by him againſt lieutenant-general Moſtyn, governor of Minorca, firſt in the Common-Pleas, and afterwards in B. R. A. D. 1773 and 1774, for falſe impriſonment and baniſhment xi. 162
Names of counſel for Fabrigas xi. 162
Names of counſel for Moſtyn xi. 162
Names of the jury xi. 162
Mr. Peckham opens the declaration xi. 162
Mr. ſerjeant Glynn's ſpeech on behalf of the plaintiff xi. 162
Evidence on part of the plaintiff xi. 164
Mr. ſerjeant Davy's ſpeech on behalf of the defendant xi. 166
Evidence on part of the defendant xi. 170

Mr. ſerjeant Glynn's reply xi. 177
Mr. juſtice Gould's charge to the jury xi. 180
Verdict 3000l. damages xi. 183

FAGG, Sir JOHN,

Proceedings in the houſe of commons on an appeal brought in the houſe of lords, againſt ſir John Fagg, and other members, by dr. Shirley vii. 453
The commons ſend a meſſage to the lords, to deſire they will have a regard to their privileges vii. 453
Dr. Shirley ordered into cuſtody, and lord Mohun forcibly takes away the ſerjeant's warrant vii. 454
The appeal reſolved a breach of privilege, and whoſoever ſhall appear at the bar of the lords houſe, to proſecute a ſuit againſt a member of the houſe of commons, deemed an infringer and breaker of privilege vii. 455
Sir Nicholas Stoughton ordered into cuſtody, for proſecuting an appeal againſt Mr. Onſlow, during privilege of parliament vii. 455
The lords declare it their undoubted privilege to receive and determine, in time of parliament, appeals from an inferior court, though a member of either houſe be concerned vii. 456
The commons reſolve it their undoubted privilege, that none of their members be ſummoned to attend the houſe of peers during the time of privilege vii. 456
Conference upon the appeal againſt mr. Onſlow vii. 457
The appeal of Criſp againſt Dalmahoy, reported from the journals of the lords vii. 458
Counſel refuſe to plead, in regard Mr. Dalmahoy was a member of parliament vii. 458
Ordered by the houſe of lords to appear, and plead vii. 458
Ordered into cuſtody by the houſe of commons vii. 459
The lords complain of their commitment as a breach of privilege againſt the houſe of peers; order them to be ſet at liberty, and forbid the lieutenant of the Tower, and all keepers of priſons, to detain them vii. 460
The counſel arreſted in Weſtminſter-hall by a freſh warrant from the ſpeaker, and committed to the Tower vii. 460
A conference with the lords upon that ſubject vii. 460
Both houſes attend the king, and his ſpeech to them vii. 461
Reſolved, ſir John Fagg ſhould have the protection of the houſe, in the caſe of his appeal vii. 462
The lieutenant of the Tower, ſerved with writs of habeas corpus to bring before the king and his parliament at Weſtminſter the four counſel committed, forbid to make any return vii. 462
Reſolved, that the order of the lords for iſſuing the writs of habeas corpus is illegal, and that no perſon committed by the commons be made to appear, and receive any determination in the houſe of peers, during that ſeſſion vii. 462
The king's ſpeech, and the parliament prorogued vii. 463
Lord Shafteſbury's ſpeech in the houſe of lords vii. 463
A day appointed by the lords for hearing ſir John Fagg's cauſe vii. 466
Reſolution of the commons concerning appeals againſt members affixed in the lobby, Weſtminſter-hall gate, and inns of court and chancery vii. 467
The parliament prorogued again vii. 467
Proteſtations and reaſons of ſeveral lords, for the diſſolution of the parliament, entered the day the parliament was prorogued vii. 467

FALKLAND, Lord,

His ſpeech at preſenting the articles of impeachment againſt lord-keeper Finch vii. 315

FALSE IMPRISONMENT.

Record of cauſe in action for falſe impriſonment vi. 50. Ap. See LEACH DRYDEN, and MONEY, & al. PAPILLON THOMAS, and Sir WILLIAM PRITCHARD. * PRISONERS.

FALSE RETURN.

The court of King's Bench adjourned a caſe on a falſe return into the houſe of commons, propter difficultatem viii. 98. See PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

FALSE TOKENS ix. 76. See HALES WILLIAM
* FARREL, RICHARD ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
* FARWELL, JOHN iii. 501. See THOMPSON, & al.

FAULCONER, RICHARD,

His trial at the King's-Bench for perjury, 1652 vii. 343
The indictment for ſwearing before the commiſſioners for compounding eſtates, that the lord Craven was with king Charles at Breda vii. 343
That a petition was delivered to the ſaid king, calling the commonwealth barbarous and inhuman rebels vii. 343
One of the witneſſes againſt Faulconer impriſoned till the ſeſſions was paſt vii. 344
Another indictment found againſt him in Middleſex, the former being vicious vii. 345
A copy of Faulconer's depoſition produced, and proved to be the ſame, upon which votes of confiſcation of the lord Craven's eſtate paſſed vii. 346
Proofs of the falſity of Faulconer's depoſition vii. 347
The original petition preſented at Breda (falſely related in Faulconer's depoſition), produced vii. 348
Proofs againſt the credit of Faulconer vii. 349
Faulconer's defence, that the ſubſtance of his information was true, and proofs offered of his great ſervice to the commonwealth vii. 350
Though a miſtake in what he ſwore, yet not maliciouſly, nor corruptly done vii. 352
Reply of the counſel againſt him vii. 352
Found guilty vii. 353
* FAWKS, GUY, i. 232. See WINTER, and the Conſpirators in the Powder-Plot.

FAZAKERLY, THOMAS,

Of counſel for Francklin ix. 260
His ſpeech in defence of Francklin ix. 265

FEAR. See i. 8. n.

The fear of having houſes burnt, or goods ſpoiled, is no excuſe in the eye of the law for joining and marching with rebels ix. 567
The only fear that doth excuſe is the preſent fear of death; and this fear muſt continue all the time the party remains with the rebels ix. 568
It is incumbent on every man that makes fear his defence, to ſhew that he joined for fear of death, and that he quitted the ſervice as ſoon as he could ii. 7. ix. 568
The common law does not require the circumſtance of putting in fear in order to conſtitute the crime of robbery x. 434, 445. See BELCHIER's CASE x. 438

FEES.

Obſervations on thoſe of gaolers Em. Pref. xiv.
Fees to counſel exorbitant Em. Pref. iii.

*FELONY.

* One convicted of felony for impugning the queen's authority in cauſes eccleſiaſtical i. 176
* The perſon proſtituting his body in ſodomy, held guilty of felony i. 396
* If the king kills a man, 'tis no felony in him i. 104
* Felony may be tried in any county whither the thief carries the ſtolen goods iv. 349. v. 524
* Marrying a woman while ſhe is under a force, is felony, though the perſon marrying her is not the author of the force v. 477
Though the judgment in felony is always "to be hanged by the neck," yet the party may be beheaded, for that is no part of the ſentence iv. 129. See AUDLEY Lord. SOMERSET Duke of.
Obſervations on trials for felony Em. Pref. viii.
Maliciouſly ſhooting at a perſon, though death doth not enſue, is felony viii. 290
Indictment againſt a peer of the realm for treaſon and felony vii. 16, 17
Counſel permitted to examine the witneſſes on behalf of a peereſs in a caſe of felony xi. 239
On indictments for felony, priſoner is not allowed copy thereof, nor liſt of jury, nor aſſiſtance of counſel, as to matter of fact Em. Pref. viii.
A man convicted of felony having got the king's pardon, allowed a legal witneſs, though not burnt in the hand x. 75. Ap. See CAVENAGH MORRIS, & al. ARNOLD EDWARD. HAWKINS ROBERT. LEWIS JAMES. MAY WILLIAM. TURNER JAMES. UDALL JOHN.

FELTON, JOHN,

Though he ſtabbed a prime miniſter in the execution of an high commiſſion, and though he confeſſed the fact both before the council and court of King's-Bench, and juſtified it as a public ſervice to the nation, in the moſt daring and impious manner, he was yet brought to trial, without ſuperſeding any of the ordinary methods and circumſtances of juſtice vi. 408. See CONSCIENCE.

* FENWICK, Sir JOHN,

* His caſe on a bill of attainder brought into the houſe of commons againſt him, Nov. &c. 1696, 8 W. III. v. 40
* The introduction, ſhewing how the bill of attainder came to be brought in v. 40
* The houſe put ſir John upon making a diſcovery to them v. 40
* He inſiſts that they ſhould ſecure him that his confeſſion ſhould not be made uſe of againſt him; which they decline v. 40
* He deſires time to recollect himſelf, which they refuſe him; and vote a bill of attainder v. 41
* Fuller, the impoſtor, offers to give evidence againſt ſir John Fenwick v. 42
* Counſel and ſolicitor aſſigned ſir John v. 42
* Agreed that the ſerjeant with the mace ſhould ſtand by the priſoner at the bar during the hearing v. 43
* The bill read v. 44
* Mr. ſerjeant Gould opens the charge in the indictment, and ſhews the methods uſed by ſir John to protract his trial v. 44
* Mr. ſerjeant Lovel, recorder, ſhews the nature of their evidence v. 45
* Sir John's counſel deſire time for their defence v. 46
* And are allowed till the Monday following v. 57
* Reſolved, that the counſel for the bill may examine witneſſes as to the treaſons contained in the indictment, as well as to the allegations in the bill v. 57
* The indictment againſt ſir John read v. 58
* Porter produced, to prove the facts laid v. 58
* Sir John's counſel oppoſe Porter's being examined as to my lady Fenwick's practiſing with him about his evidence; for that what the wife ſays or does can be no evidence for or againſt her huſband v. 59
* And for that there was no ſuggeſtion in the bill, of Porter's being tampered with by ſir John himſelf v. 60
* Reſolved, that Porter ſhould be examined as to his being tampered with v. 62
* Roe examined as to his being dealt with to diſcredit Goodman's teſtimony v. 63
* Sir John's counſel oppoſe the reading of Goodman's examination taken by mr. Vernon, a juſtice of the peace, as illegal evidence v. 64
* Admitted that, where a witneſs could be produced, his examination ought not to be read againſt a priſoner v. 64
* Sir Thomas Trevor holds, that an examination before a juſtice may be read, where the witneſs cannot be had v. 68
* Reſolved, that Goodman's examination ſhould be read v. 71
* Sir John's counſel oppoſe the calling a grand juryman to give an account of the evidence Goodman gave, to induce them to find the bill againſt ſir John v. 72
* Which is over-ruled without debate v. 72
* Sir John's counſel oppoſe the reading the record of Cook's conviction v. 73
* What is ſworn againſt the priſoner at the trial of another, is no evidence againſt him v. 73
* But a priſoner may make uſe of what was ſworn at another trial in his defence v. 74

* Reſolved, that the record of Cook's conviction be read v. 76
* Sir John's counſel oppoſe the calling a juryman to depoſe what evidence Goodman gave at Cook's trial v. 76
* Reſolved, that witneſſes might be examined to what Goodman ſaid at the trial of Cook v. 78
* Likeneſs of hands no evidence of a man's hand-writing v. 79
* Moved to take mr. Dighton, ſir John's ſolicitor, into cuſtody v. 81
* Sir John's counſel enter upon his defence. Sir Thomas Powis's argument; he ſhews the hardſhip of making an act to condemn a man ex poſt facto v. 82
* Shews, that even the regicides were admitted to a trial by a jury v. 82
* No evidence can be given againſt a man on a trial for his life, but in his preſence v. 85
* Sir John Hawles's opinion, that a conſpiracy to levy war was not an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death v. 85
* Sir Bartholomew Shower's arguments againſt the bill v. 86
* He urges, that the moſt that could be done in juſtice, was to ſupply the want of the abſent witneſs v. 87
* That a conſult, in my lord Ruſſel's caſe, was held to be no overt-act; and that was all that was pretended to be proved here v. 88
* Mr. ſerjeant Gould's reply v. 89
* One witneſs ſufficient in ſome ſpecies of treaſon v. 89
* Reſolved by the judges, that conſulting to levy war was treaſon v. 89
* Mr. ſerjeant Lovel's reply v. 89
* Mr. Vernon's evidence of the artifices uſed by ſir John to delay his trial v. 93
* Debates upon the ſecond reading the bill v. 95
* Judges ought not to go according to their private knowledge v. 96
* The lord Preſton pardoned on making a pretended diſcovery, which he afterwards denied v. 96
* One boiled alive for poiſoning people v. 97
* Lord Cromwell and Mortimer attainted without being heard v. 97
* A judge ought to be a witneſs for the priſoner, if he knows any thing that may acquit him; and è contra v. 98
* Bills of attainder univerſally branded, where the offender was forthcoming v. 98
* Suggeſted by the court-party, that they had no deſign againſt ſir John's life, but to bring him to a confeſſion v. 100
* The lord Delamere acquitted, becauſe there was but one witneſs againſt him v. 104
* A bill of attainder againſt one for killing a foreign miniſter, ten years after the fact, and after he had been tried at common-law v. 105
* The ſenate of Venice executed conſpirators againſt the ſtate, after they had promiſed them pardon v. 108
* Nothing but an abſolute neceſſity could juſtify the paſſing this bill v. 109
* The parliament are to declare what's treaſon only, when the cauſe comes before them from inferior court, by 25 Edw. III. v. 110
* And the judgment to be given in the houſe of lords v. 111
* Bills of attainder uſed to begin by impeachment; and then the witneſſes were upon oath v. 111
* Whether it be juſt in the parliament to take away a man's life on leſs evidence than in inferior courts v. 114
* Perſons convicted on preſumptive evidence in inferior courts v. 115
* Whether the parliament acted according to law in declaring the throne vacant on the abdication; or whether they went upon that principle, that the people might conſtitute a new government for their preſervation? v. 116
* Whether the law of God requires two witneſſes in treaſon, as was aſſerted? v. 117
* The care of the legiſlature, in providing there ſhould be two witneſſes, to no purpoſe, if a bill of attainder may be brought in when there is but one v. 118
* Neither depoſitions taken when the party was not preſent to croſs-examine the witneſs, nor any thing that was ſworn at another's trial, ought to be produced in evidence againſt a criminal v. 119
* The bill ordered a third reading v. 119
* Debates on the third reading v. 119
* The ſame evidence is required to convict a man on impeachments as in inferior courts v. 119
* No two nations agree in their manner of proof v. 120
* Lord Cutts preſſes the paſſing of the bill, from the danger the government was in v. 122
* Young's plot againſt the biſhop of Rocheſter v. 123
* It is affirmed, that two witneſſes were required in treaſon by the laws of God, and the laws of all nations v. 123
* Never any man before taken out of the hands of inferior courts, after plea pleaded and iſſue joined there, and cut off by an act of attainder v. 124
* Inſtances of ſeveral attainders reverſed, becauſe they were againſt law; which ſhews that the law ought to be the rule, even in bills of attainder v. 125
* If they were to be guided by one ſtatute, as to the nature of the fact, why not by another, as to the evidence required to prove the fact v. 125
* Theſe bills of attainder obſerved to be fatal to the promoters of them v. 125
* If it be a good reaſon to reverſe attainders, becauſe the party had not the benefit of the laws, the ſame reaſon holds againſt the enacting them v. 125
* This the firſt bill of attainder began in the houſe of commons, except the duke of Monmouth's v. 125
* Objected, if they were to have two witneſſes in treaſon, according to the Jewiſh law, why not in murder too? v. 126
* That if it were the eternal law of God to have two witneſſes, where was that law before Edw. VI. and why was it otherwiſe in ſome ſpecies of treaſon ſtill? v. 127
* Admitted, that in treaſon there ought to be two witneſſes v. 127
* Whether the attainder of a commoner can begin in the houſe of peers v. 127
* The bill brought in, not becauſe of any danger the government was in, but to vindicate a perſon of honour v. 129
* The danger of the government but a pretence v. 130
* Though ſir John's prevaricating till a witneſs was withdrawn, &c. was not a ſufficient reaſon to put him to death, it was ſufficient to juſtify their proceeding in this manner againſt him v. 133
* It is urged, that the evidence given might be legal evidence in parliament, though not in the courts below; as appeared by the very acts they inſiſted upon on the other ſide v. 134
* The bill paſſed by the commons v. 136. See vi. 409
* The writ for his execution v. 136
* His dying ſpeech v. 136. See PORTER captain GEORGE.

Liſt of the lords who voted for and againſt ſir John Fenwick's bill of attainder x. 63. Ap.

* FENWICK, JOHN ii. 696. See * IRELAND, & al. * ii. 829. * WHITE, WHITEBREAD, & al.

The jury diſcharged of him ii. 719. See ii. 830

* FERNLEY, JOHN iv. 130. See CORNISH.

FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl,

His trial for the murder of John Johnſon, in full parliament, in April, 1760
The lord high ſteward's (Robert lord Henley) proceſſion x. *478
His commiſſion x. *479
Certiorari and return x. *480
The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner x. *481
Mr. Perrot opens the indictment x. *482
Mr. attorney-general (Charles Pratt) ſtates the charge moſt fully and moſt impartially x. *482
The evidence x. *485
Inſtance of the attorney-general's ſtrict juſtice towards the priſoner x. *504
The defence read x. *508
The ſolicitor-general's obſervations thereon x. *509
His remarks on inſanity x. *513
Priſoner found guilty of murder x. *515
His addreſs thereon to the lords read x. *515
The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner on paſſing ſentence of death x. *516
His caſe, with opinion of judges relating to reſpiting his execution x. 208. Ap.
Account of his behaviour on the day of his diſſolution x. 213. Ap.
Hanged at Tyburn x. 215. Ap.
His body diſſected at Surgeons-Hall x. 216. Ap.
Buried at St. Pancras x. 216. Ap.

FETTERS. See IRONS.

FETTIPLACE,

Of counſel for F. Smith ii. 1042

FILMER, BEVERSHAM,

Opens appeal againſt Corbet ix. 152

* FIELDING, ROBERT, Eſq.

* His trial for bigamy, at the Old-Bailey, December 4, 1706, 5 Ann. v. 610
* The indictment, for felonioully marrying Barbara ducheſs of Cleveland, Mary Wadſworth, his firſt wife, being then alive v. 610
* Mr. Raymond opens the indictment v. 611
* Sir James Montague opens the evidence v. 611
* Mrs. Villars's evidence of her impoſing mrs. Wadſworth on mr. Fielding for mrs. Deleau; and of their marriage by a popiſh prieſt v. 612
* Mr. Fielding admits his marriage with the ducheſs v. 615
* Mrs. Deleau's evidence of mr. Fielding coming to ſee her garden v. 616
* Three letters from mr. Fielding, directed to the counteſs of Fielding, produced to prove he acknowledged his marriage with a perſon whom he took for mrs. Deleau v. 620
* Mr. Fielding enters upon his defence v. 621
* He endeavours to prove mrs. Wadſworth married to another man, before the time ſhe was ſaid to be married to him v. 621
* Sir James Montague's obſervations on the evidence, and on mr. Fielding's defence v. 624
* Another letter of mr. Fielding's produced in evidence againſt him, directed to Anne counteſs of Fielding v. 625
* Evidence that mrs. Wadſworth's pretended marriage with another perſon was a ſham v. 625
* Mr. juſtice Powell directs the jury v. 625
* He tells them, that though mrs. Villars's character was but indifferent, he thought her evidence well ſupported; but however, if they thought mrs. Wadſworth's marriage with another man before ſhe married mr. Fielding proved, they muſt acquit him v. 628
* Mr. Fielding is convicted v. 628
* The judges do not give judgment till next ſeſſions; and accepted bail for his appearance then v. 628
* January 15, judgment is given, and mr. Fielding prays his clergy, and produced the queen's warrant to ſuſpend the burning in the hand v. 628
* The ducheſs inſtitutes a cauſe of nullity of marriage in the Court of Arches againſt mr. Fielding, and obtains a decree that ſhe was free from any bond of marriage with the ſaid Robert Fielding, and was at liberty to marry with any other perſon v. 628
* Mr. Fielding renounces all benefit of appeal v. 629

* FIENNES, Colonel NATHANAEL,

* His trial before a council of war for cowardice, Dec. 14, 1643, 19 Car. I. i. 766
* William Prynne and Clement Walker, his proſecutors i. 766
* They inſiſt ſtrenuouſly that the trial may be public and open i. 766
* Which is over-ruled, after long debate i. 768
* Ten articles exhibited againſt him, charging him with cowardly ſurrendering the city of Briſtol i. 768
* His anſwer i. 770
* The hearing on the three firſt articles i. 775

* The hearing on the five following articles i. 779
* The defendant's general defence, and mr. Prynne's reply i. 784
* The peroration of the defendant, and mr. Prynne's reply i. 814
* The defendant is condemned to die; but afterwards pardoned i. 815
* Caſes at large, which were cited in the trial i. 816

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE,

He was voted guilty of a breach of privilege of parliament, by the commons, for ſubſcribing his name to the information exhibited to the court of Star-chamber againſt mr. Holles, and the reſt, for matters done by them in parliament, being members of parliament, and the ſame ſo appearing in the information vii. 250

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE, Solicitor-General,

In his charge againſt Harriſon the regicide, he ſaid, that to doubt or heſitate in a point of allegiance, was direct treaſon and apoſtacy ii. 314
His reply to John Cook's (another of the regicides of king Charles I.) defence ii. 349
Said a pardon in law for high-treaſon could not be without the broad ſeal, nor by implication, but by poſitive words only ii. 350
His obſervations on the trial of Hugh Peters, another of the regicides of king Charles I. ii. 367
Sums up the evidence for the king, on the trial of Thomas Tonge and others, for treaſon ii. 492
His ſpeech before evidence, on Ireland's trial for treaſon ii. 700
Reply to lord Ruſſel's defence ii. 726
His reply for the king, on the argument of Edward Fitzharris iii. 255
Sums up the evidence againſt Edward Fitzharris, for a treaſonable libel iii. 584
Moves for judgment againſt Edward Fitzharris, convicted of a treaſonable libel iii. 289
Sums up the evidence on the proſecution of dr. Plunket iii. 309
Solicitor-general opens indictment againſt lord Grey, for ſeduction iii. 520, 521
His argument for the king, on the proceedings againſt the city of London, on the quo warranto iii. 548
Opens the evidence on Pilkington's proſecution iii. 635
Opens the evidence on the trial of Thomas Pilkington, and Samuel Shute, eſqrs. ſheriffs, Henry Corniſh, alderman, Ford lord Grey of Werk, ſir Thomas Player, chamberlain of London, Slingſby Bethel, eſq. Richard Goodenough, and eight others, on information for a riot, in continuing the poll for the election of ſheriffs, after the common-hall was adjourned by the lord-mayor, and for aſſaulting his lordſhip iii. 635
His reply to defence of ſir Patience Ward, informed againſt for perjury iii. 680
Sums up the evidence on the trial of captain ——— Walcot, indicted for conſpiring the king's death, and for raiſing rebellion in Rye Houſe plot iii. 700
His reply on challenge for want of freehold, on the trial of William lord Ruſſel, indicted and tried for treaſon, in conſpiring the king's death iii. 710
His reply to the defence of Algernon Sidney, indicted and tried for high treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king iii. 813
His reply, and arguments in arreſt of judgment, on the conviction of Thomas Roſewell, for ſpeaking treaſonable words iii. 1062, 1065
Sums up the evidence on the trial of Titus Oates, D. D. on an indictment for perjury at the King's Bench iv. 54
His reply to Oates's defence iv. 94
Sums up the evidence on the trial of lord Delamere, for treaſon, in the court of the lord high ſteward iv. 243
Denies the right of the ſubject to petition out of parliament, concerning matters of government iv. 387
He inſiſts that votes and addreſſes are not evidence, and cannot be ſtiled declarations in parliament iv. 389
That the king may make conſtitutions in matters eccleſiaſtical iv. 389
That the biſhops denying that prerogative was in diminution of the prerogative, as laid in information iv. 39
His ſpeech on ſumming up the evidence for the crown, in Thomas lord Morley's trial, for murder vii. 425
He obſerved, that murder was a cheaper ſin than theft in ſome places abroad; and that the ſame people who would riſe up in arms as one man, to purſue a pilferer, would yet make a lane through the midſt of them for the manſlayer to eſcape vii. 426, 427
His argument in cauſe of Eaſt-India company and Sands, for the company vii. 507

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE, Attorney-General (afterwards Lord Chancellor and Earl of Nottingham),

Had the thanks of the houſe of commons, for applying himſelf to the ſearching the records, and with indefatigable labour and ſtudy diſcovering ſuch precedents, and ſo ſtrenuouſly ſupporting and maintaining their rights and privileges, at a conference between the two houſes in 1671, concerning the commons ſole right of giving money viii. 564

FINCH, HENEAGE, Lord Chancellor,

His ſpeech as lord high ſteward on earl Pembroke and Montgomery's trial ii. 641
His addreſs to his lordſhip ii. 656

FINCH, HENEAGE Lord, Baron DAVENTRY, Lord Chancellor,

Lord high ſteward on the trial of William viſcount Stafford, impeached for high-treaſon before the houſe of peers, for being concerned in the popiſh plot iii. 101
His ſpeech to the priſoner before evidence iii. 102
His ſpeech to the priſoner after conviction and before judgment iii. 213
Refuſes Francis Jenkes hab. corp. and writ of mainprize vii. 471, 474. See NOTTINGHAM earl of.

FINCH, Sir JOHN,

Was of Gray's Inn, of the king's counſel, chief juſtice of the Common Pleas, and lord keeper vii. 309
He was ſworn chief juſtice, 16 October, 1634 vii. 310
He was choſen ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, 17 March, 1628 vii. 140
He reviles John Holt for ſigning Henry Burton's plea i. 482
Ill treats William Prynn i. 483
His condemnation of him i. 486
His encomium of Catharine, queen to Charles I. i. 428
His arguments, opinions, and reaſons for the king, in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 679
He does not agree that Forteſcue was ever lord chancellor of England i. 683
Lord Finch procured the opinions of the judges, in the caſe of ſhip-money, by ſolicitation; and they were injoined ſecrecy by him, on his procuring their hands to them; theſe he delivered to the king; by his procurement, a letter was directed from his majeſty to the judges for their delivering their opinions i. 700, 706
His ſpeech as ſpeaker of the houſe of commons to the king, in anſwer to ſeveral meſſages vii. 196
His majeſty's anſwer vii. 196
Held in the chair by ſome members, while ſome proteſtations were publiſhed in the houſe vii. 217
Proceedings againſt him, when lord Fordwich, and lord keeper, for high treaſon vii. 309
Sends a letter to the houſe of commons, to deſire to be admitted to ſpeak for himſelf; his ſpeech vii. 309
Juſtifies himſelf for his behaviour as ſpeaker vii. 310
Juſtifies himſelf as to the affair of ſhip-money vii. 310
Alſo for his argument in mr. Hampden's caſe, in the Exchequer-chamber vii. 311
Concerning the foreſt buſineſs vii. 312
Mr. Rigby's ſpeech in anſwer to him vii. 312
Voted a traitor, and impeached i. 708. vii. 313, 488. viii. 566
Retires to Holland vii. 313
His letter from the Hague to the lord chamberlain vii. 313
The articles of impeachment preſented to the lords vii. 313
Lord Falkland's ſpeech at preſenting them vii. 315
He was in poſſeſſion of an original MS. treatiſe of the court of Star-chamber xi. 329

FINES.

When the houſe of commons, in the parliament 1680, took exorbitant fines into conſideration, and intended to impeach ſeveral perſons for the ſame; the higheſt fine at that time complained of was but 1000l. See iii. 219. vii. 482, 483; and yet in a few years they were heightened to 10,000l. 20,000l. 30,000l. and 40,000l. iv. 165. See iv. 172. Em. Pref. xii. iii. 223. vii. 486
Inſtances of exorbitant fines impoſed during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165. See BARNARDISTON ſir SAMUEL. DEVONSHIRE earl. HAMPDEN JOHN.

FISH. See SINDERCOMBE.

FISHER, Sir CLEMENT. See LANE JANE.

FISHER, JOHN, Biſhop of Rocheſter,

His trial before commiſſioners of oyer and terminer at Weſtminſter, for treaſon, 17 June, 27 Henry VIII. 1535 xi. 7, 23
Names of the commiſſioners xi. 7
Arraigned xi. 7
Effect of indictment xi. 7
Pleads not guilty xi. 8
Names of the jury xi. 8
Mr. Rich's evidence xi. 8
The biſhop's anſwer to it xi. 8
The judges opinion xi. 8
The biſhop's defence xi. 8
The commiſſioners aggravate the priſoner's offence, and threaten the jury xi. 8
He is found guilty xi. 8
Sentence of a traitor paſſed on him by lord chancellor Audley xi. 8
His ſpeech thereon xi. 8
His behaviour under condemnation xi. 8, 9
An odd circumſtance about the cook's not preparing him a dinner as uſual xi. 9
Ordered to be beheaded only xi. 9
His ſpeech on the ſcaffold xi. 9
He is beheaded xi. 9, 23

* FITZ-HARRIS, EDWARD,

* His arraignment in the King's Bench for high-treaſon; with his plea, and the counſel's argument thereon, in Eaſter term, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 224
* Proceedings in parliament relating to him iii. 224. See vi. 408
* The grand jury doubt whether one who is impeached for high-treaſon may be indicted for it iii. 227
* The court reſolve that he might be indicted, though the commons had impeached him generally; and voted he ſhould not be tried by any inferior court iii. 228
* The indictment read iii. 228
* Fitz-harris offers a plea in paper, that he is impeached for the ſame treaſon iii. 228
* The court aſſign him counſel, and give him time to amend his plea iii. 229
* A rule made, that his counſel and his wife might come to him iii. 230
* He is examined concerning the murder of Godfrey iii. 230
* Fitz-harris puts in another plea to the juriſdiction of the court iii. 234
* Mr. Attorney argues that the plea was defective, both as to matter and form iii. 234
* He ſhews there was no precedent of the king's counſel being put to demur in a capital caſe before iii. 235

* Mr. attorney demurs to the plea iii. 237
* The priſoner joins in demurrer iii. 237
* Time is given the priſoner's counſel to maintain the plea iii. 240
* A copy of the indictment denied iii. 241
* Mr. Williams's argument for the priſoner iii. 241
* He compares an impeachment to an appeal iii. 242
* He doubts if the king can pardon one impeached iii. 242
* Sir Francis Winnington for the priſoner iii. 248
* Mr. Wallop's argument for the priſoner iii. 251
* Mr. Pollexfen's argument for the priſoner iii. 252
* Mr. Attorney anſwers the arguments of the priſoner's counſel iii. 254
* The indictments againſt the five popiſh lords removed by certiorari into the houſe of peers iii. 255
* Mr. Finch, ſolicitor-general, his reply for the king iii. 255
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies for the crown iii. 259
* Sir Francis Wythens on the ſame ſide iii. 259
* The court declare, they ſhould not meddle to determine whether a commoner might be impeached for treaſon, or whether an impeachment ſhould ſtay the proceedings of an inferior court; but only conſider the ſufficiency of the plea to ouſt them of their juriſdiction iii. 260
* The chief juſtice, mr. juſtice Jones, and mr. juſtice Raymond, of opinion the plea was inſufficient; mr. juſtice Dolben doubted iii. 261
* The court award the priſoner ſhall plead over iii. 261. See vi. 406
* The priſoner pleads not guilty iii. 261
* He has time to prepare for his trial till next term iii. 262
* Fitz-harris brought upon his trial in Trinity-Term, June 9, 1681 iii. 263. See iv. 165
* The court refuſe to examine the priſoner before his trial, as to the murder of Godfrey iii. 263
* The indictment for a treaſonable libel, called "The true Engliſhman ſpeaking plain Engliſh" iii. 265
* Mr. Heath opens the indictment iii. 266
* Mr. attorney opens the evidence iii. 267
* The king's witneſſes called iii. 267
* Evidence that Fitz-harris prompted Everard to write the pamphlet iii. 267
* Papers delivered to the priſoner in court; which the king's counſel object to iii. 269, 272
* Smith ſwears he over-heard Fitz-harris dictate to Everard iii. 270
* Which is confirmed by ſir William Waller iii. 272
* The priſoner calls his witneſſes iii. 277
* Oates depoſes that Everard ſaid this was a deſign of the court, and the libel was to be conveyed into the Whigs pockets iii. 277
* Evidence that ſir William Waller ſaid, the king was in a great paſſion with him, and ſaid, he had broken all his meaſures by diſcovering Fitz-harris iii. 278
* A petition of mrs. Fitz-harris to his majeſty, and the king's letter to the duke of Ormond concerning them, read in court iii. 280
* Lord Howard's evidence iii. 280
* Hearſay evidence refuſed iii. 282
* The ducheſs of Portſmouth ſubpœnaed by the priſoner as a witneſs; ſhe is deſired to ſtand up while ſhe gives her evidence iii. 283
* Mr. Fitz-harris enters upon his defence; complains of his cloſe confinement, that he had not an opportunity of preparing for his defence; intimates that his witneſſes concealed their knowledge; and affirms that the money he received of the government was for ſecret ſervice, and not in charity, as the witneſſes depoſed iii. 283
* Mr. ſolicitor ſums up the evidence; he takes notice, that the priſoner's defence conſiſted in ſome inſinuations that he compoſed this libel by the king's directions iii. 284
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies' obſervations on the evidence iii. 286
* The chief juſtice's directions to the jury iii. 287
* He ſhews the improbability that the king ſhould be in a deſign to blacken his own family, and incite a rebellion againſt himſelf iii. 287
* The jury doubt whether they may try this matter, the commons having voted that it ſhould not be tried by any inferior court iii. 288
* But the court tell them, they are only to try the fact. As to the plea to the juriſdiction, that is the buſineſs of the court, and they have determined that matter already iii. 288
* That if there was a vote of the commons, it could not alter the law, any more than a letter or mandate from the prince. The judges were upon their oaths, and muſt do juſtice according to the laws of the land, notwithſtanding iii. 289
* Fitz-harris is convicted iii. 289
* Mr. ſolicitor moves for judgment; but the court tell him, they will take time for that iii. 289
* Sentence paſſed upon the priſoner iii. 290
* A writ iſſued out of the King's-Bench, June 22, directed to the lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver the body of Fitz-harris to the ſheriff of Middleſex the firſt of July, in order to his execution iii. 290
* Another writ, of the ſame date, to the ſheriff of Middleſex, to receive Fitz-harris, and cauſe him to be executed according to the ſentence iii. 291
* Fitz-harris executed accordingly, July 1 iii. 291
* His behaviour at execution; and his dying ſpeech iii. 292
His trial generally held illegal iv. 166, 172
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 165, 186, 199, 205
"That innocence would defend," was a ſaying as mortal to him as the letter Θ amongſt the Greeks iv. 177
His trial was publiſhed by the expreſs authority of lord chief juſtice Pemberton iv. 189

FITZJAMES, Sir JOHN.
In the time of Hen. VII. ſir Richard Terrett was committed, fined, ſent to the pillory, and adjudged to loſe both his ears, for his ſlanderous complaint exhibited to the king, in a written book, againſt the chief juſtice Fitzjames vii. 111. ix. 314
FITZPATRICK, LAURENCE* i. 396. See AUDLEY, MERVIN Lord.

* FLEETWOOD, GEORGE ii. 302. See REGICIDES.
FLEETWOOD, WILLIAM, Recorder of LONDON. See i. 127.

FLEMING, Sir THOMAS, Chief Baron,
His argument in the caſe of impoſitions xi. 31

FLETA.
So called becauſe the author lay in the Fleet when he made the book vii. 154

FLETCHER, GEORGE, ix. 552
His trial for treaſon, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 552
Evidence againſt him ix. 553
Croſs-examined by ſerjeant Wynne ix. 554
His defence ix. 555
Executed at Kennington-common ix. 555
Some account of him ix. 555
A ſingular anecdote in his ſtory ix. 555
His behaviour in Newgate
Account of the papers delivered to the populace at the place of execution ix. 555

FLIGHT.
A perſon's flying from juſtice a preſumption of guilt v. 115. vi. 405, 409. x. 406. n. xi. 328

* FOGG, CHRISTOPHER v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.

FORBES, Lord Preſident of SCOTLAND,
His letter to lord Lovat againſt going into the rebellion x. 189. Ap.

FORCE. See viii. 237.
The only force that doth excuſe, is a force upon the perſon; this force muſt continue all the time the party remains in rebellion ix. 568
It is incumbent on every man who makes force his defence, to ſhew an actual force, and that he quitted the ſervice as ſoon as he could ix. 568. See FELONY.

FORCIBLE MARRIAGE. See FELONY. MARRIAGE.

FORD, JOHN,
Argues the inſanity of Bradſhaw ix. 577
Argues that attainted perſon is liable to a civil ſuit ix. 586
His argument that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs ix. 653*
His ſpeech, arguments, and defence of Owen the bookſeller, proſecuted for publiſhing "Murray's Caſe" x. 205. Ap.
His learning and accuracy in reporting caſes commended xi. 224, 227, 229

FORD, THOMAS,
His account of the behaviour of the lords Kilmarnock and Balmerino x. 182
His anſwer to many reflections caſt on the above Account x. 185. Ap.

* FORD, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
FORDWICH, Lord. See FINCH Sir JOHN.

FOREIGNERS.
Priſoners being foreigners, an interpreter ſworn iii. 466
Subſtance of indictment interpreted to priſoners in their own language iii. 467
The jury half foreigners and half Engliſh iii. 468
No foreigners on juries to be Roman-catholics iii. 465
Firſt an Engliſhman, then a foreigner, called and ſworn on jury iii. 465
Foreigners challenged for the king, counſel inſiſt they need not ſhew cauſe, unleſs they want jurymen iii. 465
Evidence interpreted to aliens upon jury, by ſworn interpreters iii. 472
Foreign peer intitled to a jury of conſiderable merchants iii. 468. * See ALIEN.

* FORFEITURE.
* Judgment in treaſon muſt be in the uſual form, to entitle the king to his forfeitures iii. 213
* Forfeitures on a conviction for manſlaughter v. 170

FORFEITURE OF CHARTERS. See CHARTERS. LONDON CITY. QUO WARRANTO.

FORGERY.
A perſon who ſets his hand to a bond ſaid to be ſealed and delivered, not having ſeen it ſealed and delivered, is guilty of little leſs than forgery Iv. 185
When forgeries became more frequent, proof of hand-writing by ſimilitude was not allowed of at all, unleſs the writing had been acknowledged by the party, or proved by two witneſſes who ſaw him write it vi. 418
Offered in favour of ſuch a criminal, that no prejudice, money being repaid ix. 73
Whether making uſe of a man's name to a different purpoſe to what deſigned, be forgery ix. 83. See BUTLER MARY. DARBY LEONARD. HALES ROBERT. HALES WILLIAM. HARRIS JOHN. IVY Lady. KINNERSLEY THOMAS. MORRIS JOHN. MURPHY TIMOTHY. PHILIP and MARY. SMITH ISABEL * v. 232. viii. 48, 49

FORREST, an Obſervant Friar, xi. 24
Tried for holding heretical opinions xi. 24
Submits to the church xi. 24
Refuſing to abjure, judged an obſtinate heretic xi. 24
Hanged in a chain about his middle and burnt

FORRESTER, ALEXANDER,
His argument in ſupport of the objection, that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs ix. *652, *662

* FORSEITH, EDWARD v. 1. See DAWSON.

FORTESCUE, ADRIAN,
Thomas Dingley, and Robert Grauceter, attainted for treaſon, 1539, Hen. VIII. xi. 25
Forteſcue and Dingley ſuffered xi. 25

FORTESCUE-ALAND, Sir JOHN. See ALAND-FORTESCUE Sir JOHN.

FORTESCUE, Sir JOHN, Chief Juſtice and Chancellor,
Was called by ſir Walter Raleigh, the bulwark of the law of England xi. 298
The

The caſe between ſir John Forteſcue and ſir Francis Goodwin about the election for Bucks vii. 67
FOSTER, MICHAEL, Recorder of BRISTOL,
Sums up the evidence in Goodere's caſe for murder vi. 823
His charge to the jury on Charles White's proſecution for murder vi. 832
His ſpeech to all the priſoners previous to pronouncing the judgment of the court vi. 833
His ſtate of Berwick's caſe ix. 559
Of Deacon's caſe ix. 558
His argument in the caſe of the Kinlochs for treaſon ix. 572
His opinion on Macdonald's caſe for treaſon ix. 586, 587
Macgrowther's caſe ſtated by him ix. 566
His opinion on Ratcliffe's caſe for treaſon ix. 583
His ſpeech on a caſe of murder ix. 716
His charge to the jury againſt ſmugglers for murder ix. 732
Townly's caſe for treaſon ſtated by him ix. 550
Sir John Wedderburne's caſe for treaſon ſtated by him ix. 581
His obſervations upon murder and petit treaſon, and indictments thereon x. 37, 38, 39
Delivers the opinion of the judges upon the ſpecial verdict found againſt Macdaniel and others x. 442
His opinion upon proceſs and arreſts x. 476
He pronounced judgment of the court againſt Macdaniel and others x. 442
His obſervations on Mary Jones's caſe x. 416, 417
His opinion relating to Algernon Sidney's caſe x. 42. Ap.
His opinion on Gregg's caſe x. 77. Ap.
His account of doctor Cameron's caſe, attainted of treaſon x. 203
Mr. juſtice Foſter applied himſelf particularly to the crown law, was a ſtrict adherer to legal forms, and had more experience of buſineſs proper to be done out of court than any other judge xi. 332
Mr. juſtice Foſter truly called the magna charta of the liberty of perſons, as well as fortunes xi. 338
His argument, when recorder of Briſtol, in the caſe of Broadfoot, reſpecting the preſſing of mariners xi. 349
FOSTER, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
Directs the jury on the trial of Tonge and others, for treaſon ii. 493
Wrought upon king Charles the ſecond (notwithſtanding his majeſty's engagement to both houſes of parliament to the contrary) to ſign a warrant for the execution of ſir Henry Vane ii. 459
FOWLIS, Sir DAVID,
Proceedings in Star-chamber againſt him, ſir Thomas Layton, and Henry Fowlis, eſq. on charge of oppoſing the king's ſervice, and traducing his officers of ſtate, Hil. 9 Car. I. 1633 xi. 131
The information xi. 131
Sir David Fowlis's anſwer xi. 132
Sir Thomas Layton's anſwer xi. 132
The court's declaration as to ſir David xi. 132
Their order of puniſhment againſt him xi. 132
Their puniſhment of Henry Fowlis xi. 132
Sir Thomas Layton diſmiſſed xi. 132
FOWLIS, HENRY. See FOWLIS Sir DAVID.
* FOX, SOMERSET,
* His trial before the High Court of Juſtice, for high-treaſon againſt Oliver Cromwell, then lord protector, 30 June, 1654, 6 Car. II. ii. 212
* Fox pleads guilty ii. 212
* Prideaux, attorney-general for the commonwealth, opens the evidence ii. 213
* Mr. Vowell deſires to be tried by a jury, but is refuſed ii. 212, 214
* John Wiſeman's evidence, that there was a deſign to aſſaſſinate the protector as he went to Hampton-court; and that Gerhard and Vowell were privy to it ii. 214
* Edward Hudſon gives a ſoft evidence; upon which his examination is read againſt the priſoners, though the witneſs denied in court ſome things he then confeſſed ii. 214, 215
* Charles Gerhard's evidence againſt his brother ii. 215
* Other witneſſes to the deſign in general ii. 216
* Gerhard and Vowell deny the fact ii. 216. iii. 217
* Are condemned ii. 217
* Fox reprieved; and the other two executed ii. 217. viii. 336
FRANCE. See BASTILE.
FRANCES, ROBERT,
His trial for the murder of Thomas Dangerfield, at the Old Bailey, July 16, 1685, 1 Jac. II. x. 34. Ap.
Found guilty x. 35. Ap.
His behaviour while under ſentence x. 35. Ap.
His dying ſpeech x. 35. Ap.
FRANCHISES.
Though inheritance of franchiſe be in body corporate, yet it is for the benefit of particular members, and enures to their advantage as private individuals viii. 127
Franchiſes defined vii. 141, 142
* FRANCIA, FRANCIS,
* His trial for high-treaſon, at the Old-Bailey, Jan. 22, 1716, 3 Geo. I. vi. 58
* The indictment, for correſponding with the king's enemies vi. 60
* Sir Joſeph Jekyll's ſpeech before evidence vi. 61
* Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his ſpeech vi. 62
* Evidence of a book and papers found in the priſoner's houſe on his apprehenſion vi. 65
* Lord Townſhend's evidence vi. 68
* Mr. ſecretary Stanhope's evidence vi. 71
* The priſoner's examination read vi. 71
* Mr. Harvey's letter read vi. 72
* The priſoner's counſel object to the reading any letters that are not particularly laid in the indictment vi. 73. See vi. 330, 331, 402
* Adjudged that writing treaſonable letters is an overt-act of high-treaſon, and that any letters may be given in evidence to prove it, though not particularly laid in the indictment vi. 77
* Several letters read out of his copy-book vi. 78, &c.
* Sir Joſeph Jekyll's remarks upon the evidence vi. 86
* The priſoner's defence vi. 87
* He proves himſelf a native of France vi. 87
* Mr. Ward's ſpeech for the priſoner vi. 88
* Mr. Hungerford on the ſame ſide vi. 89
* Two women called to aſperſe lord Townſhend and mr. Buckley vi. 90
* The evidence of thoſe women poſitively contradicted upon oath vi. 91
* Evidence that none of the letters in the book were the priſoner's writing vi. 92
* Sir John Forteſcue-Aland's reply vi. 93
* Mr. Spencer Cowper's reply vi. 96
* Sir Thomas Bury, lord chief baron, ſums up the evidence vi. 98
* Directs the jury, if they find him guilty, to find ſpecially that he is a Frenchman, and an alien vi. 101
* The priſoner acquitted vi. 101
FRANCKLIN, RICHARD,
His trial for a libel, in printing and publiſhing a letter from the Hague, 3d Dec. 1731, 4 Geo. II. ix. 255
Mr. Parker opens the information againſt him ix. 255
Attorney-general (ſir Philip Yorke) on the ſame ſide ix. 256
Evidence againſt defendant ix. 259
Mr. Fazakerly objects to the evidence ix. 260
Mr. attorney-general's further examination ix. 260
Mr. Bootle on the ſame ſide ix. 260
Lord Raymond's opinion upon it ix. 260
Mr. Fazakerly's objection ix. 260
Mr. attorney-general's anſwer ix. 260
Mr. ſolicitor-general (hon. mr. Talbot) on the ſame ſide ix. 260
Mr. Bootle objects to the proof ix. 260
Mr. Noel does the ſame ix. 261
Evidence againſt defendant continued ix. 261
Mr. Fazakerly and others croſs-examine ix. 262, &c.
Mr. attorney-general's ſpeech ix. 263
His opinion on the evidence ix. 265
Mr. Fazakerly's ſpeech for defendant ix. 266
Lord Raymond's opinion ix. 267
Mr. Bootle's ſpeech for defendant ix. 267
Lord Raymond's opinion, that it is not material whether the facts charged in a libel be true or falſe, if the proſecution is by indictment or information ix. 269
Mr. Bootle, on the liberty of the preſs ix. 269
Mr. Strange opens the defence ix. 270
Evidence for defendant ix. 270
Mr. attorney-general oppoſes part of it ix. 270
Lord Raymond's opinion upon it ix. 271
Mr. attorney-general ſubmits, whether evidence ſhould be given to prove the news that was publiſhed, true ix. 271
Lord Raymond's opinion ix. 271
Mr. Noel's ſpeech, in favour of defendant ix. 271
Mr. Taylor's on the ſame ſide ix. 271
Mr. attorney-general's reply to the whole ix. 272
Lord Raymond ſums up the evidence, and obſerves, that juries are judges of fact, not of law ix. 275
Found guilty of publiſhing, and fined 100l. impriſoned one year, and to give ſecurity for ſeven years ix. 276
FRANK of a LETTER,
A promiſſory note of hand forged thereon. See HALES ROBERT.
* FRANKLIN, JAMES,
* His trial as acceſſary, before the fact, to the murder and poiſoning of ſir Thomas Overbury, 27 Nov. 1616, 13 Jac. I. i. 346
* His own confeſſion read in evidence againſt him, that he ſold the poiſon, and knew for what i. 346
* Whereupon he is convicted, and ſentence paſſed upon him i. 347
FREEDOM.
Record on a mandamus for admiſſion into the freedom of a corporation x. 138, 139. Ap.
* FREEHOLD. See JURY.
* FREEMAN, RICHARD iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
* FREIND, Sir JOHN,
* His trial for high-treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, and promoting an invaſion and rebellion, March 23, 1695, 8 W. III. iv. 599
* The king's counſel will have none but freeholders upon the jury iv. 602, 606
* The attorney-general's, ſir Thomas Trevor, ſpeech before evidence iv. 604
* Sir John deſires to aſk the witneſſes whether they be papiſts; which is refuſed iv. 605, 606
* Porter's evidence, that the priſoner was at two meetings, and agreed to invite king James over iv. 606
* Blair's evidence, that he was to be an officer under the priſoner iv. 607
* Bertram's evidence, that Blair told him he was to raiſe a regiment iv. 612
* Courtney's evidence againſt Blair iv. 613
* Witneſſes to ſir John's reputation iv. 616
* The priſoner inſiſts, that a conſpiracy to levy war is not treaſon iv. 619
* The ſolicitor-general's, ſir John Hawles, reply iv. 620
* Mr. Cowper's reply iv. 622
* Lord chief juſtice ſums up the evidence iv. 623
* The priſoner is convicted iv. 626
* See the ſentence and his dying ſpeech, in the trial of ſir William Parkyns iv. 659, 660. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.
* FULLER, WILLIAM,
Confined to the Fleet, and ordered to be proſecuted, for publiſhing two books, books, viz. “ Original Letters from the late King,” and “ Twenty-Six Depoſitions of Perſons of Quality,” 1701-2 viii. 78

Peter Buck, and mrs. Baldwin, ordered to be proſecuted for printing and publiſhing the ſame viii. 78
* His trial for forging falſe and ſcandalous libels, May 20, 1702, 1 Ann. v. 441
* Fuller acknowledges the books to be his v. 443
* Pretends he can make out the truth of them v. 443
* He is convicted v. 445
The record vi. 58. Ap.
His ſentence, and the execution of it viii. 78, n.

FULTHORPE, Sir ROGER, Juſtice C. B.
Was arreſted ſitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and ſent priſoner to the Tower i. 5, and n.
He was tried, and convicted of treaſon i. 14
Confeſſes, and begs mercy i. 14
He was baniſhed to the city of Dublin, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, with liberty of going three miles for his recreation i. 14, andn. * See BRAMBRE.

G.

* GAGE, ROBERT i. 134. See ABINGTON, & al.
GALLOWS. See EXECUTIONS.

GAOL DELIVERIES.
The deſign of them, and ill conſequences of being defeated Em. Pref. xiv.

GAOLS and GAOLERS.
Obſervations on them Em. Pref. xiv.
On their fees Em. Pref. xiv
The ill conſequences of the management of gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
The uſe of chains and fetters in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
The oppreſſions and extortions of gaolers in ſome meaſure remedied, by ſtat. 2 Geo. II. chap. 22 Em. Pref. xiv. n.
It is an abuſe, that priſoners pay for entering into, or coming out of gaol Em. Pref. xiv. n.
The reaſon that the law requires coroner to ſit on perſons dying in gaol Em. Pref. xvi. n.
No impriſonment lawful but in common gaol Em. Pref. v.
Inſtance of gaol diſtemper in time of Elizabeth Em. Pref. xiv.
The reſolutions of the commons, in the report of their committee appointed to inquire into the ſtate of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel uſage of the priſoners. See ACTON WILLIAM. BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. PRISONS.

GAPPER, Serjeant at Law,
Of counſel againſt Anneſley and Redding ix. 317
* GARLAND, AUGUSTINE ii. 398. See REGICIDES.

* GARNET, HENRY, Superior of the Jeſuits,
* His trial for high-treaſon, in promoting the gunpowder-plot, March 28, 1606, 4 Jac. I. at Guildhall i. 248
* See the indictment in Winter's trial i. 232
* Sir John Croke opens the charge i. 248
* Sir Edward Coke ſhews the aggravations this crime was attended with i. 249
* Gives an hiſtorical relation of all the popiſh plots in queen Elizabeth's reign i. 250, 251
* And of the gun-powder plot i. 253
* Garnet formerly a corrector of the preſs i. 255
* His defence as to their doctrine of equivocation; as to their depoſing doctrine; and abſenting themſelves from church i. 257
* He owns he knew of the powder plot; but denies he conſented to it i. 258
* Sir Edward Coke's reply to Garnet's defence i. 260
* Earl of Northampton's ſpeech i. 261
* The priſoner ſays, that if a man in ſacramental confeſſion owns he has a deſign to commit murder, the prieſt is bound to conceal it i. 264
* The priſoner is convicted i. 266
* Earl of Northampton's ſecond ſpeech i. 266, 308
* Garnet receives ſentence i. 308
* His execution i. 309
GARTER. See KNIGHTS of the GARTER.

* GASCOIGNE, Sir THOMAS, Bart.
* His trial for high-treaſon, the 11th of February, 1679, 32 Car. II. iii. 1
* Sir Thomas arraigned iii. 1
* The indictment for conſpiring the death of the king, and the ſubverſion of the eſtabliſhed religion and government iii. 1
* Sir Thomas is brought upon his trial iii. 3
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard and mr. attorney-general (ſir Creſwell Levinz) open the evidence iii. 4
* Bolron's evidence of the priſoner's making a colluſive conveyance of his eſtate, to prevent a forfeiture iii. 4
* Of ſir Thomas's deſign to erect a nunnery in Yorkſhire iii. 6
* The Jeſuits hold it damnation to take the oath of allegiance iii. 7
* Bolron ſwears the priſoner offered him 1000l. to kill the king iii. 8
* Bolron's evidence repeated, particularly to ſir Thomas, he being very thick of hearing; and his ſeveral anſwers iii. 10
* Mowbray's evidence of ſir Thomas's concern in the plot iii. 11
* Mowbray's evidence repeated to ſir Thomas, in the ſame manner as Bolron's iii. 12
* Sir Thomas's almanack given in evidence iii. 13
* A letter directed to ſir Thomas, and found among his papers, produced as evidence iii. 15
* Forty papiſts convicted at once of not taking the oath of allegiance in Yorkſhire iii. 15
* The priſoner calls witneſſes to ſhew Bolron's malice againſt him iii. 17
* Further evidence of Bolron and Mowbray's malice againſt the priſoner iii. 19
* Evidence of Bolron's ſwearing falſly againſt others iii. 20
* Bolron's character iii. 21
* Bolron calls his wife and grandmother to give him a good character iii. 26
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard, and ſir Francis Winnington ſolicitor-general, ſum up the evidence iii. 27
* Mr. juſtice Jones directs the jury, and tells them, that improbability is not of weight againſt poſitive evidence iii. 28
* Sir Thomas Gaſcoigne acquitted iii. 31

GASCOIGNE, Sir CRISP, Lord Mayor of London,
Quitted the chair at the Old-Bailey, on the trial of the Abbotſbury men, for perjury on the trial of Mary Squires x. 243
Mr. ſerjeant Davy his complimentary ſpeech reſpecting this mayor's conduct, in procuring the ſaid Squires her pardon x. 248

GASCOYNE, BAMBER,
Opens indictment againſt Eliz. Canning, for perjury x. 211

GATES, Sir JOHN,
Sir Henry Gates, ſir Andrew Dudley, and ſir Thomas Palmer, their trial at Weſtminſter, for high-treaſon, Aug. 19, 1553, 1 Mary xi. 26
They were all condemned and executed xi. 26

* GAUNT, ELIZABETH,
Sentenced to be hanged for treaſon iv. 160. See CORNISH.

* GAVAN, JOHN ii. 829. See WHITE, alias WHITEBREAD, & al.

GAWDIE, THOMAS, Queen's Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech on the arraignment of Daviſon in the Star-chamber vii. 22

GAZETTES, LONDON,
Quære, the evidence of them viii. 213

GENEVA.
People allowed their recreations at Geneva on Sundays i. 899

GENERAL WARRANTS.
They were declared illegal and bad by the court of B. R. xi. 312
* GERHARD, JOHN ii. 212. See FOX SOMERSET.
GERMAINE, Sir JOHN. See NORFOLK Duke of.

* GERMAN PRINCESS,
* Mary Moders, alias Stedman, her trial for bigamy at the Old-Bailey, June 4, 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 498
* The indictment for felony, in marrying John Carlton, Thomas Stedman her firſt huſband being then alive ii. 498
* The witneſſes for the king to the firſt marriage are called ii. 499
* No entry of the firſt marriage in the regiſter-book ii. 500
* She owns her ſecond marriage ii. 500
* The priſoner's defence ii. 500
* She calls her witneſſes ii. 501
* Recorder Howel directs the jury, and tells them, that if they found her guilty, ſhe muſt die by law; for that a woman could not have the benefit of clergy; but he intimates to them, that he thought the proof of the firſt marriage very defective ii. 502
* The priſoner is acquitted ii. 498

GERRARD, Sir GILBERT, Maſter of the Rolls,
His ſpeech on the arraignment of Daviſon vii. 25, 27

GERRARD, JOHN,
His behaviour and ſpeech at his execution, on Tower-Hill, 1654, for treaſon againſt the protector viii. 366. See vii. 212.

GIBBON, JOHN,
His trial upon information, in nature of a quo warranto againſt him, to ſhew by what authority he claimed to be freeman of New Romney, at the relation of William Jarvis, at Maidſtone aſſizes in Kent, Auguſt 6, 1734, 7 Geo. II. before chief juſtice Eyre x. 118. Ap.
Mr. Smith opens the pleadings on behalf of the king x. 118. Ap.
Mr. Marſh's obſervations for the defendant Gibbon x. 119. Ap.
Swearing and admitting members of corporation ſame thing x. 119. Ap. See Id. 123.
Evidence on behalf of the defendant x. 119. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Darnell's ſpeech on behalf of the crown x. 119, 120. Ap.
Lord chief juſtice Eyre's opinion on a point of law x. 119. Ap.
The aſſembly books produced x. 119. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Baynes's ſpeech on ſame ſide x. 121. Ap.
Evidence on behalf of the king x. 122. Ap.
Mr. Marſh's ſpeech on behalf of mr. Gibbon x. 123. Ap.
Evidence on ſame ſide x. 124. Ap.
Debates about the plea x. 126. Ap.
Lord chief juſtice Eyre ſums up to the jury x. 126. Ap.
Verdict for the king x. 128. Ap.

* GIBBONS, JOHN,
* His trial for high-treaſon for being concerned in Love's plot, before the high court of juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall, July 18, 1651, 3 Car. II. ii. 183
* Impeachment for high-treaſon and other crimes, preferred by Prideaux, attorney-general of the ſtate ii. 184
* The priſoner inſiſts on his being tried by a jury, according to the ancient conſtitution ii. 184
* The evidence ii. 184
* He alledges, that the notes taken for him at his trial, were taken away from him; which prevented his making a defence ii. 186
* He objects to the incompetency of the witneſſes ii. 187
* And that there was but one witneſs to any one fact ii. 187
* Sentence paſſed upon the priſoner ii. 191
* His behaviour at execution ii. 191
* GIBBS, NATHANIEL ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

* GILBERT, Sir JEFFERY, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland.
* Proceedings againſt him, John Pocklington, eſq. and ſir John St. Leger, two of the barons of that court, in the houſe of lords in Ireland, for a contempt contempt of that houſe, 1719, 5 Geo. I. vi. 188

* The high ſheriff of Kildare's petition to the houſe of lords, complaining that he had been fined in the Exchequer for obeying the lords order vi. 188
* Report of the committee vi. 189
* Orders of the lords in England relating to the cauſe vi. 189, 191, 192
* Oath of a baron of the Exchequer vi. 193
* The lords cenſure the barons vi. 194
* And commit them into cuſtody vi. 195
His hiſtory of the Common-Pleas cited as a deciſive authority xi. 192

GILES, JOHN,
* His trial for an aſſault on John Arnold, eſq. 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 65
* The indictment iii. 65
* Mr. Holt, of counſel for the king, opens the evidence iii. 65
* And is ſeconded by mr. Thompſon iii. 66
* Mr. Arnold's evidence of his being aſſaulted iii. 67
* Several corroborating circumſtances given in evidence iii. 69
* Giles's defence by mr. Darnell iii. 71
* Witneſſes to prove the priſoner was at another place when the fact was committed iii. 73
* Sir George Jefferies's obſervations on the evidence iii. 75
* Giles is convicted iii. 78
* The judgment iii. 79
* Proceedings againſt mr. Herbert for taking his part iii. 79

GLANVILLE, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech concerning the petition of right, at a conference of both houſes vii. 202

GLANVILLE, RANULPH DE,
Wrote in the time of Hen. II. vii. 151
He was a learned and famous judge to Hen. II. but living 500 years ſince, and the particulars of which he writes being ſo different from the practice and eſtabliſhed laws of the enſuing ages, his authority is of ſlight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day, tho' it be very conſiderable in examination what the law was in his time; and that way it is ſometimes uſed as an ornament in argument only vii. 235. See ii. 565. xi. 298, 301

* GLEN, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

GLENCOE.
An account of the barbarous maſſacre of the laird of Glencoe, his lady, and vaſſals x. 65. Ap. xi. 280.

GLYNN, JOHN,
Replies to earl Strafford, impeached of treaſon by the commons, and tried before the lords i. 757

GLYNN, JOHN, the King's eldeſt Serjeant at Law,
Opened the indictment on lord Morley's trial vii. 424

GLYNN, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech in behalf of Anthony Fabrigas, againſt governor Moſtyn xi. 162
His reply xi. 177
His argument on moving the court of Common-Pleas for the diſcharge of John Wilkes, eſq. member of parliament, committed to the Tower as a libeller of his king; when he was diſcharged on account of parliamentary privilege xi. 303, 304, 305. See WILKES JOHN.

GODDARD, JAMES,
Is apprehended for robbing a Jew at his inn of 554 ducats x. 411
He is tried and acquitted x. 411
Indicts Simons for perjury x. 412. See SIMONS.

GOLDING, JOHN, & al.
For piracy, acting under king James the ſecond's commiſſion, 5 W. & M. viii. 73
Dr, Oldys order to proceed againſt them as pirates, gives his opinion in writing that they were no pirates viii. 73
Gives his reaſons before the council, that the colourable authority ſtill remaining in king James will excuſe them; the abdication never having been publiſhed in France viii. 74
Sir Thomas Pinfold of the ſame opinion viii. 75
Dr. Newton and dr. Walker deſire time to conſider viii. 75
Dr. Lyttleton's opinion; made king's advocate; tries and condemns them viii. 75
Appeal to the houſe of peers, by petition, that they ought to have been treated as enemies, and priſoners of war, not as pirates viii. 75
Set forth their caſe viii. 76
Are executed viii. 78

GOLDWELL, THOMAS. See POLE Cardinal.

GOOD BEHAVIOUR.
Heretofore, when ſwords were not uſually worn but by ſoldiers, if a man was bound to his good behaviour, the wearing of one might be a breach of it iv. 198
Security for good behaviour ordered to be taken by juſtice of peace xi. 334

* GOODENOUGH, RICHARD iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

* GOODERE, SAMUEL, Eſq.
* Matthew Mahony, and Charles White, their trials for murder, at the ſeſſions of peace held in the city of Briſtol, begun the 17th of March 1740, and continued by adjournment to the 26th of the ſame month, 1741, 14 and 15 Geo. II. vi. 795, 829
* The indictment of Mahony, for choaking, ſtrangling, and murdering of ſir John Dineley Goodere (brother to the ſaid Samuel Goodere) on board the Ruby man of war; and of Samuel Goodere for abetting him in it vi. 829
* They plead not guilty to this indictment; and to that on the coroner's inqueſt vi. 796
* Mr. Goodere's counſel moves for an adjournment of the trial, and appeals to dr. Middleton (a phyſician) whether the priſoner's ill ſtate of health will admit of it now vi. 796
* The doctor is ſworn, and declares it will not; the trial is therefore put off for a week vi. 796
* Both priſoners complain of the loſs of hearing; and are allowed to be brought nearer the witneſſes vi. 796
* The jury is ſworn vi. 797
* Mr. Vernon opens the evidence vi. 797
* The witneſſes for the king called vi. 801
* Mr. Smith's evidence, that at mr. Goodere's requeſt, he made a ſeeming reconciliation between him and ſir John; that they met at this witneſs's houſe, kiſſed, and drank to love and friendſhip vi. 801
* That ſir John went away; and mr. Goodere haſtened after him, and was joined by ſome ſailors from the White Hart ale-houſe vi. 802
* Hear-ſay evidence admitted vi. 803
* It is moved in behalf of the priſoner, that he may have counſel to put his queſtions to the court, and that the court put them for him to the witneſſes; but refuſed vi. 803
* Mr. Smith's evidence after the murder vi. 803
* Baronettage, how derived, and its inſtitution vi. 804
* Arguments upon omiſſion of the title in the indictment vi. 804
* A perſon may have divers ſurnames; yet a purchaſe by either of them is ſufficient vi. 804
* Lord Preſton's caſe cited vi. 804
* Hobbs, the landlord of the White Hart ale-houſe, his evidence of the priſoners meeting there with ten men, for conſultation; and of ſir John's paſſing by, and the men's ruſhing out after him vi. 805
* Several witneſſes of the ſeizing ſir John, and ill-treatment of him in the barge vi. 806
* Circumſtantial evidences of the murder of him, on board the Ruby vi. 809
* Poſitive evidences of it vi. 812
* Goodere orders Mahony and White to be put on ſhore vi. 813
* The examination of Mahony read vi. 817
* Mr. recorder tells the jury, that this confeſſion is evidence only againſt Mahony; and not againſt Goodere vi. 818
* The place where the Ruby lay proved to be within the liberty of the city of Briſtol vi. 818
* Goodere, in his defence, calls witneſſes to prove that his brother was a lunatic; and that he was doing his beſt to take care of him vi. 819
* Brings other evidence that he did not ſend Mahony and White away vi. 819
* Inſiſts that he was not preſent at the death of ſir John Dineley vi. 820
* Is anſwered by mr. recorder and by mr. Vernon vi. 821, 823
* Calls witneſſes to his character vi. 821
* Some of them contradict his charge of lunacy upon his brother vi. 822
* A perſon engaged in a deſign of murder, and poſted ſo as to give any aſſiſtance to thoſe that actually commit it, is, in the eye of the law, preſent at the fact, though not upon the very ſpot where the murder is committed, nor even in ſight or hearing of it vi. 822, 828
* The caſe of lord Dacre vi. 822
* And of Berry, in the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey vi. 823
* Mr. recorder ſums up the evidence vi. 823
* Matthew Mahony and Samuel Goodere convicted of wilful murder vi. 829
* The trial of Charles White for the ſaid murder vi. 829
* The jury ſworn, and charged with the priſoner vi. 829
* Mr. Vernon opens the charge vi. 829
* The witneſſes for the king called vi. 830
* Evidence that after Mahony and White had murdered ſir John, they rifled his pockets of his watch and money vi. 830
* The examination of White read vi. 831
* He retracts his former confeſſion; ſays he was in liquor and out of his ſenſes when he made it; and that he never laid a hand near the deceaſed vi. 832
* Calls witneſſes to his character vi. 832
* Mr. recorder directs the jury vi. 832
* Charles White is convicted of wilful murder vi. 833
* Mr. recorder's ſpeech to all the priſoners vi. 833
* They are condemned, and executed vi. 834
* The body of Mahony hung in chains vi. 834
* Charles Bryan, Edward Macdaniel, and William Hammon were indicted, tried, and convicted, at the ſame court, for a miſdemeanour, in forcibly ſeizing ſir John, and carrying him on board the Ruby barge; fined and impriſoned vi. 834

GOODWIN, Sir FRANCIS,
The caſe between him and ſir John Forteſcue, concerning the election for the county of Bucks, 1 Jac. I. vii 67
Ordered to be printed from the journal of the houſe vii. 67
His return refuſed by the clerk of the crown, as an outlaw, but voted duly elected, and to be received de jure vii. 68
The lords deſire a conference on the ſubject, and are refuſed vii. 68
A meſſage from the lords, that his majeſty deſired there might be a conference thereon vii. 68
The ſpeaker and a committee attend his majeſty, to relate the reaſon of the houſe's proceedings vii. 69
Precedents of perſons outlawed, yet privileged by the houſe, and returned to ſerve vii. 69
That a general pardon is good for outlawries againſt all, ſaving the party at whoſe ſuit vii. 69
His majeſty's anſwer, that they ſhould admit a conference with the judges who had reſolved outlawry a ſufficient cauſe of diſmiſſion from the houſe, and that ſir Francis Goodwin ſtood outlawed vii. 69
The three great objections anſwered vii. 70, 71
Committee appointed to put in writing their reaſons for their proceedings vii. 72
Delivered to the lords in the council-chamber vii. 75
The king commands a conference with the judges, in the preſence of him and his council vii. 75
Sir Francis Bacon reports the conference vii. 76

Reſolved, that both ſir John Forteſcue and ſir Francis Goodwin ſhould be excluded, and a new writ directed vii. 76
Sir Francis Goodwin's letter to the ſpeaker vii. 76
Addreſs of thanks to his majeſty, and his majeſty's anſwer vii. 77
The warrant for a new writ vii. 77

GORDON,
Doctor John Baſtwick and Henry Burton pray he may be aſſigned their counſel i. 502, 503

GORDON, HAMILTON,
His argument in ſupport of the objection made by lord Lovat, that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs ix. *655

GOVERNMENT.
The reaſons for the diſaffection of the nation to the government during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165
All civilized governments have puniſhed calumny with ſeverity xi. 323
The worſt of governments is more tolerable than no government at all xi. 323 * See LIBELS.

GOULD, HENRY, Serjeant at Law,
Opens the charge in the indictment, and ſhews the methods ſir John Fenwick took to protract his trial v. 44
Reply on bill for attainting ſir John v. 89

GOULD, Sir HENRY, Judge Q. B.
Of opinion that miſtake in proceedings againſt John Tutchin, who was convicted for publiſhing "The Obſervators," might be amended, on motion in arreſt of judgment, Mich. 3 Ann. v. 568
His argument on giving his opinion, that the Ayleſbury men were not bailable viii. 159

GOULD, Sir HENRY, Juſtice C. B.
His charge to the jury, in the cauſe of Fabrigas and Moſtyn xi. 80
Mr. juſtice Gould was pleaſed to ſay, he much doubted, whether the precedents in the crown office of returns to writs of habeas corpus, were like the preſent return, as had been aſſerted by the king's ſerjeants; and ſaid, if the precedents were not ſo, he ſhould be of opinion, "that at the time of the coming of this writ to us, the within named John Wilkes was not, nor at any time ſince hath been, in our cuſtody, or in the cuſtody of either of us," was an inſufficient return; becauſe he thought, that from what appeared in evidence in the caſe, the court had a right to know what is become of the king's ſubject mr. Wilkes, ſince he was in the meſſenger's cuſtody on the day the writ was granted; whereupon (heſitante curiâ) the writ and return were not permitted to be filed of record xi. 303

GOWRIE, Earl of,
Proceedings againſt him and others for high-treaſon, at Edinburgh, 1600 vii. 33
Cited to appear, but do not vii. 34
The depoſitions of the witneſſes, to prove the ſummonſes of treaſon vii. 34
Earl of Gowrie, and Alexander Ruthven, condemned to be hanged, and the reſt declared guilty of treaſon and leſe majeſty vii. 43
The ſurname of Ruthven aboliſhed for ever vii. 43
The fifth day of Auguſt, being the anniverſary of the king's deliverance from the earl of Gowrie's conſpiracy, was celebrated, ſays lord chancellor Bacon, by him with his neighbours the townſmen of St. Albans, as an happy day vii. 43. n.

* GRAHME, Sir RICHARD. See PRESTON Viſcount.

GRAND-CHILDREN.
The king's grand-children are children xi. 296, 299. See xi. 301
They are ſo ſtiled in records xi. 298. See ROYAL FAMILY.

*GRAND JURY.
* Twelve of the grand jury muſt find the bill v. 423
* Grand jury-men may not ſend for other evidence than is produced on the part of the king v. 449
* The king's counſel may manage the evidence before the grand jury iii. 418
* Evidence may be given the grand jury in open court iii. 421
* Grand jury-man admitted to give evidence of what a witneſs, who was withdrawn, had ſworn before them v. 72
Grand jury inſiſt they ought to examine witneſſes in private, notwithſtanding the king waves it iii. 420
Admitted their debates ought to be in private iii. 421
Credibility of witneſſes how to be conſidered by grand jury iv. 184, 201
Grand jury may notice any thing they know or believe iv. 185
Diſcharging a grand jury, before they have finiſhed their preſentments, tends to the ſubverſion of the law iii. 223. vii. 479, 481, 482, 485
Inſtance of a grand juryman laying violent hands upon himſelf, for the injury he did a priſoner, in urging his fellows to find a bill againſt him ix. 227
* Probable evidence ſufficient for them to find a bill upon ii. 806. iii. 419. v. 3. See iv. 184
* They are not to examine to the credit of the king's witneſſes iii. 420, 433. See iv. 184
Counſel ſhould not be admitted to them iv. 173
King's counſel cajoled the grand jury in private for ſome hours, in Fitzharris's caſe iv. 173
Sir John Hawles's remarks on the earl of Shafteſbury's grand jury iv. 183
The cauſe of their inſtitution, and their uſe iv. 184
The king's counſel privately manage the evidence to the grand inqueſt, in order to finding the bill of indictment ii. 302

* GRANT, JOHN i. 232. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.

GRAY, Lady JANE.
She was beheaded, though ſentenced to be hanged iv. 129

*GREAT SEAL.
* Taking it from one writing, and putting it to another, adjudged to be high-treaſon i. 74
* That judgment reproved i. 74
The great ſeal adds not to a man's ſenſe, learning, or honeſty iv. 206
Keeper of the great ſeal cannot commit iv. 555. See CHANCELLORS. CHANCERY.

* GREAVES, JOHN ii. 494. iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* GREAVES, WILLIAM iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

GREEKS.
Tully was well read in the Greek hiſtory iv. 172
"That innocence would defend," was a ſaying as mortal to Fitz-harris, to Colledge, to colonel Sidney, to alderman Corniſh, and to others, as was the letter Θ among the Greeks iv. 177
A remarkable law in one of the wiſeſt of the Grecian governments, ariſing from their dread and abhorrence of a corrupt judge vi. 506
When a man ſaid the poet, the Grecians underſtood him to mean Homer vii 181

* GREEN, ROBERT iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

GREEN, ROBERT,*
* Henry Berry, and Laurence Hill, their trial at the King's Bench bar, for the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, February 10, 1678, 31 Car. II. ii. 769
* Arraigned the 5th February ii. 760
* The indictment ii. 760. vi. 12. Ap.
* Sir William Jones, attorney-general, gives the evidence ii. 762
* Oates's evidence, of the danger ſir Edmondbury Godfrey thought himſelf in from the papiſts ii. 764
* Prothonotary Robinſon to the ſame effect ii. 765
* Prance's evidence, of his own part in the murder ii. 765
* Richardſon's evidence, of Prance's denying what he had ſworn, and then affirming it again ii. 769
* Bedloe's evidence, of his being ſolicited by the prieſts to murder a gentleman ii. 770. See viii. 449
* Brown's evidence, how the corpſe was found ii. 772
* The ſurgeon's evidence, who viewed the corpſe ii. 772
* Evidence of Green's enquiring for ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, the day before he was miſſing, and Hill the ſame day ii. 773
* Evidence of their meeting at the Plough Alehouſe ii. 774
* Sir Robert Southwell's evidence of Prance's ſhewing the committee of council the places where the body was laid ii. 775
* Berry, the porter, ſays, he had orders to let nobody into Somerſet-houſe, the 12th, 13th, or 14th days of October ii. 776
* The priſoner's defence ii. 777
* Evidence of Hill's being within always at eight o'clock at night ii. 777
* Hill ſhews that the corpſe could not be in his chamber, and the reſt of the family be ignorant of it ii. 778
* The court intimate that the priſoner's witneſſes were privy to it ii. 779
* Hill urges it as an argument of his innocence, that he did not go out of the way when he was told he was ſuſpected ii. 781
* The corporal and centinels depoſe, that no ſedan went out of Somerſet-houſe that night the king's evidence ſay ſir Edmondbury Godfrey was carried out ii. 783
* Mr. attorney's obſervations on the evidence ii. 784
* The chief juſtice directs the jury againſt the priſoners ii. 785
* The priſoners are convicted ii. 789
* And receive ſentence the next day, though they were tried at bar ii. 789
* The tipſtaff demands their clothes as his fee ii. 789
* But not allowed ii. 789
* They make proteſtations of their innocence ii. 790
* Denied prieſts to come to them ii. 791
* They are executed i. 791. viii. 441. * See ATKINS SAMUEL. ii. 792

* GREEN, Captain THOMAS, and his Crew,
* Their trial before the high court of admiralty, in Scotland, for piracy, robbery, and murder, March 5, &c. 1705, 4 Annæ v. 572
* Some of them pardoned, to be made witneſſes againſt the reſt v. 572
* Two indictments v. 573, 574, 575, 576
* Exceptions to the indictments v. 578
* The exceptions are over-ruled by the court v. 594
* A jury of fifteen ſworn v. 595
* Ferdinando's evidence of taking a ſhip, and deſtroying the men v. 595
* May the ſurgeon's evidence, of the Worceſter's taking a ſhip v. 596
* Franciſco the captain's ſervant's evidence of the taking a ſhip v. 597
* Evidence of ſome words that Haines, one of the Worceſter's crew, had let fall ſince their coming to Scotland v. 598
* Evidence that the bale-goods on board the Worceſter were not marked v. 599
* Evidence of Madder's having the ſeals of the Scotch African and Eaſt-India company in his poſſeſſion v. 600
* The inſtructions given to the captain by the Engliſh Eaſt-India company, to uſe an extraordinary caution and privacy in the letter they ſent home, uſed as an argument that the Engliſh Eaſt-India company fitted out this ſhip on purpoſe to deſtroy the Scotch ſhips v. 602
* Sir David Dalrymple ſhews the nature of the crime, and makes his obſervations on the evidence v. 603
* The jury withdraw, and chuſe their foreman and clerk v. 604
* The verdict is given in writing, and ſigned by the foreman and clerk v. 604
* Moſt votes determine the fact v. 604
* They are all convicted but Reynolds v. 604
* Judgment pronounced by an officer appointed for the purpoſe v. 605
* Linſteed recommended to the queen's mercy v. 606
* The confeſſions of ſome of the priſoners v. 606
* Appendix v. 609

* GREEN, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

GREGG, WILLIAM,
Proceedings againſt him at the Old-Bailey for high-treaſon, Jan. 19, 1707-8, 6 Ann. x. 77. Ap.

Report of committee of lords, appointed to examine him, to the houſe x. 77. Ap.

Biſhop Burnett's acount of the matter x. 77. Ap. n.

Mr. juſtice Foſter's obſervations on Gregg's caſe x. 77. Ap. n.

Lords petition the queen to have him exemplarily puniſhed x. 82. Ap.

Mr. Hoffman's letter to ordinary of Newgate concerning Gregg, with the anſwer x. 82. Ap.

Gregg is executed x. 82. Ap.

Gregg's dying ſpeech, wherein he clears the right honourable Robert Harley, eſq. of all ſuſpicion of being concerned in the traitorous correſpondence x. 83. Ap.

* GREGORY, GEORGE, eſq. iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

GREGORY, WILLIAM, Baron of the Exchequer, and Speaker of the Houſe of Commons,

Examined as a witneſs on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41

* GREY, FORD Lord iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

* GREY, FORD Lord,

* Robert Charnock, Ann Charnock, David Jones, Frances Jones, and Rebecca Jones, their trial on an information by the attorney-general, for a miſdemeanour, in ſeducing and carrying away the lady Henrietta Berkeley, from her father the earl of Berkeley, being under 18 years of age, and under his government, and ſoliciting her to commit adultery with the ſaid lord Grey, 34 Car. II. 1682 iii. 519

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, and mr. Finch, ſolicitor-general, open the evidence iii. 520, 521

* Evidence of lady Arabella Berkeley iii. 522

* And of the counteſs of Berkeley iii. 523

* Evidence of lady Harriet's being moved from place to place iii. 527

* Mr. Williams's ſpeech for the defendants iii. 533

* Lord Grey's own account of the affair iii. 535

* My lord Grey committed till he produced the lady Henrietta iii. 535

* The lady Henrietta admitted to be ſworn as a witneſs in this cauſe, though it was ſtrongly oppoſed by the king's counſel, her evidence tending to excuſe her unlawful love, &c. iii. 539

* She denies upon her oath that ever my lord Grey adviſed her to, or had any hand in her eſcape, or knew any thing of it iii. 539

* Lady Henrietta being aſked who aſſiſted her to make her eſcape, it is ruled by the court, that if he was no party to the information, ſhe was not bound to diſcover him; for though one is ſworn to ſpeak the whole truth, that is to be underſtood only in relation to the point in iſſue iii. 540

* And ruled, that if the court will aſk her no queſtions, ſhe is not to tell a ſtory of herſelf iii. 540

* The chief juſtice, in ſumming up the evidence, tells the jury, the charge was double. (1.) The ſoliciting the lady to unlawful love. (2.) The carrying her away from her father, under whoſe tuition ſhe was iii. 541

* There having been a writ de homine replegiando iſſued againſt my lord Grey for the lady Henrietta, ſhe is examined in court whether ſhe is under any reſtraint iii. 543

* To which ſhe anſwering, ſhe was not, the lord chief juſtice orders her to be delivered to her father the lord Berkeley iii. 543

* Whereupon ſhe affirmed ſhe was married to one Turner; and judge Dolben held, they could not diſpoſe of another man's wife iii. 544

* My lord Grey's counſel inſiſts on his being diſcharged from his impriſonment, the lady being produced; to which the court agreed. Per cur. no judgment could be given that term, there being not four days left iii. 543

* Mr. juſtice Dolben queſtions whether the court had power to commit my lord Grey on the homine replegiando, he being a peer iii. 543

* The perſon eſſoigned is properly the plaintiff in a homine replegiando; and the court directed my lord Grey ſhould give ſecurity to anſwer the lady's ſuit upon that writ iii. 543

* Which he did, and is admitted to bail iii. 543

* The lord Berkeley demands his daughter again; and there being a ſcuffle about her in the hall, the chief juſtice ordered a tipſtaff to carry her and Turner, her pretended huſband, to the King's-Bench: but the laſt day of the term the court ordered her to be diſcharged iii. 544

* The jury find all the defendants guilty, but Rebecca Jones: but the matter being compromiſed in the vacation, the attorney-general entered a noli proſequi before the next Hilary-term iii. 544

The record vi. 16. Ap.

GREY, Lady JANE. See DUDLEY JOHN, Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND.

* GREY, ISAAC. See CROOK JOHN.

GREY, LEONARD Lord,

His trial for treaſon, June 25, 1540, 33 Hen. VIII. xi. 17

The articles laid to his charge xi. 17

His anſwer xi. 17, 18

Commiſſion ſent to Ireland to examine witneſſes xi. 17

Tried by a common jury, being only an Iriſh peer xi. 17

Confeſſed the indictment xi. 17

Ordered to be beheaded xi. 17

Executed xi. 17

GRIEVANCES.

Bacon's ſpeech on preſenting to the king, Jac. I. petition of grievances from the commons xi. 65

GRIMSTONE, HARBOTTLE,

His remarkable ſpeech made againſt archbiſhop Laud, in the houſe of commons, upon his impeachment for treaſon i. 824

* GRINDALL, Archbiſhop,

* His character and conduct v. 689

* The queen's letter to the biſhops, and his to the council v. 762

* Remarks on them v. 810

* GROVE, JOHN ii. 696. See IRELAND.

GROVES,

His execution and ſpeech viii. 440

GUARDS.

The law of England takes no notice of the king's guards iii. 760. See iii. 770

The militia and trained bands are the legal guards iii. 760

The king is guarded by the protection of God; by the love of his ſubjects; by the law, and courts of juſtice iii. 760

The judges are the king's guards iii. 760

All meetings, conſultations, and agreements, to riſe in rebellion and ſeize upon the king's guards, which are his defence againſt force, and to invite the aid and aſſiſtance of the king's ſubjects of any other of his dominions, are plain overt-acts of compaſſing the king's death, and ſo have been adjudged in all times viii. 467, 468

GUILT.

A perſon's flying from juſtice is a preſumption of guilt x. 406. n.

GUISCARD, Marquis DE. See LEGISLATURE.

*GUNPOWDER-PLOT i. 232.

* The quality of the conſpirators i. 237

* The principles of the jeſuits i. 237

* An exact and particular account of the plot, by ſir Edward Coke i. 235 249

* Their defence as to their doctrine of equivocation; the depoſing doctrine; and abſenting themſelves from our churches i. 257

GYPSEY. See SQUIRES MARY.

H.

* HABEAS CORPUS.

* The return of a habeas corpus, not ſigned by the keeper, void ii. 204

* An alias habeas corpus in the name of Oliver the protector ii. 204

* The return thereof ii. 205

* An eſcape, to bring a priſoner in execution out of the rules of the priſon without a habeas corpus, though to be a witneſs, and by order of the court iii. 97. iv. 2, 599

* Remarks of an omiſſion in the habeas corpus act iii. 906

* The arguments on the return of the habeas corpus, by which the ſeven biſhops were brought from the Tower to the King's-Bench bar iv. 304

* A priſoner brought into the King's-Bench by habeas corpus, may be remanded to the county-gaol where he was indicted, or ſent to any priſon in the county where the King's-Bench ſits iii. 1000. See ROSEWELL.

* No habeas corpus or diſtringas iſſues in capital caſes, unleſs the trial be in the King's-Bench iv. 667

Habeas corpus act infringed iv. 166

The writ of habeas corpus explained Em. Pref. v.

Error lies not in proceedings on habeas corpus viii. 157

Petitions to the throne and queen conſort to be diſcharged under acts for ſuſpending habeas corpus in ſeveral reigns x. 71. Ap.

Not to be granted to remove any perſon committed by the houſe of commons for a breach of privilege during that ſeſſion vii. 462

Habeas corpus, a writ of right for the liberty of the ſubject ix. 440. See BERNARDI major JOHN.
  CORBET ſir JOHN.
  CROSBY BRASS, lord mayor of London.
  DARNELL ſir THOMAS.
  EARL ſir WALTER.
  HAMPDEN ſir EDMUND.
  JENKS FRANCIS.
  KENDAL THOMAS.
  LONG WALTER.
  SELDEN JOHN.
  SHAFTESBURY earl of.
  STREATER JOHN.
  STROUD WILLIAM.

* HACKER, FRANCIS ii. 382. See REGICIDES.

HACKWELL, WILLIAM,

His ſpeech concerning the bill for magna charta vii. 192

Delivered a learned and able argument in ſame parliament lord Bacon did, againſt prerogative of crown impoſing duties without conſent of parliament xi. 29, 36

* HAINES, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

HALE, MATTHEW.

Mr. Hale (ſince the much renowned lord chief juſtice of the King's-Bench) ſpoke elaborately and at length for his grace the duke of Hamilton ii. 5

When of high rank at the bar, took the engagement to be true and faithful to the commonwealth of England, without king or houſe of lords ii. 159, 173

Of counſel for Love, impeached of treaſon for correſponding with, and conſpiring to bring in, king Charles the ſecond; is permitted to argue his exceptions ii. 159

Argues that two witneſſes were neceſſary to one overt-act in treaſon ii. 173

HALE, Sir MATTHEW, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,

His obſervations at the trial of the reverend Robert Hawkins for felony, 1668, 20 Car. ii. 605

His charge to the jury ii. 608

Lord chief baron Hale of opinion, in a point of law, relative to high-treaſon, contrary to the reſt of the judges, on the trial of Peter Meſſenger and others, for levying war againſt the king ii. 593

HALE, Sir MATTHEW, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.

His opinion, "That it is unlawful to print any man's private caſe, while it is depending in a court of judicature;" quoted by Heneage Finch, ſolicitorlicitor-general, in the quo warranto cauſe againſt the city of London iii. 553

His lordſhip, and his encomium on the trial by jury, cited with great reſpect vi. 407. See xi. 251
Lord chief juſtice Hale, the term before he ſurrendered his judicial character, expreſſed himſelf thus : " He gave thanks to God, that he had ſpared him to that time, that he was able to keep his cuſhion, and declare his conſcience in that place" viii. 109
Hale's Summary of the Pleas of the Crown ſaid to be a very faulty, incorrect piece, never reviſed by him, nor intended for the preſs ix. 573

HALES, Sir EDWARD,

His trial for neglecting to take the oaths of ſupremacy and allegiance, 1686 vii. 612
Action for 500l. upon the ſtatute of 25 Car. II. vii. 612
Defendant pleads his majeſty's diſpenſation, and plaintiff demurs vii. 613
Mr. Northey's argument for the plaintiff vii. 613
Sir Thomas Powis for the defendant vii. 614
Sir Edward Herbert, chief juſtice, his ſpeech in giving his opinion for the defendant vii. 615
Eleven judges agree to the king's diſpenſing power vii. 616
The chief juſtice's vindication of himſelf, and his opinion vii. 617
Sir Robert Atkins's argument on the pleadings in this cauſe vii. 623
His animadverſions on the chief juſtice's vindication vii. 625
The chief juſtice's vindication examined by mr. Atwood vii. 630
The arguments at the bar in the above caſe were ſo ludicrous, as to be rather a farce, and fitter for a mock trial in a play, than ſuch as became men of learning in ſo important a matter vii. 616. n.

HALES, ROBERT,

Was tried Jan. 27, 1728-9, at the King's-Bench bar, by a ſpecial jury, on indictment for a miſdemeanour, for that he would have defrauded S. E. of 800l. by means of a note upon the frank of a letter; which trial laſted ſeven hours, and he was found guilty, but pardoned ix. 68. n.

HALES, WILLIAM,

His trial for forgery at the Old-Bailey, December 7, 1728, 1 Geo. II. ix. 68
The note of hand whereon he was indicted for a miſdemeanour ix. 68
Evidence for the crown ix. 69
Counſel for the priſoner ix. 71
Found guilty ix. 72
Indicted for fraudulently and by falſe tokens procuring notes of other perſons, and found guilty on the ſame evidence as given on laſt trial ix. 72
Judgment reſpited ix. 72
His trial for a miſdemeanour in obtaining 450l. from W. Harle by falſe tokens ix. 76
Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 76
Mr. Hungerford calls the evidence ix. 76
Mr. Lacy, counſel for the priſoner, makes no defence ix. 76
Lord chief baron ſums up the evidence to the jury ix. 77
Found guilty ix. 77
His trial for forging a promiſſory note for 6400l. in name of T. G. and partners, and for publiſhing ſame as true, knowing it to be counterfeit, at the Old-Bailey, Dec. 9, 1728, 1 Geo. II. x. 94. Ap.
Serjeant Baynes objects to ſome of the jurymen being related to the priſoner x. 94. Ap.
Sir Philip Yorke (attorney-general) deſires the trial may be conducted fairly, and therefore waves the perſon objected to x. 95. Ap.
The indictment x. 95. Ap.
Mr. Strange opens the indictment x. 96. Ap.
The attorney-general ſtates the evidence x. 96. Ap.
The evidence x. 99. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Darnell's ſpeech for the priſoner x. 112. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Baynes ſpeaks on the ſame ſide x. 113. Ap.
The evidence for the priſoner x. 114. Ap.
Mr. juſtice Page gives the priſoner in charge to the jury x. 115. Ap.
They find him guilty x. 117. Ap.

HALES, WILLIAM, and THOMAS KINNERSLEY, Clerk,

Their trials at the Old-Bailey, Jan. 20 and 21, 1728-9, 1 Geo. II. for forgery ix. 67
Names of the jury ix. 67
Attorney-general (ſir Philip Yorke) deſires jurymen ſummoned and not ſworn, to ſtay ix. 67
Subſtance of indictment ix. 67
Mr. Strange opens indictment ix. 67
The attorney-general opens the cauſe ix. 68
Witneſſes called ix. 69
No defence ix. 73
Lord chief baron Pengelly's charge to the jury ix. 73
Found guilty ix. 77
Their trial for forgery ix. 77
Jury called over and ſworn again ix. 77
Indictment read ix. 77
Indictment opened by mr. Strange ix. 77
Attorney-general's ſpeech for the king ix. 77
Evidence againſt them ix. 78
Serjeant Whitaker's ſpeech againſt them ix. 82
Serjeant Darnell's and mr. Lacy's for him ix. 82
Serjeant Eyre for mr. Kinnerſley ix. 83
Whether the making uſe of a man's name to a different purpoſe from what he deſigned, is a forgery ix. 83
Lord chief baron Pengelly's opinion on the caſes quoted ix. 83
Evidence for the priſoner ix. 84
Serjeant Whitaker's obſervations on what had been ſaid ix. 85
Mr. Strange on the ſame ſide ix. 85
Lord chief baron's ſumming up the evidence ix. 87
Clergyman tried by the ſame law as others ix. 92
Found guilty ix. 93
Fourth indictment, for obtaining from Thomas Bird 750l. by falſe tokens ix. 93
Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 93
Serjeant Eyre objects that the facts in the indictment are laid illegally ix. 93
His objection over-ruled ix. 94
Lord chief baron's ſumming up ix. 94
Found guilty ix. 94
Fifth indictment (with William Kinnerſley), for forging a promiſſory note, &c. in the name of Samuel Edwards, for 1650l. and publiſhing the ſame, knowing it to be forged ix. 94
Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 94
Attorney-general on the ſame ſide ix. 95
The evidence againſt them ix. 95
Judge Reynolds ſums up the evidence ix. 100
Found guilty ix. 103
Sixth indictment, for forging and counterfeiting a promiſſory note of Samuel Edwards, Eſq. to Samuel Lee, for 4000l. ix. 103
Serjeant Whitaker opens the indictment ix. 103
Evidence againſt him ix. 104
Serjeant Raby's charge to the jury ix. 105
Found guilty ix. 106
The note ordered to be returned by ſir Biby Lake, bart. ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker moves, on the ſtatute of Henry VIII. for corporal puniſhment ix. 106
Sir William Thomſon anſwers, what corporal puniſhment ? to be ſure he will be pilloried ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker obſerves, the priſoner hath endeavoured to get ſeveral thouſand pounds, and now only to look through a wooden caſement ix. 106
Sir William Thomſon's reply, that he would be impriſoned, as well as ſet in the pillory ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker would have the puniſhment extend farther ix. 106
Sir William Thomſon is not for extending it to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one ; and ſaid, the king himſelf is limited by the law ix. 106
The ſentence againſt Hales and Kinnerſley, viz. to ſtand twice in the pillory each. Hales to pay a fine of 50 marks, impriſoned for five years, and give ſecurity for ſeven years afterwards ; Kinnerſley fined 200l. to ſuffer two years impriſonment, and give ſecurity for his good behaviour for three years ix. 106

HALES, Mr. See KNIGHTLEY ſir RICHARD.

* HALIFAX, CHARLES Lord v. 339. See PORTLAND earl of.

HALL, EDWARD,

Extracts from his hiſtory of Henry VII. xi. 1
Extracts from his hiſtory of Henry VIII. xi. 10

HALL, a ſecular Prieſt,

And Robert Feron, their trial in Weſtminſter-Hall, by commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, for treaſon, Eaſter-Term, 27 Henry VIII. xi. 23
Subſtance of indictment xi. 23
At firſt pleaded not guilty, but afterwards confeſſed xi. 23
Judgment xi. 23
Hall hanged xi. 23
Feron pardoned xi. 23

HALL, BARTHOLOMEW,

His reply on the trial of Chriſtopher Love, impeached of high-treaſon for correſponding with, and conſpiring to bring in, Charles II. ii. 141

HALL, Attorney-General for Cheſhire,

Opens Stevenſon's caſe and evidence for murder x. 463
His reply x. 474, 476

HAMILTON, ANDREW. See ZENGER PETER.

* HAMILTON, JAMES Duke, and Earl of Cambridge,

* His trial for high-treaſon before the High Court of Juſtice, Feb. 9, 1648 ii. 1
* The charge for levying war in behalf of the king, againſt the kingdom and people of England ii. 1
* The duke's plea ii. 1
* Moves for time to ſend for his witneſſes ; but is denied ii. 1
* Counſel aſſigned him ii. 2
* Evidence of the duke's ſurrendering upon articles ; one of which was, that his life ſhould be ſecured ii. 2
* The commiſſioners who treated with him depoſed, they intended only to ſecure his life from the ſoldiers, and not from the civil power ii. 2
* The governor of Windſor-Caſtle depoſes, that the duke made his eſcape, though he had given him his honour he would not attempt it ii. 3
* The duke's defence ii. 3
* He inſiſts upon the articles ii. 3
* The duke's counſel ſpeak to points of law ii. 5
* They urge, that the two kingdoms were independent ; and the duke, being a native of Scotland, could not be a traitor to England ii. 5
* Mr. Steel's argument for the commonwealth ii. 7
* The earl born after king James's acceſſion ii. 8
* All who are born in Scotland ſince king James's acceſſion, deemed as natives of England to all intents. Calvin's caſe ii. 9
* So the natives of Gaſcoigne deemed denizens of England, when it was under the dominion of the king of England ii. 9
* Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare poteſt, nec patriam exuere ii. 9
* Object. That the nations were again divided at this invaſion ii. 9
* Anſw. That the acts of union ſtood unrepealed ii. 9
* That allegiance was due to the king in his politic capacity, and conſequently to the kingdom ii. 9
* The oath of allegiance permitted to be taken, therefore, to the king till his death ii. 9
* Authorities cited for charging the duke as earl of Cambridge, and not as duke ii. 10
* Scots tried for treaſon here before the union, on account of the homage that kingdom owed to this ii. 11
* The duke a traitor by the local allegiance he owed ii. 11
* That the act for naturalizing the father, extended to his iſſue born before fore the act, without ſpecial words ii. 12

* Not ſo in the caſe of denization ii. 12
* A native of England may travel without a licence ii. 12
* The earl's ſitting in a judicial capacity in the Engliſh parliament, made another argument of his denization ii. 12
* Treaſon for the earl to join Engliſh rebels, while the nations were in amity ii. 13
* It was not material, whether the Engliſh rebels fought under his ſtandard, or he under theirs ii. 13
* Articles entered into by military officers, could not pardon treaſon committed againſt the civil power; for that the power of pardoning is incommunicable ii. 14
* The intention of the parties in all compacts was to be conſidered; nor could the commiſſioners have bound the civil power, if they had ſtipulated to do it ii. 15
* That the duke had loſt the benefit of his ſurrender, by making his eſcape ii. 15
* That the duke had received ſome benefit by his articles, by being allowed a fair trial, and not being put to the ſword immediately ii. 15
* The duke's plea rejected, and he found guilty ii. 16
* Sentence paſſed ii. 16
* Put to the vote, if the duke ſhould be reprieved ii. 16
* His behaviour at execution ii. 16. See BAILLIE DAVID. REA lord.

HAMILTON, Marquis.

Mr. juſtice Whitelocke's memorial concerning the lord Rea's diſcovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conſpiracy xi. 126

HAMMOND, JOHN. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

HAMPDEN, Sir EDMUND,

Impriſoned for not lending upon the commiſſion for loans, brings his habeas corpus vii. 116

* HAMPDEN, JOHN, Eſq.

* The trial between the king and him in the caſe of ſhip-money, 13 Car. I. i. 505
* Lord keeper Coventry's charge to the judges i. 505
* His ſecond charge i. 507
* The king's letter, ſtate of the caſe of ſhip-money, and the judges opinion i. 509
* The whole record in Engliſh i. 510. vi. 5. Ap.
* Mr. St. John's argument for mr. Hampden i. 515
* His ſecond day's argument i. 537
* Sir Edward Littleton, ſolicitor-general, his argument i. 544
* His ſecond day's argument i. 550
* His third day's argument i. 558
* Mr. Holborne's argument i. 562
* He makes an apology for arguing againſt the king's power; but is directed by the court to proceed i. 565
* Writ of mandamus rogantes, the nature of it i. 568
* Mr. Holborne's ſecond day's argument i. 568
* Danegelt, the tax ſo called, the nature of it i. 571, 580
* Mr. Holborne's third day's argument i. 574
* His fourth day's argument i. 580
* His anſwer to the arguments of the king's counſel i. 585
* Sir John Banks, attorney-general, his argument i. 586
* His ſecond day's argument i. 594
* His third day's argument, wherein he anſwers the objections of the defendant's counſel i. 603
* The opinion of mr. baron Weſton, for the king; with his reaſons i. 609
* The opinion of mr. juſtice Crawley, for the king; with his reaſons i. 615
* The argument and opinion of mr. juſtice Berkley, for the king i. 619
* The opinion of mr. juſtice Vernon, for the king i. 637
* The opinion and reaſons of mr. baron Trevor, for the king i. 637
* Mr. juſtice Crooke gives his opinion and reaſons, for the defendant i. 638
* His reaſons, as they were preſented to the king i. 644
* All the records that had been produced, ſtated i. 656, &c.
* Mr. juſtice Jones's argument i. 663
* His opinion that the defendant ſhould be charged, with this limitation, that none of the money ſhould come to the king's purſe: if it does, he is againſt it i. 667
* Mr. juſtice Hutton's argument and opinion, for the defendant i. 667
* Mr. baron Denham's opinion, for the defendant i. 672
* Chief baron Davenport's argument and opinion, for the king i. 672
* Lord chief juſtice Finch's argument and opinion, for the king i. 679
* Lord chief juſtice Bramſton's argument and opinion, for the king i. 691
* The order, and judgment i. 695
* Mr. Waller's ſpeech in the houſe of commons i. 696
* Copy of the judgment entered againſt him i. 695, 696. vi. 9. Ap.
* Lord Falkland's ſpeech i. 698
* Mr. St. John's ſpeech at a conference i. 699
* Mr. Hide's ſpeech i. 709
* Articles of impeachment againſt juſtice Berkley i. 709
* Mr. Pierpoint's ſpeech i. 713
* Mr. Hollis's ſpeech for a reward to lord chief juſtice Crew i. 715
* The judgment cenſured by the houſe of lords i. 716
* Mr. Waller's ſpeech againſt juſtice Crawley i. 717
* Hampden's trial for a miſdemeanour, Feb. 6, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 824
* The indictment, for combining and confederating with others of the king's ſubjects to raiſe a rebellion iii. 824
* The having an employment under the king no cauſe of challenge iii. 825
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iii. 827
* The reaſon why the court waved proſecuting the priſoner for treaſon iii. 827
* The duke of Monmouth called for a witneſs; but did not appear iii. 828
* The lord Howard's evidence of my lord Shafteſbury's plot iii. 828
* His evidence concerning the Cabal, or council of ſix, of which the priſoner and himſelf were members iii. 830
* The Scotch invited into the conſpiracy iii. 830
* Aaron Smith ſent into Scotland iii. 831
* Sir Andrew Foſter depoſes, that the Scotch agents came to London; and, to diſguiſe their deſign, pretended to come about making a purchaſe in Carolina iii. 833
* My lord Ruſſel wrote the letter to invite them hither iii. 834
* The defence made by mr. Hampden's counſel iii. 834
* They endeavour chiefly to invalidate my lord Howard's teſtimony iii. 837
* And ſhew that mr. Hampden is not of a ſeditious, turbulent diſpoſition, as laid in the indictment iii. 841
* The bail cannot be witneſs for the defendant; but the king's counſel admitted it in this caſe iii. 842
* What the defendant has ſaid can be no evidence for him; but the court admitted ſuch evidence to be given iii. 843
* One who would have depoſed that my lord Howard, the king's witneſs, had been guilty of ſome atheiſtical expreſſions, not permitted to be examined iii. 845
* The counſel on both ſides leave it to the court to ſum up and make obſervations on the evidence iii. 845
* The defendant is convicted ii. 854
* Salvo contenemento in magna charta, ſaid to be meant only of amerciaments, and not of fines, for great offences iii. 854
* A fine of 40,000l. ſet upon the defendant iii. 855
The record vi. 45.
* Hampden's trial for high-treaſon, Dec. 30, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 207
* The indictment, for conſpiring the death of the late king Charles II. and conſulting and agreeing to raiſe an inſurrection in order thereto iv. 208
* The priſoner objects, he had been tried before, and fined for the ſame fact iv 208. See vi. 405, 406
* Pleads guilty, and throws himſelf on the king's mercy iv. 208
* Receives ſentence iv. 209
* He procured a pardon; but afterwards laid violent hands upon himſelf iv. 209
The record vi. 51. Ap.
His cloſe impriſonment, as it was againſt law, ſo it was without precedent iv. 166. See Id. 177, 205
An account of it, and of his ſufferings, related by himſelf viii. 480
His fine monſtrouſly extravagant Em. Pref. xii. See iii. 855

* HAND-WRITING.

* What is ſufficient proof of a man's writing, and what not, argued at large iv. 337
Similitude of hands not evidence of hand-writing in capital caſes iv. 447 v. 79. vi. 418, 419. See EVIDENCE. NOTE of HAND. PROMISSORY NOTE. WRITING.

HANGING in CHAINS.

Before ſtat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37, great difficulty in getting a priſoner convicted of petit treaſon to be ſo hung x. 39
Regency petitioned on the occaſion x. 39
Now ſettled how to be x. 39
A murderer hung in chains in purſuance of the above act, in Scotland x. 138

HANGMAN.

Not uſual in the reign of Charles I. to burn books in England by the hands of the common hangman i. 424
A criminal ſentenced to be whipped lies at the mercy of a vile executioner; and it is left in the power of a common hangman to make that whipping ſevere or favourable, as he pleaſes Em. Pref. xii.
The lords reſolve a libel to be burnt by the common hangman in 1702 viii. 80
Doctor Sacheverel's ſermon was ordered to be burnt by the hands of the common hangman v. 831. ix. 278
Hangman has not a diſcretionary power to execute a man according to his conſcience v. 133
Hangman of Calais being more expert at beheading than any in England, was brought over to cut off the head of Anna Boleyn, queen to Henry VIII. xi. 13

HANOVER.

" Reaſons for addreſſing his majeſty to invite the electreſs dowager and elector of Hanover," cenſured by the lords viii. 82

* HARBOURING TRAITORS. See TREASON.

* Two tried thereupon i. 139, 140. iv. 131, 132
* Whether the record of the conviction of the traitor harboured, be not neceſſary to be produced, to convict the perſon charged with harbouring of him? iv. 122, 135, 137
* The perſon harboured made an evidence againſt the perſon harbouring him iv. 137
* Ruled by the court, that a perſon harbouring a rebel may be convicted of treaſon, though the rebel himſelf be not convicted iv. 127
* In order to convict one of harbouring a traitor, evidence muſt be given that the party harbouring knew him to be ſuch iv. 127

HARCOURT, Sir SIMON, Solicitor-General,

Opens the evidence on the trial of Swenſden, indicted for forcibly marrying mrs. Rawlins v. 449
Opens the evidence on the trial of mrs. Baynton, for forcibly taking mrs. Rawlins away, and procuring her to be married to the ſaid Swenſden v. 465
His ſpeech on Lindſay's proſecution for treaſon v. 523
His ſpeech and argument on the firſt article, in defence of Henry Sacheverel, D. D. impeached by the commons, before the lords, for ſedition v. 710
His parliamentary ſpeech relative to Aſhby and White viii. 107

HARCOURT, Sir SIMON, Attorney-General,

His ſpeech on the trial of Daniel Dammaree, for treaſon viii. 221
His reply viii. 239, 240
His ſpeech on proſecution of Francis Willis, for treaſon viii. 251
His reply viii. 262
His ſpeech on the proſecution of George Purchaſe viii. 268

His reply viii. 281

* HARCOURT, WILLIAM ii. 829. See WHITE, alias WHITEBREAD, & al.

HARDING, FILIAR. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.

HARDING, ——,

Opens indictment againſt William Acton ix. 181

HARDWICKE, Lord, Chief Juſtice B. R.

Trial before him, on a mandamus for admiſſion to the freedom of the port of Haſtings x. 138. Ap.

Of opinion, if an original corporation book is produced, copy cannot be read x. 142. Ap.

Orders an ancient book to be read x. 142. Ap.

His notion reſpecting a fine certain, and a reaſonable fine x. 162. Ap.

Sums up the evidence, and ſtates the caſe to the jury x. 172. Ap.

Obſerved that reaſonableneſs of fine muſt be ſaved for opinion of court x. 175. Ap.

" Caſes in the time of lord Hardwicke," is a book of good authority, and the caſes well and correctly taken xi. 213

His proceſſion on the trials of earls Kilmarnock and Cromartie, and of lord Balmerino ix. 590*

His commiſſion of lord high ſteward on that occaſion ix. 590*

His lordſhip's addreſs to the noble priſoners, previous to their trial ix. 595*

His lordſhip's addreſs to the noble priſoners, previous to judgment ix. 613*

His lordſhip's proceſſion on the trial of lord Lovat ix. 621*

His lordſhip's commiſſion of lord high ſteward ix. 621*

His lordſhip's addreſs to the noble priſoner previous to his trial ix. 622*

His lordſhip's addreſs to the noble priſoner after trial, and before judgment ix. 750*

HARGRAVE, FRANCIS,

Gives us hopes that he will favour the public with the hiſtory of the long conteſt about taxes out of parliament, from the acceſſion of the Stuart family, till finally decided againſt the crown, in 1641 xi. 29

He corrects an hiſtorical miſtake of lord Herbert, mr. Hume, and the writers of the Parliamentary Hiſtory, reſpecting the attainders of Empſon and Dudley xi. 3

He corrects a miſtake in ſir William Dugdale's baronage, reſpecting the attainder of Edward duke of Buckingham xi. 6

Notices to thoſe who are allied to the noble families of Stafford and Stafford Howard, that the barony of Stafford is not extinct xi. 6, 7

Supplies omiſſion of two acts of parliament, relative to trials of crimes committed out of the realm xi. 17

His obſervation on biſhop Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation, reſpecting denying the ſupremacy xi. 23. n.

His argument on behalf of Somerſet, in the famous negro cauſe xi. 340. See NEGRO. SLAVERY. SOMERSET JAMES. VILLENAGE.

HARLEIAN MSS.

Extracts from this manuſcript xi. 10. See BOLEYN ANNA, Queen of England DACRES Lord WILLIAM, of the North. DUDLEY JOHN, Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND. HOWARD PHILIP, Earl of ARUNDEL.

HARLEY, Sir ROBERT, the Speaker,

His ſpeeches in the houſe of commons, in the caſe of the Ayleſbury men viii. 92, 113

This right honourable privy counſellor cleared by the traitor Gregg, in his dying ſpeech, of all ſuſpicion of privity to his correſpondence x. 83. Ap. See LEGISLATURE.

HARRIS, BENJAMIN*,

* His trial for a libel, 32 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1037. See iii. 219, 220. vii. 483

* The libel, entitled, " An appeal from the country to the city," &c. ii. 1037

* Evidence of the defendant's publiſhing it ii. 1038

* The pamphlet propoſes the ſetting up the duke of Monmouth for king, after the death of king Charles ii. 1039

* The chief juſtice's directions ii. 1039

* The jury not permitted to have the book out with them ii. 1039

* Harris is convicted ii. 1039

* And committed to the King's-Bench ii. 1039

* His ſentence ii. 1039

HARRIS, Doctor. See KINGSTON, Ducheſs Dowager of.

HARRIS, JOHN. See MORRIS.

HARRISON, HENRY*,

* His trial for the murder of Andrew Clenche, M. D. April 6, 1692, 4 W. & M. iv. 488

* The indictment iv. 488

* Mr. Darnell's ſpeech before evidence iv. 489

* Witneſſes for the king called, to prove that the priſoner bore malice againſt the deceaſed iv. 491

* Proof of the priſoner's often changing his lodgings, and pretending he came out of the country iv. 493

* The coachman's evidence of the murdering dr. Clenche in his coach iv. 494

* Aſhbolt's evidence, that ſhe ſaw Harriſon in the coach with dr. Clenche iv. 496

* The evidence before the coroner, of a boy who was withdrawn, read in court, to prove that the priſoner was in the coach iv. 496

* Harriſon's defence iv. 497

* The priſoner calls witneſſes, who depoſe he was at another place when the fact was committed iv. 497

* Other witneſſes examined for the king iv. 499

* The priſoner's witneſſes proved to be people of no credit iv. 500

* Lord chief juſtice Holt's charge to the jury iv. 502. See viii. 484

* The priſoner is convicted, and ſentence paſſed iv. 505

* His examination before the lord chief juſtice Holt iv. 505

His ſpeech at execution viii. 484

HARRISON, THOMAS*, Clerk,

* His trial at the King's-Bench, for a miſdemeanour, in ſpeaking reflecting words of mr. juſtice Hutton, of the Common Pleas, 14 Car. I. 1638 i. 720

* The indictment for ſaying, " I accuſe mr. juſtice Hutton of high-treaſon" i. 720

* Mr. ſerjeant Heath's ſpeech i. 721

* The defendant's examination read, wherein he owns and juſtifies the words i. 721

* Sir John Banks, attorney-general, his ſpeech i. 721

* The defendant convicted and cenſured i. 722

The record vi. 10. Ap. See DE BRUCE. WRAYNHAM.

* HARRISON, THOMAS ii. 314. See REGICIDES.

HARRISON, THOMAS,

Appears, who was ſuppoſed to be murdered, and for whoſe ſuppoſed murder no leſs than three innocent perſons were executed vi. 425. x. 29. Ap. n.

HARTINGTON, Marquis of,

His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 103

* HARTWELL, JOHN v. 469. See SWENSDEN.

* HARVY, EDMOND ii. 390. See REGICIDES.

HASTINGS. See MOORE HENRY.

HATHAWAY, RICHARD*,

* His trial, for being an impoſtor, pretending he was bewitched by Sarah Morduck, at Surry aſſizes, March 24, 1702, 2 Annæ v. 482

* The information v. 482

* Mr. Conyers's and mr. Broderick's ſpeech before evidence v. 483

* Mr. Phipps on the ſame ſide v. 485

* Where the actions of another may be given in evidence againſt the defendant v. 488

* He is detected as to his pretence of vomiting pins v. 489

* He is detected as to his pretence of faſting v. 491, 492

* Evidence admitted to be given of what was done after the information exhibited v. 492

* Mr. ſerjeant Jenner's ſpeech for the defendant v. 494

* Witneſſes examined to prove that he was really bewitched v. 495

* Sir Thomas Lane's evidence v. 500

* Whether the devil can enable a man to faſt beyond the time that nature allows? v. 501

* Lord chief juſtice Holt directs the jury v. 501

* He is convicted v. 503

The record vi. 59. Ap.

* HATHAWAY, WELLING, and WILLOUGHBY,

* Their trial for a riot, and aſſault upon Sarah Morduck, who, they pretended, had betwitched Hathaway, March 26, 1702, 2 Annæ v. 504

* All the defendants are convicted v. 505

The record vi. 59. Ap.

HATRED.

Hatred is a rancour ſettled in the mind of one towards another, which admits of ſeveral degrees; it may arrive to ſo high a degree, and may carry a man ſo far as to wiſh the hurt of him, tho' not to perpetrate it himſelf ix. 63

HATS.

Women not permitted to wear their hats, on trials i. 339

Priſoner fined for wearing his hat at his trial ii. 611

One colonel Martin, it is ſaid, at his trial, at Reading, after the jury was ſworn, cauſed them all, before the judges ſitting upon the bench, to put on their hats as their right, being they were then the chief judges in the court, and the others inferior to them ii. 69. n.

High ſheriff ſits covered on his being preſent in court, on executing writ of enquiry iii. 987

King Charles I. did not at all move his hat at his trial i. 985, 1017, 1038

A priſoner ſitting covered whilſt his impeachment was reading, the lord preſident commanded his hat to be taken off; which the priſoner obſerving, took it off himſelf ii. 281

HATSELL, Sir HENRY, Baron of the Exchequer,

Was of opinion, that the king's counſel, on challenging a juror, ought to ſhew cauſe v. 195

His charge to the jury on the proſecution of Spencer Cowper, a gentleman at the bar, for murder v. 231

HATTON, Sir CHRISTOPHER,

Sat as one of the commiſſioners on the trial of Babington and others, for treaſon i. 127, 134

And on the trial of Abington and others, for ſame offence i. 135

* HAVERSHAM, JOHN Lord v. 339. See PORTLAND Earl of.

HAWKINS, ROBERT*, Clerk,

* His trial for felony, at the aſſizes at Aileſbury, 20 Car. II. 1668 ii. 595

* The indictment ii. 595

* Larimore the proſecutor, one of his pariſhioners, depoſes he ſaw him rifle a box in his houſe, and ſteal his money, &c. ii. 596

* The proſecutor's endeavour to prove felonies not laid in the indictment ii. 601

* Mr. Hawkins's defence ii. 602

* The chief baron obſerves, that the warrant the proſecutor had procured to ſearch for his goods, was dated the day before he pretended the robbery was committed ii. 605

* Evidence of a conſpiracy by ſir John Croke the proſecutor, and others, to lay felony to the priſoner's charge, becauſe he ſued them for his tithes ii. 606

* The chief baron directs the jury ii. 608

* Mr. Hawkins is acquitted ii. 610

* The jury commended by the court for their verdict ii. 610

HAWLES*, Sir JOHN,

* His remarks on Fitz-harris's trial iv. 165

* On Colledge's trial iv. 173

* On the earl of Shafteſbury's grand jury iv. 183

* On mr. Wilmer's homine replegiando iv. 185

* On the lord Ruſſel's trial iv. 187
* On colonel Sidney's trial iv. 196
* On the award of execution againſt ſir Thomas Armſtrong iv. 198
* On the trial of count Coningſmark, and others iv. 199
* On mr. Corniſh's trial iv. 200
* On mr. Bateman's trial iv. 204
Had his education at one of the three great ſchools, and at the univerſity; reſided 25 years in an inn of court, and attended 20 years in Weſtminſter-hall iv. 206
The fulſome but injurious ſtuff vented for crown law, firſt put him on writing his remarks iv. 206
Wrote reply to Shower's "Magiſtracy of England vindicated" vii. 63, 227. See iii. 766, 783. v. 86, 97.
His reply on the trial of Charnock and others for treaſon iv. 589

HAWLES, Sir JOHN, Solicitor-general,
His reply on the proſecution of ſir John Friend, for treaſon iv. 620
His reply to the defence of ſir William Parkyns, for treaſon, in promoting the aſſaſſination plot iv. 652
His reply for the king againſt Peter Cooke for treaſon iv. 770
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of captain Vaughan, indicted before the Admiralty for aſſiſting the king's enemies and levying war v. 19
Was of opinion, on ſir John Fenwick's bill of attainder, that a conſpiracy to levy war was not an overt act of compaſſing the king's death v. 85
Sums up the evidence for the king upon the trial of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, before the houſe of peers for murder v. 176
He ſeems to have laboured under a diſorder of the lungs v. 175, 191. See vi. 76.
His obſervations on the evidence for the king, on the trial of Charles lord Mohun, for murder, before his peers v. 191
His argument in maintenance of the firſt article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons againſt doctor Henry Sacheverel, for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 676
His parliamentary ſpeech in juſtification of the lords, in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 100

HAY, Sir GEORGE, Judge of the Prerogative-court,
Encomium paſſed on him xi. 221, 229, 235

HAY, JOHN,
His depoſition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, huſband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 329
He is condemned viii. 332

* HAYES, JOSEPH,
* His trial for high-treaſon, at the King's-Bench bar, at Weſtminſter, 36 Car. II. 1684 iii. 1067
* His indictment for correſponding with ſir Thomas Armſtrong, an outlaw for high-treaſon iii. 1067. vi. 50. Ap.
* Evidence againſt him, that a bill drawn by him for 161l. 15s. was found about ſir Thomas Armſtrong iii. 1068
* His defence iii. 1070
* He is acquitted iii. 1071

HAYWARD, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech againſt Mary Blandy on her trial for parricide x. 7

HEARN, JOHN,
His argument in defence of William Prynn for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 423

HEARSAY. See EVIDENCE.

HEATH, MARY,
Her trial at the court of King's-Bench, in Ireland, for perjury, in the great cauſe in ejectment, between James Anneſley, eſq. and Richard earl of Angleſea, Feb. 8, 1744, 17 Geo. II. ix. 432
The ſeveral proceedings and affidavits previous to the trial ix. 432, &c.
Lord chief juſtice Marlay's opinion relating to the granting a habeas corpus ix. 440
Commits perſons for falſifying their affidavits ix. 440
Mr. juſtice Ward's opinion on the ſame caſe ix. 440
Motions for putting off mrs. Heath's trial ix. 441, &c.
Mr. juſtice Blennerhaſſet delivers his opinion upon them ix. 448
Mr. juſtice Ward delivers his ix. 449
Lord chief juſtice Marlay delivers his opinion ix. 450
The indictment againſt mrs. Mary Heath ix. 452
Officer of the court delivers to the jury the five aſſignments of perjury ix. 454
Mr. ſolicitor-general opens the evidence ix. 454
The evidence againſt her ix. 455, &c.
Court mentioned to jury to go out to take refreſhment, which they declined ix. 497
Mr. recorder opens the evidence for the defendant ix. 497
Witneſſes examined for the defendant ix. 498
Mr. juſtice Blennerhaſſet ſums up the evidence againſt her ix. 523
Lord chief juſtice Marlay does the ſame ix. 524
Jury acquit her ix. 524

HEATH, JOHN,
Opens the indictment againſt Fitz-harris for a treaſonable libel iii. 266

HEATH, RICHARD,
He was excepted by name out of the act of indemnity that paſſed in the year 1690, 1 W. and M. x. 41. Ap.

HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech on the trial of Thomas Harriſon for reflecting on ſir Richard Hutton, juſtice C. B. i. 721

HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-general,
Propoſed queſtions to the judges, relative to the trial of lord Audley i. 387
His charge againſt the noble priſoner i. 390, 393
His reply to the form of the return of hab. corp. by perſons committed for refuſing to lend upon commiſſions for loans vii. 128
His objections to the houſe of commons arguments on that occaſion, at a conference with the lords vii. 172
His argument for return of hab. corp. in caſe of William Stroud and others vii. 236
Like for the king againſt ſir John Elliot and others, in information for ſeditious ſpeeches in parliament vii. 246, 247
The houſe of commons reſolved, that ſir Robert Heath, in ſubſcribing his name to the information exhibited in the Star-chamber againſt mr. Hollis and the reſt, for matters done by him in parliament, being a member of parliament, and the ſame ſo appearing in the information, is guilty thereby of the breach of privilege of parliament vii. 250

HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.
His ſpeech for a mild ſentence on Henry Sherfield, eſq. convicted by information in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glaſs-window in a church i. 409

HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
His ſpeech to John Lilburne, on his being arraigned before him at Oxford for high-treaſon againſt king Charles the firſt ii. 20

HEIGHAM DE, one of the Barons of the Exchequer. See DE BRUCE.

HEIRESS.
Proſecution and conviction for forcibly marrying an heireſs v. 550

HENDLEY, WILLIAM, the Reverend,
His trial for preaching a charity ſermon at Chiſleburſt, in Kent; and of George Campman, Robert Hicks, Filiar Harding, and Walter Prat, the ſchoolmaſter, and truſtees for the charity children of St. Anne's, Alderſgate, London, for collecting the money at Rocheſter aſſizes, July 15, 1719, 5 Geo. I. x. 86. Ap.
The caſe x. 86. Ap.
Tenor of the indictment in Latin x. 87. Ap.
Purport of it in Engliſh x. 87. Ap.
Plead not guilty x. 88. Ap.
The names of the jury x. 88. Ap.
The counſel for the proſecution x. 88, 89. Ap.
The counſel for defendants x. 88, 89. Ap.
Mr. Marſh, of plaintiff's counſel, his argument x. 88. Ap.
The evidence for the proſecution x. 88, 89. Ap.
The argument of ſerjeant Darnell and mr. Baynes, plaintiff's other counſel x. 88, 89. Ap.
Sir Conſtantine Phipps, of counſel for defendants, his argument x. 88, 89. Ap.
Sir Littleton Powys, judge B. R. ſums up the evidence x. 88, 89. Ap.
Found guilty and fined x. 88, 91. Ap.
The judge's letter to lord chancellor Parker, giving an account of the above trial, and other matters on that circuit x. 89. Ap.

HENGHAM,
However he was a learned and famous judge in his age, yet he lived ſo long ſince, and the particulars of which he writes are ſo different from the practice and eſtabliſhed laws of the enſuing ages, that his authority is of ſlight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day; though it be very conſiderable in examination what the law was in his time, and that way it ſometimes is uſed as an ornament in argument only vii. 235
He died about 450 years paſt vii. 235

HENLEY, ROBERT,
Argues that attainted perſons are liable to civil ſuit ix. 586

HENLEY, ROBERT, Lord-keeper of the Great Seal,
His proceſſion, as lord high ſteward, on earl Ferrers's trial x. 478
His commiſſion of lord high ſteward x. *479
His addreſs to the noble priſoner previous to the evidence ix. 481*
His lordſhip's addreſs to the noble priſoner after trial and before judgment x. 516*. See NORTHINGTON Earl of.

HENRY the FIRST.
In the time of king Henry the firſt the pope uſurped the donation of biſhopricks xi. 71

HENRY the SECOND.
In the time of king Henry the ſecond, the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the ſecular power xi. 72

HENRY the SEVENTH.
This king ſet up the band of penſioners iii. 760

HENRY the EIGHTH.
His character obſerved upon xi. 25
The attainders in Henry the eighth's time were for acts in that reign, which were queſtionable whether or no within the ſtatute of Edw. III. and were for ſuch actions as perhaps were not for the honour of the prince, or good of the government to diſcloſe, by public trial v. 86, 125

HEPBURNE, JOHN,
His depoſition concerning the murder of the lord Darnley, Mary queen of Scots' huſband viii. 330
He is condemned viii. 332

HERBERT, Sir EDWARD.
He was impeached when attorney-general for exhibiting articles againſt the five members of parliament viii. 566

HERBERT, Sir EDWARD, Lord Chief-Juſtice B. R.
His ſpeech on giving his opinion for ſir Edward Hales at the ſuit of Godwin vii. 615
His vindication of himſelf, and juſtification of his opinion in the above cauſe for the king's diſpenſing power vii. 617. See ATKINS Sir ROBERT. ATWOOD WILLIAM.
He is excepted by name in the act of grace that paſſed at the Revolution in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.
The houſe of commons reſolved, that the judgment given againſt Samuel Johnſon in the King's-Bench, wherein ſir Edward then preſided, upon an information for a miſdemeanor, was cruel and illegal vii. 647

HERBERT, Lord.
This hiſtorian is miſtaken reſpecting the attainders of Empſon and Dudley xi. 3
Extracts from his hiſtory of Henry the eighth xi. 3, 4, 10, 18

HERBERT, Mr.
Proceedings againſt him for taking Giles's part iii. 79

"HEREDITARY RIGHT,"
A libel ſo called vi. 1. viii. 682. n. ix. 679. n.

* HERESY and HERETICKS.
* Hereſy antiently tried before the archbiſhop i. 16, 37
* Deemed hereſy antiently to hold that the ſacrament of the altar, after conſecration, was material bread i. 20
* Or that images ought not to be worſhipped i. 20
* Or that men ought not to go on pilgrimages i. 20
* Or to deny the neceſſity of penance and confeſſion i. 41
* Or to deny the authority of the church i. 41
* Or to read the Bible i. 49
* Hereticks anciently excluded the benefit of ſanctuary by act of parliament i. 49
Short account how the law formerly ſtood in relation to this crime vi. 1
Form of warrant for iſſuing writ de hæret. combur. vi. 2
The writ vi. 2, 3
An erroneous opinion may make an heretick, but not a traitor iv. 182
Sawtre executed in the year 1401, 2 Hen. IV. was the firſt burnt for hereſy vi. 1. n. Ap. See OLDCASTLE Sir JOHN. PORTAGE JOHN. THORPE WILLIAM.

HERON, Mr.
Spoke curſorily and elegantly on behalf of his grace James duke of Hamilton ii. 5

HERTFORD LETTER. See COWPER SPENCER.

HERTFORD, Marquis of,
His caſe on a bill in parliament to reſtore him to the title of duke of Somerſet vii. 19

HEVENINGHAM, Sir JOHN,
Impriſoned for not ſubſcribing to the loans, brings his hab. corp. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.

* HEVENINGHAM, WILLIAM ii. 302. See REGICIDES.

* HEWET, JOHN, D.D.
* His trial for high-treaſon, before the High Court of Juſtice, in Weſtminſter-hall, June 1, 1658, 10 Car. II. ii. 281
* Impeached of high-treaſon againſt the lord protector and the ſtate ii. 281
* The doctor ſits covered before the court ii. 281
* He ſays he is not to own every man for his judge who would aſſume that office; and demands of the court that he might hear their commiſſion read ii. 282
* The doctor queſtions if the commons had power to erect that court; eſpecially ſince 150 of their members were excluded ii. 285
* The doctor's refuſal to plead is recorded ii. 286
* The plea and demurrer drawn up by the doctor, with intention to preſent it to the court ii. 286
* His judgment of death ii. 299
* He is beheaded ii. 300
* His ſpeech and behaviour at execution ii. 300

* HICKFORD, ROBERT, Servant to the Duke of Norfolk,
* His arraignment and confeſſion the 9th of Feb. 1571 i. 117
* The chief juſtice's ſpeech before judgment i. 118

* HICKMAN, ROBERT v. 337. See KID & al.

HICKS, ROBERT. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.

HIDE, EDWARD,
His ſpeech at a conference i. 709. See HYDE.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.
The difference between this court and that of Oyer and Terminer ii. 87

HIGH STEWARDS.
Peers who have held this great office.

Arundel, Thomas earl of	i. 736	Hardwicke, Philip lord	ix. 590*
Bathurſt, Henry earl of	xi. 198		621*
Buckhurſt, Thomas lord	i. 197	Henley, Robert lord	x. 478
Carmarthen, Thomas marquis of		Jefferies, George lord	iv. 211
	iv. 510	Norfolk, Thomas duke of	xi. 5, 6,
Clarendon, Henry earl of	vii. 422		10, 26
Coventry, Thomas lord	i. 390	Northington, Robert earl of	x. 517*
Cowper, William lord	vi. 5, 18, 102	Nottingham, Heneage earl of	ii. 641,
Daventry, Heneage lord	iii. 101		725
Derby, Henry earl of	i. 164. xi. 27	Shrewſbury, George earl of	i. 82
Ellefmere, Thomas lord	i. 348, 351	Somers, John lord	v. 137

The commons denied the neceſſity of a lord high ſteward on a trial by impeachment ii. 740. See x. 209. Ap.
Addreſs to the king ordered by the houſe of peers for appointing a lord high ſteward to continue during the trial of a Scotch nobleman, upon an impeachment of treaſon by the commons ix. *618. See COURT OF THE HIGH STEWARD. * TRIAL.

HILL, GEORGE, Serjeant at Law,
His collection of parliamentary caſes is eſteemed a moſt valuable treaſure, being the moſt perfect of any exiſting xi. 137

HILLIARD, JOHN. See POLE Cardinal.

* HILL, LAWRENCE, ii. 700. See GREEN ROBERT, & al.
Account of paper found in his pocket at his execution viii. 441

* HIND, JAMES. See TONGE, & al.

HISTORY.
This collection of trials will illuſtrate many parts of hiſtory Em. Pref. i
Sir Edward Coke ſays, chronicle law is not much to be regarded i. 558
No hiſtorian that ſir Edward Littleton, ſolicitor-general to Charles I. ever knew, ever read the records, and therefore no true hiſtory; for the moſt part are taken up in Paul's, or in the ſtreet i. 558
Lord chancellor Elleſmere ſays, that ſome of the chroniclers talk idly, and underſtand little of Richard II.'s judges xi. 99, 101
All our kings have been libelled in hiſtory ix. 295
Inſtance from the Roman hiſtory, of a father being conſidered as acceſſary to murders committed by his ſon, without ever ſpeaking to or ſeeing him x. 435
Biſhop of Saliſbury's Hiſtory of the Reformation approved by the houſe of commons, and the author of it received the thanks of parliament v. 86
A printed hiſtory is no evidence in a court of law vii. 601

HISTRIOMASTIX.
Proceedings againſt William Prynne, in the Star-chamber, for writing and publiſhing a book, entitled "Hiſtriomaſtix; or, a Scourge for Stage Players," &c. againſt Michael Sparkes, for printing, and againſt William Buckner, for licenſing the ſaid book i. 418, 497

HOADLEY, BENJAMIN. See SACHEVEREL HENRY.

HOBART, Sir HENRY, Baronet, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.
His ſpeech on ſentencing Wraynham, for ſlandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 110. See WRAYNHAM.
Lord chief juſtice Vaughan obſerves, that his predeceſſor's, the lord chief juſtice Hobart's, judgment is always accurate for the reaſon of the law vii. 636. n.

HOBART, Sir MILES,
His caſe on Hab. Corp. See STROUD WILLIAM.

* HOE, JOHN iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

HOLBOURN, ROBERT,
His argument in defence of William Prynne, in Star-chamber, on his proſecution for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 422
His argument for John Hampden, eſq. at the ſuit of the king, in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 562, 568, 574, 580, 585

HOLDING up the HAND.
It is not neceſſary for priſoner to hold up his hand at the bar, on his arraignment ii. 28. iii. 212, 213. iv. 211, 512
The earls of Eſſex and Southampton were arraigned twice, and bid to hold up their hands at the bar twice, which they both accordingly did i. 197, 198
The earl of Somerſet was ordered to hold up his hand, both on arraignment and on receiving ſentence i. 351, 365
In France and other countries, the very holding up the hand is an oath xi. 126

HOLLAND, ———,
Opens indictment againſt Bambridge ix. 146, 235
His ſpeech on opening indictment againſt Huggins, for murder ix. 113

HOLLINGSHEAD,
Extracts from his Chronicle xi. 17

HOLLIS, DENZIL. See ELLIOT Sir JOHN.

* HOLLIS, Sir JOHN,
* Proceedings againſt him, ſir John Wentworth, and mr. Lumſden, in the Star-chamber, for traducing the public juſtice, 13 Jac. I. 1615 i. 333
* Sir Francis Bacon, attorney-general, his ſpeech i. 333
* An account of the converſation they had with Weſton at his execution i. 335
* Mr. Lumſden's defence i. 336
* Sir John Wentworth's defence i. 336
* Sir John Hollis's defence i. 337
* Sir Edward Coke's ſpeech before ſentence i. 337
* Their ſentence i. 338

* HOLLOWAY, JAMES,
* Proceedings on an outlawry againſt him for high-treaſon, 36 Car. II. 1684 iii. 943. See iv. 198. viii. 470, n.
* The court make the priſoner an offer of a trial, though he ſtood outlawed for high-treaſon iii. 943
* The priſoner replies, he has confeſſed the crime, and therefore to no purpoſe to offer a defence iii. 944
* His petition for a pardon iii. 944
* His behaviour at execution iii. 945
* His paper delivered to the ſheriffs iii. 947

HOLLOWAY, Sir RICHARD, Juſtice B. R.
Declares his opinion, that the petition of the ſeven biſhops is not a libel iv. 394, 395
He is excepted by name, in the act of grace and indemnity which paſſed at the Revolution, in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10 iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.
Was ordered to attend the parliament, to give an account of his proceeding as a judge againſt ſir Thomas Armſtrong; and a bill was brought in, but never paſſed, to ſubject his eſtate to reparation to ſir Thomas's family iii. 986, 987
The houſe of lords declared, that the court of King's-Bench, at which time ſir Richard was one of the juſtices thereof, over-ruling the earl of Devonſhire's plea of privilege, was a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136
The houſe of commons reſolved, that the judgment given againſt Samuel Johnſon, in the King's-Bench, in Trinity-Term, 1686, at which time the ſaid ſir Richard was one of the juſtices there, was cruel and illegal vii. 647

HOLT, JOHN, Juſtice C. B.
Was arreſted ſitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and ſent priſoner to the Tower i. 5 and n.
He was tried for treaſon i. 14
Confeſſes and begs mercy i. 14
Life ſaved, but tranſported to the village of Dromore, not to live as a juſtice, but as a baniſhed offender; nor to go out of town above the ſpace of two miles, upon the pain of death; but the king out of his bounty was pleaſed to give a yearly annuity of twenty marks, during his life i. 14. and n. See BRAMBRE.

HOLT, JOHN,
Refuſes to ſign William Prynne's plea, though he had his fee i. 482, 484
Cenſured by ſir John Finch, lord chief juſtice C. B. for ſigning Henry Burton's plea i. 482
Charged by William Prynne with breach of promiſe, in his profeſſion i. 496, 501
Of counſel for Henry Burton i. 503
Opens the indictment, as counſel for the king, againſt John Giles, for an aſſault iii. 65

His defence for John Lane, for a miſdemeanour ii. 990
His argument on behalf of William lord Ruſſel, indicted for compaſſing the king's death, on challenge of juryman for want of freehold iii. 709
Of counſel for crown, on proſecution of Francis Smith, and opens the information ii. 1039
Opened information againſt Jane Curtis ii. 1041
His defence for Lane, charged with endeavouring to defame king's witneſſes ii. 990
His argument in the caſe of monopolies vii. 493
Opens the evidence againſt Slingſby Bethel, eſquire iii. 413
Sums up the evidence for the king iii. 417
The unbiaſſed judgment of the recorder of London, ſir John Holt, ought to outweigh the whole bench vii. 640

HOLT, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
Sums up to the jury on John Aſhton's trial iv. 481
His charge to the jury, on the trial of Henry Harriſon, for murder iv. 502
His directions to the jury, on the trial of Hathaway, for a cheat v. 501
His directions to the jury, on the trial of ſir William Parkyns, for treaſon, in aſſaſſination plot iv. 655
His directions to the jury, on the trial of Richard viſcount Preſton (alias ſir Richard Grahme, baronet) indicted for high-treaſon, in compaſſing the death of their majeſties, and adhering to their enemies iv. 448
His argument in the bankers caſe xi. 143
Sums up the evidence on trial of Mary Butler v. 237
Sums up the evidence on the trial of Charnock, for treaſon iv. 591
Sums up the evidence on the trial of ſir John Friend, for treaſon iv. 623
His ſpeech before judgment on Alexander Knightly, for treaſon iv. 779
His directions to the jury, on the trial of captain Vaughan, indicted and tried before the Admiralty, for high-treaſon, in aſſiſting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 34
His charge to Peter Cook's jury iv. 772
Sums up the evidence on the trial of Charles Cranburne v. 716
On his charge to the jury, on the trial of Joſeph Dawſon, &c. obſerves to them, that all on board a pirate ſhip, are preſumed to concur unleſs the contrary appears v. 14
Commends the jury for their conviction of pirates v. 15
Inſtance of his lordſhip's remarkably ſtrict adherence to law iv. 630, 631
Sums up the evidence on the trial of the indictment againſt Ambroſe Rookwood, tried for high treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king iv. 694
Directs the jury on the trial of John Tutchin, informed againſt for a libel, in writing "The Obſervators," at Guildhall, London v. 541
Of opinion that the miſtake in the proceedings againſt John Tutchin could not be amended v. 569
Directs the jury on the trial of John Aſhton iv. 481
Of opinion againſt David Lindſay, arraigned for high-treaſon, in returning from France without licence v. 523
Shews the reaſonableneſs of the ſtatute on which the priſoner was indicted, and pronounces ſentence againſt him v. 527
His charge to the jury, on the trial of major Robert Lowick for high-treaſon, in being concerned in the aſſaſſination-plot iv. 734
Sums up the evidence on the trial of Haagen Swenſden, indicted for a forcible marriage v. 463, 477
His ſpeech at delivering his opinion that the Ayleſbury-men were bailable viii. 161
His ſpeech on ſumming up the evidence, in the cauſe of the duke of Norfolk againſt ſir John Germain viii. 35
Severely reprimands the jury viii. 36
His argument in the controverted point of peerage, in Charles Knowles earl Banbury's caſe vii. 62. viii. 58
Attends the houſe of lords, and is heard his reaſons for allowing Charles Knowles his plea of peerage, contrary to an order of that houſe adjudging him to have no title to the honour viii. 55
Holt chief juſtice ordered an appeal himſelf ix. 152
His popularity aroſe from his doing right upon all occaſions xi. 293

*HOMICIDE. See MURDER.
The old writers on homicide to be read with great caution x. 446, 447

HOMINE REPLEGIANDO.
Sir John Hawles's remarks on this writ iv. 186
Whether a peer can be committed on this writ iii. 544
Wilmer was illegally proſecuted for not giving a verdict againſt his conſcience, by an homine replegiando
Any perſon upon ſuggeſtion, backed by an affidavit, may have an homine replegiando granted iv. 185
Sheriff may return, that perſon ſuppoſed to be in cuſtody, being of full age, was by mutual agreement ſent beyond ſea, by the perſon in whoſe cuſtody, by the writ, he is ſuppoſed to be iv. 186. *See iii. 544. iv. 186

HONE, WILLIAM,*
* His trial, July 12, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 702
* Indicted for a deſign to aſſaſſinate the king, and preparing arms for that purpoſe iii. 702
* Confeſſes the conſpiracy; but denies the preparing arms iii. 703
* He is told he cannot plead guilty to part, and not guilty to the reſt iii. 703
* Evidence againſt him of another conſpiracy to kill the king with croſsbows iii. 705
* He is convicted iii. 706
* Receives ſentence with Walcot and Rouſe iii. 745
* His behaviour at execution iii. 745

HOOPER, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 122

HORN. See MIRROUR of JUSTICES.

HORNBY, JOSEPH. See BANKERS CASE.

HORNE, JOHN, Eſquire,
Proceedings againſt him, on information in B. R. for a libel, by attorney-general, 4 July, and 19 and 24 November, 1777 xi. 264
The ex officio information xi. 264
Names of the ſpecial jury xi. 266
Mr. Buller opens information xi. 266
Defendant objects to attorney-general's making reply, unleſs he examines witneſſes in his defence xi. 266
Mr. attorney-general in ſupport of the proſecution xi. 268
Evidence for the proſecution xi. 268
The defence xi. 270
Evidence on behalf of defendant xi. 283
Attorney-general's reply xi. 284
Lord Mansfield's charge to the jury xi. 287
Declares, that if any man dare give orders to murder a ſubject, or to execute thoſe orders; or to make any ſubject a ſlave, he is as high a criminal as can exiſt in this ſtate xi. 288
The jury find defendant guilty xi. 288
The defendant's ſpeech in arreſt of judgment xi. 289
Mr. attorney-general's anſwer xi. 289
The defendant's reply xi. 289
Lord Mansfield's ſpeech upon the occaſion xi. 290
The attorney-general's ſpeech on moving for judgment xi. 291
Cites lord chief juſtice Holt's authority, in ſupport that the pillory is a proper puniſhment for defendant's offence xi. 293
The defendant's further ſpeech xi. 293
Mr. juſtice Aſton's ſpeech to defendant on paſſing ſentence xi. 294
The ſentence xi. 294

*HOSTILITY. See ENEMIES.

* HOUGH, Doctor JOHN. See MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

HOUGHTON, JOHN, Prior,
Auguſtin Webſter, Prior; Robert Lawrence, Prior; and Richard Reynolds, monk; their trial by commiſſion of oyer and terminer, in Weſtminſter-hall, for treaſon, Eaſter term, 27 Henry VIII. xi. 23
Subſtance of indictment xi. 23
They plead not guilty xi. 23
Jury find them guilty xi. 23
Judgment xi. 23
Hanged xi. 23

HOUSE of COMMONS.
The reſolutions of the houſe of commons, in the report of their committee appointed to inquire into the ſtate of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel uſage of the priſoners ix. 107
A caſe on a falſe return of a parliamentary writ in the King's-Bench, was adjourned, propter difficultatem, by that court, into the houſe of commons viii. 98. See ASHBY and WHITE. CROSBY BRASS. PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE of LORDS,
Never proceed ex officio; the parties muſt petition to revive a cauſe ii. 748
"Reaſons for addreſſing his majeſty to invite the electreſs dowager and elector of Hanover; and reaſons for attainting and abjuring the pretended prince of Wales," cenſured by the lords viii. 82
Extract from the journals of the lords, concerning the privilege in the caſe of libel xi. 305. See ASHBY and WHITE. PARLIAMENT. PEERAGE.

HOWARD*, Lady FRANCES,
* Proceedings in the divorce between her and Robert earl of Eſſex, before the court of delegates, 11 Jac. I. 1613 i. 315
* The allegations of the lady Frances, in order to obtain a divorce i. 315
* The anſwer of the earl of Eſſex i. 315
* The archbiſhop's reaſons againſt the divorce i. 319. See ABBOT GEORGE, Archbiſhop of CANTERBURY.
* King James anſwers them i. 321
* Sentence given for the divorce i. 323
* Five of the delegates diſſent from the ſentence i. 324. See x. 3. Ap.

HOWARD, KATHARINE, Queen to Henry VIII.
Was beheaded, though ſentenced to be hanged iv. 129

HOWARD, PHILIP.* See ARUNDEL Earl of.

HOWARD, THOMAS. See NORFOLK Duke of.

HOWE, JAMES* v. 287. See KIDD, & al.

HOWELL, JOHN, Recorder of London,
In his directions to the jury, on the trial of Mary Moders, alias Stedman, alias the German Princeſs, for bigamy, obſerves to them, that a woman could not have the benefit of clergy ii. 502
Directs the jury in the abſence of the priſoners, on the trial of William Penn and William Mead, for a riot and conſpiracy, which the jury object to, as unlawful ii. 613

HOWES.
Extracts from his edition of John Stowe's chronicle xi. 5
Extracts from his edition of John Stowe's annals xi. 16

HUBERT, NICHOLAS, commonly called PARIS,
His examination and declaration, concerning the murder of Mary queen of Scots huſband viii. 332

HUDSON, WILLIAM, of Gray's-Inn,
Opens information againſt William Prynne, of Lincoln's-Inn, for writing and publiſhing Hiſtriomaſtix, 7 Feb. 1632-3, 9 Car. I. i. 417, 418
He was much practiſed and of great experience in the Star-chamber, and compiled a treatiſe concerning that court x. 329
The commons reſolve, that mr. Hudſon is guilty of a breach of privilege in parliament, in ſubſcribing his name to an information exhibited in the court of Star-chamber, againſt mr. Hollis and the reſt, for matters done by them in parliament, they being members of parliament; and the ſame ſo appearing in the information vii. 25[illegible]. See STAR-CHAMBER.

HUGGINS, JOHN, Eſquire, Warden of the Fleet,
The report of the committee of the houſe of commons, appointed to enquire into the ſtate of the gaols, againſt him ix. 107

Reſolutions of the houſe of commons in his caſe ix. 111
His trial for the murder of Edward Arne, at the Old Bailey, May 21, 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 112
Mr. Holland's ſpeech on opening the indictment ix. 113
Serjeant Cheſhire's ſpeech on the ſame ſide ix. 113
Attorney-general (ſir Philip Yorke) on the ſame ſide ix. 113
The evidence againſt him ix. 114, &c.
His defence, and evidence to his character ix. 127, &c.
Mr. juſtice Page refuſed to admit counſel replying ix. 132
Mr. juſtice Page ſummed up the evidence to the jury ix. 133, &c.
A ſpecial verdict in his caſe, and great debates about ſettling it ix. 139
Lord chief juſtice Raymond delivers the opinion of the judges upon it ix. 142, &c.

HUME, DAVID,
This hiſtorian, a prerogative writer xi. 20
He is miſtaken reſpecting the attainders of Empſon and Dudley xi. 3

HUNGERFORD, JOHN,
His ſpeech for Francia, on proſecution for treaſon vi. 89
His ſpeech for Chriſtopher Layer, eſquire, charged with treaſon vi. 295
Reprimanded vi. 329
His reply on the trial of Reaſon and Tranter, ſheriffs officers, for murder vi. 207
Of counſel for Arnold, on the black act viii. 313
His defence of Matthews, for treaſon ix. 696

HUNGERFORD, Lord,
Attainted and executed for treaſon xi. 25

* HURLY, PATRICK,
* His trial at the King's-Bench, in Ireland, for perjury, and for a conſpiracy to cheat the popiſh inhabitants of the county of Clare, &c. 31 May, 1701, 13 Will. III. v. 384
* His indictment, for ſwearing he was robbed to a conſiderable value; when in truth he was not v. 384
* The king's counſel open the evidence v. 384
* His affidavit read v. 385
* Evidence of his own ſervants of the whole contrivance v. 386
* Evidence that he was very neceſſitous at the time he pretended to be robbed to ſo great a value v. 392
* His own letters read to that purpoſe v. 393
* Proved that the guineas he pretended to be robbed of, were only counters v. 395
* The priſoner's defence by his counſel v. 400
* Some of his ſervants called to prove it a real robbery v. 402
* Endeavours to prove ſubornation in the proſecutors v. 405
* Which is denied upon oath v. 407
* And their teſtimony confirmed by the bench v. 408
* The defendant's witneſſes proved guilty of perjury v. 410
* Mr. juſtice Coote's charge to the jury v. 412
* The priſoner found guilty on both indictments v. 417
* His ſentence v. 418

HUSBAND and WIFE.
If a femme covert together with her huſband commits an act which in another would amount to felony, yet in her it ſhall not; but otherwiſe the law is in point of treaſon ii. 8
Wife brought a writ without naming her huſband, becauſe he was baniſhed vii. 229. xi. 101
Wife cannot be convicted as acceſſary to felony committed by her huſband ii. 524
Cannot be a witneſs for or againſt her huſband v. 62
Except in treaſon ix. 402. n.
When a man is taken in adultery with another man's wife, if the huſband ſtab the adulterer, or knock out his brains, it is bare manſlaughter ix. 66. See WIFE.

HUSSEY, Chief Juſtice,
Said, that ſir John Markham told king Edw. IV. he could not arreſt a man either for treaſon or felony, as a ſubject might, becauſe that if the king did wrong, the party could not have his action againſt him vii. 120, 146, 171. See ii. 208, 212. vii. 129, 130, 219, 221

HUSSIE, Lord,
Was tried by his peers for the Lincolnſhire rebellion, the marquis of Exeter ſitting ſteward xi. 24

HUTCHESON, ARCHIBALD, Eſq.
A declaration ſigned by him to clear himſelf from mr. Layer's hear-ſay evidence, that he was one of Burford's club viii. 571

* HUTCHINSON, CHARLES, Eſq. iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

HUTTON, Sir RICHARD, Juſtice C. B.
His argument, opinion, and reaſons for Hampden, in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 667
He ſubſcribed his opinion for conformity only i. 711. See BERKLEY Sir ROBERT.
Thomas Harriſon's trial for ſpeaking reflecting words on mr. juſtice Hutton i. 720

HYDE, EDWARD,
His ſpeech on the judges who gave their opinions for the king in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 709

HYDE, EDWARD, Earl of Clarendon,
Vindicates himſelf againſt parliamentary articles of treaſon viii. 387
Articles of impeachment viii. 388. See HIDE.

HYDE, Sir NICHOLAS,
Succeeded ſir Ranulph Crew in the preſidentſhip of the court of King's-Bench vii. 114. n.
Speech at delivering his opinion on the habeas corpus brought by ſir Thomas Darnell and others vii. 136
Sir Nicholas Hyde preſided at a very remarkable trial of murder on appeal x. 31. Ap.
This chief juſtice declared, that for ſeveral reaſons of ſtate, the king might act contrary to law ii. 202
His ſpeech when lord chief juſtice of the court of King's-Bench to the houſe of lords, for remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for refuſing to pay the loan to Charles I. vii. 186
The houſe of commons reſolved, that ſir Nicholas was guilty of a delay of juſtice towards mr. Hollis and the reſt that appeared upon the habeas corpus, in that they were not bailed, in E. and T. Term, 5 Car. I. vii. 250

HYDE, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
Directs the jury on the trial of colonel James Turner and others of his family, for burglary ii. 524. See ii. 504, 505
Directs the jury on the trial of Twyn for treaſon, for printing a ſeditious and treaſonable libel ii. 537
Directs the jury againſt Brewſter for a miſdemeanour in printing and publiſhing a libel ii. 541, 544
Directs the jury againſt Simon for a ſimilar offence ii. 547
The like on Brooks's trial ii. 549
Sentences Keach for writing a ſeditious libel ii. 533
Reſolved, that the aſſerting the people might reſiſt their prince, and take up arms againſt him, was direct treaſon ii. 544. See RESISTANCE.

HYDE, Sir ROBERT, Judge of Aſſize,
Ordered the execution of three perſons for the ſuppoſed murder of a man whoſe body was not found or heard of at time of trial, upon the confeſſion of a madman or enthuſiaſt iv. 204. vi. 425. x. 29. n. Ap.

HYTHE,
The mayor thereof, his caſe x. 131

I. J.

JACKSON, WILLIAM,
William Carter, Benjamin Tapner, John Cobby, John Hammond, Richard Mills, father and ſon, for the murder of William Gally and Daniel Chater, Jan. 1748-9, 21 Geo. II. ix. 715
Names of the commiſſioners ix. 715
Names of the grand jury ix. 715
Mr. juſtice Foſter's ſpeech to them ix. 716
Names of the petty jury ix. 720
The indictments ix. 718
The priſoners plead not guilty ix. 718
Mr. juſtice Foſter told the priſoners they might challenge twenty of the pannel without ſhewing cauſe; but if more, they muſt ſhew a reaſonable cauſe; but if they agreed to join in their challenges, they might be tried together; if not, they would be tried ſeparately ix. 720
Priſoners agreed to join, and are tried together ix. 720
Mr. Steele opened the indictment ix. 720
Mr. Bankes, king's counſel, his ſpeech ix. 720
The witneſſes for the crown ix. 725
The priſoners defence ix. 732
The judge's charge to the jury ix. 732
The priſoners are all found guilty ix. 734
Some of the priſoners were tried on another indictment, to which they pleaded not guilty ix. 732
Mr. juſtice Foſter repeated to the priſoners the charge, and aſked them what they had to ſay ix. 731
Their ſeveral anſwers ix. 732
Mr. Steele opened the indictment ix. 732
Mr. Bankes ſeconded him ix. 732
Mr. Smyth, king's counſel, his ſpeech ix. 732, 733, 734
Witneſſes for the crown ix. 733
Defence of the priſoners ix. 734
Found guilty ix. 734, 735
The judge's ſpeech to the priſoners previous to paſſing ſentence on them ix. 734, 735
This trial publiſhed by authority ix. 726. n.
Priſoners behaviour in gaol, and at their execution ix. 735, 736
Some account of them ix. 735
An extraordinary popiſh relic found in the pocket of Jackſon ix. 736
Inſcription on ſtone near the bodies of ſome of the priſoners ix. 736

JAMAICA. See KIRKBY RICHARD, & al.

JAMES the FIRST.
He promiſed chief juſtice Coke, that he would not pardon the murderers of ſir Thomas Overbury, and he did i. 367. n.
His majeſty broke his word with ſir Walter Raleigh i. 226
His letter to archbiſhop Abbot concerning the divorce between Robert earl of Eſſex and lady Frances Howard x. 29. Ap.

* JAMES, JOHN,
* His trial for high-treaſon at the King's-Bench bar November 19, 1662, 14 Car. II. ii. 470
* The indictment, for treaſonable words delivered in a ſermon at a meeting ii. 470
* The jury ſworn, and charged with the priſoner; the king's counſel open the indictment, and the evidence ii. 471

* The witneſſes called ii. 472
* The evidence for the priſoner ii. 473
* The priſoner's defence ii. 473
* Reply of the king's counſel ii. 474
* He is convicted ii. 475
* Application made for his life to the king ii. 475
* Judgment of high-treaſon paſſed upon him ii. 476
* His behaviour at the place of execution ii. 476

JAMES the SECOND

Promiſed the chief juſtice Jefferies, that he would not pardon lady Alice Liſle, illegally convicted, and he kept his word iv. 130. n.
The reign of James the ſecond was a time of great heat and violence, and few things then done ought to be drawn into example ix. 584
King James the ſecond being terrified at the news of the prince of Orange's invaſion, thought fit to reſtore the city of London their charter iii. 628
A great deal of blood was ſhed in many places of the kingdom, by judges governed by James the ſecond's evil counſellors, againſt all rules and forms of law, without ſo much as ſuffering the perſons accuſed to plead in their own defence v. 749
Juries were uſually packed in this reign iv. 177. See STUART FAMILY.

JANS, JOHN. See ANGLESEA, RICHARD Earl of.

JANSSEN, Sir STEPHEN THEODORE, Baronet,
His refuſal of the aſſiſtance of the military at the execution of criminals, commended xi. 282

JAY and TOPHAM,

Proceedings in parliament on that caſe viii. 1
Topham pleads the orders of the houſe of commons to the juriſdiction of the King's-Bench, but not allowed, and judgment againſt him viii. 1
That judgment voted illegal, and the judges ordered to attend viii. 1
Sir Francis Pemberton, chief juſtice, juſtifies himſelf, that it is a good plea in bar, but not to the juriſdiction viii. 3
Reſolved, that the orders of the houſe being pleaded to the juriſdiction of the King's-Bench, ought not to be over-ruled viii. 3
Sir Francis gives his reaſons for his judgment viii. 4
Cites ſir John Elliot's caſe viii. 4
If an officer abuſes the orders of the houſe, though they puniſh the officer, they never give damages viii. 5
Sir Thomas Jones gives his reaſons for his judgment viii. 5
Where the entire matter is tranſacted in the houſe, there a plea at the juriſdiction proper viii. 5
Both voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into cuſtody viii. 6

JEFFERYS, ELIZABETH,

Her caſe for the murder of her uncle, Joſeph Jefferys x. 36
Found guilty, confeſſed the fact, and was executed x. 36, 39
Two bills of indictment found at different aſſizes againſt Swan and Jefferys; debates on which indictment they ſhould be tried x. 37
Determined to be upon the laſt, and the former quaſhed x. 38

JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, Knight and Baronet,
Recorder of London.

His ſpeech on opening the information on the trial of Henry Carr for a libel iii. 58
His reply to defence made by defendant's counſel iii. 62
His obſervations on the evidence given in the trial of John Giles, for an aſſault, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 75
Pronounces judgment on Eliz. Collier, convicted for a libel iii. 101
When recorder of London, declared it to be the reſolution of all the judges of England, that no perſon whatſoever could publiſh any thing concerning public affairs without licence from the king or his authority xi. 322
The houſe of commons ordered an addreſs to the king to remove ſir George Jefferies, recorder of London, from all public offices, for traducing and obſtructing petitioning for the ſitting of the parliament of 1680 iii. 224

JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, King's Serjeant at Law, for the Crown,

On the argument of the plea of Edward Fitzharris iii. 259
His obſervations on the trial of E. F. for a treaſonable libel iii. 286
His obſervations on the evidence on the indictment of doctor Plunket, tried at the King's-Bench bar for treaſon, for conſpiring the death of the king, and ſubverſion of eſtabliſhed religion and government in Ireland iii. 310
His obſervations on the evidence for the king on Colledge's trial for treaſon iii. 403
He obſerves, that notwithſtanding the cry of Iriſh and Popiſh evidence againſt the priſoner, the king's witneſſes were all proteſtants, and but one of them an Iriſhman iii. 405
He was obliged to be the meſſenger to return the city their charter, the rape of which, among other his miſcarriages, was the cauſe of his preferments iii. 628
Gives a particular account of the manner of electing ſheriffs and other officers on Midſummer-Day, on the trial of Pilkington and Shute, ſheriffs, Corniſh alderman, Ford lord Grey, ſir Thomas Player, Bethel, Goodenough, and eight others, on information for a riot, in continuing poll for election of ſheriffs after Common-Hall was adjourned by the lord mayor, and for aſſaulting his lordſhip iii. 635
His ſpeech on the trial of ſir Patience Ward for perjury iii. 662
His reply iii. 680, 681
His ſpeech on the trial of captain ——— Walcot, indicted for high-treaſon, for conſpiring the death of the king, and to raiſe rebellion in Rye-Houſe plot iii. 686
His ſpeech before judgment on Ireland and others for treaſon ii. 723
His argument on challenge for want of freehold, on William lord Ruſſel's trial for treaſon, in conſpiring the king's death iii. 710, 711
His reply to lord Ruſſel's defence iii. 728
Opens the evidence on the indictment of John Rouſe for high-treaſon, tried for conſpiring the king's death iii. 732
On the firſt publication of "The Magiſtracy and Government of England "vindicated," it was doubted, whether ſir George Jefferies did not compoſe it iii. 788

JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, Chief Juſtice, B. R.

Lord chief juſtice Jefferies approves the verdict, and paſſes ſentence on Whitebread, convicted of treaſon in conſpiring the death of the king and ſubverſion of government and religion ii. 878
He ſums up the evidence on the trial of Sidney, indicted for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king iii. 816
His obſervations on the evidence on the trial of Braddon, for treaſon iii. 891
Commends the verdict of the jury againſt Langhorne ii. 910
Makes a ſpeech and pronounces ſentence on him and the five Jeſuits ii. 910, 911
Obſervations and charge on the evidence at the trial of ſir Samuel Barnardiſton iii. 940
Sums up the evidence to the jury, on the information againſt Sacheverel for a riot, in being unlawfully preſent at the election of mayor, where he had no concern iii. 976
Bill brought into parliament (but never paſſed), that the executors of the late lord Jefferies ſhould make reparation to ſir Thomas Armſtrong's family for the ſentence he gave againſt the ſaid ſir Thomas, on his outlawry for treaſon iii. 986
His obſervations on the evidence on the execution of the writ of enquiry between his royal highneſs James duke of York plaintiff, and Titus Oates defendant iii. 993
Uſes the witneſſes of Roſewell, indicted for ſpeaking treaſonable words, with great contempt iii. 918
His reaſon iii. 1023
His directions to the jury iii. 1039
Inſtances ſeveral hard caſes in the law iii. 1052
Inclines to allow exceptions in arreſt of judgment for treaſon iii. 1064, 1065
Reprimands gentlemen at the bar iii. 1078. x. 38. Ap.
His obſervations on the evidence in the cauſe of ſir Richard Pritchard and Papillon iii. 1088
Commends the verdict of 10,000l. damages iii. 1094
Titus Oates aſked lord chief juſtice Jefferies, who preſided at his trial for perjury, to be ſworn as a witneſs iv. 29
Lord chief juſtice Jefferies obſerved, that the worſt of murders were thoſe committed under the colour of the proceſs of law iv. 30
His directions to the jury on the trial of Titus Oates, for perjury iv. 58, 96
Directs the jury on the trial of lady Alice Liſle, widow, for high-treaſon in harbouring a traitor iv. 123
Tells the jury, the proof of the priſoner's guilt is plain iv. 127
His ſpeech before ſentence iv. 127
The legiſlature declared that the verdict againſt lady Alicia Liſle was injuriouſly extorted, and procured by the menaces, violences, and other illegal practices of George lord Jefferies, baron of Wem, then lord chief juſtice B. R. iv. 130
His cruelties acted in the Weſt, enraged above one third part of the nation iv. 172
Lord chief juſtice Jefferies ſigned colonel Sidney's trial for publication iv. 189
His ſumming up the evidence againſt colonel Sidney was barbarous, being invectives and no conſequences iv. 198
The reſolution of all the judges of England, reſpecting two witneſſes of an overt-act, quoted by him on Sidney's trial, not to be found or credited iv. 198
Eight or nine important points of law, which aroſe on the trial of colonel Algernon Sidney, were all over-ruled by the violence of the lord chief juſtice; and Sidney was frequently interrupted by him, whereby the whole method of his defence was broken, and he not ſuffered to ſay one tenth part of what he could have alledged in his own favour; ſo the jury were hurried by him into a verdict they did not underſtand viii. 470, 482
He committed colonel Sidney's ſolicitor, for ſaying the jury were a logger-headed jury, that they found a verdict contrary to evidence viii. 482
When the colonel's jury was withdrawn, the chief juſtice, under pretence of going to drink a glaſs of ſack, went to the jury when they were conſulting about their verdict viii. 482
His ſpeech on delivering his opinion in the cauſe of the Eaſt-India Company and Sandys vii. 555
Sums up the evidence on lady Ivy's trial vii. 604
Though Jefferies was really an intemperate judge, yet his opinion reſpecting the law of libels, in the caſe of ſir Samuel Barnardiſton, would not have diſcredited the beſt mouth that ever ſpoke in the court of King's Bench ix. 303
Jefferies ſaid to be one of the greateſt monſters that ever preſided in an Engliſh court of juſtice ix. 288
This chief juſtice, with all his faults, has been ever eſteemed a great lawyer x. 380
His conduct on the firſt trial of Titus Oates for perjury, in not permitting a perjured perſon to be examined againſt him, though he would have been glad to have hanged him, is no diſhonour to Jefferies's moral character x. 380, 390

JEFFERIES, GEORGE, Lord Chancellor,

His ſpeech as lord high ſteward to Henry lord Delamere, on his trial for treaſon iv. 211
Inſiſts that he is ſole judge of the court, and need not adviſe with the peers about a plea to the juriſdiction iv. 215
His charge to the peers previous to the examination of the evidence iv. 215
Puts queſtion to the judges, whether court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231

He refuſes to adjourn, and directs the priſoner to proceed in his defence iv. 233
His further charge to the peers iv. 246
The opinion of lord Jefferies as high ſteward on the trial of lord Delamere, was cited in the houſe of commons by a member, on ſir John Fenwick's bill of attainder v. 61
His cruel treatment of Baxter, for publiſhing a paraphraſe on the New Teſtament x. 38. Ap.

* JEKYLL iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

JEKYLL, Sir JOSEPH,

His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Francia, for treaſon vi. 61
His remarks upon the evidence vi. 86
His argument in maintenance of the firſt article in the impeachment of doctor Sacheverel, for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 666
His argument, by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the firſt article v. 791
His ſpeech on the trial of earl Wintoun, impeached before the peers, for treaſon, in being in rebellion againſt king George I. vi. 28
His parliamentary ſpeech relative to Aſhby and White viii. 110

JENKES, FRANCIS,

Proceedings againſt him, for a ſpeech made by him on the huſtings at Guildhall, 27 Car. II. vii. 468
His ſpeech concerning the decay of trade, and to deſire his majeſty timely to call a new parliament vii. 468
He is examined before the king and council vii. 470
He is committed to the Gatehouſe vii. 470
The warrant for his commitment vii. 471
Moves the lord chancellor for a habeas corpus, and the motion over-ruled vii. 471
Moves the quarter ſeſſions, as juſtices of the peace, to be bailed vii. 472
Four of mr. Jenkes's friends petition the lord chancellor for a writ of mainprize vii. 473
A precedent ſhewn to his lordſhip vii. 474
The writ refuſed vii. 474
His letter to the lord privy-ſeal, that he would be pleaſed to move his majeſty, for a writ of mainprize, or that bail might be taken vii. 475
He offers a habeas at the Old Bailey, to be ſigned, and is denied; but afterwards bailed vii. 476. See iii. 541, 630

JENKINS, ———, of Gray's-Inn,

Opens the anſwer of four defendants proſecuted in Star-chamber, for ſelling William Prynne's Hiſtriomaſtix

* JENKINS, WILLIAM v. 287. See KIDD, & al.

* JENKS, FRANCIS iii. 630. See JENKES. PILKINGTON, & al.

JENNER, Sir THOMAS, Recorder of London,

His ſpeech before evidence, on the information aginſt ſir Samuel Barnardiſton iii. 934
His ſpeech before evidence, on the information againſt William Sacheverel, eſquire, and others, for a riot, in being unlawfully preſent at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election, tried at the King's Bench bar iii. 950
His ſpeech before judgment of treaſon pronounced upon Ring, Fernley, and Corniſh iv. 160
His ſpeech before judgment of treaſon, on Elizabeth Gaunt iv. 160

JENNER, Sir THOMAS, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech for Richard Hathaway, a cheat v. 494
He was excepted by name, in the act of grace paſſed in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.

JEOFAILS.

No ſtatutes of jeofails extend to criminal caſes iii. 1067. viii. 58

JERMYN, PHILIP,

Judge Jermyn called the doctrine that the jury were judges of law as well as fact, a damnable doctrine ii. 26. n. 69

JESUITS.

Trial of the five jeſuits ii. 696, 829, 910, 911. iv. 29. * See PLOT POPISH.

JEW. See SIMONS HENRY.

*IMAGINATION. See TREASON.

*IMPEACHMENT.

* Impeachments preferred by the attorney-general, during the rebellion ii. 83, 183, 277, 281, 292
* The ſame certainty not requiſite in an impeachment, as is required in an indictment ii. 160. vi. 56
* A peer impeached of high treaſon generally ſhall not be committed ii. 567
* Whether a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment ii. 739
* Biſhops may vote in impeachments in capital caſes, in all matters previous to the trial ii. 742
* Impeachments remain in the ſame ſtate at the meeting of a new parliament they were in at the diſſolution of the old parliament ii. 747. iii. 204
* The king may impeach ii. 749
* Members of either houſe may be witneſſes on an impeachment iii. 183, 189
* One impeached for high-treaſon, indicted and tried in the King's Bench for the ſame fact iii. 261
* An impeachment properly the king's ſuit, and not the commons iii. 253
* A peer, impeached of high crimes, ſhall not ſtand without the bar at his trial v. 364. viii. 528
* The ſame evidence required on impeachments as in other trials v. 118, 127
* The commons inſiſt, that where ſeveral are impeached, they may proceed to the trial of which they pleaſe firſt v. 357. viii. 526, 527
* The lords inſiſt on their right of appointing the day of trial, without any previous intimation from the commons of their being ready v. 361. viii. 526, 527
* The proclamation made in the king's name on a trial by impeachment v. 376
* A lord impeached for high crimes cannot be precluded from voting in the trial of another v. 364. viii. 528
The articles of impeachment againſt Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, and chancellor of England i. 1
The articles of impeachment againſt Thomas earl of Strafford, lord lieutenant of Ireland, for high-treaſon i. 723
Articles of impeachment againſt colonel Nathaniel Fiennes, late governor of the city and caſtle of Briſtol, touching his diſhonourable ſurrender thereof i. 768
Articles of impeachment againſt William Laud, archbiſhop of Canterbury, for high-treaſon i. 828
Articles of high-treaſon, &c. againſt Edward earl of Clarendon, lord chancellor of England ii. 554. viii. 388
Articles of impeachment againſt Thomas earl of Danby, lord high treaſurer of England ii. 731
Articles of impeachment againſt the five popiſh lords iii. 101
Articles of impeachment againſt lord Somers v. 345
Articles of impeachment againſt doctor Sacheverel v. 641
Articles of impeachment againſt the earl of Derwentwater, and others vi. 6
Articles of impeachment againſt Robert earl of Oxford, &c. v. 303, 111, 112
Articles of impeachment againſt lord chancellor Macclesfield vi. 477
Articles of impeachment againſt ſir Thomas Seymour, lord Sudley vii. 2
Articles of impeachment againſt lord keeper Finch vii. 313
Articles of impeachment againſt the lord chief juſtice Scroggs vii. 476, 477, 486
Articles of impeachment againſt lord Lovat ix. 623*
Articles of impeachment againſt earl Portland, Orford, and others v. 339; viii. 512
Reſolved by the lords, that by the law and uſage of parliament, in proſecutions by impeachment for high crimes and miſdemeanours, by writing or ſpeaking, the particular words ſuppoſed to be criminal are not neceſſary to be expreſsly ſpecified in impeachment vi. 829. viii. 565. See vi. 75, 330, 331
No axe to be carried before a priſoner impeached i. 736
Acquittal pleadable to impeachment iv. 166
No pardon under the great ſeal can diſcharge a judgment obtained upon the impeachment of the commons vi. 4
The commons inſiſt upon it as their right to exhibit articles when they ſee fit v. 357
Whether commoner may be impeached for treaſon, or whether impeachment ſtays proceedings of inferior court iii. 260
Commons deny high ſteward neceſſary at trial on impeachment ii. 740
The power of impeachment the moſt valuable and uſeful privilege belonging to the commons vi. 4
Impeachment differs from an indictment, but reſembles an appeal iv. 167
Extracts from journals of the houſe of lords concerning impeachments vii. 357. viii. 565

Peers who have been impeached.

Arundel of Wardour, Henry lord iii. 101
Bellaſis, John lord iii. 101
Carnwarth, Robert earl of vi. 5
Clarendon, Edward earl of, lord chancellor ii. 558
Danby, Thomas earl of ii. 731
Derwentwater, James earl of vi. 5
Fordwich, John baron, lord-keeper vii. 309
Halifax, Charles lord v. 339. viii. 512
Kenmure, William viſcount vi. 5
Lovat, Simon lord ix. 621*
Macclesfield, Thomas earl of, lord chancellor vi. 477
Nairn, William lord vi. 5
Nithiſdale, William earl of vi. 5
Orford, Edward earl of v. 339. viii. 512
Oxford, Robert earl of vi. 102
Petre, William lord iii. 101
Portland, William earl of v. 339. viii. 512
Powis, William earl of iii. 101
Somers, John lord chancellor v. 339. viii. 512
Stafford, William viſcount iii. 101
Strafford, Thomas earl of i. 736
Sudley, Thomas lord vii. 2
Suffolk, Michael earl of, lord chancellor i. 1
Widdrington, William lord vi. 5
Wintoun, George earl of vi. 18

Trials in the houſe of peers, upon impeachments from the commons, are not opened by king's counſel, as appears from the following inſtances:
Mr. Pym opens the charge againſt the earl of Strafford i. 736
Mr. Hampden opens the charge againſt the earl of Wintoun i. 25
Sir William Young opens the charge againſt lord Lovat ix. 625*

* IMPLICATION. See TREASON.

IMPOSITIONS.

Lord Bacon exerciſed his eloquence to reconcile parliaments to impoſitions by prerogative xi. 29
His argument for them xi. 33. See BATES JOHN.

* IMPOSTOR v. 441, 482, 504. See FULLER WILLIAM. HATHAWAY RICHARD.

IMPRISONMENT.

Obſervations on that puniſhment Em. Pref. xi.
Record of cauſe in an action of falſe impriſonment vi. 50. Ap.
The cloſe impriſonment of mr. Hampden, [See iv. 177.] ſir Samuel Barnardiſton, and of ſeveral other perſons, as they were againſt law, ſo they were without precedent iv. 165
Impriſonment by command of the king, where utterly unlawful, and where, though lawful, yet continuance without bail unlawful vii. 123. See Em. Pref. iv, v.
A Scotch peer perpetually impriſoned for leaſing-making and calumnies vii. 308
Perpetual impriſonment allowed by the laws of Scotland vii. 286, 308
Judgment of impriſonment to commence from and after determination of an impriſonment, to which defendant was before ſentenced for another offence, is good in law xi. 334

So reſolved by the judges, and upon error in the lords xi. 334

Rule of court to prevent defendant lying in priſon beyond his term, his impriſonment happening to expire in vacation xi. 334. * See PRISONERS.

* INCAPACITY. See WITNESS.

INCEST. See GREY, FORD Lord. NAIRNE CATHERINE. OGILVIE PATRICK.

INDEMNITY.

Miniſters of ſtate indemnified by a ſpecial act of parliament, for ſaving the lives of the ſubject contrary to law xi. 282, 283

INDIA-COMPANY. See MONOPOLIES. PIRACY.

* INDICTMENT.

* If any one overt-act laid in the indictment be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314. iv. 722

* One cannot be convicted of treaſon where the treaſon is not formally laid in the indictment, though the crimes therein ſpecified amount to treaſon ii. 808

* Overt-acts committed in other counties than that where the indictment is found, may be given in evidence ii. 873

* Indictment for a miſdemeanour in defaming the king's witneſſes; held, if any one of the facts laid in the indictment was proved, the defendants might be found guilty generally ii. 991

* One impeached for high-treaſon indicted for the ſame fact iii. 263

* An indictment for treaſon or felony generally, without ſpecifying the overt-acts, is not good iii. 234. v. 21

* If one be acquitted on a faulty indictment, he may be indicted and tried again for the ſame fact iii. 255

* Auter Foitz arraigned, no bar to an indictment for the ſame fact iii. 252, 289

* One may be indicted and tried here for treaſon committed in Ireland iii. 293

* Facts may be proved to be done either before or after the time laid in the indictment iii. 394

* The indictment interpreted to alien priſoners in their own language iii. 467

* Where the priſoner apprehends the indictment to be vicious, he muſt either plead ſpecially, or demur to it before he pleads the general iſſue iii. 795, 796

* Words permitted to be proved that were not laid in the indictment iii. 1010

* If a man commit treaſon in ſeveral counties, he may be indicted in any of them; and the facts committed in every county may be given in evidence iv. 640

* The grand jury need not find according to the bill preſented them; but may preſent the bare matter of fact to the court, who will put it into form: and there needs no billa vera to be indorſed; for that ſignifies no more than owning what the court has drawn up iv. 670

* If one pleads to an indictment, whereof he has a copy given him, according to 7 W. III. chap. 3, he admits it to be a true copy iv. 668

* No exceptions can be taken to an indictment after a jury ſworn, by virtue of 7 W. III. chap. 3. iv. 677

* The omiſſion of the words, contra ſupremum naturalem ligeum dominum ſuum, in an indictment againſt a native, adjudged not ſufficient to vitiate the indictment iv. 700

* An alien and a native to be indicted in a different form v. 527

* Exceptions muſt be taken to the indictment before plea pleaded v. 18

* The particular words on which a criminal is proſecuted, muſt be laid in the indictment; not ſo in an impeachment v. 828

* Though the priſoner by the act to regulate trials for high-treaſon, has a right to a copy of his indictment, he cannot demand to inſpect the reſt of the record, or to have it read to him vi. 324

Indictment, by law of Scotland, may contain crimes of different natures iv. 283

As treaſon and perjury iii. 443

Indictment ſetting forth that defendant murdered, or cauſed to be murdered, is not good by the law of England x. 518. n.

Indictment by law of Scotland, that the parties are guilty of both or one or other of the crimes of inceſt and murder, ſeems good x. 518. n.

Great difference between amending indictments and informations xi. 333

In indictments for levying war, the day is not neceſſary to be laid with preciſion ix. 550, 551. n.

Another indictment depending, not pleadable to a ſecond x. 37

But the former may be quaſhed x. 38

Judge Foſter's obſervations on indictments for murder and petit treaſon x. 38, 39

Indictment againſt Thomas Walcot for treaſon iii. 684

Indictment againſt William Hone for ſimilar offence iii. 702, 703

Indictment againſt lord Ruſſel for ſimilar offence iii. 705

Indictment againſt Algernon Sidney for treaſon iii. 793

Indictment of William Ring for treaſon iv. 131

Indictment againſt John Hampden for treaſon iv. 208

Indictment againſt Robert Lowick for treaſon iv. 721

Indictment againſt Tasborough and Price for ſubornation of perjury ii. 1017. vi. 12. Ap.

Indictment againſt Cellier for a libel iii. 89. vi. 14. Ap.

Indictment againſt Hampden for a miſdemeanour iii. 823

Indictment againſt Roſewell for treaſon iii. 997

Indictment againſt Hampden for treaſon iv. 208

Indictment againſt Vaughan for treaſon v. 17

Indictment againſt Boucher for treaſon v. 506

The like aginſt Lindſay v. 508

The like againſt Woodburne and Coke on Coventry act, for maiming vi. 212. vi. 60. Ap.

Indictment againſt lord Mohun for the murder of Richard Coote, in Engliſh v. 181

Indictment againſt Spencer Cowper for murder v. 194

Indictment againſt Kidd and others for murder v. 289

The like againſt the ſame for piracy v. 297

Indictment againſt Swenſden and others for forcibly marrying an heireſs v. 450

Indictment againſt Fielding for bigamy v. 610, 611

Indictment againſt Francia for treaſon vi. 60

Indictment againſt Reaſon and another for murder vi. 195

Indictment againſt Layer for treaſon vi. 229

Indictment againſt Edward duke of Somerſet, for treaſon and felony vii. 16, 17

Indictment againſt lord Sanquhar for murder vii. 86

Indictment againſt Faulconer in time of the uſurpation for perjury vii. 343

Indictment for an aſſault and conſpiracy, with intent to wound and beat viii. 178

Indictment againſt Arnold for ſhooting at lord Onſlow viii. 290

Indictment againſt Thomas duke of Norfolk for treaſon viii. 336. See i. 82.

Indictment againſt Matthews for a treaſonable libel, in Latin ix. 679

Indictment againſt Mary Blandy for parricide, by poiſon x. 1

Indictment againſt Elizabeth Canning for perjury x. 205

Indictment for collecting charity money x. 87. Ap.

Indictment for forging a promiſſory note x. 95. Ap.

Indictment for libellous words x. 32. Ap.

Indictment for a rape vi. 4. Ap.

Indictment for ſodomy vi. 5. Ap.

Indictment for not taking the oaths vi. 11. Ap.

Indictments againſt peers for murder ii. 642. iv. 513. v. 137. x. 480*, *519

Indictments for murder vi. 12. Ap.

Indictment for an aſſault, and attempt to murder iii. 65

Indictments for libels vi. 13, 14. Ap. x. 37. Ap.

Indictments for treaſon iii. 422. iv. 565. vi. 31, 56, 57, 60. Ap.

Not material whether libel true or falſe, if proſecuted by indictment or information ix. 269

Of the form of indictments Em. Pref. vii.

Indictment containing treaſon and miſdemeanour may be quaſhed iv. 176

Indictment againſt many is both joint and ſeveral iv. 199

Of captious exceptions to them Em. Pref. viii, ix.

If the word traitorouſly in an indictment for treaſon, burglariouſly in an indictment for burglary, or feloniouſly in an indictment for felony, be omitted, the indictment will be naught Em. Pref. viii.

In an indictment for a blaſphemous libel, the words falſely and maliciouſly wrote, are the very giſt of the indictment Em. Pref. viii.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for ſecond offence, indictment muſt recite record of firſt conviction, which muſt be proved; but matter of it is never to be re-examined x. 433

Indictments for high-treaſon ought to be drawn with great nicety vi. 233

Peers who have been indicted.

Balmerino, Arthur lord	ix. 596*	Mohun, Charles lord	iv. 512. v. 137
Byron, William lord	x. 517*
Ferrers, Lawrence earl of	x. 478	Morley, Thomas lord	vii. 222
Kingſton, Elizabeth ducheſs dowager of	xi. 198	Pembroke, Philip earl of	ii. 641
		Warwick, Edward earl of	v. 137

All peers tried in the court of the lord high ſteward of England were indicted. See COURT OF THE HIGH STEWARD.

Exceptions to indictments for treaſon muſt be taken before plea, notwithſtanding 7 Will. III. c. 3, ſays before jury ſworn v. 18. See TALES. VENIRE.

INFANT.

Infant cannot commit felony, becauſe he cannot have any intent or deſign in his actions vi. 222

Infants admitted to declare what they know before a jury in Scotland without oath iv. 300

Infant permitted by the court to be nonſuited in a writ of appeal, without and againſt the conſent of his guardian aſſigned to proſecute the ſame viii. 487

Petition of an infant convicted of murder, to the lords juſtices in abſence of king, for a pardon ix. 539

INFORMATIONS.

The mode of proſecution by information is agreeable to law and conſtant uſage, and has the approbation of the judges and lawyers of all ages, and in all reigns ix. 312, 313

Sir Bartholomew Shower was an eminent practiſer, and had ſtudied the ſubject of informations well, and taken more than uſual pains therein ix. 313

Informations began to be frequent about 42 and 43 Eliz. when ſir Edward Coke was attorney-general ix. 313

Information for writing, printing, and publiſhing "The Loyal Proteſtant Intelligence" iii. 505

Ex officio information againſt a peer for debauching a young lady of quality iii. 519. vi. 16. Ap.

Ex officio information againſt Pilkington and others for a riot, aſſault, and battery iii. 629

Ex officio information againſt Sacheverel and others for a riot iii. 949

Ex officio information againſt Braddon and Speke for a miſdemeanour iii. 855

Information againſt Fuller for a cheat v. 441

Ex officio information againſt Hathaway for a cheat v. 482, 483

Information againſt Tutchin for a libel v. 328

Information againſt Francklin for a libel ix. 255

Information ex officio againſt Owen for a libel x. 197. Ap.

Information againſt lady Ivy for forging deeds vii. 610

Ex officio information againſt John Horne for a libel xi. 264

Information in nature of a quo warranto againſt the city of London vi. 16. Ap.

Record of information amended xi. 332

"Diviſion" ſtruck out, and "pariſh" inſerted in an information xi. 332

Great difference between amending informations and indictments xi. 333

Order to amend information, miſcalled an alteration of the record xi. 333

Information amendable by judge at chambers xi. 333

Information filed by ſolicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, is good in law. So reſolved by the judges xi. 334. * See INDICTMENT.

INNOCENCE.

The abuſe of it in the proſecution for the popiſh plot in Charles the ſecond's reign iv. 177, 181

It is better that twenty nocents eſcape, than one innocent ſuffer iii. 205. iv. 202

A voluntary ſurrender to juſtice is a preſumption of innocence x. 406. n.

INNUENDOS.

* The doctrine of innuendos learnedly debated, and at large iii. 1053, &c.

Innuendos inſufficient without poſitive averments iii. 1055

They cannot give certainty where none before iii. 1055

Innuendo without preceding colloquium or averment, cannot maintain action or indictment iii. 1059

The law guards againſt all innuendos and forced conſtructions Em. Pref. iv. vi. 405, 415. See iv. 197. v. 53. ix. 295

INQUIRY, WRIT of.

High ſheriff ſits covered on his being preſent in court at execution of writ of inquiry iii. 987

INQUISITION.

The manner of uſage of ſtate priſoners for treaſon concerning the popiſh plot, temp. Car. II. was rather worſe than the practice of the inquiſition iv. 177

INQUISITION in the EXCHEQUER. See BATHURST CHARLES.

INSANITY.

Mr. ſolicitor-general Yorke obſerved on earl Ferrers's trial, that in ſome ſenſe every crime proceeds from inſanity; all cruelty, all brutality, all revenge, all injuſtice, is inſanity; that there were philoſophers in ancient times who held this opinion as a ſtrict maxim of their ſect, which opinion is right in philoſophy, but dangerous in judicature; it may have an uſeful and noble influence to regulate the conduct of men, to controul their impotent paſſions, to teach them that virtue is the perfection of reaſon, as reaſon itſelf is the perfection of human nature; but not to extenuate crimes, nor to excuſe thoſe puniſhments which the law adjudges to be their due x. *513. See ARNOLD EDWARD. BATEMAN CHARLES. BRADSHAW JAMES. FERRERS Earl of. LUNATIC. MADMAN. NON COMPOS MENTIS.

* INSURRECTION. See TREASON.

* INTENDMENTS. See TREASON.

INTENT and INTENTION.

Quo animo a thing is done in all overt-acts of a deſign, is one of the main queſtions iv. 171. vi. 222. Em. Pref. viii. ix. 558

Intent ſhall be proved by an overt-act, and that proved by two witneſſes iv. 181. Em. Pref. iii.

Intention of every man who acts with an aſſembly of people, ſhall be judged to be ſame as deſign of that meeting viii. 241

When intention is general, it is not to be conſidered or conſtrued a riot, but levying war viii. 247

The law reſpects the intention x. 435

A counſellor at law's defence was, that he intended to murder, and not to maim vi. 219

Act done in the proſecution of an unlawful or felonious intent, is felony vi. 222, 497

Accidental killing of a man in ſhooting at tame fowl, wherein another hath property, with intention to ſteal, is murder vi. 222

Homicide in ſhooting at ſuch tame fowl, without intention to ſteal, is manſlaughter vi. 222

The intent of the party makes the crime vi. 222

Intent to be tried by the jury vi. 222

Breaking open an houſe in the night-time, though no felony be committed, yet if ſuch was the intent, it is burglary vi. 222

Larceny or theft is taking away another man's goods with intent to ſteal them; without ſuch intent, only treſpaſs vi. 222

Intent is ſo neceſſary in all felonies, that perſon who hath no intent or deſign cannot commit felony, as madman, lunatic, infant, &c. vi. 222

If a man of malice intends to burn one houſe, and in execution of his deſigns happens to burn another, this is a malicious and felonious burning vi. 222

Acts done in proſecution of felonious intents, participate of the nature of their original vi. 222. ix. 51. n.

The law judgeth not of the fact by the intent, but of the intent by the fact vii. 48. n.

Intent is treaſon i. 190, 198. v. 634. vii. 59. See i. 447. viii. 274. ix. 385, 386, 424. DENEW NATHANIEL.

INTERDICTION. See JOHN King of ENGLAND.

INTERPRETATION of LAW.

If a matter be capable of two interpretations, the law ſays it ſhall be taken in mitiori ſenſu, in favour of life iv. 194, 198, 199

INTERPRETER.

He is ſworn to interpret evidence to the jury iii. 472. See FOREIGNERS. * TRIAL.

JODRELL, Mr.

Argues the inſanity of Bradſhaw ix. 577

Argues in behalf of the Kinlochs for treaſon ix. 570

JOHN King of ENGLAND.

Four points of juriſdiction uſurped upon the crown of England by the pope before the reign of king John xi. 72

The cauſe of the quarrel between king John and the pope xi. 72

King John's round and kingly letter to the pope xi. 73

The pope curſeth the king and interdicteth the realm xi. 73

* JOHNSON, alias KELLY, GEORGE vi. 335. See ATTERBURY Biſhop.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL,

His trial for publiſhing two ſeditious libels againſt the government, 2 Jac. II. vii. 645

The humble and hearty addreſs to all the Engliſh proteſtants in his majeſty's army vii. 645

Evidence againſt him vii. 646

His ſentence, to ſtand in the pillory, and be whipped vii. 646

Is degraded vii. 647

The parliament reverſe the judgment, 1689 vii. 647

Is allowed three hundred pounds a-year out of the Poſt-Office vii. 648

His puniſhment, as it was againſt law, ſo it was without precedent iv. 166, 205. See viii. 466, 467

His repeated pilloryings and barbarous whippings were puniſhments monſtrouſly cruel Em. Pref. xii.

JONES, Mr.

His ſpeech before evidence on the information againſt Sacheverel and others for a riot, in being unlawfully preſent at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election iii. 952

Opens the evidence againſt counſellor Cowper, for murder v. 196

* JONES, DAVID iii. 52. See GREYFORD Lord, & al.

* JONES, EDWARD i. 116. See ABINGTON & al.

* JONES, FRANCIS iii. 52.

* JONES, JOHN ii. 339. See REGICIDES.

* JONES, REBECCA iii. 52.

JONES, Sir THOMAS, Judge B. R.

Was of opinion, on the earl of Shafteſbury's motion to be bailed upon a commitment by the lords for a contempt, that though the commitment was ill, it could not be examined in B. R. and that the noble priſoner could neither be bailed or diſcharged by that court; but did not declare how his opinion would be, in caſe there had been a prorogation ii. 622

Declines to deliver his opinion in earl Danby's caſe ii. 753

Refuſed to bail his lordſhip on motion on commitment by the lords ii. 760

His charge to the jury on the trial of Taſborough and Price, for ſubornation of perjury ii. 1035

In his directions to the jury on the trial of ſir Thomas Gaſcoigne, for treaſon, tells them, that improbability is not of weight againſt poſitive evidence iii. 28

Of opinion, that Fitzharris's plea to the juriſdiction of the court was inſufficient iii. 261

His declaration on the bench reſpecting the many libellous pamphlets publiſhed at that time viii. 457

Gives his reaſons at the bar of the houſe of commons, for his judgment in Jay and Topham viii. 5

Voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into cuſtody viii. 6

The commons reſolved to impeach him for his conduct on the trial of Dare iii. 222, 224. vii. 485, 486

He diſcharged the grand jury illegally vii. 481

JONES, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.

His charge to the jury on the trial of Elizabeth Gaunt iv. 153

His charge to the jury on the trial of Corniſh, for treaſon iv. 154

He ſigns the trial for publication iv. 189, 203

This trial cenſured by the legiſlature viii. 473. See CORNISH HENRY.

Lord chief juſtice Jones was ſubpœnaed on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 70. See ANDERSON. CURTIS. SMITH F.

JONES, THOMAS. See GOLDING.

JONES, Sir WILLIAM, Juſtice B. R.

His conditional opinion for either party in the cauſe of ſhip-money, with his argument, reaſons, and opinion, i. 663, 667

His ſpeech in his judicial character in the houſe of lords, in defence of his remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for not paying the loan to Charles I. vii. 185

The commons reſolve, that he was guilty of a delay of juſtice towards mr. Holles and the reſt that appeared upon the habeas corpus, in that they were not bailed vii. 250

JONES, Sir WILLIAM, Attorney-General,

His ſpeech on earl Pembroke's trial, for murder ii. 643

The attorney-general being called by writ as aſſiſtant to the houſe of lords, he ſat within the bar on the trial ii. 643

His ſpeech on Stayley's trial at bar, for treaſonable French words ii. 656

His ſpeech before evidence on Coleman's trial, for treaſon ii. 663

States the fact on lord Cornwallis's trial, for murder ii. 726

States the evidence on Green's trial, for murder ii. 762

His obſervations thereon ii. 784, 785

His ſpeech on S. Atkins's trial, for murder ii. 794

Opens the evidence on Colledge's proſecution for treaſon iii. 351

Sums up the evidence for the commons on the trial of the viſcount Stafford, impeached of treaſon in being concerned in the popiſh plot iii. 190

A ſtory told about ſeizing his papers at his death iv. 175

The law adopted on Sidney's trial was called, ſir William Jones's law iv. 196. See iii. 769.

JOURNALS.

The commons had no journals before Edward the ſixth's time ii. 54. n.

Extract from the journals of the lords, concerning the privilege of parliament

ment in the caſe of libel xi. 305. See EVIDENCE. PEERAGE and PEERS. viii. 89, 90.

*IRELAND, WILLIAM,

* Thomas Pickering, John Grove, Thomas White, alias Whitebread, and John Fenwick, their trial for high-treaſon, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 696
* The indictment, for being concerned in the popiſh plot ii. 697
* Mr. ſerjeant Baldwyn's ſpeech before evidence ii. 699
* Mr. Finch's ſpeech before evidence ii. 700
* Oates's evidence of the popiſh plot ii. 701
* The conſpiracy carried on in Scotland ii. 703
* Oates ſwears he took the ſacrament, and an oath of ſecrecy to conceal the plot ii. 705
* Southwark fired by Grove ii. 707
* Oates ordered ſome refreſhment by the court ii. 708
* Bedloe's evidence of the popiſh plot ii. 708
* Some noblemen to be aſſaſſinated as well as the king ii. 711
* Oates gives further evidence of the conſpiracy in Ireland ii. 711
* James Bedloe's evidence of his brother's being employed by the Jeſuits ii. 712
* A letter read in evidence that was not written either by or to any of the priſoners ii. 714
* The jury are told, it was read as evidence only of the plot in general, and not againſt any of the priſoners in particular ii. 714
* The letter is a ſummons to appear at the conſult ii. 714
* The jury are diſcharged of Fenwick and Whitebread, there not being ſufficient evidence againſt them ii. 715
* This proceeding cenſured iv. 673
* Ireland's defence ii. 715
* Sarah Paine's evidence that Ireland was in London in Auguſt ii. 715
* Ireland calls his witneſſes to prove he was out of town in Auguſt ii. 716
* Sir John Southcot's coachman depoſes, that Ireland went down into Staffordſhire, the 5th of Auguſt, with his maſter ii. 717
* Ireland complains he was not allowed to ſend for his witneſſes ii. 717
* Mr. Gifford depoſes, he ſaw Ireland at Wolverhampton the latter end of Auguſt, or beginning of September ii. 717
* Sir Denny Aſhburnham depoſes, that Oates had an ill character for lying in his youth ii. 718
* Ireland offers to prove he had more witneſſes, but it was not admitted ii. 718
* Pickering and Grove deny the whole, and complain they had not time to ſend for their witneſſes ii. 719
* The priſoners offer to prove that their relations had ſuffered much in the king's ſervice ii. 719
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 719
* He inveighs againſt the Jeſuits principles ii. 721
* The priſoners are convicted ii. 722
* Sir George Jefferies, recorder, his ſpeech before judgment ii. 723
* Sentence paſſed ii. 724. See viii. 440
* They are executed ii. 725
Ireland's execution and ſpeech viii. 440. See ii. 720

IRELAND.

A peer of Ireland may be tried in England for treaſon committed in Ireland i. 188, 951. viii. 341
No petit treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
Murder high-treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
The caſe of mixed-money in Ireland xi. 65
The caſe of præmunire in Ireland xi. 69
Sir John Davies wrote an excellent book upon the ſtate of the kingdom of Ireland xi. 29
Iriſh peers mere eſquires in England viii. 348, 360
What time magna charta extended to Ireland viii. 353
The Iriſh formerly were conſidered very vindictive and bloody viii. 347
Laws againſt proviſors made in Ireland xi. 70
Plea that party is a peer of Ireland i. 950
The affair of the bills of ſettlement for Ireland explained viii. 408
Letters patent extend not to Ireland, unleſs it be ſpecially named viii. 62
Conteſt in parliament about the Iriſh forfeitures xi. 137
See ANTRIM Marquis of.
CAVENAGH MAURICE.
CRAIG CAMPBELL.
GILBERT JEFFEREY.
GREY lord LEONARD.
HEATH MARY.
HURLEY PATRICK.
MACGUIRE Lord.
PRYNNE WILLIAM. * TRIAL. viii. 341.

IRONS.

They are taken off on arraignment iv. 698. v. 18. viii. 207
Refuſed vi. 231. See iv. 53. ix. 555
Taken off on trial vi. 234
On receiving judgment vi. 323
Uſe of them in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
Priſoner laid in irons by command of the Star-chamber vii. 271
Colonel Morris, upon being manacled with irons, exclaimed, "What, a martial man ironed!" vii. 322, n.
Judge Heath ordered Lilburne's irons to be taken off ii. 34. * See PRISONER.

ISSUE.

Whether iſſue born of a ſecond marriage, firſt being annulled by a divorce for impotency, be lawful or not x. 23. Ap.

ISSUES.

No peremptory challenge to jury on collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583
Counſel allowed upon collateral iſſues ix. 582, 583

JUDGES.

The names of ſuch as have behaved impartially on the bench, without prejudicing the rightful prerogatives of the crown, or betraying the legal privileges of the ſubject, without bearing hard upon the innocent, or ſhewing unallowable favour to the guilty, will be remembered with honour, and left upon record, to their laſting praiſe and commendation Em. Pref. i. ii.
Waller's ſpeech againſt the judges, for their opinions in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 696
Lord Falkland's ſpeech on the ſame occaſion i. 698
Oliver Saint John's ſpeech, at a conference on ſame occaſion i. 699
Edward Hyde's ſpeech thereon i. 709
It is totally in the diſcretion of the judges to put off a trial iv. 190
Caſes of ſlanderous words ſpoken, and of perſons being puniſhed for ſame, againſt the king's juſtices iii. 603. vii. 311. ix. 314
Several judges examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 40, 41. See ii. 384
A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cauſe iii. 141
Reſolution of judges on the ſtatute of forcible marriages v. 464
That is the beſt law that gives leaſt liberty to the judge; he the beſt judge that takes leaſt liberty to himſelf iii. 763
The judges are upon their oath to do juſtice according to the law of the land, notwithſtanding any letter or mandate from the prince iii. 289
The judges deigned to be inſtruments for ſubjugating their country to illegal taxation xi. 29
Report of committee of houſe of commons appointed to examine proceedings of the judges iii. 218
Opinion of judges reſpecting the king's diſpenſing power vii. 616
It is as much the duty of judges to give the reaſons why they doubt, as it is of them who are ſatisfied in the judgment iv. 168
Pemberton, Dolben, Jones, and Raymond, were the judges on Fitzharris's trial iv. 168
If a judge give judgment according to law, not knowing it to be ſo, tho' the judgment be legal, the pronouncing of it is unjuſt iv. 168, 169
Judges will be influenced by the power of the crown iv. 183, 184. vii. 480
Judges ought to be bound up by the reaſons given in public, and not ſatisfy and make good their judgment by after-thought reaſons iv. 169. See i. 218
All the court aſſents to what one judge ſays, if they do not ſhew their diſſent iv. 169
Some judges were of opinion, that James II. had a right to nominate the preſident of Magdalen-college, Oxford iv. 187
The delivering the ſenſe of an abſent judge, though ſometimes practiſed, is not allowable, for oftentimes they deliver another opinion than what the abſent judge is of iv. 187
The judges differed in their reaſons, why want of freehold was no challenge to a juror in treaſon, in lord Ruſſel's trial iv. 189
When judges ought to be aſtuti iv. 199
No action will lie againſt a judge vii. 442. xi. 190
Judges diſcharging grand juries before they had finiſhed their preſentments, violation of their oath vii. 480, 481
A judge cannot take notice of any thing not proved iv. 185
He may and ought to be a witneſs, if he knew any thing material of the matter tried before him and others iv. 185, 202. v. 98
The parliamentary proceedings againſt the judges of Charles I. for their extra-judicial opinions in the caſe of ſhip-money i. 696
If one draw a weapon upon a judge ſitting in court, though he ſtrikes him not, he ſhall be impriſoned during life, and forfeit his goods and lands, and loſe his right hand i. 722
The garment of a judge adds not to a man's ſenſe, learning, or honeſty iv. 206
The judges not only vary from one another in their opinions, but even from themſelves, in the judgment of the ſame caſe iv. 206
The judges the keepers of the king's coronation oath vii. 488
It is very raſh in a judge to give his opinion in ſo great a cauſe as a man's life, without conſideration iv. 206
Judges of Car. II. actuated by their ambition, inſtead of by the law, and endeavoured to get promotion rather by obſequiouſneſs than by doing juſtice vii. 479
There do not want precedents of ſevere chaſtiſements on judges vii. 479
In former times judges were impeached and hanged vii. 480
Judges are entruſted with magna charta by their oaths iii. 222. vii. 480
In almoſt all ages, the judges, who ought to be preſervers of the laws, have endeavoured to deſtroy them iii. 222. vii. 480
The judges, by an extra-judicial opinion, gave the king power to raiſe monies upon an extraordinary occaſion, without parliament, and made the king judge of the occaſion iii. 222. vii. 480
Charges againſt the judges of Charles II. vii. 481
Said to be high-treaſon in judges to aſſume a legiſlative authority, and to diſmiſs grand juries, contrary to law vii. 489. See iii. 223
Forty-four judges hanged in one year, by king Alfred vii. 306
Corrupt and upright judges characteriſtically diſtinguiſhed. Em. Pref. i. See iii. 222. iv. 206.
The corruption of judges generally ends in their own ruin Em. Pref. i. vi.
Reſolved by the judges, that the conſulting to levy war is treaſon v. 89
* Judges ought not to go according to their private knowledge v. 96
Judges formerly creatures of the crown Em. Pref. iv.
Their opinion in the caſe of ſhip-money i. 509
They rule, that two witneſſes are not neceſſary in treaſon, and that ſtat. 25 Edw. III. is not in force i. 218. iii. 204
Eleven judges aſſiſt at Reading's trial ii. 806
Judges reſolve that any of king's counſel may privately manage evidence to grand jury ii. 302
Judges reſolve, that it is no cauſe of challenge for priſoner, who is to be tried tried on ſame indictment, to ſay, that juror hath already convicted on that indictment ii. 303

They reſolve, that all words and writings, ſuppoſed to be criminal, ought to be ſpecified in the indictment or information v. 828

This reſolution cenſured vi. 330. See EYRE.

Reſolved by all the judges, that on a trial by peers, the priſoner cannot challenge any that are returned on his jury vii. 421. See RESOLUTION of all the JUDGES of ENGLAND.

They bowed in token of their conſent, that a peer ſhould have the benefit of clergy and of the ſtatute vii. 428

Of the diſcretion of judges in inflicting the puniſhments of fine, impriſonment, pillory, or whipping Em. Pref. xi.

By a law in one of the wiſeſt of the Grecian governments, no man bred up to merchandize ſhould be admitted into any office of judicature, till he had quitted that employment ten years at leaſt vi. 596

The judges not in ſcarlet on the duke of Hamilton's trial ii. 16

The judges in 1571 and 1662, complimented iii. 775

A quotation from lord Bacon's "Advancement of Learning" concerning the judges iii. 763

Judges of 10 Rich. II. proſecuted i. 1

Cited and approved i. 706

Judges aſſuming to themſelves a legiſlative power, formerly held high-treaſon vii. 489

The judges of Car. II. illegally and partially impoſed fines on offenders favouring papiſts vii. 483

Reſolved by all the judges, that act 4 Hen. VIII. chap. 8. concerning Richard Strode, was a particular act of parliament vii. 217

Anſwers of the judges to ſome queſtions put to them, concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament vii. 218

Where the judges agree, the lord chief juſtice gives the opinion of the court, and in matters of moment, he uſually gives the reaſon vii. 6

The judges are accounted the fathers of the law i. 199, 510. vii. 303

The judges ought not to give their opinion before-hand, of any criminal caſe that may come before them judicially ii. 36. n. 439. v. 747, 748

The judges ſpeak upon their oaths, and therefore muſt deliver their judgments according to their conſciences i. 638. ii. 466

The judges muſt not give their judgments according to policy, or rules of ſtate, nor convenience, but only according to law ii. 466

Mr. baron Gregor ſworn as a witneſs in a cauſe vii. 580, 597

Lord chief baron Mountague examined as a witneſs iv. 40

Same judge appealed to as a witneſs by a priſoner ii. 998, 999

Diſcretion of judges in inflicting puniſhment on ſmall crimes and miſdemeanours, defined Em. Pref. xi.

Judges not to give counſel to priſoners i. 171, 189

The opinion of the major part of them is conſidered as the act of the whole court i. 646

A great deal of blood was ſhed by judges governed by James II.'s evil counſellors, againſt all law, the perſons ſuffering not being allowed to plead in their own defence v. 749

If a man, according to ſincerity, give judgment, though he differs from another judge, it is no injuſtice vii. 109. See DYER ſir JAMES.

Judges commiſſion at New-York v. 421. ix. 280

Judges ſhould beware of hard conſtructions and ſtrained inferences x. 56. n.

The judges were ſecretly aſked their opinion reſpecting ſir Edward Hale's proſecution; and ſuch as were not for the court were turned out vii. 616. n.

Some of the above judges were weak and ignorant to a ſcandal vii. 616. n.

They gave judgment for ſir Edward without argument, as of courſe vii. 616. n.

The judges of the court of King's-Bench, 26 Car. II. were a ſet of as learned judges as ever were before or ſince viii. 109

The judges concurred in opinion, that the approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and alſo of the preſumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belonged to his majeſty; but to what other branches of the royal family this prerogative extended, they could not aſcertain xi. 295

Lord chancellor Elleſmere ſays, that power and might of ſome potent perſons oppreſſed juſtice and faithful judges in Richard the ſecond's time, for expounding the law ſoundly and truly xi. 99, 101

Formerly the judges in caſes of doubt or difficulty conſulted the privy-council xi. 101

The judges are a kind of council of the king's by oath and ancient inſtitution xi. 112

Three judges were of opinion, that the lord keeper was bound to give judgment according to the opinions of the majority of judges by him called to his aſſiſtance; but ſeven judges (and among them lord chief juſtice Holt), that he was not bound by ſuch majority of opinions, but was at liberty to give judgment according to his own xi. 159, 160

Judges are the priſoner's counſel vi. 224

The judges of Geo. I. complimented vi. 409

If judges take upon themſelves to mould an unlawful power into a convenient authority by new reſtrictions, this is not a judgment, but legiſlation xi. 321

It is a matter of impeachment for any judge to affirm a thing law to bind the whole kingdom, by a declaration that ſuch is his opinion xi. 322

The judges of Hen. VII. were learned men, and the three chiefs of the privy-council xi. 2

Not more upright judges than in 34 Eliz. A. D. 1592 vii. 140

Ten thouſand pounds damages recovered for calling a judge traitor, and that too after defendant had been fined 50,000l. impriſoned, &c. i. 772

None ſhould be preferred to the office of a judge, but ſuch whoſe abilities and integrity may be ſafely depended upon Em. Pref. vi.

Judges who have been cenſured, arreſted on the bench, proſecuted, impriſoned, removed, executed, or otherwiſe proceeded againſt, or puniſhed for mal-practice or crimes, arranged in alphabetical order.

Belknap ſir Robert
Berkley ſir Robert
Bramſtone ſir John
Burgh ſir William
Carey ſir John
Coke ſir Edward
Crawley ſir Francis
Davenport ſir Humphry
Denham ſir John
Doderidge ſir John
Dudley Edmund
Finch ſir Heneage
Finch ſir John
Fulthorpe ſir Roger
Gilbert Jeffery
Heath ſir Robert
Herbert ſir Edward
Holloway ſir Richard
Holt John
Hyde ſir Nicholas
Jefferies ſir George
Jones ſir Thomas
Jones ſir William
Montague William
North ſir Francis
Pemberton ſir Francis
Powel ſir John
Saunders ſir Edmund
Treſilian ſir Robert
Trevor ſir Thomas
Vernon ſir George
Walcot ſir Thomas
Weſton ſir James
Whitelocke ſir James
Wright ſir Robert
Wythens ſir Francis

See their NAMES for particulars. See ASHBY and WHITE. JAY and TOPHAM. DE BRUCE. COLLARS of S. S. RESOLUTIONS of the JUDGES. ROBES.

*JUDGMENT.

* Judgment pronounced on lord Bacon by the houſe of lords in his abſence, upon his repreſentation that he was ſick, and not able to attend i. 387

* No judgment given the ſame term the trial was, becauſe there were not four days of the term remaining iii. 544

* No judgment to be pronounced after an outlawry for high-treaſon; but only a rule for execution iii. 944

* The judgment againſt Pilkington, & al. reverſed in parliament iii. 659

* A week's time given a defendant convicted of perjury to move in arreſt of judgment iv. 94

* It is in the diſcretion of the court to paſs what judgment they pleaſe on one convicted of perjury, ſaving life and member iv. 104

* Where an indictment is removed into the King's-Bench, judgment ought not to be given till four days after conviction; if there be ſo many days remaining in the term iv. 779

* The contrary proceeding, in Stayley's caſe, cenſured iv. 779

Inſtance of a priſoner not being aſked why judgment of treaſon ſhould not be pronounced, till he had appriſed the court of the omiſſion. See AUDLEY, THOMAS Lord.

Copy of the judgment as it is entered upon record againſt John Hampden, in the caſe of ſhip-money i. 695, 696. vi. 9. Ap.

Judgment in treaſon muſt be in uſual form, or the king loſes his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213

Judgment cannot be entered up when court is divided in opinion v. 570, 571

Of mute judgments in Weſtminſter-Hall iv. 169, 172

The manner of pronouncing judgments in Scotland ii. 1111

If a man hath judgment to be hanged, and the ſheriff do behead him, it is murder ii. 209. v. 126

Inſtance of priſoner being aſked why he ſhould not have judgment three ſeveral times previous to the court pronouncing it ix. *747, *749, *750

Judgment of impriſonment to commence from and after determination of impriſonment, to which defendant was before ſentenced for another offence, is good in law. So reſolved by the judges xi. 334

The execution may vary from the judgment iii. 215. iv. 129. See GRAY Lady JANE. HOWARD CATHARINE, Queen to Hen. VIII. LISLE Lady ALICIA. MORE Sir THOMAS. SALISBURY Counteſs of. STAFFORD Lord Viſcount.

Though the judgment in felony is always, "to be hanged by the neck," yet the party may be beheaded, for that is no part of the ſentence iv. 129. See AUDLEY MERVIN Lord. SOMERSET Duke of.

*JURISDICTION.

* A plea to the juriſdiction, the party ought to be ready to maintain preſently iv. 214

* Whoever executes the judgment of a court in a cauſe where the court has no juriſdiction, is puniſhable ii. 328

* The courts of Weſtminſter may judge of privilege of parliament, where it is incident to a ſuit the court is poſſeſſed of; but not of a matter ariſing originally in parliament ii. 620

* A court cannot bail, where they have not juriſdiction of the cauſe ii. 620

If party pleads in chief, he cannot afterwards plead to the juriſdiction iv. 167

Court of Common-Pleas has not ordinarily juriſdiction in criminal caſes ix. 309

The pope had no juriſdiction in England in the time of the Britons xi. 71. See JOHN King of ENGLAND

Plea to the juriſdiction of the court of King's-Bench, that party ſtood impeached by the commons for the ſame treaſon iii. 228

The juriſdiction of the privy-council a limited juriſdiction; and upon their commitment, the grounds and cauſes of it ought to appear vii. 126

The court of King's-Bench declare, they have juriſdiction to puniſh offences committed in parliament vii. 247

Reſolved in parliament to be a breach of privilege, and illegal vii. 251

Difference between pleading to the juriſdiction, and in bar viii. 3

Where there is a plea to the juriſdiction, becauſe the court cannot examine the fact, they ſwear to their plea viii. 3

Juſtification by virtue of acts of parliament does not exclude the king's courts from their juriſdictions viii. 5

Where ſeveral courts may have ſeveral juriſdictions of the ſame fact, notwithſtanding there may be diverſity of judgments viii. 112, 118. Se COURT. PLEA.

*JURORS and JURY. See GRAND JURY.
* A jury impriſoned and fined for giving a verdict contrary to the opinion of the court i. 78. xi. 3.
* Twenty-four only returned upon a pannel to try a caſe of high-treaſon i. 182
* By a general verdict a jury take upon them the point of law as well as matter of fact ii. 69
* A printer tried for high-treaſon in printing, is allowed to have half his jury of bookſellers or printers ii. 530. v. 530
* The ſame jury ſworn and charged with the priſoners again ii. 537
* A juryman ſuffered to whiſper the judge in open court ii. 553
* A juryman threatened for ſaying he could not in his conſcience find the priſoner guilty ii. 553
* Jurors fined for going contrary to evidence, and ſent to Newgate ii. 616
* This proceeding afterwards adjudged illegal ii. 553
* Jurors diſcharged of priſoners after the evidence given for the king, without giving a verdict ii. 715, 831, 953. ix. 572
* This proceeding condemned iv. 673
* Juryman who knows any thing of the cauſe, ſhall give his evidence in court ii. 809
* Jury can take no papers out of court with them that have been produced in evidence, but what are under ſeal, without priſoner's conſent ii. 828. iii. 100. iv. 396. v. 517
* One attainted of felony and pardoned, cannot be of a jury iii. 44
* When one may be a witneſs, who cannot be of a jury iii. 45
* In capital offences, a jury ſhall not be ſtruck, as in civil cauſes iii. 262
* If one ſuperannuated appears on a jury, when he is warned, he muſt ſerve; but he might have had a writ of privilege to diſcharge him iii. 264
* A juror challenged for the king, becauſe he gave his dogs the names of the king's witneſſes, Oates and Bedloe iii. 317
* The jury allowed a refreſhment before they gave their verdict in a capital caſe iii. 408. See iv. 65, 396
* Refreſhment refuſed the jury ii. 80. Em. Pref. vi. vii.
* The evidence interpreted to the aliens on a party jury iii. 472
* Juror ſet aſide for want of freehold iii. 519. iv. 423, 602, 741
* A perſon repelled from being a juror by the juſticiary court in Scotland, for pre-judging the priſoner i. 471
* Challenge to a juror for want of freehold in the city, diſallowed in a capital caſe iii. 711, 820. See iv. 188, 206
* No challenge to the favour againſt the king; as to ſay, the juror is a ſervant or dependant of the king's iii. 825
* A jury (whether of peers or commons) ought not to be diſcharged in a capital caſe, till they have given their verdict iv. 232
* Jurors diſcharged in a capital caſe for want of freehold iv. 423
* Copy of the pannel a favour, and not the priſoner's right iv. 566
* Six days between the precept for ſummoning the petit jury and the return iv. 662
* If the priſoner hath a copy of the pannel before it be returned, the intent of the ſtat. 7 Wil. III. chap. 3. is ſatisfied iv. 667
* What queſtions a juror ſhall anſwer iv. 748
* The pannel called over in preſence of the priſoner, before they are brought to the book v. 550. vi. 246
* Two perſons challenged for cauſe vi. 248
Juries, judges of fact, not law ix. 275. See Em. Pref. iii.
Pannel legal in London, tho' without pariſh, ward, or abode ix. 680
Sheriff may return all new men on jury, without regard to thoſe who appeared and were ſworn, or challenged before ix. 587
Priſoners may challenge twenty of the pannel, without ſhewing cauſe; but if more, they muſt ſhew a reaſonable cauſe; but if they agree to join in their challenges, they may be tried together; if not, they muſt be tried ſeparately ii. 308, 313. iv. 566, 663. ix. 10, 11, 720. x. 38
Jury need not find fact committed, as laid in indictment i. 330
Juries conſidered as witneſſes coming out of neighbourhood where fact committed v. 38
Court refuſe verdict of jury; they are threatened by court, and locked up till next morning ii. 615. See Em. Pref. vi.
Jury to determine law and fact ii. 76. See ix. 275
Peremptory challenges to jurors obſerved upon iv. 188, 189
Jury brought before council, to give reaſons for their verdict, but refuſe i. 78. ii. 81. vii. 370
After jury ſtruck in civil matter, each party to have copy of pannel iv. 191
Having been on grand jury, good cauſe of challenge iv. 2. See x. 88. Ap. n.
Jurors diſcharged for want of freeholds iv. 423
Juryman may be examined as a witneſs ii. 809
The king's poſſeſſions are ſubject to a trial by jury ii. 306
Why ſo called Em. Pref. iii.
Fifteen ſworn on jury, for executing writ of inquiry iii. 987
Having employment under the king, no cauſe of challenge iii. 825
The judges differ in opinion, whether a trial after a jury have ben ſworn and charged with the priſoners, and diſcharged, without giving a verdict, though done in favour of them, is not a mis-trial, and the verdict a mere nullity ix. 570, 576. See ii. 711. iv. 232, 673. x. 407. n.
Upon affidavit of jurymen, that they did not give the verdict entered up; court ſet aſide the trial, and granted a new one, in a criminal caſe x. 407. n. See x. 411 and n.
Packed juries in ſome meaſure removed by ſtatute 3 Geo. II. chap. 25. Em. Pref. xiv. n.
Jurors examined as to their freeholds iv. 738
Tales pro defectu juratorum iii. 57
No friends or relations of deceaſed to be on jury, in caſe of murder iii. 468
Court directs forty-eight to be returned on jury, which is to be ſtruck in preſence of attornies on both ſides iv. 332
Jury kept together all night, without fire or candle iv. 396. Em. Pref. vi.
Juries frequently diſcharged after ſworn iv. 202
If jury do not agree, they undergo a greater puniſhment than the criminal himſelf Em. Pref. vi.
Propoſal for remedying the above inconvenience Em. Pref. v. vi.
Lord Holt ſeverely reprimanded a jury for finding ſmall damages in the caſe of a peer, for crim. con. viii. 36
The trial by jury is the honour of our government, the mark of our freedom, and envy of our neighbours v. 82
Juries were uſually packed in the reign of James II. iv. 177
Lord chief juſtice Hales's encomium on the trial by jury, cited with great reſpect vi. 407
Citizen of London ſhall not be drawn out of the city to be a juryman iv. 191
A nobleman ſhall not be on a jury vi. 191
Prerogative of king, to grant charter of exemption from being on a jury iv. 191
Juryman formerly intitled to eight-pence for a trial iv. 191
In criminal matters not capital, the jury were heretofore paid, if they acquitted priſoner; but not if they found him guilty iv. 191
But on proſecutions for the popiſh plot in Car. II's. reign, the jury had more, and were treated higher, if they convicted priſoner than if they acquitted him iv. 191
In capital matters, it was never allowed to pay the jury, be their verdict which way it would iv. 191
Petty jury muſt conſider credibility of witneſſes iv. 201
Several, tho' no freeholders, admitted to be ſworn on the jury iii. 265. n. See iii. 708, 820
Copy of the pannel of the jury allowed lord Ruſſel iii. 707
Allowed count Coningſmark iii. 465
Denied Colledge iii. 350. 707. n.
Denied Corniſh, till time of his trial, when it could be of no uſe to him iii. 707. n.
The jury are judges of circumſtances that are matters of fact. Reſolved by all the judges vii. 422
Jurymen examined on a voyer dire, as to their freehold ix. 550
If freehold and copyhold put together amount to 10l. a year, a good qualification for a juryman ix. 550
At Reading, colonel Martin, after the jury were ſworn, cauſed them all, before the judges ſitting upon the bench, to put on their hats, as their right, being they were then the chief judges in court, and the other inferior to them ii. 69. n.
Upon trial touching the identity of the perſon, on attainder, no peremptory challenge of jurymen allowed ix. 584
The jury in Scotland conſiſts of fifteen perſons iv. 292. v. 595, 639
And moſt votes of jury determine fact v. 604
Jury having been on a trial in Scotland ninety-four hours, exempted from ſerving for five years ix. 680
When a tales, and not a new pannel, ought to be awarded in treaſon by ſtatute 7 W. III. chap. 3. iv. 741
Jury fined by court for entering into an agreement among themſelves in reſpect of their verdict ix. 536. n.
What a good qualification of a juror, in trials for treaſon ix. 550
Juror withdrawn in capital caſes ix. 567
Venire awarded, and jury returned inſtanter, to try collateral iſſues ix. 582
If juſtice cannot be obtained at the hands of juries, by the ordinary courſe of law, it may be a provocation to reſtrain that preſs which they refuſe to regulate xi. 323. See CHALLENGES. LILBURNE's JURY ii. 81. PEN and MEAD's ii. 615. THROCKMORTON's i. 78

"JUS REGIUM,"
An account of a publication ſo called xi. 137

*JUSTICES.
* Juſtices of the peace, whether they may examine the king's evidence after the coroner iv. 530
The nomination of them is in the chancellor only vi. 705
They are not by common law, but appointed by ſtatute, firſt of which is 1 Edw. III. chap. 16. iv. 562. n.
It is part of their duty to attend the aſſizes x. 92. Ap.
Juſtice of peace permitted to take ſecurity for good behaviour, ordered by the court of B. R. xi. 334

JUSTICES REGENT.
Petition to the lords juſtices, in the abſence of the king, by an infant, for a pardon for murder ix. 539

IVY, Lady,
Her trial for great part of Shadwell, in the King's-Bench, 1684 vii. 571
The names of the ſpecial jury vii. 571
Evidence of the plaintiff Moſſam's title under the dean and chapter of St. Paul's vii. 572
Evidence for the defendant Ivy, that it was originally marſh ground, and never in the dean and chapter vii. 575
Knowle's evidence for the defendant, to prove a leaſe, 2 and 3 Philip and Mary vii. 576
Baniſter's evidence for the defendant vii. 581
Evidence of the boundaries of the marſh vii. 589
Evidence for the plaintiff vii. 594
Evidence of the defendant's deeds being forged, from their being wrong in the ſtile of the king and queen vii. 598
Sir Charles Cotterel's evidence of the lady Ivy's forging a mortgage vii. 599
Mrs Duffet's evidence, of her huſband's forging deeds for lady Ivy vii. 600
Lord chief juſtice Jefferies ſums up the evidence vii. 604
Verdict for the plaintiff vii. 610
The information againſt lady Ivy, for forging theſe deeds vii. 610

K.

* KEACH, BENJAMIN,
* His trial at the aſſizes at Aileſbury, in the county of Bucks, the 8th and 9th of October, 1664, 16 Car. II. before the lord chief juſtice Hyde ii. 550
* The indictment, for writing and publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous book, entitled, "The Child's Inſtructor againſt Infant-baptiſm," &c. ii. 550
* The witneſſes for the king called ii. 551
* The priſoner's examination before the juſtice, read as evidence againſt him ii. 552
* His opinion compared with the book of common prayer ii. 552
* One of his jury permitted to whiſper with the judge in court ii. 553
* Another menaced, in caſe he did not agree with the reſt ii. 553
* He is convicted of all the paragraphs laid in the indictment, but one, which was wrong recited ii. 553
* Sentenced to ſtand in the pillory three ſeveral days, and fined 20l. ii. 553

KEBLE, RICHARD,
Preſident of the court, informs the jury on Lilburn's trial for treaſon ii. 78
Makes a ſpeech to the traitor Love ii. 141

KEELING, JOSIAH,
Examined concerning his being tampered with about the diſcovery of the plot, 1683, and being a witneſs viii. 477

KEEPER of the GREAT SEAL.
Lord keeper Wright encouraged charitable contributions x. 88. Ap.
Keeper of the great ſeal cannot commit iv. 555
Lord keepers who have been proceeded againſt by parliament.
Coventry ſir Thomas Finch ſir John
See CHANCELLORS.

* KEIGLE, HENRY v. 872. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
* KELLY, alias JOHNSON, GEORGE vi. 335. See ATTERBURY, Biſhop.

* KENDAL, THOMAS, and RICHARD ROE.
* Proceedings in the King's Bench, on a habeas corpus, upon a commitment for high-treaſon, 7 Gul. III. 1695 iv. 554
* The warrant of commitment for being aſſiſting to the eſcape of ſir James Montgomery out of the cuſtody of a meſſenger iv. 554
* Sir Bartholomew Shower moves, that the priſoners may be bailed iv. 554
* Holds that a commitment by a ſecretary of ſtate is illegal, and was never practiſed in England till 1678 iv. 555, 557
* That the fact charged in the warrant is not high-treaſon iv. 555
* That a meſſenger is not impowered by law to detain a man in cuſtody iv. 556, 560
* And therefore it is no crime to eſcape from him iv. 556
* The king's counſel deſire time to reply iv. 557
* Sir Bartholomew Shower's ſecond argument iv. 557
* The opinion of the court iv. 561

KENMURE, WILLIAM Lord Viſcount,
His letter to a noble lord the day before his execution, giving the reaſons why he pleaded guilty x. 84. Ap.
His behaviour on Tower Hill x. 85. Ap. * See DERWENTWATER, JAMES Earl of vi. 1

* KENN, Doctor THOMAS, Biſhop of Bath and Wells,
* His trial for publiſhing a libel iv. 304

KENNET.
Extracts from his complete hiſtory of England xi. 2, 4, 10, 18
His account of the reverſal of the judgment againſt Titus Oates viii. 475

* KERNE, CHARLES,
* His trial for high-treaſon, at Hereford aſſizes, the 4th of Auguſt 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 961
* The indictment for high-treaſon, in taking popiſh orders, and coming into England, being a ſubject of this crown ii. 961
* Evidence that the priſoner adminiſtered the ſacrament after the manner of the papiſts ii. 962
* The witneſſes being confronted, contradict one another ii. 963
* The priſoner calls his witneſſes ii. 963
* A prieſt ſaying maſs, evidence of his being in orders ii. 964
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 964
* The priſoner is acquitted ii. 965

KETTLEBY, Mr.
His ſpeech for Layer, on his proſecution for treaſon vi. 296
Moves for damages for Bambridge and Corbet, on their acquittal on appeal for murder, but refuſed ix. 181
His defence of Matthews for treaſon ix. 698

* KEY, ROBERT iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
* KEYES, ROBERT i. 232. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.
* KEYES, THOMAS iv. 562. See CHARNOCK ROBERT. PORTER Captain GEORGE.

KEYLING, Sir JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
Opens the evidence againſt Hacker the regicide ii. 382
King's counſel opens the indictment againſt Anderſon, for treaſon ii. 995, 999
For a citation out of his reports, ſee DAMMAREE DANIEL.

* KIDD, Captain WILLIAM,
* His trial for murder and piracy, upon ſix ſeveral indictments: as alſo the trial of Nicholas Churchill, James Howe, Robert Lamley, William Jenkins, Gabriel Loffe, Hugh Parrot, Richard Barlicorn, Abel Owens, and Darby Mullins, for piracy, at the Admiralty ſeſſions, held at the Old Bailey, London, the 8th and 9th of May, 1701, 13 William III. v. 287
* The firſt indictment againſt William Kidd, for the murder of William Moore, his gunner v. 289
* Counſel aſſigned captain Kidd v. 289
* The court order him part of his money and effects for his ſubſiſtence, &c. v. 290
* Kidd's trial for the murder comes on v. 290
* The witneſſes for the king called to prove the murder v. 290
* Kidd's defence v. 292
* Kidd calls ſeveral of his accomplices in piracy, who are admitted to be witneſſes for him in this caſe v. 292
* The lord chief baron Ward directs the jury, and intimates, that the provocation given by the deceaſed, was too ſlight to extenuate the crime, and reduce it to manſlaughter v. 294
* Kidd is convicted of murder v. 296
* Kidd, and the other priſoners, the indictment of them for piracy, in taking the Quedah merchant in the Indian ſeas v. 297
* Their trial comes on v. 297
* Churchill and ſome of the priſoners deſire the benefit of the king's proclamation, on which they ſurrendered v. 297
* They are told that they did not ſurrender to the perſons the proclamation directed; and therefore the trial muſt proceed v. 298
* The king's counſel, dr. Newton, opens the indictment and the evidence v. 299
* The king's witneſſes called to prove this piracy v. 300
* Kidd's commiſſion to make repriſals on the French, read v. 307
* Kidd's commiſſion for cruiſing againſt the pirates v. 308
* Kidd's defence v. 309
* Colonel Baſs, governor of Weſt-Jerſey, depoſes, that Nicholas Churchill and James Howe, two of the priſoners, ſurrendered to him the 4th of June, 1699 v. 310
* Lamley and Jenkins in their defence ſay, they were ſervants on board Kidd's ſhip v. 310
* Loffe in his defence ſays, he was under Kidd's command v. 311
* Parrot's defence v. 311
* Barlicorn's defence v. 311
* Mullins's defence v. 311
* Kidd calls witneſſes to his reputation v. 312
* The lord chief baron Ward directs the jury v. 312
* As to thoſe three priſoners who appear to be ſervants, he tells the jury there muſt be a freedom of choice to determine one a pirate or a felon: but if a ſervant go voluntarily with a pirate, and accepts his ſhare of the booty, he was to be accounted a pirate v. 314
* That as to thoſe who ſurrendered on the proclamation, they had not made out that they ſurrendered on the terms the proclamation required v. 315
* As to their pretence, who would juſtify themſelves as being under captain Kidd's command, that was no excuſe for aſſiſting him in ſuch enterprizes as they knew to be unlawful; eſpecially having been partakers of the ſpoil v. 315
* Kidd, Churchill, Howe, Loffe, Parrot, Owens, and Mullins, convicted; Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn acquitted v. 315
* A ſecond indictment againſt Kidd and the other nine priſoners, for piratically robbing a Mooriſh ſhip in the Indian ſeas v. 316
* A third indictment againſt them all, for piratically taking a Mooriſh ketch in the Indian ſeas v. 316
* A fourth indictment againſt them all, for piratically taking another Mooriſh ſhip v. 316
* The fifth indictment, for piratically robbing a Portugueſe ſhip in the Indian ſeas v. 317
* The trial of all the priſoners upon the ſecond and third indictment begins v. 318
* There being a new jury, the court direct the king's counſel to open the evidence again v. 318
* The king's witneſſes called v. 319
* The priſoner's defence, as to theſe two indictments v. 325
* Mr. juſtice Turton directs the jury v. 327
* He tells them that Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn being ſervants, ought to be diſtinguiſhed from the reſt; for though they had their ſhares of the ſpoil, yet it was to be preſumed they were to be accountable to their maſters on board v. 328
* Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn acquitted; the others convicted v. 330
* The trial of the priſoners on the two laſt indictments v. 330
* Churchill, Howe, and Owens retract their plea, and plead guilty v. 331
* The other ſeven put themſelves upon their trial v. 331
* The king's witneſſes called v. 331
* Mr. juſtice Turton directs the jury v. 335
* Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn (the ſervants) are acquitted v. 337
* Kidd and the other three are convicted on the laſt indictment v. 337
* Robert Culliford, Nicholas Churchill, Darby Mullins, and John Eldridge, arraigned for piratically taking The Royal Merchant in the Indian ſeas, having pleaded not guilty (all but Eldridge,) afterwards retract their plea, and plead guilty v. 337
* Eldridge convicted v. 337
* Sentence paſſed on Kidd, Churchill, Howe, Loffe, Parrot, Owens, Mullins, Hickman, and Eldridge v. 338

KIDNAPPING.
Selling criminals to the Moors or Spaniards abroad, a much more lawful method of making ſlaves than the practice of kidnapping Em. Pref. x.
See vi. 834. ix. 386, 426

KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of,
The whole proceedings in the houſe of peers, upon the indictment againſt him for high-treaſon, in levying war againſt his majeſty, in July and Auguſt 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 587
The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner ix. 595*
He pleads guilty ix. 595*
Lord Kilmarnock's ſpeech on being aſked by the lord high ſteward, why ſentence of death ſhould not paſs upon him, according to law ix. 609*
Lord ſteward's ſpeech previous to his paſſing ſentence ix. 613*

Account of his behaviour after ſentence, and on the day of execution x. 175. Ap.
His converſation with lord Balmerino x. 179. Ap.
Executed on Tower-hill x. 180. Ap.
His petition to the king x. 181. Ap.
His letter to his ſon x. 181. Ap.
The paper left behind him x. 182. Ap.

*KING.

* He is king to all intents before his coronation, on the demiſe of his predeceſſor; and one may be attainted of treaſon committed againſt ſuch a king i. 214
* The people collectively or repreſentatively have no coercive power over the perſon of the king ii. 305
* One convicted of treaſon againſt a king out of poſſeſſion of the throne, and out of the realm ii. 450, 453
* The king cannot diſpenſe with the laws iv. 369
Kings have ſat as judges in their courts of juſtice i. 553
Reaſons why the king cannot perſonally arreſt a ſubject ii. 208, 212. See vii. 146.
The king does no legal act but by advice of his judges i. 638
Had the protector Cromwell taken the name of king, no treaſon could have been committed againſt the king, de jure, out of poſſeſſion ii. 453
Execution of illegal act puniſhable, though by the king's command ii. 306
The king cannot in perſon arreſt any man, or be arreſted ii. 306. See HUSSEY. MARKHAM Sir JOHN.
The king cannot ſit in judgment in his own perſon, and his poſſeſſions are ſubject to a trial by jury ii. 307
Endeavour to impriſon the king, an overt-act of compaſſing his death ii. 323
What may be interpreted a deſign on the king's life iii. 722
By prerogative, tries his cauſe in what court he will, except prohibited by common law vii. 246
Whether a priſoner committed by his ſpecial command is bailable, or not. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.
His power as to licenſing trade. See MONOPOLIES.
His diſpenſing power. See HALES Sir EDWARD. DISPENSING POWER.
As the king is the fountain of honour, no honour can be taken from a peer, or transferred by him without the king's conſent viii. 60
The kings of this realm have ever been entruſted with the care and approbation of the marriages of the royal family xi. 295
The approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and alſo of the preſumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belongs to his majeſty xi. 295

*KING CHARLES I.

* His trial in January, the 24th of his reign, Ann. Dom. 1648 i. 986
* The act for erecting the high court of juſtice i. 1009
* The firſt meeting of the commiſſioners i. 1010
* Proclamation made, by ſound of trumpet, of the holding the court, in order to the king's trial i. 1011
* Counſel appointed for the commonwealth i. 1011
* Bradſhaw choſen preſident i. 1011
* Ordered to be ſtiled lord preſident i. 1012
* Some matters ordered, preparatory to the trial i. 1012
* A ſearch made under the painted chamber, to prevent their being blown up i. 1013
* Ordered, that the king be at ſir Robert Cotton's houſe during the trial i. 1014
* A table appointed for the king, and another for the preſident i. 1014
* The ſword of ſtate carried before the preſident i. 1016
* Aſſiſtants to the preſident i. 1016
* The court ſit, in order to the trial i. 1016
* The king is brought to the bar i. 1017
* The charge read i. 1018
* The king demands by what authority he was brought thither; and refuſes to acknowledge their juriſdiction i. 1019
* He is remanded into cuſtody i. 1019
* The king brought to the bar again, and offers to give reaſons againſt their juriſdiction i. 1022
* Which they refuſe to hear i. 1022
* What he deſigned to have ſpoke, if he had been permitted i. 1023
* He is interrupted i. 1023
* The king a third time brought to the bar i. 1024
* Refuſes to own their authority i. 1026
* His contempt recorded a third time i. 1027
* The witneſſes examined by a committee i. 1027
* The dean of Weſtminſter's houſe furniſhed for the preſident i. 1028
* The witneſſes acknowledge their depoſitions in court i. 1028
* The evidence againſt the king i. 1028
* Hoſtilities begun between the king and parliament i. 1029
* The king's ſtandard ſet up at Nottingham i. 1029
* War proclaimed againſt the parliament, and the earl of Eſſex and lord Brook proclaimed traitors i. 1029
* Evidence of the king's being at Edge-hill i. 1029
* Evidence of the king's drawing up his army himſelf i. 1029
* Of the manner of erecting the king's ſtandard at Nottingham i. 1029
* The ſtandard taken, and retaken, at Edge-hill i. 1029
* Evidence of the king's rallying his forces, and making them ſtand, after they were routed i. 1029
* The king rides from regiment to regiment, at the fight at Newbury i. 1031
* Evidence of ſome tranſactions between the king and ſome of his pretended friends, during the treaty in the Iſle of Wight i. 1032
* The independents betray the king's offers to them i. 1033
* Letters produced in evidence; but not publiſhed in the trial i. 1033
* Some reſolutions previous to the ſentence i. 1033
* The king brought to the bar again, to receive ſentence i. 1035, 1037
* The preſident's ſpeech before the ſentence: he is interrupted by a lady i. 1038
* The king permitted to ſpeak before the ſentence i. 1038
* The king deſires to be heard before the lords and commons i. 1038
* Downes, one of the members of the court, expreſſes ſome reluctance i. 1039
* The king is denied a hearing before the lords and commons i. 1039
* Conjures them to conſider of his requeſt once again; which they refuſe i. 1040
* The preſident adviſes his majeſty to be penitent, and prays for his ſoul i. 1040
* The ſentence i. 1040
* The whole court riſe up to expreſs their aſſent i. 1040
* They refuſe to hear him ſpeak after ſentence i. 1041
* Some indignity offered to his majeſty by the ſoldiers i. 1041
* He is permitted to ſee his children i. 1041
* And biſhop Juxon, who preaches before him i. 1041
* The warrant for the king's execution i. 1041
* Some diſſenting miniſters ordered to attend the king in his laſt moments; but he refuſes to be troubled with them i. 1042
* His dying ſpeech i. 1042
* And behaviour on the ſcaffold i. 1043
* The king is beheaded i. 1044

* The account of this trial, publiſhed by the authority of that time i. 986
* The preſident's ſpeech to the king i. 986
* The king queſtions their authority i. 987
* The preſident's anſwer i. 987
* The ſecond day's proceedings i. 987
* The preſident inſiſts upon the authority of the commons of England i. 988
* The third day's proceedings i. 989
* The fourth day i. 991
* The king deſires to be heard before the lords and commons i. 992
* Upon which the court withdraw i. 992
* And over-rule his motion i. 992
* The preſident's ſpeech before ſentence i. 992
* Mr. ſolicitor Cook's ſpeech, which he intended to have delivered at the trial, if the king had pleaded i. 997
* He inſiſts that England is a limited monarchy, where the king can take nothing from the ſubject without his conſent i. 997
* That the king can only employ his power for the good of the people i. 998
* That all juſt power is derived from the people i. 998
* Conqueſt and a long deſcent can give no title i. 998
* That the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy are not unconditionally binding to the ſubject i. 998
* Abſolute monarchs permitted by providence, as the plague; but 'twas lawful for their ſubjects to break their yoke i. 998
* Charges the king as an accomplice with the duke of Buckingham in poiſoning his father, king James i. 999
* With levying ſhip-money, under a pretence of neceſſity i. 999
* He holds that the king is anſwerable, as well as his miniſters, for maladminiſtration i. 1000
* Charges the king as the author of the Scotch war i. 1000
* And the maſſacre in Ireland i. 1000
* And of a civil war in England i. 1000
* Holds, that the king has no right to command the militia i. 1001
* Or to diſſolve parliaments; or to refuſe his aſſent to bills i. 1001
* Denies that he has a power of making new lords, or new corporations i. 1001
* Or a power of pardoning offenders, or ſuſpending executions i. 1001
* Or a power of raiſing or lowering the coin i. 1001
* Or of avoiding his grants i. 1001
* And ſays, that, if the king has theſe prerogatives, he is an abſolute tyrant; and this the worſt tyranny, as being eſtabliſhed by law i. 1002
* But that indeed his prerogatives did not extend much beyond the privileges of the meaneſt ſubject i. 1002
* He holds that poſſeſſion gives no title; right can never die i. 1002
* Two ſupreme powers, or two co-ordinate powers, cannot be in one nation i. 1002
* The people may take meaſures for their defence without the king, if he refuſes to concur with them; and they are judges what tends to their advantage or deſtruction i. 1002
* That it was agreeable to the fundamental conſtitution of all kingdoms, that, where the king becomes a tyrant, he ſhould die for it i. 1003
* The people his majeſty's liege lords i. 1003
* Treaſon, to ſet up his ſtandard againſt his dread ſovereign the people i. 1003
* The king charged with betraying Rochel, and the French proteſtants i. 1006
* The king of great learning and dexterity in ſtate affairs, and to be ſeduced by evil counſel i. 1007
* Says, the innocent blood of three kingdoms demanded juſtice againſt him i. 1007
* He is troubled for the king's eternal condition; and prays for the poor wretch i. 1008
* Is concerned that the cavaliers behave themſelves ſo bravely at their execution i. 1008
* Says, God had afforded him great aſſiſtance in the management of this proſecution againſt his majeſty i. 1008
* That the vices of all tyrants centered in his majeſty i. 1008

* And therefore he demands their juſtice i. 1008
* That other kings might hear, and fear, &c. i. 1009
* KING EDWARD iv. 562. See CHARNOCK, & al. PORTER Captain GEORGE.

KING, Sir PETER,
His argument in maintenance of the ſecond article in the impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverel, D. D. exhibited by the houſe of commons v. 683
His argument, by way of reply, to the defence ſet up by the doctor's counſel, to the charge contained in the ſecond article v. 807
His parliamentary ſpeech relative to Aſhby and White viii. 121

KING, Sir PETER, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.
His directions to the jury on the trial of Arundel Coke, eſq. counſellor at law, indicted at Suffolk aſſizes, as acceſſary in maiming on ſtat. 22 and 23 Car. II. chap. 1. vi. 220. See vi. 228
His opinion on ſtat. 6 Ann. chap. 7. ix. 708
Sums up the evidence on Matthews's trial for treaſon ix. 708
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 295, 296, 300
His opinion xi. 300, 302. See MACCLESFIELD Earl.

KING's-BENCH.
This court may examine parliamentary matters ii. 617
What things concerning parliament the court of King's-Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437
If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward, they ſhall be reverſed by error in this court vii. 248
This court adjourns a caſe on a falſe return of a member of parliament into the houſe of commons propter difficultatem viii. 98
Thomas Wilbraham petitioned againſt the juſtices of the King's-Bench, that they had not done according to law and reaſon; which petition being delivered to the king and council, Wilbraham was indicted, convicted, fined, and ranſomed in B. R. vii. 108, 109
Plea to the juriſdiction of the court of King's-Bench, that the party ſtood impeached by the commons for the ſame treaſon iii. 228, 229

KING's COUNSEL.
Lord chancellor Elleſmere's advice to the king's counſel how to demean themſelves on capital proſecutions i. 351
The offices of attorney and ſolicitor-general have been rocks upon which many aſpiring lawyers have made ſhipwreck of their virtue and human nature xi. 273
Their conduct on lord Ruſſel's trial cenſured iv. 169
James the ſecond miſled by his counſel iv. 172
King's counſel generally act as parties iv. 173
King's counſel cajoled grand jury in private in Fitzharris's caſe iv. 173
King's counſel whiſpering with judge indecent and unjuſt iv. 176
King's counſel uſe means, and court permit them, to ſuppreſs truth, and to diſable priſoner from making his innocence appear iv. 176
They urge things as evidence of the crimes whereof priſoner is accuſed, which by law are not evidence iv. 177
They inſinuate facts as evidence, not proved, and wreſt as evidence of facts, what in ſenſe is not ſo iv. 177
They are always to have the laſt word iii. 816. iv. 40, 164. ix. 742
King's counſel may privately manage the evidence to the grand inqueſt, in order to find bill of indictment ii. 302
King's counſel who have been impeached, baniſhed, or executed.
Blake John Holt John
Herbert ſir Edward Lockton John.
A king's counſel always opens proceedings on the trials of peers, except on impeachments from the commons, [See IMPEACHMENTS] as appears from the following precedents:
Serjeant Chriſtopher Yelverton opened the indictment on the trials of the earls of Eſſex and Southampton i. 198
The attorney-general Bacon on counteſs of Somerſet's i. 349
And on the earl's i. 552
Sir Thomas Crew on lord Audley's i. 390
John Glynn, the king's eldeſt ſerjeant, opened the indictment againſt lord Morley vii. 424
Sir William Dolben, king's ſerjeant, and recorder of London, opened the indictment on the trial of the earl of Pembroke ii. 643
Serjeant Maynard opened the indictment on lord Cornwallis's trial ii. 725
And on lord Stafford's, though on an impeachment from the commons iii. 104
Sir Thomas Jenner, recorder of London, opened the indictment againſt lord Delamere iv. 216
Serjeant Thompſon opened the indictment on lord Mohun's trial iv. 513
Serjeant Wright opened the indictment on the earl of Warwick's trial v. 143
Spencer Cowper opened the indictment on lord Mohun's trial v. 181
Mr. ſerjeant Skinner, king's ſerjeant, opened the indictment on lord Balmerino's trial ix. *597
Mr. Perrot opened the indictment againſt earl Ferrers x. *482
Mr. Cornwall opened the indictment againſt lord Byron x. *520
No opening counſel on the trial of the ducheſs of Kingſton. See COUNSEL. JUDGES.

KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Ducheſs Dowager of,
Her trial for bigamy in full parliament, April 1776, 16 Geo. III. xi. 198
Henry earl Bathurſt, chancellor, lord high ſteward xi. 198
His grace's proceſſion xi. 198
His commiſſion xi. 198
Certiorari's and returns xi. 199
Caption of the indictment xi. 200
His grace's ſpeech to the priſoner xi. 200
Her grace's addreſs to the lords xi. 200
She is arraigned, and pleads not guilty in an unuſual manner xi. 201
Her grace offers the ſentence of the Eccleſiaſtical Court, annulling her former marriage in bar of the proſecution xi. 201
The attorney-general (Edward Thurlow, eſq.) objects to the reading it xi. 201
His reaſons xi. 201
Mr. Wallace anſwers the objections xi. 201
Proceedings in the Eccleſiaſtical Court read xi. 202
Mr. Wallace proceeds to ſhew them concluſive in bar of proſecution xi. 205
Mr. Mansfield on ſame ſide xi. 208
Doctor Calvert on ſame ſide xi. 211
Doctor Wynne on ſame ſide xi. 214
Mr. attorney-general proceeds to ſhew, that the eccleſiaſtical proceedings are not concluſive xi. 217
Mr. ſolicitor-general's (Alexander Wedderburne) his argument on the ſame ſide xi. 221
Mr. Dunning, his argument on the ſame ſide xi. 224
Doctor Harris, his argument on the ſame ſide xi. 227
Mr. Wallace's reply xi. 230
Doctor Calvert's argument on ſame ſide xi. 235
All the judges are unanimouſly of opinion, that ſuch proceedings are not concluſive xi. 262
Mr. attorney-general's ſpeech on ſtating the charge xi. 237
Marriage proved, and birth of a child xi. 239
Witneſs objects to diſcloſing any thing communicated to him in confidential truſt in his profeſſion xi. 243
Another witneſs, a peer, makes a like objection xi. 246
Not permitted to withdraw, though at the deſire of the party's counſel againſt whom he was produced xi. 246
Houſe adjourned xi. 247
Depoſition of witneſs read to him at his requeſt xi. 247
Her grace's ſpeech in her defence xi. 250
Says the court is well repreſented by logic xi. 250
Commends Blackſtone's commentaries xi. 251
Cites lord chief juſtice Hale xi. 251
Obſerves that ſhe has reſted on the ſeat where the poor blind Beliſarius is ſaid to have aſked charity of every paſſenger, after having conquered the Goths, Vandals, Africans, and Perſians xi. 252
Lord Camden's argument in reſpect of the admiſſibility of the examination of a witneſs abſent by indiſpoſition xi. 252, 253
Lord Mansfield's argument in reſpect of the obligation of a ſolicitor being examined againſt his client xi. 252
Evidence on the defence xi. 252
The ſolicitor-general's reply xi. 255
The priſoner is found guilty by all the lords except his grace of Newcaſtle, who found her guilty erroneouſly, but not intentionally xi. 256
Her grace prays the benefit of her peerage xi. 256
Mr. attorney-general makes a long argument in oppoſition thereto xi. 256
Anſwered by mr. Wallace xi. 258
And by mr. Mansfield xi. 258
Mr. attorney-general's reply xi. 259
The judges determine that a peereſs is intitled to the privilege of peerage in reſpect to clergy xi. 264
Her grace is allowed the benefit of the ſtatute, and diſcharged with an admonition from the lord high ſteward xi. 260

KINNERSLEY, THOMAS, Clerk. See HALES WILLIAM.

KINLOCK, ALEXANDER and CHARLES,
Proceedings againſt them at St. Margaret's-Hill, for treaſon, in Oct. Nov. and Dec. 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 568
Pleaded not guilty; withdraw their plea, and plead to the juriſdiction of the court ix. 568
Attorney-general demurs to it ix. 569
Their counſel argue their caſe ix. 569
Attorney-general's anſwer ix. 569
Opinion of the court ix. 570
Mr. Jodrell argues in behalf of the Kinlocks ix. 570
Counſel for the crown (mr. attorney and mr. ſolicitor-general, and ſir John Strange) anſwer the ſame ix. 571
Judges deliver their opinion ſeriatim ix. 571-2, &c.
Judgment given, as in caſes of high-treaſon ix. 572
Mr. juſtice Foſter's argument in this caſe ix. 572
Priſoner pardoned, on condition of going abroad ix. 575

KNEVET, ſir EDMUND, Knight,
His trial at Greenwich, for ſtriking a perſon within the king's palace there, June 10, 1541, 33 Hen. VIII. xi. 16
Arraignment xi. 16
Found guilty xi. 16
Judgment to loſe his right hand, &c. xi. 16
Perſons employed in the execution xi. 16
The manner in which ſir Edmund obtained a pardon of his offence xi. 16

* KIRKBY, Colonel RICHARD,
* John Conſtable, Cooper Wade, Samuel Vincent, and Chriſtopher Fogg, ſea-captains, their trial for cowardice, at a court-martial held on board the Bredah, in Port-Royal harbour in Jamaica, in America, the 8th, 9th, 10th, and 12th days of October, 1702, 1 Anne v. 445
* The charge and evidence againſt Kirkby v. 445
* He is convicted, and ſentenced to be ſhot v. 447
* Captain Conſtable convicted of breach of orders, &c. and ſentenced to be caſhiered v. 448
* Captain Wade convicted of cowardice, and ſentenced to be ſhot v. 448
* Captain Vincent and captain Fogg tried for ſigning a paper againſt fighting, and ſentenced to be ſuſpended v. 448
* KITCHEN, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

* KNIGHTLEY, ALEXANDER,
* His trial for high-treaſon, April 30, 1696, 8 Will. III. iv. 777
* The indictment removed by certiorari into the King's-Bench iv. 777

* The overt-acts laid in the indictment, the conſulting and agreeing to aſſaſſinate his majeſty, and providing arms, &c. for that purpoſe iv. 778
* And going to view the ground where the aſſaſſination was intended iv. 778
* A venire iſſued for the jury, as in civil cauſes ; and fifteen days between the teſte and return iv. 778
* The priſoner retracts his plea of not guilty, and pleads guilty iv. 779
* Mr. attorney-general demands judgment the ſame day iv. 779
* Which is denied by the court as irregular iv. 779
* A cenſure of Stayley's caſe iv. 779
* Lord chief juſtice Holt's ſpeech before judgment iv. 779
* The priſoner receives ſentence the laſt day of the term iv. 780. See x. 75. Ap.

KNIGHT.

Rolfe, ſerjeant at law, pleaded, that he was a ſerjeant at common law, and not bound to be a knight, but he was forced to it i. 547

KNIGHT of the GARTER.

Ceremony of degrading him from that order xi. 6

KNIGHTLEY, Sir RICHARD,

Arraigned in the Star-chamber, for maintaining ſeditious perſons, books, and libels, 31 Eliz. 1589 vii. 29
His anſwer vii. 30
Mr. Hales's anſwer vii. 31
Mr. Wickſtone and his wife, their anſwer vii. 31
Mr. Knightley fined 2000l. Mr. Hales 1000 marks, Mr. Wickſtone 500 marks, Mrs. Wickſtone 1000l. and impriſonment during pleaſure vii. 32

KNOWLER, Mr.

Opens information againſt Elles on quo warranto x. 128. Ap.

KNOWLES, CHARLES, Eſq.

Indictment found againſt him for the murder of Philip Lawſon, at Hicks's-Hall, by the name of Charles Knowles, Eſq. viii. 50
Removed by certiorari into the King's-Bench viii. 50
Defendant pleads miſnomer in abatement, that he is earl of Banbury, and ſets forth the letters patents, and the deſcents to himſelf viii. 51
The attorney-general replies, that the lords, upon his petition to be tried by his peers, had adjudged, he had no title to the earldom viii. 51
Demurrer, and joinder in demurrer viii. 51
Attorney-general, by order of the houſe of lords, delivers in an account of the proceedings in the King's-Bench againſt him viii. 52
All the judges ordered to attend the houſe, and the lords to be ſummoned viii. 53
Record of the King's-Bench brought in viii. 53
He petitions his majeſty for a writ of ſummons, or to recommend his caſe to the examination of the lords viii. 54
His majeſty refers his petition to the houſe viii. 54
Repreſentation to his majeſty, that five years before, on a former petition to the houſe, they had adjudged he had no title to the earldom, and diſmiſſed his petition viii. 54
Lord chief juſtice, and mr. juſtice Eyre, heard viii. 55
Proceedings in the houſe relating to the title of earl of Banbury, before March 1693 viii. 55
The petition of Nicholas earl of Banbury, 1661, referred to a committee viii. 55
Report, that the houſe of peers ſhould adviſe the king to ſend him a writ to come to parliament viii. 56
Act read the firſt time, declaring Nicholas earl of Banbury illegitimate viii. 56
Petitions the houſe for a writ of ſummons viii. 57
Queſtion put, if all the judges ſhould be heard in this caſe ; reſolved in the negative viii. 57
Reſolved, that the petitioner hath no right to the earldom of Banbury viii. 58
The arguments of lord chief juſtice Holt, and judge Powell viii. 58

KNOX*, THOMAS, and JOHN LANE,

* Their trial for a miſdemeanour, at the King's-Bench bar, Nov. 25, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 970. See iii 220. vii. 483
* The indictment, for endeavouring to defame Oates and Bedloe, the king's witneſſes ; and thereby to ſtifle and obſtruct the diſcovery of the popiſh plot ii. 970
* Evidence that Lane ſaid he was ſeduced by Knox to betray his maſter Titus Oates ii. 975
* Evidence that the lady Powis ſupported Knox with money ii. 985
* Knox's information read againſt him ii. 986
* The defence made by mr. Knox's counſel ii. 987
* That Knox was not in the contrivance ; but that the information was brought him by Lane and Oſborne ii. 987
* The defence made by mr. Holt, of counſel with Lane ii. 990
* The defendants convicted ii. 992
* Their ſentence ii. 992

L.

LACY, JOHN,

Of counſel for Hales, for forgery ix. 73, 82.
States the iſſue to be tried in quo warranto cauſe againſt Elles x. 131. Ap. See id. 135. Ap.

LAKE*, Doctor JOHN, Biſhop of Chicheſter,

* Tried for publiſhing a libel iv. 304

LALOR, ROBERT,

Of what quality and credit he was xi. 69
His apprehenſion and firſt examination xi. 69
His firſt indictment and conviction xi. 69
His ſecond examination xi. 69
His confeſſion or acknowledgment xi. 69
The indictment of Lalor upon ſtat. 16 Rich. II. chap. 5. xi. 69
The evidence againſt Lalor xi. 74
Lalor's confeſſion publicly read xi. 74
The jury find him guilty xi. 75
Judgment of præmunire xi. 75

LAMLEY*, ROBERT v. 287. See KIDD, & al.

LANE, JANE, Mrs.

Who protected and conducted king Charles the ſecond, after the battle of Worceſter, ſo often mentioned in hiſtory, was married to ſir Clement Fiſher, of Packington, near the city of Canterbury x. 64. Ap.

* LANE, JOHN ii. 970. See KNOX.

LANE, RICHARD,

His ſpeech for earl Stafford as to points of law i. 759
Extract from his book of reports xi. 30

LANGHORNE*, RICHARD, Eſq.

* His trial at the Old-Bailey, for high-treaſon, June 14, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 878
* The indictment ii. 878
* The overt-acts, writing letters to ſolicit aid from the pope, &c. and ſending them ii. 879
* Receiving commiſſions for civil and military officers from Rome, and diſtributing them ii. 879
* Conſenting to the Jeſuits conſpiracy to kill the king, and procuring 6000l. of the Benedictine monks for that purpoſe ii. 879
* And abetting Coleman's conſpiracy iv. 879
* Evidence of the plot in general iv. 881
* Hear-ſay evidence admitted iv. 881. See vi. 414
* Oates's evidence of ſome letters mr. Langhorne ſent to St. Omers iv. 882
* Of his acquainting him with what paſſed at the conſult, and his praying for the ſucceſs of it iv. 882
* Of the commiſſions received from Rome iv. 883
* Bedloe complains that a papiſt took notes in court iv. 887
* Oates depoſes, 800,000 crowns were raiſed at Rome for carrying on the popiſh plot, and mr. Langhorne had notice of its being paid at Paris iv. 890
* Mr. Langhorne objects, that an approver being pardoned, could not be a witneſs againſt the appellee ; and the ſame reaſon holds as to another accomplice in the crime iv. 891
* The court over-rule the objection ; and add, that the witneſſes being maintained by the government is no objection to their teſtimony iv. 891
* Oates complains to the court, that papiſts came into court with their ſwords on iv. 892
* The priſoner produces many witneſſes to prove Oates was at St. Omers when he pretended to be here at the conſult iv. 892
* The priſoner is not admitted to prove what the witneſſes ſwore againſt him at another trial iv. 899
* The witneſſes who appear for the priſoner abuſed by the mob iv. 899
* The chief juſtice admits that a witneſs may be confronted by another, to prove what the witneſs ſwore at another trial relating to the priſoner was falſe iv. 900
* Oates acknowledges he conceals part of his evidence, though ſworn to ſpeak the whole truth ii. 901
* Bedloe takes the liberty of concealing part of his evidence too ii. 902
* The king's counſel call witneſſes to prove Oates in London at the conſult ii. 902
* The priſoner calls other witneſſes to contradict them ii. 905
* Mr. Langhorne's obſervations on the evidence ii. 905
* The chief juſtice's directions to the jury ii. 906
* He tells them that papiſts were not to be believed in their common cauſe ii. 907
* Charges them with moſt pernicious principles, and inveighs againſt them ii. 907
* His lordſhip has ſtrong apprehenſions of the plot ii. 908
* Speaks of a letter that was found, which he ſays was an undeniable evidence of the plot ii. 909
* The priſoner ſhews that was no evidence at all of it ii. 909
* The priſoner convicted ; and the recorder commends the verdict ii. 910
* The five Jeſuits are brought to the bar again ; and mr. recorder makes a ſpeech ii. 910
* He pronounces ſentence on mr. Langhorne and the five Jeſuits ii. 911
* The dying ſpeeches of Langoorne, Whitebread, Harcourt, Fenwick, Gavan and Turner ii. 912, &c.

LARCENY.

Eſſential to larceny and robbery, that the goods be taken againſt the will of the owner x. 443
If the owner takes his own goods from his bailee animo furandi, he will be guilty of larceny x. 443

LATIMER, HUGH,

Some paſſages out of his ſermon touching lord Sudley's death vii. 10

* LATIMER, RICHARD ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

LAUD*, WILLIAM, Lord Archbiſhop of CANTERBURY,

His ſpeech in the Star chamber againſt William Prynne and others, for ſeveral libels i. 486
His extreme inveteracy towards Prynne i. 497. n.
* His trial, March 12, 1643, 19 Car. I. i. 824. See vi. 408
* Mr. Harbottle Grimſtone's ſpeech againſt him in the houſe of commons i. 824
* His grace impeached of high-treaſon generally i. 825
* He is committed to the black rod i. 825
* Mr. Pym's ſpeech at delivering the articles i. 826
* His grace's ſpeech upon bringing up the articles i. 828
* Fourteen general articles exhibited againſt his grace i. 828
* He is committed to the Tower i. 830
* Two ordinances, depriving him, before his trial, of the power of diſpoſing of preferments i. 830

* Ten

INDEX.

* Ten additional articles exhibited againſt him, three years after his commitment i. 831
* Counſel and a ſolicitor allowed his grace i. 833
* He petitions, that they would diſtinguiſh between what was treaſon and what was miſdemeanour i. 834
* But to no effect i. 834
* His grace's anſwer i. 835
* The trial appointed the 16th day of January i. 836
* No anſwer being put in to the firſt articles, the trial is put off i. 836
* Mr. Maynard's ſpeech on that occaſion i. 837
* His grace's anſwer to the firſt and further articles i. 837
* He receives notice of trial again i. 838
* The names of the managers for the houſe of commons i. 838
* The method obſerved at the trial i. 838
* The trial begins i. 839
* Serjeant Wilde's ſpeech at opening the charge i. 840
* His grace replies to ſerjeant Wilde i. 842
* His grace is charged with adviſing the king to uſe extraordinary ways for a ſupply i. 846
* And ſaying the king might uſe his power i. 846
* And aſſerting the legality of ſhip-money, &c. i. 847
* Aſſerting proclamations to be of equal force with a ſtatute i. 848
* Advancing the prerogative above the law i. 849
* Charged with ſaying, he hoped to ſee the canons and the king's prerogative equal to an act of parliament i. 849
* The ordinaries power over ſchool-maſters i. 849
* Where a canon will not be of force againſt a cuſtom i. 849
* Charged with preferring dr. Manwaring i. 850
* Refuſing to conſecrate one elected biſhop, a præmunire i. 850
* Charged with granting ſubſidies in the convocation i. 851
* The clergy had a power of granting their own ſubſidies i. 851
* Charged with pulling down the houſes about St. Paul's, to repair the church i. 852
* Whether it be lawful to build on conſecrated ground? i. 853
* Charged with compelling the goldſmiths to inhabit either in Cheapſide or Lombard-ſtreet i. 853
* The oath ex officio uſed in the High Commiſſion Court i. 855
* Charged with being the cauſe of the cenſure of Burton, Prynne, and Baſtwick i. 856
* With adminiſtring the ſacrament at the rails i. 860
* Charge about placing the communion-table i. 861
* Charged with proſecuting Bagſhaw of the Temple, for ſaying biſhops ought not to meddle in civil affairs i. 864
* With countenancing wakes, &c. i. 864
* With threatening thoſe who brought prohibitions i. 865
* With accepting bribes i. 867
* His grace brought to the houſe, and remanded without any thing done; complains of the charge he is put to i. 870
* Charged with making canons, after the diſſolution of the parliament i. 870
* The convocation ſit, after the diſſolution of the parliament i. 870
* The lords did not permit his grace to ſhew that the canons were agreeable to law i. 871
* Charged with aſſuming papal power i. 871
* The titles given him by the univerſity of Oxford i. 871
* The title of Holineſs given to primitive biſhops i. 871
* Charged that he would exempt the clergy from the civil power i. 872
* Charged with making eccleſiaſtical perſons juſtices of the peace, &c. i. 873
* Whether a clergyman ſhall be taxed to contribute, in caſe of a robbery? i. 874
* Juſtices of peace called before the High Commiſſion for holding their ſeſſions in the church-yard i. 875
* Charged with a deſign of reſtoring impropriations to the church i. 877
* With adding ſeveral exorbitant clauſes to the High Commiſſion i. 878
* His grace petitions for an allowance out of his eſtate; but is denied i. 879
* Charged with altering the ſtatutes of the univerſity of Oxford i. 880
* With cenſuring Baſtwick for writing againſt biſhops i. 882
* Biſhops derive their power in temporals from the prince, but in matters purely ſpiritual from Chriſt i. 883
* But may not exerciſe their ſpiritual power without leave of the prince i. 883
* Charged with altering the communion-table, and putting up painted glaſs in his chapel i. 883
* Bowing towards the altar i. 884
* Organs, candleſticks, &c. i. 884
* Conſecrating the communion-plate i. 885
* His Bible with the five wounds of our Saviour i. 885
* Prayers at canonical hours i. 885
* Pictures in his gallery i. 885
* A piece of tapeſtry, with a crucifix wrought in it, hung up for an altar-piece i. 886
* His grace is allowed 200l. out of his rents i. 887
* The pictures in the windows of Lambeth-chapel i. 887
* The ceremonies at the coronation charged with ſuperſtition i. 887
* Charged with altering the coronation oath i. 887
* The virgin Mary's picture at St. Mary's at Oxford i. 890
* Dr. Brown's kneeling before the altar i. 893
* The States and the king of Sweden prayed for before his majeſty i. 895
* Sherfield cenſured for defacing a church-window i. 895
* A Bible printed with pictures i. 895
* His grace is charged with expunging paſſages againſt popery out of books i. 896
* Charged with conſecrating churches i. 897
* With publiſhing the Book of Sports i. 899
* The people allowed their recreations at Geneva on Sundays i. 899
* Miniſters puniſhed for not reading the Book of Sports i. 899
* Charged with introducing arbitrary power i. 901
* Cauſing miniſters to leave their cures, and fly beyond ſea, &c. i. 901
* Stopping books at the preſs, and expunging paſſages out of them i. 902
* Charged with altering prayers on the 5th of November i. 906
* Lectures i. 906
* Charged with maintaining tranſubſtantiation i. 908
* With licenſing Popiſh and Arminian books i. 909
* That his chaplains preached Arminian doctrine i. 910
* A Bible with a popiſh table i. 910
* His grace's books given to Hugh Peters i. 910
* Charged with preferring only ſuch as were popiſhly affected i. 910
* That he hindered the buying in impropriations i. 913
* Endeavouring to create a diviſion between the church of England and the reformed churches i. 914
* His grace receives abuſive language at his trial i. 915
* Epiſcopacy jure divino i. 915
* Charged with projecting to reconcile the church of England to the church of Rome i. 916
* And converſing with Jeſuits and harbouring them i. 916
* Praying for the queen and prince i. 918, 919
* A cardinal's cap offered him i. 921
* That he denied the pope to be Antichriſt i. 922
* And ſaid Rome was a true church, &c. i. 922
* The homilies don't make the pope to be Antichriſt i. 922
* That he relieved prieſts i. 924
* Would not give the papiſts ill language i. 926
* Popiſh books i. 926
* Charged with endeavouring to ſubvert the rights of parliament i. 927
* Hopes and fears concerning a parliament i. 929
* Anſwer to the remonſtrance i. 930
* Earl of Strafford procures the houſe of commons in Ireland to be choſen half papiſts and half proteſtants i. 931
* His grace finds his picture fallen on the face i. 932
* His pretended dream i. 932
* Is allowed the benefit of the act of oblivion, as to the Scotch affairs i. 933
* His grace's diary printed in folio, and given to each lord i. 933
* His recapitulation i. 933
* The papers he had prepared for his defence taken from him, and all things neceſſary for his defence denied him i. 933
* The happy ſtate of the kingdom while his grace was concerned in the adminiſtration i. 934
* His beſt actions made the foundation of a charge of high-treaſon i. 934
* Charged with the acts of the reſpective courts wherein he ſat i. 934
* The church is to determine what is true doctrine, and not the parliament i. 935
* If the actions themſelves are not treaſon, the reſult of them cannot be treaſon i. 937
* Mr. Browne ſums up the evidence, and makes his obſervations on it for the commons i. 937
* His grace's counſel ſhew that nothing charged in the articles amounts to high-treaſon i. 938
* The uncertainty what was treaſon at common law i. 938
* The ſtatute of 25 Edw. III. to be taken ſtrictly i. 939
* The uncertainty of the word endeavour i. 940
* The words to go about, or attempt to do a thing, adjudged void in a conveyance for the uncertainty i. 940
* Cardinal Wolſey adjudged guilty only of a præmunire, for endeavouring to ſubvert the laws i. 941
* His grace's counſel ſhew that none of the particulars contained in the articles are treaſon i. 941
* The number of miſdemeanours cannot alter their nature i. 942
* The mob petition the parliament for juſtice upon his grace, at the inſtigation of their preachers i. 942
* The houſe of commons command his grace to be brought before them i. 942
* Mr. Browne delivers a ſummary of the charge againſt him there i. 943
* His grace is admitted to hear it i. 943
* His grace ſeems to object to his accuſers becoming his judges, and that without hearing the evidence againſt him i. 943
* Mr. Browne replies i. 947
* The houſe of commons paſs his attainder i. 947
* The commons threaten the lords, to induce them to paſs the ordinance for his attainder i. 947
* The lords agree as to the fact; but the judges declare there was no treaſon in the articles i. 947
* The lords of opinion there was no treaſon in them i. 947
* Chriſtmas-day enjoined to be kept as a faſt i. 947
* The lords paſs the ordinance of attainder i. 948
* He has a pardon from the king; which is rejected i. 948
* Allowed but one chaplain to attend him; and he in the preſence of a preſbyterian teacher i. 948
* His dying ſpeech on the ſcaffold i. 948
* His diſcourſe with the ſtanders-by i. 949
* He is beheaded i. 949

LAWS.

Fact muſt be eſtabliſhed, not merely ſuppoſed by priſoner, before his counſel will be admitted to argue the law upon it v. 175
Law implies a malicious and ſeditious intent, where one publiſhes a libel ii. 542
Common law may be antiquated, though ſtatute law cannot iii. 556
Vote of commons cannot alter the law iii. 289

How the penal laws came to be put in execution in king Charles the ſecond's reign ii. 678
The king cannot diſpenſe with the laws iv. 369
This collection of trials uſeful to the ſtudy of the law Em. Pref. i.
Obſervations on the excellency of the Engliſh laws Em. Pref. iii.
Obſervations on law proceedings being in Latin Em. Pref. vii.
Obſervations on the voluminouſneſs of the laws Em. Pref. xv.
Inſtances of their being hard in ſeveral caſes, even in the opinion of lord chief juſtice Jefferies iii. 1052
The laws of England are in a great meaſure grounded upon immemorial cuſtoms and uſages Em. Pref. i.
Saving lives of the ſubject if contrary to law, the party muſt be indemnified by parliament xi. 282, 283
Lord Bacon's encomium on the laws of England vi. 407
Lord Bacon ſays, there is no worſe torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
If the legality of an action is not to be found in the books, the act muſt be illegal xi. 321

LAWYERS.

They argue one way when counſel, and another when judges i. 638, 645
Lawyers gave their aid to the attempts made by the crown againſt the rights of parliament xi. 29
To the great diſgrace of the profeſſion of the law, ſome of the brighteſt ornaments thereof [Bacon, ſir Francis, and Davis, ſir John] gave their aid to attempts againſt the rights of parliament xi. 29

LAYER, CHRISTOPHER*, Eſquire,

* His trial at the King's-Bench bar for high-treaſon, 21 November, 1722, 9 George I. vi. 229
* The indictment, for conſpiring the death of the king, and to raiſe a rebellion in the county of Eſſex vi. 229
* His counſel move that his fetters be taken off during his arraignment, and alledge Cranburne's caſe vi. 231
* Which is refuſed by the court vi. 232
* Four exceptions to the indictment vi. 232
* All over-ruled vi. 237
* His plea of miſnomer in abatement vi. 237
* Mr. attorney-general demurs to it vi. 238
* The priſoner's counſel pray time to conſider of it vi. 238
* Which being over-ruled, after a long debate, he withdraws his plea, and pleads not guilty vi. 242
* The trial begins vi. 244
* The pannel called over in the preſence of the priſoner vi. 246
* Moved, that Mr. attorney might challenge firſt; but over-ruled vi. 247
* Mr. Wearg opens the indictment vi. 249
* Mr. ſerjeant Pengelly the evidence vi. 249
* Is ſeconded by ſir Robert Raymond, attorney-general vi. 254
* Mr. Lynch called vi. 257
* The priſoner's counſel move to examine him on a voyer dire, whether he has a pardon, or other reward, for giving his evidence vi. 257
* Which is denied by the court, it not being ſufficient to take off his teſtimony, but only to leſſen his credit vi. 259
* The queſtion aſked him after he had given his evidence, and denied by him vi. 265
* His evidence that the priſoner engaged him in the deſign of the inſurrection vi. 260
* And gave him money to encourage him vi. 262
* That he carried him to view lord Cadogan's houſe, in order to contrive how to ſeize him vi. 262
* That he rode with him into Eſſex, and there read to him a declaration, exciting the nation to revolt vi. 263
* The witneſs croſs-examined vi. 265
* Matthew Plunkett's evidence vi. 266
* He ſwears that the priſoner acquainted him with the deſign, and engaged him to corrupt the ſerjeants and common ſoldiers vi. 267
* And gave him money to encourage him vi. 268
* He is croſs-examined by the priſoner and his counſel vi. 269
* Evidence of two meſſengers, of the finding papers in mrs. Maſon's lodging vi. 270
* Of mrs. Maſon, that they were delivered to her by the priſoner vi. 272
* Evidence that the ſcheme was written in the priſoner's hand vi. 275
* And owned by him before the council vi. 276
* The priſoner's counſel object to its being read vi. 276
* The ſcheme ordered to be read; and read accordingly vi. 280
* Receipts for money, under the Pretender's hand, read vi. 282
* Evidence of his being examined before the lords of the council vi. 283. See viii. 571.
* Several other letters and papers read vi. 284, &c.
* Evidence offered to prove the priſoner's correſponding with the Pretender vi. 286
* Which is objected to by his counſel, as being a ſpecies of treaſon not laid in the indictment vi. 286
* Held, that it may be given to corroborate the evidence already given; but not to prove a new overt-act vi. 287
* Objected for the priſoner, that the examination ought to be produced, and not parole-evidence given of it vi. 287
* Which is over-ruled vi. 288
* Mr. Stanyan gives an account of what he ſaid before the council vi. 288
* That the priſoner owned he had two conferences with the Pretender vi. 287, 289
* Mr. Delafaye's evidence to the ſame purpoſe vi. 290
* Evidence of arms being found in the priſoner's houſe vi. 290
* Of his eſcaping from the meſſenger's cuſtody vi. 291
* The priſoner's defence by his counſel vi. 292
* The priſoner's counſel argue, that the proof in Eſſex does not amount to an overt-act of treaſon vi. 292
* Are directed to make all their defence at once vi. 295
* Mr. Hungerford's ſpeech for the priſoner vi. 295
* Mr. Ketelbey's ſpeech on the ſame ſide vi. 296
* Witneſſes called to impeach Lynch's credit vi. 297
* Witneſſes againſt Plunkett vi. 300
* Againſt Maſon vi. 302
* The priſoner calls witneſſes to give an account how the arms came to be found in his houſe vi. 304
* And to prove that the ſcheme was not of his hand-writing vi. 304
* He concludes his defence vi. 305
* Sir Philip Yorke, ſolicitor-general, his reply vi. 306
* He maintains the proof of an overt-act in Eſſex vi. 314
* Witneſſes called for the king to mr. Lynch's credit vi. 317
* Lord chief juſtice Pratt's directions to the jury vi. 318
* The priſoner convicted vi. 322
* He is called to ſentence vi. 323
* His counſel move that the venire be read vi. 323
* Which is over-ruled vi. 325
* Objected as an error, that the venire was made returnable the 19th, and the trial was not till the 21ſt of November vi. 325
* Which is ruled to be according to the courſe of the court vi. 328
* Objected as a fault in the indictment, that the words of the declaration were not ſet forth vi. 328
* Mr. Hungerford reprimanded vi. 329
* Adjudged by the court, that if one overt-act holds, the indictment is good vi. 329
* The reſolution of all the judges in dr. Sacheverel's caſe, offered by the priſoner's counſel to maintain their objection vi. 330
* This reſolution cenſured as erroneous and againſt law vi. 331
* And the priſoner's objection over-ruled vi. 331
* The priſoner receives ſentence vi. 332
* His execution vi. 332

LAYTON, Sir THOMAS. See FOWLIS Sir DAVID.

LEACH, BENJAMIN,

Proceeded againſt at the Old Bailey, for a contempt of the court, 14 October, 1682, 33 Car. II. x. 31
The indictment againſt him x. 31
Offered a plea ſigned by counſel, that the jurors who found the indictment were not legally impannelled x. 32
Court would not receive the plea x. 32
Were of opinion it was a frivolous plea x. 33
Defendant refuſed to plead any other plea, and was fined twenty marks, and committed to Newgate till he paid it x. 33

LEACH, DRYDEN,

Proceedings on error in an action of falſe impriſonment, by him, againſt John Money, James Watſon, and Robert Blackmore, three of the king's meſſengers, B. R. E. term, 5 Geo. III. and M. term, 6 Geo. III. 1765 xi. 307
Bill of exceptions xi. 307
Ceremony of the chief juſtice of C. P. acknowledging his ſeal thereto xi. 307
Cauſe of action xi. 307
Occaſion of the bill of exceptions xi. 308
Effect of the aſſignment of errors upon the bill of exceptions xi. 308
Mr. ſolicitor-general De Grey, his argument for the plaintiffs in error xi. 309
Mr. Dunning's argument contra for Leach, the plaintiff below xi. 310
Lord chief juſtice Mansfield, his declaration previous to giving judgment xi. 311, 312
The declaration of Wilmot, Yates, and Aſton, the other three judges xi. 312
The judgment affirmed xi. 312

LECHMERE, NICHOLAS,

Shews the nature and tendency of the facts doctor Henry Sacheverel is charged with, on the impeachment for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 651
His argument in maintenance of the fourth article v. 708
His animadverſions on ſome expreſſions let fall by the doctor's counſel v. 802
His ſpeech in the houſe of commons, upon his motion for impeaching earl Derwentwater, lord Widdrington, earl Nithiſdale, earl Carnwarth, viſcount Kenmure, and lord Nairn. for treaſon vi. 1
Characterizes the great duke of Marlborough vi. 1
Ordered into cuſtody, for pleading on return of habeas corpus, in a parliamentary commitment viii. 139
Urges that the Ayleſbury-men were bailable, and objects to return viii. 158
Held, that the aſſerting the utter illegality of reſiſtance on any pretence whatſoever, condemns the foundation on which our government ſtands v. 651
That the ſubjects had not only a power and right in themſelves to make that reſiſtance at the Revolution; but lay under an indiſpenſable obligation of doing it v. 651, 652. See RESISTANCE.

LECHMERE, NICHOLAS, Attorney-General,

His ſpeech againſt Matthews for treaſon ix. 684
His reply ix. 704

LEE, Captain THOMAS,

For high-treaſon, 1600 vii. 44
The indictment, for endeavouring to perſuade ſir Robert Croſs to lay hands on the queen, and thereby deliver the earls of Eſſex and Southampton vii. 44
Sir Robert Croſs's evidence vii. 45
Poyne's evidence read, of captain Lee's preſſing up to the privy chamber door vii. 45
Found guilty, and executed vii. 47

LEE, WILLIAM,

Of counſel againſt Corbet, on an appeal for murder ix. 153, 154

LEE, Sir WILLIAM, Lord Chief Juſtice,

His opinion as to plea of being forced into rebellion ix. 567
His prudent conduct, on mr. attorney-general Ryder wiſhing to put leading ing queſtions to a jury, after they had acquitted a bookſeller proſecuted for publiſhing a libel x. 208. Ap.

* LEEDS, THOMAS Duke of. See DANBY Earl of v. 356, 383.
LEGGE, Sir HENEAGE, Baron of the Exchequer,
His charge to the jury on the trial of Mary Blandy x. 25
His ſpeech on paſſing ſentence on her x. 33
Would never ſuffer a perſon that had declared he was perjured in another affair, to be examined as a witneſs x. 390
LEGISLATURE.
The legiſlative power ought to reſent as an injury, an inferior court's ſnatching the exerciſe of it out of their hands, which only belongs to the ſupreme authority iv. 171
Courts of juſtice are to put the laws in execution, and to leave all conſiderations of inconvenience to the legiſlature ix. 569, 570
Upon what principle and rule of law the legiſlature by ſtatute 9 Annæ, chap. 19, diſcharged the party who was ſuppoſed to have given the marquis De Guiſcard, who ſtabbed mr. Harley ſitting in council, the mortal wound, from proſecution, and declared the killing to be lawful and neceſſary ix. 63. n.
LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER, D. D.
Subſtance of information for a libel xi. 120
Doctor Leighton's anſwer xi. 121
Upon hearing, court of opinion that the particulars of information were proved xi. 121
The two lords chief juſtices of opinion that defendant might have been proceeded againſt for treaſon xi. 121
Unanimouſly adjudge defendant guilty xi. 121
A very ſevere ſentence pronounced xi. 121
Ordered by court to be degraded xi. 121
Degraded accordingly xi. 121
Made his eſcape xi. 121
Hue and cry printed by order of the privy council xi. 121
Form thereof xi. 121
Retaken in Bedfordſhire xi. 121
Memorial of Leighton's eſcape, and execution of his ſentence, in the biſhop of London's diary xi. 121
Severity of the puniſhment owing to the then juncture of public affairs xi. 121
Proceedings againſt thoſe who procured Leighton's eſcape xi. 121
The commons reſolved, that fine, corporal puniſhment, and impriſonment were illegal, and that he ought to have ſatisfaction for his ſufferings and damages xi. 121. n.
LETTERS.
S. P. Q. R. explained i. 242
The lord preſident's excellent letter to lord Lovat, being a perſuaſive againſt his lordſhip's ruining himſelf and family, by running into the rebellion; and which is mentioned in lord Lovat's trial ix. 679.* x. 189. Ap.
Lord Lovat's letter in anſwer to the above x. 190. Ap.
His lordſhip's letter to his ſon Simon, then priſoner in Edinburgh caſtle x. 191. Ap.
Another letter from his lordſhip to his ſon ix. 718*
Letter of lord Lovat to the Pretender's ſon ix. 714*
Another from his lordſhip to the laird of Lochiel ix. 715*
Earl Kilmarnock's letter to his ſon x. 181. Ap.
Lord Chancellor Bacon's letter to both houſes of parliament, at the time of their proceeding againſt him for bribery and corruption i. 380
Sir John Fenwick's to his lady v. 80. n.
The judges letter to the king, concerning the trial of lord Audley's ſervants for rape and buggery i. 396
Sir Walter Raleigh's letter to James I. containing his defence for his Guiana actions i. 228
Sir Walter's letter to the king the night before his execution i. 228
Another to his wife i. 229
Letter of Thomas duke of Norfolk to Henry VIII. on his commitment for treaſon xi. 19, 20
Letter from Lieutenant of the Tower, concerning the carriage of queen Anna Boleyn, the day of her death, more faithful than copy in lord Herbert's hiſtory of Henry VIII. xi. 13
King James's letter to archbiſhop Abbot, concerning the divorce between Robert earl of Eſſex and lady Frances Howard x. 29. Ap.
Sir Lyttleton Powys, judge B. R. his letter to lord chancellor Parker, giving account of parſon Hendley's trial at Rocheſter aſſizes, for preaching charity ſermon, and of other matters on that circuit x. 89. Ap.
King Charles I.'s to the houſe of commons, againſt paſſing earl Strafford's attainder i. 761
The earl's to his majeſty i. 762
Biſhop of Exeter's letter ſent to the houſe of commons, in their debates relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 191
Queen Anna Boleyn's letter to king Henry VIII. xi. 14
Letter from Oliver Saint John to the mayor of Marlborough, which was the ſubject of the proſecution againſt the former xi. 110
Earl of Northumberland's letter to Cromwell, denying any contract, or promiſe of marriage, between queen Anna Boleyn, wife to Henry VIII. and himſelf xi. 14
Queen Anna Boleyn's letter to Cromwell, teſtifying her religion xi. 15
Letter from ſir Francis Goodwin, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, reſpecting the controverted election between him and ſir John Forteſcue vii. 76
Lord chief juſtice North's letter to ſir Lionel Jenkins, ſecretary of ſtate, reſpecting his examination of Bedloe viii. 461
Sir Francis Walſingham's letter to ſir Amias Pawlet, relative to the death of Mary queen of Scots vii. 29
The duke of Somerſet's letter to ſir Thomas Hobby, declaring the traitorous proceedings of the admiral Seymour, lord Sudley vii. 2
Sir John Finch, lord Fordwich, his letter to the houſe of commons, to deſire to be admitted to ſpeak for himſelf, on a motion in that houſe to impeach him of treaſon vii. 309
His letter from the Hague to the lord chamberlain, on being impeached; and having fled to Holland in conſequence of it vii. 313
No evidence ought to be given of contents of letter, unleſs letter produced v. 31
Letter read in evidence not written either by or to priſoner ii. 714
The earl of Somerſet's obſcure letter to king James I. i. 365. See CHARITY. EVIDENCE. LETTERS PATENT.
LEVINZ, Sir CRESWELL, Attorney-General,
His ſpeech on the trial of John Taſborough and Anne Price, for perjury ii. 1019
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Thomas White, alias Whitebread, for treaſon, in conſpiring death of king, ſubverſion of government, religion, &c. 13 June, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 834
His reply ii. 867
Opens the evidence againſt ſir Thomas Gaſcoigne, for treaſon iii. 4
Opens the evidence on the trial of Roger earl Caſtlemaine, for high-treaſon, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 37
Sums up the evidence iii. 55
This lawyer characteriſed by ſir John Hawles iv. 166
* LEWIS, DAVID,
* His trial for high-treaſon, the 28th and 29th of March, 1679, 31 Car. II. at Monmouth aſſizes ii. 801
* The indictment, for accepting popiſh orders ii. 801
* Evidence of the priſoner's ſaying maſs, and performing the other functions of a prieſt ii. 801
* Popiſh utenſils taken upon him ii. 802
* The priſoner objects the facts laid in the indictment were not proved ii. 802
* The court anſwer, it was ſufficient to ſhew he exerciſed the office of a prieſt; and that it was not neceſſary to ſhew how he was ordained ii. 802
* The priſoner is convicted ii. 804
* Sentence paſſed ii. 804
* His ſpeech at execution ii. 804
* LEWIS, JAMES v. 1. See DAWSON.
LEY, Sir JAMES, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench,
Pronounces judgment againſt lord chancellor Bacon i. 387
* LIBEL.
* One indicted and convicted of felony, for libelling and impugning the queen's authority in cauſes eccleſiaſtical i. 168
* Information in the Star-chamber for libelling the king and court, &c. i. 418
* One indicted of high-treaſon, and three of a miſdemeanour, in libelling the government ii. 528
* Indictment for publiſhing a libel againſt infant-baptiſm, &c. ii. 550
* Libelling the government, or private perſons, puniſhable ii. 1035
* Writing falſe news, though it be neither ſeditious nor ſcandalous, puniſhable ii. 1040. iii. 46, 57
* Publiſhing any news-books without licence, puniſhable; ſelling a libel, a publication of it iii. 92
* The publiſhing any thing reflecting on the government, or a private perſon, though it be true, is a libel; and the writer, or publiſher, ſhall be puniſhed for it iii. 96
* One attainted of high-treaſon for a treaſonable libel iii. 287
* Indictment for a miſdemeanour, in writing and publiſhing a libel reflecting on the juſtice of the nation iii. 505
* Indictment for a treaſonable libel iii. 794
* Reflections on the government, ſent in a letter by the poſt to a private friend, adjudged to be a framing and publiſhing a libel iii. 934
* Where an act is unlawful, it implies malice iii. 939
* What ſhall be deemed a libel, or a publication of it. See the SEVEN BISHOPS TRIAL iv. 304, &c.
* The petition of the city of London againſt diſſolving the parliament, adjudged to be a libel iv. 392
* One cannot be adjudged guilty of writing a libel, unleſs it can be proved where he wrote it; but wherever he directs it to be printed, that is a publication in that county v. 538
* Tranſcribing a libel, makes one guilty of the libel v. 539
* It may be a libel, though no perſon in particular be reflected on v. 540
A reſcript of Theodoſius, concerning ſlander, applauded by queen Elizabeth i. 198
Court direct jury to conſider only, whether defendant wrote the book, and to leave nature of offence to them i. 173, 176
Libel in indictment compared with the book publiſhed by defendant iii. 95
Concealing the author, as well as compoſing the libel, is capital in Scotland i. 431
When the word falſely is inſerted in proceedings for defamatory libels, defendant ought not to be found guilty, if aſſertion be true Em. Pref. viii.
Law implies malicious and ſeditious intent, where one publiſhes a ſeditious libel ii. 542
Putting libel in poſt, adjudged a publication of it iv. 353
Queen Anne's proclamation for reſtraining the printing and publiſhing libels v. 782
Truth may be a libel iv. 386, ix. 269
Seditious libel actual breach of the peace iv. 316. See WILKES JOHN.
Proceedings in Star-chamber againſt dr. Leighton, for a libel xi. 120
"Hereditary right" a ſeditious libel vi. 1, viii. 682. n.
In the caſe of libels, the ſpecific charge muſt be ſet forth vi. 75
As the crime of a libel conſiſts only in the words, therefore they muſt be laid in the indictment, and proved as laid vi. 77

If a man ſets out a libel verbatim, he is tied up to the very words, and by a letter or ſyllable miſtaken, he may be gone; therefore the beſt way is to ſet out the ſubſtance only vi. 77
Lord chief juſtice Holt ſaid, that a libel might be deſcribed either by the ſenſe and ſubſtance, or by the particular words, and that an indictment or information in either of thoſe forms would be good vi. 330
Several libels cenſured, and the authors proſecuted by order of the houſe of peers viii. 78
Lord chief juſtice Scroggs's ſpeech, occaſioned by the many libels and pamphlets publiſhed viii. 457
Of blaſphemous libels Em. Pref. vii. See WILKES JOHN.
Of defamatory libels Em. Pref. vii.
Of obſcene libels x. 93, 94. Ap. See CURL EDWARD. INDICTMENTS. INFORMATIONS. RECORDS. WILKES JOHN.
Short hiſtory of puniſhment for libelling i. 496
Animadverſions on two 30th of January ſermons, reſolved a villainous libel by the lords, and condemned to be burnt by the common hangman, in 1702 viii. 80
" Reaſons for addreſſing his majeſty, to invite the electreſs dowager and elector of Hanover, and reaſons for attainting and abjuring the pretended prince of Wales," cenſured by the lords viii. 82
Libel proſecuted on information or indictment, not material whether true or falſe ix. 269. See ix. 287, 288
See remarks on the trial of John Peter Zenger ix. 299
A ſerjeant at law proſecuted for libelling an attorney ix. 311
Truth of a libel not to be given in evidence ix. 311, 312. See ix. 287, 288
Libelling a common ſtrumpet is as great an offence as libelling an honeſt woman, and perhaps more dangerous to a breach of the peace ix. 312
An attorney at law fined for libelling a juſtice of peace ix. 313
The opinion of chief juſtice Holt cited both for and againſt, in the caſe of libels ix. 297
All our kings have been libelled in hiſtory ix. 295
Judge Powys declared in all his charges on the ſummer circuit for Kent, in the year 1719, and the two laſt terms at Weſtminſter, that the number of baſe libels and ſeditious papers was intolerable, and that a quicker courſe would be taken about them; for that government would not be ſo much troubling itſelf to find out the authors of them, but as often as any ſuch papers were found on the tables of coffee-houſes, or other news-houſes, the maſter of the houſe ſhould be anſwerable for ſuch papers, and ſhould be proſecuted as the publiſher of them, and left to find out the authors or printers, and take care, at his peril, what papers he takes in x. 92. Ap.
Indictments for libels vi. 13, 14. Ap. x. 37. Ap.
There is no other word in the law but " libel," whereby to expreſs the true idea of an infamous writing xi. 304
The ſeverity of the law of libels pointed out xi. 322
Unjuſt acquittals in caſes of libels, bring an odium on the preſs itſelf xi. 323
If juries will not convict libellers on clear proof, they may occaſion the reſtraint of the preſs xi. 323
The word " purport" altered to " tenor," in a niſi prius record for a ſeditious libel xi. 324
Secretary of ſtate's warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302
An extract from " Digeſt of the Law concerning Libels" xi. 304
Privilege of parliament does not extend to a proſecution for a ſeditious libel xi. 305
Member of parliament diſcharged without bail, being committed for writing a ſeditious libel xi. 302, 305
The caſe of the ſeven biſhops, as to a libeller being bound to find ſurety of the peace, denied to be law xi. 304, 305. See
ANDERTON WILLIAM.
BAILEY DAVID.
BISHOPS the Seven.
BALMERINO JOHN lord.
BASTWICK JOHN.
BROOKS NATHAN
BUCKNER WILLIAM.
CARR HENRY.
CURTIS JANE.
DOVER SIMON.
FARWELL JOHN.
FULLER WILLIAM.
FRANCKLIN RICHARD.
HALES
HARRIS BENJAMIN.
HOLLIS ſir JOHN.
JOHNSON SAMUEL.
KEACH BENJAMIN.
KENN THOMAS.
KNIGHTLEY ſir RICH. & al.
LAKE JOHN.
LEIGHTON ALEXANDER.
LILBURNE JOHN.
LLOYD WILLIAM.
OWEN WILLIAM.
PAYNE WILLIAM.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.
SACHEVEREL Dr. HENRY.
SMITH FRANCIS.
SPARKES MICHAEL.
THOMPSON NATHAN. & al.
TUTCHIN JOHN.
WICKSTONE and his Wife.
ZENGER PETER.

LIBERTY of the PRESS.

The judges were of opinion, that printing news might be prohibited by law vii. 478, 480, 482, 486. xi. 322
An attorney fined 1000 marks for publiſhing " The long Parliament diſſolved;" bound to his good behaviour for ſeven years, and his name ſtruck out of the roll of attornies, without any offence alledged in his practice iii. 219. vii. 482, 483
If an odium is brought on the preſs, it may be fatal to liberty xi. 323
If juries do not convict libellers when the proof is clear, it may tend to reſtrain that preſs which they refuſe to regulate xi. 323. See iii. 223. iv. 478. n. 486, 489. ZENGER PETER.

LIBERTY of the SUBJECT.

The excellency of the Engliſh laws conſiſts principally in the proviſions made for the liberty of the ſubject Em. Pref. iii.
Engliſhmen have the liberty to laſh public and private vices, to caution the people againſt meaſures that may be hurtful to them, or to remonſtrate againſt the evil practice even of thoſe in power, without being expoſed to the penalties of the law ix. 314
But ſee with what reſtrictions in point of law ix. 314
Parliaments and juries are the two great pillars of government, which give the title of freeborn Engliſhmen iii. 222, 223. vii. 480
Our freedom conſiſts in being ruled by laws of our own making, and of being tried by men of our own condition iii. 222, 223. vii. 481
Sending the ſubject to remote and private priſons was complained of by the judges in 34 Eliz. Em. Pref. v. and n.
The principal branch of the laws of this nations concern the life and liberty of the ſubject Em. Pref. i.
The king of England cannot take up or detain the meaneſt ſubject at his mere free will and pleaſure Em. Pref. iii.
Britiſh ſubjects have liberties which no other ſubjects can boaſt of Em. Pref. vi.
Reſolutions of the houſe of commons relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 150
The liberty of the ſubject ſaid to be the greateſt point that ever was agitated in parliament vii. 143. n.
Mr. Creſwell's ſpeech thereon vii. 144
Inſtance of its great eſtimation among the Romans ix. 296. See iv. 146, 186. BAIL.

*LICENCE.

* A ſubject of England may travel without licence ii. 12
* Going to France, and returning without licence, made high-treaſon v. 506

LICENTIOUSNESS.

When licentiouſneſs is tolerated, liberty is in the utmoſt danger xi. 323

*LIGEANCE. See ALLEGIANCE.

LIGHTFOOT, Mr. of Gray's-Inn,

Opens Buckner's anſwer for licenſing Prynne's Hiſtriomaſtix i. 419
Of counſel for earl Strafford i. 759

LILBURN, JOHN,

The trial of him and John Wharton, for printing and publiſhing ſeditious books, 13 Car. I. in the Star-chamber vii. 260
Lilburn's examination at the attorney-general's chambers vii. 261
Refuſes to take the Star-chamber oath, as alſo Wharton vii. 262
The information in the Star-chamber againſt them vii. 263
Sentenced to ſtand in the pillory, and Lilburn to be whipt from the Fleet to Weſtminſter, and to pay 500l. a-piece vii. 264
His ſpeech to the people from the pillory vii. 266
He is gagged in the pillory vii. 270
He is laid in irons by command from the Star-chamber vii. 271
The ſentence voted illegal by the parliament, 1641 vii. 271
Two petitions to the houſe of commons, 1645 vii. 272
His fine taken off by the lords, and the hearing of his cauſe appointed at their bar; mr. Bradſhaw and mr. Cooke being his counſel vii. 273
Mr. Cooke's ſpeech vii. 276
The lords reverſe his ſentence, and the commons order him 2000l. out of the eſtates of ſeveral of the king's party vii. 278
His remonſtrance delivered to every member of the houſe, 1648 vii. 279
His petition to the committee appointed to conſider of his buſineſs vii. 280
An ordinance of the lords and commons, for raiſing 3000l. out of late lord Coventry's eſtate, for his reparation vii. 281
Thrown out of the houſe of commons, ſecond reading vii. 282
Another ordinance for raiſing 3000l. out of ſir H. Gibbs, ſir H. Bellingham, and mr. Bowes's eſtates vii. 282
* His trial for high-treaſon, by an extraordinary commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, at Guildhall, London, 24th, 25th, and 26th of October, 1649 ii. 19
* Lilburn ſhews he was taken at Brentford, and has been arraigned before the lord chief juſtice Heath at Oxford, for high-treaſon againſt the king ii. 20
* He objects, that extraordinary commiſſions of Oyer and Terminer are illegal ii. 21
* That it was illegal to keep him in priſon ſeven months, and not bring him to trial ii. 23
* That he was apprehended by ſoldiers, and carried to Paul's, their main-guard; whereas he ought to have been put into the hands of the civil magiſtrate, if he had offended the ſtate ii. 23
* That he was committed for refuſing to accuſe himſelf, which they themſelves had cenſured as illegal practice in the Star-chamber ii. 23
* That his eſtate, of the value of almoſt 3000l. was taken from him without legal proceſs ii. 24
* He demands of the court a ſight of their commiſſion; which is refuſed ii. 25
* The court tell him that the ſupreme authority was now in the commons, as they ſaid it was alſo in the times of the Romans and Saxons ii. 26, 27
* He refuſes to hold up his hand, till the court tell him what it meant ii. 27, 28
* Deſires a copy of his indictment, and counſel; but to no effect ii. 31
* Urges that he had counſel aſſigned him by the judges who tried him at Oxford, before he pleaded ii. 32
* Pleads Not Guilty ii. 39
* Has time till the next day to prepare for his defence ii. 39
* Inſiſts on a precedent of counſel being aſſigned to major Rolſe ii. 39
* That caſe debated ii. 40
* The names of the jury ii. 42
* The indictment for high-treaſon, in printing and publiſhing ſeveral treaſonable books againſt the commonwealth, and ſtirring up the ſoldiers to mutiny ii. 42
* He excepts againſt the court and king's counſel whiſpering together ii. 43
* Evidence of the printer concerning The Apprentice's Outcry ii. 47
* Evidence of his diſtributing The Outcry to the ſoldiers ii. 48
* And inciting them to mutiny ii. 48
* His publiſhing the Salva Libertate proved ii. 50
* The book entitled An Impeachment, &c. proved to be publiſhed by him ii. 51

* He objects againſt the evidence of col. Purefoy, he being a member of parliament ii. 51

* Evidence concerning the Preparative to the Hue and Cry after Sir Arthur Haſlerig ii. 52

* That he own'd them at the attorney-general's chambers ii. 52

* Several paſſages read out of his books ii. 53

* And two ordinances of the houſe of commons, declaring what offences ſhall be adjudged high-treaſon ii. 54, 55

* The attorney-general applies the evidence, to prove him guilty of high-treaſon ii. 56, &c.

* He tells them, moſt of the preſent council of ſtate muſt go to Tyburn or Tower-hill ii. 57

* Says, that miſery and poverty never were ſo extreme under the worſt of our kings ii. 57

* That the power of thieves and robbers was as lawful as the authority which erected the high court of juſtice ii. 57

* The king never acted ſo tyrannically at St. Oliver ii. 58

* Lilburn urges, that none of his expreſſions are treaſon, by the ancient laws of England ii. 63

* He repeats his requeſt for counſel, and more time; but is refuſed ii. 66

* The priſoner deſires to withdraw and peruſe his notes; which being denied, he ſends for a chamber-pot into the court ii. 68

* Aſſerts the jury are judges of law, as well as of fact ii. 69

* He quotes ſeveral law books to prove it ii. 69

* Lilburn's defence as to the facts proved againſt him ii. 70

* He obſerves, that one of the books he is charged with, was publiſhed before the acts were made whereupon he is indicted ii. 73

* He urges his ſervices to the commonwealth ii. 74

* Says, that the judges are but cyphers, and Norman intruders; and that the jury only are to determine his caſe, both in law and in fact ii. 76

* Mr. Prideaux makes his obſervations on the evidence for the commonwealth ii. 76

* Lilburn interrupts him ſeveral times, and takes notice that Prideaux was one who voted the army traitors ii. 78

* Mr. Keble directs the jury ii. 78

* Says that one witneſs, with concurring circumſtances, is ſufficient in treaſon ii. 78

* The jury deſire ſome wine before they withdraw; but are told they could have no refreſhment in capital caſes ii. 80

* Lilburn is acquitted ii. 80

* At which the people ſhout ii. 80

* And make bonfires for joy ii. 80

* He is diſcharged out of the Tower about a fortnight after ii. 80

* The jury brought before the council to give their reaſons; but refuſe to give any ii. 81, 82

His trial at the Old-Bailey, for returning to England, being baniſhed by act of parliament, 1653 vii. 354

Voted by the parliament to pay a fine of 7000l. and baniſhed England, 1651, to depart in thirty days vii. 354

Refuſes to kneel at the bar of the houſe vii. 355

A petition to the parliament from the people, in behalf of col. Lilburn, and of trials by juries vii. 355

Goes to Amſterdam vii. 357

The act for the execution of the judgment given againſt him vii. 357

Returns to England, and is committed to Newgate by the lord mayor vii. 357

Is brought to the bar, and deſires a copy of his indictment, and counſel to be aſſigned him vii. 358

Counſel aſſigned him as to one point only vii. 358

Receives a copy of his indictment the ſame day he was to be tried vii. 359

Gives in his exceptions to the inſufficiency of the indictment vii. 360

Has time till ſix o'clock, to get his exceptions ſigned by counſel vii. 361

Gives in a parchment, demanding oyer of the act, judgment, and ſuppoſed crimes mentioned in the act vii. 363

Charges the attorney-general Prideaux with being an impeached traitor vii. 364

The court refuſes to receive the parchment, without counſel's ſigning it vii. 366

Delivers in his exceptions under counſel's hands, upon promiſe of the court that it ſhould be no prejudice to him, and to have oyer granted him, if averred by his counſel to be neceſſary vii. 367

Some paſſages from Whitlocke, that mr. Lilburn was brought in not guilty, for which the jury were ſummoned before the council of ſtate vii. 370. See ii. 81, &c.

He was ſeveral times arraigned for his life; once before the houſe of peers, by the king's ſpecial command and order, May 1, 1641. He was again arraigned as a traitor at Oxford, before lord chief juſtice Heath ii. 20

* LILBURNE, ROBERT ii. 394. See REGICIDES.

* LIMERICK, THOMAS ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

* LINDSAY, DAVID,

* His arraignment for high-treaſon, in returning from France without licence, April 19, 1704, 3 Annæ v. 508

The indictment v. 508. vi. 60. Ap.

* He confeſſes the fact; but ſays he is a native of Scotland, and had the benefit of the queen's pardon there v. 510

* The proclamation of indemnity in Scotland read v. 510

* The priſoner proves himſelf a Scotchman born v. 511

* That he ſurrendered to the government in Scotland, and was diſcharged there v. 512

* Mr. Williams's defence for the priſoner v. 512

* That the pardon in Scotland amounted to a licence to come hither v. 513

* Inſiſts that his trial ought to have been in the firſt county he came into v. 516

* Mr. Raymond's ſpeech on the ſame ſide v. 516

* Sir Thomas Powys's reply v. 519

* Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his ſpeech v. 521

* Sir Simon Harcourt, ſolicitor-general, his ſpeech v. 523

* Lord chief juſtice Holt of opinion againſt the priſoner v. 523

* To which the court agree v. 524

* His charge to the jury v. 525

* The priſoner is convicted v. 525

* Moved in arreſt of judgment, that the priſoner was not ſhewn to be a ſubject when the act was made v. 525, 526

* That one who owes local allegiance ought not to be indicted in the ſame manner with him who owes natural allegiance v. 527

* The chief juſtice ſhews the reaſonableneſs of the ſtatute on which the priſoner was indicted; and pronounces ſentence v. 527

LINGARD, Mr. Common Serjeant of London,

His ſpeech as counſel for Thomas earl of Macclesfield, on his impeachment for ſelling the places of maſters in chancery vi. 635, 663, 664, 685, 686

His obſervations upon the whole trial vi. 695

* LINSTEED, THOMAS v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

* LISLE, Lady ALICE,

* Her trial by a commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer at Wincheſter the 27th of Auguſt, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 105

* The indictment for harbouring Hicks, who was in Monmouth's rebellion iv. 105

* The priſoner being thick of hearing has one to aſſiſt her at her trial iv. 106

* Mr. Pollexfen's ſpeech before evidence iv. 106

* Evidence that Hicks was in the rebellion iv. 107

* Evidence of the meſſage Hicks ſent to the priſoner, to deſire entertainment at her houſe, &c. iv. 108

* Barter depoſes, that he ſhewed Dunne the way to Moyle's-Court, and gave col. Penruddock notice of it iv. 115

* Dunne and Barter confronted iv. 116

* Dunne refuſes to anſwer the court, and diſcover his knowledge of the matter iv. 116

* Col. Penruddock's evidence of his taking Hicks and Nelthorpe in the lady Liſle's houſe iv. 119

* The priſoner's huſband a member of the High Court of Juſtice iv. 120

* Carpenter and his wife's evidence of their lady's entertaining Hicks and Nelthorpe iv. 120

* Dunne confeſſes he ſupped with Hicks and Nelthorpe, at my lady Liſle's, the night before they were taken iv. 121

* The priſoner enters upon her defence iv. 122

* Objects, that the traitor ought to be convicted before ſhe could be tried for harbouring him iv. 122

* She calls a witneſs iv. 123

* She ſays her ſon was actually in arms againſt Monmouth by her direction iv. 123

* The chief juſtice directs the jury iv. 123

* The priſoner's huſband one of thoſe who condemned col. Penruddock's father to die iv. 126. See PENRUDDOCK's TRIAL ii. 261

* The jury doubt whether the priſoner knew Hicks had been in the army iv. 127

* The chief juſtice tells them, the proof is plain iv. 127

* She is convicted iv. 127

* The chief juſtice's ſpeech before the ſentence iv. 127

* Other proof of her guilt after the trial iv. 128

* Sentenced to be burnt alive; and her execution directed to be that afternoon iv. 128

* But reprieved iv. 128

* A letter to the king in her behalf; but to no effect iv. 128

* She petitions to be beheaded; which is granted iv. 129

* She is executed iv. 129

* Her dying ſpeech iv. 129

* Her attainder reverſed, 1 W. and M. iv. 130

She was convicted, attainted, and executed for treaſon, by a verdict injuriouſly extorted, and procured, by the menaces, violences, and other illegal practices of lord chief juſtice Jefferies, in the opinion of the legiſlature that annulled her attainder iv. 130

Lady Liſle, who could neither ſee nor hear, was ſentenced to be burned, becauſe a perſon who was proved to have been in Monmouth's rebellion came to her houſe v. 101

The jury at firſt brought her in not guilty iv. 127. n.

LISLE, JOHN,

Lord-preſident of the court on the trial of ſir Henry Slingſby, for treaſon againſt the protector, Oliver Cromwell, and the common-wealth ii. 277

His ſpeech to ſir Henry Slingſby, doctor Hewet, and John Mordaunt, eſq. before judgment ii. 298

Member of the High Court of Juſtice, and huſband of lady Alice Liſle, illegally ſentenced by Jefferies, was baſely murdered at Lauſanne, ſome years before the condemnation of his lady iv. 105. n. 120

LITTLETON, Dr. See GOLDING.

LITTLETON, Sir EDWARD,

Solicitor-general on the proceedings in the Star-Chamber againſt Prynne and others for libels i. 483

His argument for the king againſt John Hampden, eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 544, 550, 558

His argument made by command of the houſe of commons relating to the liberty of the perſon of every freeman, at a conference with the lords vii. 151

Copies of records not printed quoted by ſir Edward Littleton vii. 167

His argument againſt the return of the hab. corp. for John Selden and others vii. 224

LITTLETON, Sir THOMAS,

Non uſage is the weakeſt of arguments to be found in Littleton iv. 189. See vi. 713.

His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 122

LLOYD, Mr. See WORCESTER, Biſhop of.
LLOYD, Sir RICHARD,
His argument againſt the objection, that an attainted perſon is a competent witneſs ix. 661*
* LLOYD, Dr. WILLIAM, Biſhop of St. Aſaph,
* Hist rial for publiſhing a libel iv. 304
LOCKTON, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
Was arreſted ſitting in his place, diſplaced from his office, committed to the Tower, and tried for treaſon i. 5. and n. 14
Confeſſes, and begs mercy i. 14
Life ſaved, but tranſported to Waterford, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of twenty pounds, and liberty of going out of town two miles for his recreation i. 14. n. * See BRAMBRE.
LOE, Mr.
Of counſel for earl Strafford i. 759
* LOFFE, GABRIEL v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.
LOGAN, ROBERT,
Proceſs againſt him for high-treaſon, for conſpiring with the earl of Gowrie to murder James I. vii. 78
Five letters from the late Robert Logan to the laird Bour, concerning the plot, produced vii. 79
Depoſitions to prove the hand vii. 81
Depoſitions and declarations of George Sprott at his trial and his execution, concerning the plot vii. 82
The name and arms of Logan declared aboliſhed, and his honours and eſtates forfeited to the king vii. 85
LOGIC.
The high court of parliament compared in its repreſentation to logic xi. 250
* LONDON, Biſhop of. See COMPTON.
* LONDON, City of,
* Proceedings againſt it upon a quo warranto in the King's-Bench, Hil. 35 Car. II. iii. 545
* The information, that for a month paſt the mayor, &c. have without lawful warrant uſed certain liberties and privileges iii. 545. vi. 16. Ap.
* The plea of the mayor, &c. wherein they plead preſcription and royal authority for the exerciſe of their privileges iii. 545
* Mr. attorney's reply, that they did forfeit their privileges by taking unreaſonable toll in their markets, and by preſenting and publiſhing a libellous petition iii. 546
* The city's rejoinder, juſtifying both thoſe acts iii. 546
* Mr. attorney's ſur-rejoinder and demurrer iii. 548
* The city's rebutter and joinder in demurrer iii. 548
* Mr. ſolicitor-general Finch's argument for the king iii. 548
* 1. That a corporation may be forfeited iii. 548
* Caſes quoted to this purpoſe iii. 549
* 2. That the city of London is in the ſame caſe with other corporations in this reſpect iii. 550
* Caſes where the franchiſes of the city have been ſeized iii. 551
* 3. That an act of the common-council is a corporate act, and may make a forfeiture of the whole iii. 552
* 4. That the offences ſet forth in the replication are forfeitures iii. 552
* Of the right to take toll in their markets iii. 552
* Of the city's petition iii. 553
* Lord chief juſtice Hale's opinion quoted, that it is unlawful to print any man's private caſe, while it is depending in a court of judicature iii. 553
* Sir George Treby, recorder, his argument for the city iii. 554
* 1. That a corporation cannot be forfeited iii. 555
* Authorities cited, that a corporation can never die iii. 555
* He argues that common law may be antiquated, though ſtatute law cannot iii. 556
* That if Henry VIII. had thought this proceeding by way of quo warranto feaſible, he would have uſed it againſt the religious houſes iii. 556
* 2. That the quo warranto ſhould have been brought againſt the defendants by name, and not in their corporate capacity iii. 560
* 3. He defends their taking toll in the markets iii. 563
* Argues, that the privileges of London have been upheld, even againſt the general words of an act of parliament iii. 564
* That the city of Dublin laid a tax of a like kind; which was held good iii. 564
* 4. That an unreaſonable by-law is not ſufficient to forfeit a corporation iii. 565
* His defence as to the petition iii. 567
* Endeavours to excuſe it from being ſeditious iii. 568
* And to juſtify the publiſhing it iii. 569
* 5. Argues, that a corporation cannot poſſibly commit a crime againſt the peace iii. 570
* 6. That an act of the common-council is not an act of the corporation iii. 572
* The common-council choſen by the unfreemen as well as freemen iii. 572
* The chief juſtice's remarks iii. 574
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his reply iii. 575
* To the queſtion, whether the defendants ſhould have been proſecuted in their private or corporate capacity? iii. 576
* Authorities cited iii. 577
* Whether the city liberties can be forfeited? iii. 578
* The end of erecting corporations iii. 579
* He denies the poſition, that a corporation can never die iii. 581
* Diſtinguiſhes between ſeizures and forfeitures iii. 582
* An election of a mayor is void, if the old mayor be abſent iii. 585
* Two reaſons why corporations may be forfeited iii. 585
* A reſolution, that an alderman might be removed for being a drunkard and haunter of taverns iii. 587
* An inſtance of the franchiſes of Sandwich being ſeized for a notorious riot committed there iii. 589
* Another of the town of Cambridge iii. 590
* Other inſtances and caſes iii. 590
* Reaſons why an act of the common-council is an act of the corporation iii. 592
* He juſtifies the charge about the markets iii. 596
* And about the petition iii. 600
* Caſes of ſlanderous words ſpoken againſt the king's juſtices iii. 603
* Mr. Pollexfen's ſpeech for the city iii. 604
* He inſiſts upon the impropriety of proſecuting them in their corporate capacity iii. 605
* Anſwers mr. attorney's authorities iii. 605
* He objects to the pleading, as ſingular and unprecedented iii. 608
* He argues that they could not forfeit twice; for by the firſt forfeiture the corporation would ceaſe iii. 609
* Conſiders the queſtion about the markets iii. 610
* Inſiſts upon three acts of parliament for confirming the city-cuſtoms iii. 611
* What were anciently the forms of acts of parliament iii. 612
* His defence of the petition iii. 613
* Denies that it was an act of the corporation iii. 614
* Says, if it were, yet it is not ſo great a crime as to forfeit the charter iii. 616
* He anſwers three reaſons brought to prove the charter forfeited iii. 617
* And the authorities produced iii. 619
* The meaning of the words forfeiting and ſeizing ſtated iii. 621
* The miſchiefs of too rigidly expounding the doctrine of forfeiting and ſurrendering iii. 624
* Several authorities quoted, as to the nature of corporations iii. 625
* A brief recapitulation of the whole argument iii. 626
* The judgment of the court for the king iii. 627
* A general view of the whole matter in debate iii. 628
A gaoler [in London may permit his priſoner in execution to go at large with a batoon in any place within their juriſdiction iii. 564
A citizen of London may ſet up one retail trade, tho' bred to another, notwithſtanding ſtat. 5 Eliz. chap. 4. iii. 564
London may preſcribe againſt a ſtatute iii. 564
The cuſtoms of London are taken notice of in the courts of Weſtminſter-Hall iii. 564
The metropolis of the kingdom was deprived of its charters and magiſtrates from the year 1684 till 1688, when king James the ſecond, terrified at the news of the prince of Orange's intended invaſion, thought fit to reſtore them, Oct. 6, and ordered lord chancellor Jefferies to carry them back himſelf; whereupon ſir George Treby was reſtored to the place of recorder, and the reſt of the magiſtrates according to the ancient conſtitutions of the city iii. 628
The city's petition to his majeſty in council, June 18, 1683 viii. 462. See iv. 851.
Some regulations concerning their officers, to which his majeſty required the city's ſubmiſſion viii. 463
LONDON GAZETTES.
Quære, the evidence of them viii. 213
LONG, WALTER, Eſq.
Proceedings againſt him on his habeas corpus. See STROUD WILLIAM.
* LORD MAYOR arreſted. See PRITCHARD Sir WILLIAM.
LORDS. See HOUSE of LORDS. PEERAGE, &c.
LOVAT, SIMON Lord,
Proceedings in the houſe of peers upon the impeachment of the commons againſt him for treaſon, March 9, 10, 11, 13, 16, 18, and 19, 1746—7, 19 Geo. II. ix. *616
His lordſhip's petition to the houſe to have counſel and ſolicitors aſſigned him, copy of impeachment, time to put in his anſwer, money, &c. reſtored ix. *617
Names of his counſel and ſolicitors ix. *617
Prayer of petition ordered ix. *617
Priſoner deſires further time ix. *617
Partly granted ix. *617
Puts in his anſwer ix. *617
Petitions that obedience to former order of the houſe relative to the reſtoration of his money, &c. may be compelled ix. *618
The ſame was rejected by the houſe ix. *618
Petitions that his chief agent might have acceſs to him in the Tower, granted ix. *618
Copy of lord Lovat's anſwer ordered to the commons ix. *618
Petition to change one of the priſoner's ſolicitors; which is ordered accordingly ix. *618
Day of trial appointed ix. *618
Addreſs to the king ordered for appointing a lord high ſteward to continue during the trial ix. *618
Other orders made concerning the priſoner's counſel, witneſſes, and ſcaffold for the commons at the ſaid trial ix. *618
Another petition from the priſoner to the houſe for further time, which was granted ix. *619
Another petition of the priſoner's for further time, which was rejected ix. *619, *620
Another petition to ſame purport, which was granted ix. *620, *621
The lord high ſteward's proceſſion ix. *621
His grace's commiſſion read ix. *621
His grace's addreſs to the priſoner ix. *622
The articles of impeachment ix. *623
The priſoner's anſwer ix. *624
The replication of the commons ix. *625

Sir William Young's ſpeech on opening the caſe on behalf of the commons ix. *625
Lord Coke's ſpeech on the ſame ſide ix. *629
Mr. attorney-general (ſir Dudley Ryder) his ſpeech on ſame ſide ix. *629
Sir John Strange (another of the managers for the commons) proceeds to produce evidence ix. *638
The priſoner deſires his counſel, on account of his age and infirmities, may examine the witneſſes, but denied, becauſe contrary to law ix. *638
The priſoner objecting to the competency of a witneſs, he is examined upon a voyer dire, and afterwards (proving competent) is examined in chief ix. *639, *640
The ſolicitor-general (the honourable William Murray) calls and examines the next witneſs ix. *645
Altercation among the counſel, from the lord high ſteward having inadvertently ſuffered a witneſs to be ſworn in chief, inſtead of upon a voyer dire ix. *645, 646
Mr. Noel calls and examines the next witneſs, on behalf of the commons ix. *650
Priſoner objects to this witneſs, as being attainted ix. *651
He objects to the reading a record, becauſe he is no party to it ix. *652
Mr. Forreſter's argument in ſupport of the objection ix. *652
Mr. Ford's ix. *653
Mr. Hamilton Gordon's ix. *655
Mr. attorney-general's argument againſt the objection ix. *656
Sir John Strange's ix. *658
Mr. ſolicitor-general's ix. *659
Mr. Noel's ix. *660
Sir Richard Lloyd's ix. *661
Mr. Forreſter's reply ix. *662
Mr. attorney-general's further argument ix. *663
Sir John Strange's ix. *664
The record admitted to be proved, and accordingly proved and read ix. *664
The witneſs called in, ſworn, and examined ix. *670
Other witneſſes examined ix. *680
Several letters produced, read, and given in evidence ix. *712, *714, *715, *717, *718, *720, *721, *723, *725
Sir John Strange recapitulates the evidence ix. *726
The priſoner's defence ix. *731, *732, *741
The ſolicitor-general's reply to the priſoner's defence ix. *735, *744
Mr. Noel's reply thereto ix. *742
The priſoner is found guilty ix. *746
The lord high ſteward aſks him three ſeveral times why judgment ſhould not be given ix. *747, *749, *750
The priſoner's ſpeech thereon ix. *747
Commons by their ſpeaker demand judgment ix. *749, *750
The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner, previous to his pronouncing judgment ix. *750
Sentence pronounced ix. *752
Account of his lordſhip's behaviour from the time his death-warrant was delivered, to the day of his execution x. 110. Ap.
Beheaded on Tower-hill x. 196. Ap.
Copy of paper delivered to ſheriff by his lordſhip x. 196. Ap. See
His monument at Kirk-hall x. 193. Ap.
LETTERS. MURRAY JOHN.

* LOVE, CHRISTOPHER,

* His trial for high-treaſon, in correſponding with, and conſpiring to bring in, king Charles II. and treating with the Scots to that purpoſe, before the High Court of Juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall, June 20, 1651, 3 Car. II. ii. 83
* An impeachment for high-treaſon and other crimes preferred by Prideaux, attorney of the ſtate ii. 83
* The priſoner deſires counſel as to matter of law; and demands why he is not tried by a jury ii. 85, 86
* He urges a vote of parliament, that they would preſerve the ancient fundamental laws and manner of trial ii. 86
* They refuſe to aſſign him counſel till he has pleaded, and the evidence given ii. 88
* He objects, that the crimes in the charge were to be proſecuted within a year; and they charged him with things done ſeveral years paſt ii. 88
* He cites Coke's Inſtitutes, that he may except to errors in the charge, in order to quaſh the indictment, before he pleads ii. 89
* He is told, he muſt either plead generally or ſpecially, before counſel can be aſſigned him ii. 91
* He deſires he may have counſel to put his plea into form; but is denied ii. 92
* He pleads not guilty ii. 92
* Mr. attorney joins iſſue with him ii. 92
* The ſolicitor-general opens the evidence ii. 92
* The court exhort mr. Love to make a free confeſſion ii. 96
* He ſolemnly profeſſes his innocence ii. 96
* He excepts to the teſtimony of a witneſs who had confeſſed himſelf guilty; but is over-ruled ii. 97
* Captain Potter's evidence of the preſbyterians treating with the king ii. 98
* Potter's examination read ii. 98
* Major Alford's evidence of the plot ii. 103
* Teſtifies ſeveral conſultations at mr. Love's houſe ii. 103
* The preſbyterians depute commiſſioners to treat with the king, and the Scotch commiſſioners, at Breda ii. 103
* Major Huntingdon's evidence ii. 107
* Evidence of Love's conſent to depute commiſſioners to treat ii. 108
* Lieutenant-colonel Bains's evidence ii. 108
* Says nothing againſt the priſoner ii. 109
* Major Adams's evidence ii. 109
* The Scots baniſhed ii. 111
* A witneſs (Adams) threatened to be hanged, if he would not be ingenuous in his examination ii. 113
* Major Cobbet examined as to his tampering with Adams; which he denies ii. 114
* The ſecond day's proceedings ii. 114
* Jaquel is ſworn on his buttons inſtead of a bible ii. 114
* The whole Scotch nation unite in the king's cauſe ii. 116
* Colonel Barton's evidence ii. 118
* Captain Far's evidence ii. 119
* Faſts kept by the preſbyterians, for a bleſſing on their treaty with the king ii. 119
* Love acknowledges he knew of the commiſſion to treat with his majeſty, and debated concerning it ii. 121
* Jackſon, a preſbyterian miniſter, refuſes to ſwear againſt mr. Love ii. 123
* The court ſet a fine of 500l. upon him, and commit him to priſon during pleaſure ii. 124
* Mr. Love moves for time and counſel; and has till Wedneſday to prepare for his defence ii. 124
* The court tell the priſoner, counſel may come to him if they will; but make no order in it ii. 124
* The third day's proceedings ii. 125
* Mr. Love enters upon his defence ii. 125
* He objects, that there has been but one witneſs to any particular fact ii. 126
* Some particular obſervations of the priſoner on the evidence ii. 128
* Love acknowledges the meetings at his houſe, the reading the letters and commiſſions, and his debating matters concerning them ii. 135
* But ſays, he diſapproved the deſign, and ſo is guilty only of miſpriſion ii. 135
* He ſhews how zealous he was in the cauſe of the parliament againſt the king ii. 136
* Says, he was one of the firſt at Oxford that refuſed conformity; for which he was expelled, &c. ii. 136
* That he was the firſt who was apprehended for preaching againſt the king ii. 136
* And laments his ſuffering by their hands for whom he had done ſo much ii. 137
* The priſoner confeſſes his being privy to, and concealing, the conſults; which he apprehended to be but miſpriſion ii. 138
* Mr. attorney's reply to the priſoner's defence ii. 139
* The preſident makes a ſpeech to the priſoner ii. 141
* Tells him, the laws of England were the laws of God ii. 141
* That there was not any treaſon or notorious villainy but a prieſt had a hand in it ii. 141
* The fourth day's proceedings ii. 141
* Mr. Hall's reply ii. 141
* A brief account of the conſpiracy ii. 142
* Sir T. Witherington's reply to the priſoner ii. 143
* He obſerves that their conſults went under the name of faſting and prayer, &c. ii. 144
* Mr. attorney's further reply ii. 145
* He diſcovers the evaſions in Love's ſolemn appeals to God of his innocence ii. 152
* Shews the ingratitude of conſpiring to ſubvert a ſtate that had been ſo indulgent to him ii. 153
* Some paſſages in the priſoner's ſermon, at the treaty at Uxbridge, riſe in judgment againſt him ii. 154
* Mr. Love gives in his exceptions to the charge ii. 156
* The fifth day's proceedings ii. 157
* Mr. Love's exceptions ii. 157
* Mr. Archer, and mr. Waller, the priſoner's counſel, rejected for refuſing the engagement; but mr. Hale is permitted to argue his exceptions ii. 159
* Several exceptions to the charge, made through miſtake for want of a ſight of it ii. 161
* Debates between the counſel, whether the fact be high-treaſon or miſpriſion ii. 171
* The priſoner's exceptions, as to the incompetency of the witneſſes, over-ruled ii. 171
* Mr. Hale argues, that two witneſſes were neceſſary to one overt-act in treaſon ii. 173
* Mr. Love moves for more time, and leave to examine more witneſſes; but is denied ii. 176
* The ſixth day's proceedings ii. 177
* Mr. attorney moves for judgment againſt him ii. 177
* The ſentence of beheading paſſed ii. 177
* Mr. Love's behaviour at execution ii. 177
* His ſpeech on the ſcaffold 177—183

LOVE, UNLAWFUL. See GREY, FORD Lord.

LOVEL, Sir SALATHIEL, Serjeant at Law, and Recorder of London,

Shews the nature of the evidence on ſir John Fenwick's bill of attainder v. 45
His reply v. 89. See x. 67, 71. Ap.

* LOWICK, Major ROBERT,

* His trial for high-treaſon, 21 April, 1696, 8 W. III. iv. 718
* Indicted with Rookwood and other conſpirators in the aſſaſſination-plot iv. 661
* Exceptions taken to the indictment, for that time and place are not aſcertained in every fact that is laid iv. 718
* The indictment iv. 721, 724
* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 725
* Harris's evidence of his being ſent over by king James, to aſſiſt in the aſſaſſination iv. 726
* Bertram's evidence iv. 727
* His counſel plead that the proof is inſufficient iv. 731

* Call witneſſes to his character iv. 732
* Mr. attorney-general's reply iv. 733
* Lord chief juſtice's charge iv. 734
* The priſoner is convicted iv. 736
* He receives ſentence, together with Rookwood and Cranburne iv. 737
* Their friends permitted to be with them after condemnation; but not in the abſence of the keeper iv. 737
* Their dying ſpeeches iv. 737. See x. 68, 75. Ap.

LOWNDS, Mr.
His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 194

LUDBORE, Mr.
Is prayed by doctor John Baſtwick to be aſſigned of counſel to him i. 502

* LUMSDEN, ALEXANDER ii. 1011. See ANDERSON, & al.

* LUMSDEN, Mr. i. 333. See HOLLIS Sir JOHN.

LUNATIC.
One pretended to be lunatic, allowed a ſolicitor to ſtand by him, to call his witneſſes, and aſk queſtions for him on his trial for felony viii. 291
See ARNOLD EDWARD. INSANITY.
BATEMAN CHARLES. MADMAN.
BRADSHAW JAMES. NON COMPOS MENTIS.
FERRERS Earl of.

LUTWYCHE, EDWARD,
His reply on the trial of Thomas earl of Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), on the impeachment by the commons before the lords, for high crimes and miſdemeanours, in ſelling the places of the maſters in Chancery vi. 748
His reply vi. 750, 752
Of counſel againſt Matthews for treaſon ix. 707
Excepted out of the act of indemnity, which paſſed in the year 1690, 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.

LYTTLETON. See LITTLETON.

M.

MACAULAY, Mrs. the Hiſtorian. See BATES JOHN. LEIGHTON ALEXANDER.

* MACCLESFIELD, THOMAS Earl of, Lord Chancellor,
His ſpeech, returning the thanks of the houſe of lords to the committee, on the proceedings in parliament, againſt Francis Atterbury, biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 390
* His trial on an impeachment for high crimes and miſdemeanors before the houſe of lords, 6 May, 1725, 11 George I. vi. 477
* The articles of impeachment (21 in number) vi. 477
* The earl's anſwer vi. 484
* The replication of the commons vi. 492
* Sir George Oxenden opens the charge in general vi. 492
* Is ſeconded by ſir Clement Wearg, ſolicitor-general vi. 497
* The earl's general defence, opened by Mr. ſerjeant Probyn vi. 618
* Who is ſeconded by dr. Sayer vi. 629
* Sir William Strickland's ſpeech upon the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th articles, as to ſelling places in Chancery vi. 498
* Mr. Doddington's ſpeech vi. 500
* The ſtatute read at the nomination of ſheriffs in the Exchequer vi. 503
* A debate whether the privy-counſellors, &c. take an oath at that time vi. 620, 704, 736, 747. See POLE MICHAEL.
* Oath of a maſter in Chancery vi. 504
* Commiſſions granted to maſters, appointing them to hear cauſes vi. 505
* Further evidence to ſupport theſe articles vi. 506
* The earl's defence on theſe articles vi. 635
* Mr. Lingard, common ſerjeant of London, of counſel with the earl, his ſpeech vi. 635
* The evidence in behalf of the earl vi. 640
* Evidence that former lord chancellors took money for the maſters places vi. 650
* That the price of places has ſince been conſiderably raiſed vi. 654
* Evidence, as to the manner of paying money into Chancery vi. 656
* The earl's own obſervations on the evidence given upon theſe articles vi. 714
* Mr. ſerjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 742
* Mr. Onſlow's ſpeech on the 11th article, about appointing inſufficient men to be maſters vi. 534
* Mr. Palmer's ſpeech on the 12th article, for conniving at the maſters paying for their places out of the ſuitors money vi. 535
* Evidence of the inſufficiency of the maſters vi. 536, 540
* Evidence of a declaration made by my lord in court vi. 539
* Mr. Thomas Bennet's evidence upon the 12th article vi. 542
* Mr. Robins's ſpeech in the earl's defence, on 11th and 12th articles vi. 658
* Mr. ſerjeant Probyn, and the common ſerjeant, on the ſame ſide vi. 663, 664
* The earl's evidence on theſe articles vi. 664, &c.
* The earl's obſervations vi. 716
* Mr. ſerjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 744
* Mr. Gybbon's ſpeech upon the 13th article, for concealing mr. Dormer's deficiency, and for compounding a debt owing from mr. Wilſon to mr. Dormer vi. 547
* Mr. Hedges on the ſame articles vi. 549
* Evidence of mr. Dormer's deficiency vi. 551
* And of the compounding Wilſon's debt vi. 553
* Mr. Strange's argument for the earl on theſe articles vi. 669
* Evidence of the care taken by the earl to ſecure mr. Dormer's effects vi. 670
* Evidence to juſtify the compoſition with Wilſon vi. 676
* The earl's obſervations vi. 719
* Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 748
* Sir John Ruſhout's ſpeech on the 15th, 16th, and 17th articles vi. 562
* The 15th, for calling for the maſters accounts, in order to perſuade them to contribute to mr. Dormer's deficiency, and excuſing thoſe who contributed from giving in their accounts vi. 562
* The 16th, for paying 1000l. to a ſuitor, with a view to prevent a parliamentary enquiry vi. 563
* The 17th, for ordering mr. Dormer's money to be paid out, without regard to proportion vi. 564
* Mr. Sandys's ſpeech on the ſame ſide vi. 565
* Mr. Thompſon's ſpeech on the ſame ſide vi. 567
* Evidence of the maſters contribution vi. 568
* Of ſeveral converſations between the earl and the maſters on this occaſion vi. 569
* Mr. Lockman's evidence of the earl's paying him 1000l. vi. 577
* Orders of the earl for paying ſeveral ſums out of mr. Dormer's effects vi. 580
* Mr. Strange's defence of the earl upon theſe articles vi. 678
* Evidence of the earl's calling for the maſters accounts vi. 680
* Evidence that mr. Lockman's money was paid to him in compaſſion vi. 683
* Mr. ſerjeant Probyn and mr. common ſerjeant, their arguments upon the 18th article vi. 685, 686
* The earl's obſervations vi. 722
* Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 750
* Mr. Plummer's ſpeech upon the 18th article, for permitting and encouraging the maſters to traffick with the ſuitors money vi. 583
* Mr. Cary's ſpeech on the ſame ſide vi. 585
* Mr. Lightboun's evidence vi. 586
* Mr. Holford's evidence vi. 592
* Mr. common ſerjeant's defence on this article vi. 686
* The earl's own defence vi. 725
* Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 752
* Lord Morpeth's ſpeech on the 19th article, for adviſing and perſuading the maſters to make falſe repreſentations of their circumſtances vi. 594
* Mr. Snell's ſpeech on the ſame ſide vi. 597
* Evidence of mr. Thomas Bennet vi. 599
* Evidence of mr. Kynaſton v. 601
* Evidence of mr. Lightboun vi. 602
* Evidence of mr. John Bennet vi. 603
* Evidence of mr. Lovibond vi. 603
* Evidence of mr. Edwards vi. 604
* Evidence of mr. Conway vi. 605
* Mr. Robins's ſpeech in the earl's defence to this article vi. 688
* The earl's remarks vi. 730
* Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 752
* An account of the deficiencies vi. 607
* Mr. Weſt ſums up the evidence for the commons vi. 609
* Witneſſes to mr. Cottingham's reputation vi. 691
* Account of many charities done by the earl vi. 692
* Mr. common ſerjeant's obſervations upon the whole vi. 695
* Mr. Robins's to the ſame purpoſe vi. 697
* The earl of Macclesfield's own defence vi. 702
* Mr. ſerjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 753
* Two witneſſes examined againſt the earl vi. 753
* Who are confronted with another witneſs vi. 755
* The ſtatute 11 Henry IV. read vi. 759
* The earl's remarks on it vi. 760
* The managers reply vi. 760
* The earl is convicted vi. 761
* And fined 30,000l. vi. 763

M'DANIEL, STEPHEN,
Berry, Egan and Salmon, their trial, 1ſt March, 1755, 28 George II. at the Old Bailey, for being acceſſaries before a felony committed x. 417
Indictment x. 417
Evidence againſt them x. 418, &c.
Special verdict found x. 432
Argued before all the judges at Serjeant's-Inn hall, in Chancery-Lane x. 432
Mr. Hume-Campbell, counſel for the crown, his argument x. 433
Mr. Madan, on the ſame ſide x. 436
Mr. Hume cited a caſe he had met with ſince his laſt argument x. 437
Mr. ſerjeant Davy, as counſel for the priſoners x. 438
Mr. Aſton, on the ſame ſide x. 441
Mr. Hume's reply x. 442
Mr. Juſtice Foſter pronounced the judgment of the court x. 442, &c.
All diſcharged of that indictment x. 445
Indicted again for a conſpiracy x. 446
Found guilty, ſentenced to ſeven years impriſonment, ſtand each twice in the pillory, and at the end of that term to find ſureties for three years, and to pay a fine of one mark each x. 446
Stood in the pillory once; Egan killed, ſo they ſtood no more x. 446
The three tried again with Mary Jones, for the wilful murder of Joſhua Kidden, who was executed on their evidence for a robbery on the highway, of which he was innocent x. 446
Court ſuffered them to be convicted (death), but reſpited judgment, in order to have the caſe argued x. 446
Attorney-general declined to argue the point of law, ſo they were diſcharged, at the ſubſequent ſeſſions, of that indictment x. 446
Mr. juſtice Foſter's obſervations on this caſe x. 416, 417

MACDONALD, ÆNEAS,
Proceedings againſt him for treaſon, 10th December, 1747, 20 George II. ix. 585
His counſel inſiſted that he was born in the dominions of the French King, and on that put his defence ix. 585

His

His commiſſion from the king of France, read ix. 586
The cartel between France and England, read ix. 586
The priſoner not within it ix. 586
Did not prove he was born out of Great Britain ix. 586
Found guilty, but recommended to mercy ix. 586
Priſoner charged in cuſtody with a debt due to one Ramſay ix. 586
Mr. attorney-general, mr. ſolicitor-general, and ſir John Strange, argued, that the proceſs againſt the priſoner ſhould be diſcharged ix. 586
Mr. Henly and mr. Ford argued, that an attainted perſon is liable to civil ſuits ix. 586
Court gave no opinion; but mr. Mac Donald afterwards making his creditor eaſy with regard to the debt, the action was withdrawn, and he diſcharged ix. 586
Mr. juſtice Foſter's opinion upon the caſe ix. 586, 587

MACGROWTHER, ALEXANDER,
His trial for high-treaſon, 31 July, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 566
Evidence againſt him ix. 566
Pleads he was forced into the rebellion ix. 566
His caſe ſtated by mr. juſtice Foſter ix. 566
Lord chief juſtice Lee's opinion, relating to being forced into the rebellion ix. 567
Found guilty, but reprieved ix. 576

* MACGUIRE, CONNOR Lord,
* His trial for high-treaſon, at the King's-Bench bar, the 10th of February, 1644, 20 Car. I. i. 949
* The indictment, for inciting a rebellion and maſſacre in Ireland i. 949
* The priſoner pleads he is a peer of Ireland i. 950
* His plea is over-ruled i. 950. viii. 341, 363
* He pleads over not guilty i. 950
* The priſoner challenges all the jurors that appear i. 951
* A diſtringas and tales made returnable the next day i. 952
* Each perſon returned on the pannel examined, whether they had purchaſed any ſhare of the rebels lands in Ireland i. 952
* The trial begins i. 953
* The witneſſes called i. 953
* The examination of a witneſs read, who might have been produced viva voce i. 954
* Evidence of my lord Macguire's being taken in Dublin with arms, &c. the very morning the maſſacre began in the other parts of Ireland i. 954
* Macguire's own confeſſion of his being concerned in the conſpiracy i. 954
* His examination in the Tower read againſt him i. 955
* Denies they had any meſſages from England, to incite them to this rebellion and maſſacre i. 955
* Evidence of the diſcovery of the conſpiracy i. 955
* Evidence of O'Neile's landing in Ireland i. 956
* Charlemont ſurprized by the Iriſh papiſts, and the lord Galfield murdered i. 956
* Evidence of 104,000 murdered i. 956
* The conſpirators ſet up a new form of government i. 956
* A copy of the pope's bull granted to the Iriſh papiſts i. 956
* He thereby grants them full remiſſion of their ſins i. 957
* The lord Macguire in his defence denies he made any ſuch confeſſions as were produced againſt him i. 958
* The counſel reply to him i. 958
* The lord Macguire is convicted i. 958
* Demands by what authority the court ſat i. 959
* Sentence paſſed i. 959
* Petitions to be beheaded; but is executed as a common traitor i. 960 viii. 363.
* His behaviour at execution i. 960

MACKWORTH, Sir HUMPHRY,
His ſpeech in the caſe of Aſhby and White viii. 117

MADAN, Mr.
His argument for the crown, againſt Macdaniel and others x. 436

* MADDER, JOHN v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

MADDOCKS, JOHN,
Of counſel for Stevenſon, charged with murder x. 473

MADMAN.
Madmen are deſtroyed, not puniſhed iv. 181
The reaſon of the law, that a perſon who falls mad after crime ſuppoſed to be committed, ſhall not be tried for it, and if after judgment, ſhall not be executed iv. 205. See
ARNOLD EDWARD.
BATEMAN CHARLES.
BRADSHAW JAMES.
FERRERS Earl.
INSANITY.
LUNATIC.
NON COMPOS MENTIS.

* MAGDALEN COLLEGE in Oxon.
* Proceedings againſt them, 3 Jac. II. 1687 iv. 262
* Doctor Clark, the preſident of Magdalen, dies iv. 262
* They elect dr. Hough iv. 263
* The king's mandate to elect mr. Farmer iv. 263
* The college petition his majeſty not to inſiſt on it iv. 264
* They apply to the duke of Ormond and biſhop of Wincheſter iv. 261
* Are cited before the High-commiſſion, to anſwer why they did not elect mr. Farmer iv. 261
* Their anſwer iv. 261
* They ſhew mr. Farmer was incapable iv. 266
* Teſtimonials againſt him of ſeveral irregularities iv. 267
* The court decree dr. Hough's election void iv. 268
* And ſuſpend the vice-preſident iv. 268
* The king's mandate to the college, to admit the biſhop of Oxford preſident iv. 269
* The king goes down to Oxford, and threatens the college for their contempt iv. 269
* Commands them immediately to elect the biſhop of Oxford iv. 269
* They refuſe iv. 270
* The college's petition and addreſs to the king iv. 270
* A letter to the college, with ſome queries concerning their proceedings, and their anſwer iv. 270, &c.
* A deputation from the High-Commiſſion goes down to the college to viſit them iv. 273
* The biſhop of Cheſter's ſpeech to the college iv. 273
* Their hearing iv. 273
* The decree for making dr. Hough's election void, read iv. 274
* He refuſes to ſubmit to the decree iv. 274
* Is charged with contumacy iv. 275
* Proteſts againſt the proceedings of the court, and is bound over iv. 276
* Dr. Fairfax and the fellows refuſe to inſtall the biſhop of Oxford iv. 276, 277
* The biſhop of Cheſter inſtalls the biſhop of Oxon by proxy, and breaks open the preſident's lodging iv. 277
* Dr. Fairfax and the fellows refuſe to obey the biſhop of Oxford iv. 278
* The biſhop of Cheſter inveighs againſt the behaviour of the college, in a ſecond ſpeech iv. 280
* Dr. Aldworth the vice-preſident, and the reſt of the fellows who refuſed to ſubmit to the biſhop of Oxford, expelled the college iv. 282
* Their proteſt iv. 282
* The ſentence of expulſion iv. 282. See v. 748
* They are decreed incapable of any preferment iv. 282

*MAGISTRACY
* And government of England vindicated, as to the proceedings in the lord Ruſſel's trial, by ſir Barth. Shower iii. 765

MAGNA CHARTA.
Salvo contenemento in Magna Charta ſaid to be meant only of amerciaments, and not of fines for great offences iii. 854. Em: Pref. xi.
The judges are entruſted with Magna Charta by their oaths iii: 222. vii. 480
The judges by treachery endeavoured to break the bonds aſunder of Magna Charta, the great treaſury of our peace iii. 222. vii. 480
It is one of the privileges confirmed by Magna Charta, that no man ſhall be reſtrained of his liberty, but by the law of the land Em: Pref. iv.
Mr. Maſon's ſpeech concerning the bill for Magna Charta vii. 194
What time Magna Charta extended to Ireland viii. 353. See Id. 354, 358, 362
Magna Charta hath been confirmed above thirty times vii. 142
The import of the words "per legem terræ," in Magna Charta vii. 122, 148, 181
Explanation of that ſtatute, with relation to the liberty of the perſons of the ſubjects. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.
Several petitions of the ſubjects, in conſequence of that charter, and the ſeveral kings anſwers ii. 199, 201, 297, 213. v. 82, 86, 98, 101. vi. 735, 739. vii. 121, 130, 146, 148, 152, 207, 246, 749. See vii. 479. 9 Henry III. under STATUTES. WORDS.

* MAHONY, MATTHEW, his trial. See GOODERE SAMUEL.

MAIDEN CIRCUIT.
The circuit held for the county of Kent, in the ſummer of the year 1719, 5 George I. proved a maiden one, which had not been known before x. 92 Ap.

MAID of KENT. See BARTON ELIZABETH.

MAIMING.
Indictment for maiming vi. 60. Ap. See COKE ARUNDEL. WOODBURNE JOHN.

MAJOR, Mr.
Of counſel for George Purchaſe viii. 274

MAITLAND, CHARLES Lord, of Halton,
Proceedings againſt him, before the lords of the articles, &c. for giving falſe teſtimony at the trial of James Mitchell ii. 636. viii. 436
The petition to the lords againſt him, and the letters on which the petition was grounded viii. 436
Lord Halton's anſwer viii. 437
Declared innocent viii. 439
Copies of Mitchell's two confeſſions viii. 439

*MALICE.
* Malice expreſs, and implied, defined ii. 643. ix. 63
* Where the law implies malice iii. 62, 939. iv. 386
* The purſuing malicious methods to obtain a right, makes the party doing it liable to an action iii. 1090
Woodward of a park killing a perſon who makes no reſiſtance, is ſaid in law to do it in prepenſed malice ix. 533. n.
He who doth a cruel act voluntarily, doth it of malice prepenſe ix. 63, 536. n.
Some have been led into a miſtake, by not well conſidering what the paſſion of malice is: they have conſtrued it to be a rancour of mind lodged in the perſon killing for ſome conſiderable time before the commiſſion of the fact; which is a miſtake ariſing from not well diſtinguiſhing between hatred and malice. By Holt, chief juſtice ix. 63, 536. n. See ii. 643.
Malice is a deſign formed of doing miſchief to another; he that uſeth the means to do ill, is malicious ix. 63
Malice implied is malice prepenſe, in the opinion of lord chief juſtice Holt ix. 63

MALLET, Sir THOMAS, Judge B. R.
The time of king Charles the firſt's death, in reſpect to the king's reign, was omitted in the indictment againſt the regicides, in deference to mr. juſtice Mallet's opinion ii. 303
Extract of his opinion concerning libels, who was one of the juſtices of the court of King's-Bench ix. 312

MANCHESTER, HENRY Earl of, Lord Privy Seal,
His ſpeech for a mild ſentence on Henry Sherfield, eſq. convicted by information

mation in Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glaſs window in a church i. 415, 416

Parliament reſolve that his warrant for the impriſonment of Prynne is unjuſt and illegal, and that he ought to give him ſatisfaction for the damages ſuſtained by his impriſonment i. 504

MANDAMUS.

Record on a Mandamus for admiſſion into the freedom of a corporation of x. 138, 139. Ap. See MOORE HENRY, and the Corporation of HASTINGS.

* MANDATE. See CAMBRIDGE. MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

MANSEL, Sir ROBERT. See WHITELOCKE JAMES.

MANSFIELD, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.

His argument on error in the cauſe of Fabrigas and Moſtyn, when judgment of C. B. affirmed xi. 195

His charge to the jury on the proſecution of J. Horne, Eſq. for a libel xi. 287

Declares, that if any man dare give orders to murder a ſubject, or to make any ſubject a ſlave, he is as high a criminal as can exiſt in the ſtate xi. 288. See KINGSTON Ducheſs Dowager of. LOVAT Lord's trial ix. *740, *747. MURRAY WILLIAM. POPULARITY.

MANSFIELD, JAMES. See KINGSTON Ducheſs. WILKES JOHN.

* MANSFIELD, RICHARD, Eſq. iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* MANSLAUGHTER. See MURDER.

MANWOOD, Sir ROGER, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,

One of the commiſſioners on the trial of Babington and others for treaſon i. 127

And on the trial of Abington, for like offence i. 136

His ſpeech on the arraignment of Daviſon in the Star-chamber vii. 19, 21, 24, 26

MARCH, Mr.

Of counſel againſt William Acton ix. 182, 209, 218

His obſervations on opening for Gibbon on quo warranto x. 118, 123. Ap.

His objections to evidence for Elies on quo warranto x. 131. See Id. 135. Ap.

MARINERS.

Whether mariners can be legally impreſſed into the ſervice of the crown. See PRESSING.

MARKHAM, Sir GRIFFIN,

Sir Edward Parham, George Brooke, Bartholomew Brookeſby, Anthony Copley, William Watſon, and William Clarke, their trials for high-treaſon, at Wincheſter, 1603 vii. 63

The commiſſioners names vii. 63

The indictment vii. 63

All but ſir Edward Parham found guilty vii. 65

A copy of a letter, giving an account of theſe proceedings vii. 65

A true copy of his majeſty's warrant, written with his own hand, to the ſheriff of Hampſhire, to ſuſpend the execution of lord Cobham, lord Grey, and ſir Griffin Markham vii. 66

MARKHAM, Sir JOHN,

It is ſaid by Huſſey, chief juſtice, that ſir John Markham told king Edw. IV. he could not arreſt a man either for treaſon or felony as a ſubject might, becauſe if the king did wrong, the party injured could not have an action againſt him vii. 120, 129, 130, 146, 171, 219, 221. See ii. 208, 209. iv. 558.

* MARRIAGE.

* If a woman be taken away by force and afterwards married, though by her conſent, the perſon taking her is guilty of felony v. 464

* Marrying a woman under a force is felony, though the party marrying her was not author of the force v. 473

* One may be guilty of felony in aiding and aſſiſting a perſon in a forcible marriage, though not preſent at the ceremony v. 478

* The marriage is null and void ab initio, where either of the parties are pre-contracted v. 628

* Marrying a ſecond wife, the firſt being alive, felony by ſtatute v. 627

Whether ſecond marriage, founded on divorce for impotency, be legal x. 23. Ap.

The marriage act commented on xi. 224, 234

A ſentence of nullity is concluſive evidence in a perſonal action againſt a defence founded upon a ſuppoſed coverture xi. 261

Sentence of nullity, and ſentence in affirmance of marriage, is concluſive evidence on a queſtion of legitimacy ariſing incidentally upon a claim to a real eſtate. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence in a cauſe of jactitation, is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence againſt the marriage; and ſo it is in perſonal actions, immediately founded on a ſuppoſed marriage. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

A direct ſentence in a ſuit upon promiſe of marriage againſt the contract, admitted evidence againſt ſuch contract in an action upon the promiſe for damages. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence in ſpiritual court againſt marriage in ſuit of jactitation of marriage, is not concluſive evidence, ſo as to ſtop proof of marriage in indictment for polygamy. Reſolved unanimouſly by all the judges of England xi. 262

The approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and alſo of the preſumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belongs to his majeſty. So reſolved by all the judges of England xi. 295. See ROYAL FAMILY. BAYNTON SARAH. FIELDING ROBERT. KINGSTON Ducheſs of. HARTWELL JOHN. SHREWSBURY Counteſs of. SWENSDEN HAAGEN.

MARSHAL, WILLIAM ii. 917. See viii. 453. WAKEMAN, & al. ii. 993. ANDERSON, & al.

MARSON, JOHN v. 194. See COWPER, & al.

MARTEN, HENRY ii. 309, 392. See REGICIDES.

MARTIN, Sir HENRY,

His ſpeech concerning the petition of right, at a conference vii. 208

MARY, Queen of England,

Her cruelties exceeded her father's, Hen. VIII. xi. 25

MARY, Queen of Scots,

Depoſitions of the perſons concerned in the murder of her huſband, the earl of Darnley viii. 327

Duke of Norfolk's indictment for high-treaſon, in endeavouring to marry her viii. 335

Her commiſſion to try earl Bothwell, for the murder of her huſband the king of Scots i. 77

The commiſſion for her trial i. 145

The commiſſion for her execution i. 161. See SCOTS.

MASON, ROBERT, of Lincoln's-Inn,

Of counſel againſt William Prynne, for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 421

His ſpeech for the bill concerning magna charta, and the liberty of the ſubject vii. 194

His ſpeech concerning the additions of the lords to the petition of right vii. 200

Argues againſt the return of the habeas corpus brought by Walter Long vii. 220

For ſir John Elliot and Denzil Holles, for ſeditious ſpeeches in parliament vii. 242, 243

Argues againſt return of habeas corpus for William Stroud and others vii. 219

* MASS ii. 801. See PLOT POPISH.

MASTERS in CHANCERY.

Commiſſions granted to maſters, appointing them to hear cauſes vi. 505

Their oath vi. 504

Formerly the chancellors took money for the places of maſters in Chancery vi. 650, 706

Joined with the judges in commiſſions, to hear cauſes in abſence of the chancellor vi. 505, 506, 619

Sir Joſeph Jekyll, maſter of the rolls, took notice, that the maſters in Chancery aſſumed to themſelves a power of judicature in Chancery vi. 629

Their office anciently was quite different from what it is now, ſo that it is in a manner forgot what it originally was vi. 706

Of their employment in matters of account vi. 706

Of their duty on references to them touching the ſufficiency of anſwers vi. 706

MASTER and SERVANT.

Servant may juſtify killing another to ſave his maſter's life, if he cannot otherwiſe eſcape ii. 7

If maſter be provoked to a degree of paſſion by ſome miſcarriage of the ſervant, and corrects him with a moderate weapon, and chance to kill him, it is but miſadventure; but if he uſe an improper inſtrument in the correction, and kills the ſervant, it is murder ix. 64

MATTHEWS, JOHN,

His trial for printing a treaſonable libel, entitled, Vox Populi Vox Dei, Ex ore tuo te judico, Oct. 30, 1719 ix. 680

Tried before eleven judges ix. 680. See vi. 236

Debate whether it was a legal pannel, it being without the addition of pariſh, ward, dwelling-place, or abode ix. 680. See vi. 235, 236

Court agreed it was a good pannel, the city of London not being within the meaning of the act ix. 680. See vi. 235, 236

His indictment ix. 680, &c.

Mr. Bootle opens the indictment and evidence againſt him ix. 682

Mr. Lechmere (attorney-general), his ſpeech againſt him ix. 684

Serjeant Cheſhire on the ſame ſide ix. 686

He deſires the witneſſes may be kept out of the hearing of one another ix. 687

Ordered by the court, that they ſhall ſtay out till called ix. 687

Evidence againſt him ix. 687

Croſs-examined by mr. Hungerford and mr. Kettleby ix. 688, &c.

Mr. Hungerford's ſpeech in defence of the priſoner ix. 696

Mr. Kettleby on the ſame ſide ix. 698

Evidence in favour of the priſoner ix. 700

Croſs-examined by the attorney-general ix. 701

Debate about reading of a paper ſigned by the priſoner ix. 702

Ordered to be read ix. 702

Evidence to invalidate what ſome of the witneſſes had ſworn againſt the priſoner ix. 704

Attorney-general's reply ix. 704

Serjeant Cheſhire's obſervations on what the priſoner's counſel had ſaid ix. 706

Mr. Lutwych on the ſame ſide ix. 707

Lord chief juſtice King's opinion on the act of parliament on which the priſoner was indicted ix. 708

Lord chief juſtice King ſums up the evidence ix. 708

Found guilty ix. 711

Mr. Hungerford moves in arreſt of judgment, that the word impreſſit doth not neceſſarily import printing, unleſs explained by an Anglicè ix. 711

Mr. Kettleby on the ſame ſide ix. 711

Attorney-general in anſwer to them ix. 712

Mr. Lutwych on the ſame ſide ix. 712

Mr. Reeves on the ſame ſide ix. 712

Mr. Bootle on the ſame ſide ix. 713

Mr. Hungerford in anſwer to them ix. 714

Mr. Kettleby on the ſame ſide ix. 714

Court over-ruled the objection, and that impreſſit was very proper to ſignify printing, as uſed in the indictment ix. 714

Mr. Hungerford made another objection, that the indictment does not purſue the words of the act of parliament ix. 714

Mr. Kettleby on the ſame ſide ix. 714

Mr. attorney-general's reply, that they are not bound to purſue the words of the act of parliament ix. 714

Serjeant Cheſhire on the ſame ſide ix. 715

Mr. Hungerford by way of reply ix. 715

Lord chief juſtice King's opinion upon it ix. 715

Mr. Kettleby ſays, that the act of parliament goes all the way in the plural number, and they have laid the indictment in the ſingular ix. 715

Attorney-general's anſwer to it ix. 715
Mr. Hungerford ſays, the act of parliament makes it high-treaſon to affirm, &c. that any perſon hath a right to the crown of theſe realms; and they have not mentioned Ireland ix. 715
Recorder paſſed ſentence upon him, and he was executed at Tyburn ix. 715

MAWGRIDGE, JOHN,

His caſe on a ſpecial verdict for murder ix. 61
Eſcapes from the Marſhalſea to Flanders ix. 66
Is taken, brought into England, and executed at Tyburn ix. 66

MAXIMS.

The principal maxims, &c. from ſcripture, the common law, the civil law, and the claſſics, to be found in this work, arranged alphabetically.

A.

Ab initio ſecundum legem Dei i. 288
Ab inutili et incommodo vii. 146
Ab regis honore vii. 146
Abundans cautela non nocet i. 272. xi. 56
Abuti fortibus, ut confunderentur omnia i. 300
Accidens ſine ſubjecto, individuum vagum, et nihil indeclinabile i. 281
Acta probatoria in uno proceſſu, fidem non faciunt in alio ii. 636
Acta ſumunt denominationem a potentiori i. 443
Actionem injuriarum nunquam competere, niſi dolus et animus injuriandi adſit viii. 198
Actor fit author vii. 184
Actore non probante, abſolvitur reus v. 586
Actus legis nemini facit injuriam ix. 653*
Actus legitimus non recipit tempus aut conditionem xi. 34
Actus non facit reum, niſi mens ſit rea ii. 74, 79. iii. 792
Ad animæ deliquium i. 302
Ad concilium ne accedas, antequam voceris iii. 1094
Additio probat minoritatem vii. 170
Ad ea quæ frequentius acciderint, adaptantur leges i. 533, 1004. v. 695 xi. 97, 320
Ad faciendum populum i. 255, 635. v. 557
Ad illud ſeparandum, quod Deus conjunxit i. 286
Ad inſtruendum, non ad deſtruendum xi. 109
Ad oppoſitum i. 308
Ad ultimum potentiæ ii. 356
      Ætas parentum pejor avis tulit
10   Nos nequiores, mox daturos
      Progeniem vitioſiorem iii. 772
A facto ad jus non valet argumentum vii. 636
Afflictio dat intellectum i. 338
A grumbletonian in the ſtirrup generally proves a tyrant in the ſaddle iii. 777
Aliud eſt diſtinctio, aliud ſeparatio xi. 84
Aliud eſt naſci, aliud fieri xi. 80
All private miſchief muſt be borne with patience, to prevent a national calamity xi. 315
All things are to be preſumed in disfavour of the ſpoliator ix. 426
Altum ſilentium xi. 33
A majori ad minus vii. 145
A minore ad majus ii. 212. vii. 170, 172. viii. 68
A minore ad majus non valet v. 586, 759
Amicus Gerardus, ſed magis amica veritas viii. 366
Ampliandi ſunt favores ii. 138. vii. 302
Anima et vita regnorum authoritas vii. 112
Animus injuriandi non præſumitur i. 445
Antehac flagitiis laborabatur, nunc legibus Em. Pref. xv.
A perſonis vii. 210
Appenſi in ſtaterâ, inventi ſunt minus habentes i. 267
Arcana Dei et imperii vii. 133, 183
Argumenta et indicia clara et evidentia, quæ faciunt fidem judici iv. 290
Argumentum ab authoritate valet affirmativè vii. 170
Argumentum ratio quæ rei dubiæ, facit fidem v. 592
Arma ferenti omnia dat, quæ juſta negat vii. 57, 228
Arma ſubditorum preces et lacrymæ vii. 145
   Arte perire ſuâ ii. 8. See Lex juſtior, &c.
Aſſaſſinii crimen, ob illius atrocitatem, æquiparatur crimini læſæ majeſtatis v. 584
Aſſaſſinii qualitas homicidio adjecta, novam conſtituit delicti ſpeciem v. 584
Aſſentiri et co-opinari incidunt in virum ſapientem i. 467
Aſſurgat rex vii. 110
A tempore vii. 210
Audaces fortuna juvat i. 785
Augenda ſacerdotum jura, jura regia minui i. 278
Auferat oblivio ſi poteſt, ſi non, utcunque tegat ſilentium v. 83. vi. 408. xi. 25

B.

Bona libertas vii. 145
Bonum in ſe i. 214
Bonum qui communius, eò præſtantius xi. 52

C.

Calamos armare veneno xi. 111
Calumnia, malitioſa juris interpretatio ii. 15
Candide & caſte i. 749
Capti in bello non ſunt occidendi i. 972
Carcer ad continendos homines, non ad puniendos haberi debet Em. Pref. xv. vi. 428. vii. 147, 230
Cauſa cauſæ eſt cauſa cauſati iii. 768
Cauſa cauſans cauſa cauſata vii. 130
Caſus omiſſus habetur pro omiſſo ii. 634
Ceſſante cauſâ, ceſſare debet effectus i. 634. xi. 83
Ceſſas regnare, ſi ceſſas judicare vii. 110
Circumſtances in many caſes are of greater force, and more to be depended upon, than the teſtimony of living witneſſes ix. 426
Claves legum ii. 465
Clericus in oppido, tanquam piſcis in arido i. 338
Cogitationis pœnam nemo patitur v. 634
Colore infamiæ, ſub velamine petitionis i. 445
Columna et corona reipublicæ, juſtitia vii. 144
Commento eludere juramentum iii. 462
Commoda aliena pari dolore i. 302
Commovere nauſeam quam bilem i. 278
Commune periculum requirat commune auxilium vii. 171, 172
Communis error facit jus viii. 74. xi. 310, 311
Communis eſt opinio confeſſionem valere ii. 631
Communiter uſitata et approbata xi. 312
Compendia diſpendia vii. 172
Conatus et attentatum habentur pro crimine conſummato ii. 634
Conatus faciendi non reputatur pro facto ii. 634
Concordia multos facit unum xi. 105
Conditio annectitur, ubi libertas præſumitur xi. 34
Confeſſio emanata ſub ſpe impunitatis non importat condemnationem i. 450
Confeſſio non poteſt pro parte acceptari, et pro parte ſperni i. 453
Confeſſus habetur pro convicto iii. 1098
Confeſſus non eſt audiendus ut teſtis iii. 1098
Confitendum eſt ne fruſtra interrogâſſet vii. 70
Conjunctus non præſumitur injuria i. 442
Conſilium non decretum i. 322
Conſtitutio pœnalis non excedit caſum ii. 8
Conſuetudo et ſtatuta loci, in quem eſt deſtinata ſolutio, reſpicienda ſunt xi. 69
Conſuetudo peccandi tollit ſenſum peccati vii. 51
Contemporanea expoſitio eſt fortiſſima in lege vii. 144
Contingentia argumenta quanquam ſingula fidem non faciunt v. 592
Continuante cauſâ, continuandus effectus i. 634
Contraria juxta ſe poſita magis eluceſcunt i. 708
Cor linguæ fæderat naturæ ſanctio i. 255
Corporalis injuria non recipit æſtimationem vii. 145
Corruptio optimorum eſt peſſima xi. 109
Cortici verborum abhorrendum eſt ii. 634
Cor unum et anima una i. 272
Credulitas in furtis præbet cauſam probabilem i. 458, 461
Creſcente malitiâ, creſcere debet et pœna i. 243
Crimen aſſaſſinii, interveniente pretio ii. 634
Crimen læſæ majeſtatis i. 214, 235
Crimen vel delictum non poteſt purgari bonâ intentione vii. 277
Crudelis miſericordia ii. 8
Crudelitas parcens i. 240
Cui adſunt teſtimonia rerum, quid opus eſt verbis? i. 261
Cuilibet in arte ſuâ credendum eſt i. 634. vii. 205. xi. 93
Cui licet quod majus, licet etiam quod minus xi. 50
Cui quod majus eſt licet, et ei quod eſt minus licitum eſt xi. 60
Cujus eſt dare, ejus eſt diſponere xi. 88
Cum duo jura concurrunt in unâ perſonâ, æquum eſt ac ſi eſſent in diverſis xi. 76, 81, 82, 87, 104
Cum grano ſalis xi. 135
Cum inventa eſt veritas, figendum ibi judicium xi. 106
Cum omnibus nationibus in circuitu i. 305
   Cum princeps orat, precibus præcepta colorat i. 635
Cum rex ſit author juris, non debet inde injuriæ naſci occaſio i. 653
Cum ſcelera proſunt, peccat qui recte facit i. 301
Cum ſit timida nequitia, dat teſtimonium condemnationis i. 264, 303
Cum ſudore vultûs, et tremore cordis i. 284
Cum triplici fulvum conjunge leone leonem,
   Ut varias atavus junxerat ante roſas.
 Majus opus varios ſine pugnâ unire leones,
   Sanguine quam varias conſociâſſe roſas i. 252
Cunctatio nulla longa, ubi agitur de vitâ hominis, non ſolum de vitâ ſed de famâ vii. 386
Currere quatuor pedibus xi. 126
Cuſtos utriuſque tabulæ vii. 622, xi. 74

D.

Damnum abſque injuriâ i. 637. vii. 112, 184, 444, 506
Dat tempus et locum per quæ poteſtis mutari a malitiâ i. 308
Date Cæſari quæ ſunt Cæſaris xi. 66, 74
Date Deo quæ ſunt Dei xi. 74
Dato uno abſurdo, infinita ſequuntur i. 687
Deceptio viſûs i. 278
Decepto ſenſu cum judicio i. 303
De chartis et factis regiis, non debent, aut poſſunt, juſticiarii aut privatæ perſonæ diſputare xi. 107
Defendit numerus viii. 116
Deficiente lege, recurritur ad conſuetudinem xi. 76
Deficiente conſuetudine, recurritur ad rationem naturalem xi. 76
De hiis quæ non ſunt, et non apparent, idem eſt judicium i. 966, 967. See De non &c.
De jure, in dubiis et obſcuris, quod minimum et benignius ſequimur i. 439
De jure ſocius aut particeps criminis adverſus ſocium fidem non facit i. 450, 453, 479
Delegatus non poteſt delegare x. 442
Delicta non præſumuntur, ſed probantur vii. 282
Delictum debet eſſe manifeſtum v. 593
Demens eſt qui fidem præſtat errori i. 301
De minimis non curat lex i. 648
De more gentis xi. 61
De morte hominis nulla eſt cunctatio longa v. 96. See Cunctatio, &c.

De non apparentibus et non exiſtentibus, eadem ratio eſt ii. 467. v. 125.
See De hiis, &c.
Denominatio ſumenda a potentiore i. 445
De noſtris annis ſibi Jupiter augeat annos i. 307
De ſimilibus idem eſt judicium xi. 93
Deſinit eſſe remedio locus i. 278
Determinatione finis i. 214
De vitâ hominis nulla eſt cunctatio longa iii. 1051
Dicta facta preſupponunt, et trahunt ſe cum ſuis circumſtantiis vii. 276
Dies diei eructat verbum, et nox nocti indicat ſcientiam i. 304
Difficile eſt ſatiras non ſcribere iii. 784
Dii tibi dent quicquid, princeps auguſte, mereris,
Et rata perpetuo, quæ tribuere, velint i. 308
Diſcernere per legem quid ſit juſtum ii. 466. See v. 99
Diſcite juſtitiam moniti, et non temnere Divos i. 308
Diſcretio eſt diſcernere per legem quid ſit juſtum xi. 134. See v. 99
Diſputandi gratiâ iv. 197
Diſſimulatione tollitur injuria iv. 286
Diſtinguendum inter verba narrativa et alia verba diſpoſitiva i. 437
Diverſitas loci varia argueret facinora vii. 399
Divinum quiddam in vulgi opinione i. 332
Diviſi ab orbe Britanni vii. 148
Diviſibilis in ſemper diviſibilia i. 235
Dixerat O mores, O tempora! Tullius olim,
Romanum ſtruerat cum Catilina nefas.
O tempora dicimus, &c.
Et cur non dicimus, O mores! vii. 60
Dolum generale in omni actione injuriarum tanquam ſubſtantiale requiſitum i. 441
Dolum in injuriâ requirit i. 441
Dolus et culpa ſemper præſumitur viii. 200
Dolus et error verſantur in generalibus vii. 406
Dolus et malus eſt de ſubſtantiâ criminis i. 440
Dolus non ſit præſumendus i. 465
Dominium fundatur in gratiâ vii. 502
Ducere volentes, trahere nolentes i. 506
Dum incerti utemur jure, fluctuaret reſpublica vii. 394
Dum tempus habemus, bonum operemur vii. 141
Dum volumus per iram aliena coercere, graviora committimus i. 298

E.

Eadem præſumitur eſſe mens regis quæ legis vii. 630
Ea ſententia accipienda eſt ſemper, quæ res gerendæ aptior eſt i. 439
Eatenus rationandum, donec veritas inveniatur xi. 106
Ejus eſt condemnare, cujus eſt abſolvere vii. 63
Ejus ſit interpretare, cujus eſt condere xi. 105
Electione mediorum i. 214
Eligere infirma, ut confundat fortia i. 300
Eodem modo quo quod conſtituitur, diſſolvitur viii. 357
Eo modo quo offendit i. 409
Errare cum patribus v. 746. vi. 620. vii. 149, 186
Errore decipi i. 299
Errorem ad ſua principia referre, eſt refellere vii. 144
Et lupus, et turpes inſtant morientibus urſæ i. 224
Et tu Brute? iii. 784
Ex abundanti cautelâ v. 559
Ex Albæ ruinis i. 284
Exceptio ejuſdem rei cujus petitur diſſolutio vii. 442
Exceptio format regulam in non exceptis i. 571, 972. iv. 292. v. 588. vii. 209
Exceptio in caſibus exceptis deſtruit regulam vii. 209
Exceptione rei judicatæ xi. 220
Excludetur præſumptio delicti i. 466
Ex congruo et condigno vii. 172, 210
Ex conſequenti i. 284
Ex duobus malis minimum eligendum eſt vii. 391
Exempla ducunt, non trahunt xi. 111
Ex extremis media præſumuntur i. 445
Ex leproſis parentibus, leproſi generantur filii i. 238
Ex malis moribus bonæ oriuntur leges Em. Pref. vi. i. 322. vii. 628
Ex merito juſtitiæ ii. 172
Ex minutione laicorum, ſe ſacerdotum promoviſſe gloriam i. 278
Ex moribus legis i. 446
Expedit reipublicæ, ut finis aliquis ſit litium ix. 653*. xi. 218
Expertus ſapiat i. 273
Ex præſumptionibus et conjecturis nemo criminaliter condemnari poteſt iv. 287
Expreſſio ejus quod tacitè ineſt, nihil operatur vii. 209
Expreſſio unius v. 559
Ex quibus jus oritur vii. 397
Ex regis ſpiritu, nos omnes ſpiritum ducimus i. 261
Ex ſolo indelibili unctionis charactere i. 275
Extra judicium et ſpe veniæ ii. 629
Extrema obruunt media xi. 34
Er unguibus leo i. 289

F.

Fabula non judicium xi. 224, 233
Facilius invenitur, quod a pluribus quæritur xi. 101
Facta ex incontinenti, ubi poteſt docere de errore ii. 632
Facta valent i. 627
Factum infectum fieri nequit iii. 760
Fælices eſſent artes, ſi per ſolos artifices judicarentur i. 510, 663. vii. 417
Fallacia a bene diviſis ad mala conjuncta vii. 209
Fallacia a dicto ſecundum quod ad dictum ſimpliciter vii. 626
Fas eſt & ab hoſte doceri Em. Pref. viii. xi. 113
Favores amplificandi i. 571. ii. 8, 138. vii. 302
Favos etiam veſpes faciunt i. 267, 268
Ferendo, non feriendo i. 252
Feſtina lente i. 626
Fiat juſtitia, currat lex, & vincat veritas i. 264
Fiat juſtitia, ruat cœlum vii. 622, 629. xi. 332
Fictio juris i. 454
Fides veri a calumniâ defenderit i. 441
Flagellatur in corde, qui laudatur in ore i. 249. xi. 103
Flectere cum nequeo ſuperos, Acheronta movebo i. 268
Fortes Deus adjuvat i. 785
—— Forum, putealque Libonis
Mandabo ſiccis iii. 778
Fraus et dolus nemine patrocinari debent xi. 220
Fraus tantum ab injuſtitiâ oritur vii. 334
Fruſtra potentia quæ nunquam redigitur in ſtatutum vii. 180
Funiculus triplex non facile rumpitur i. 305. vii. 362

G.

Generalitas parit obſcuritatem vii. 400
Gens una ſumma ii. 11
Gentem auferte perfidam
Credentium de finibus i. 258, 303
Gloria Dei celare, regis perſcrutare rem i. 335, 350
Gratioſa ampliari decet, odioſa reſtringi xi. 55
Gratis dictum xi. 296
Gratuitas cicatrices i. 743
Gravatis addere gravamina i. 261
Graviora criminalia judicia civilibus ſunt v. 592

H.

Hab. corp. feſtinum remedium iv. 562 Em. Pref. v.
Hæc fac, et vives i. 220. vii. 171
Hæreſis nondum in mundum emerſa i. 297
Hæres ſuccedit in defuncti locum i. 276
Hæretici omnes ipſo jure excommunicati i. 237
High or extraordinary juſtice is injuſtice i. 199
Hoc ſolum rex non poteſt agere, quod non poteſt agere juſte i. 642, 643 v. 104
Hominum exceſſit metus i. 277
Homo a Deo ſecundus, et ſolo Deo minor i. 277
Homo homini lupus xi. 135
Homo non multum receſſit ab arte ſuâ i. 616
Homo ſpiritualis judicatur a nemine i. 286
Honores mutant mores i. 210. vii. 48. n.
Hoſtis humani generis viii. 74. n.
Humanum eſt errare i. 446, 646. vii. 111
Humores moti et non remoti corpus deſtruunt vii. 148

J.

Jacta eſt alea i. 246, 305
Id non fit, quod non legitimè fit iv. 253
Id poſſumus, quod jure poſſumus v. 129
If we keep the law the law will keep us ii. 200
Ignorantia juris eſt calamitas innocentis Em. Pref. v.
Ignorantia juris excuſat a dolo i. 464
Ignorantia juris in damnis vitandis non nocet i. 461
Ignorantia juris non excuſat Em. Pref. vii. i. 412, 417, 457, 463, 464. iii. 299. n. 659, 794. vii. 64. See ix. 299. n.
Ignorantia maxime inexcuſabilis, neſcire quod omnes ſciunt i. 458, 461, 462, 464.
Ille crucem ſceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema i. 300
Ille terrori ſubjicit, hic ſervituti donatur i. 277
Impubes et furioſus non poſſunt facere injuriam i. 441
Impunitas continua affectum tribuit peccandi i. 240
In ambiguis orationibus maximè ſententia ſpectanda eſt ejus, qui eas protulit i. 439
In aſſaſſinio omnia procedant quæ in criminibus exceptis v. 584
In bivio quærentes divinationem i. 303
In cauſâ criminali verba in dubio debent intelligi ad bonum i. 466
In civilibus diſſentionibus, quamvis ſæpe reſpublica lædatur, non tamen in exitium reipublicæ contenditur i. 970, 971
Incommodum non ſolvit argumentum x. 72
In confeſſione jurata nullo pænæ metu propter impunitatem promiſſum i. 454
In confitentem nullæ ſunt partes judicis ii. 632
In criminalibus ſufficit generalis malitia viii. 34. n.
In cruente prælio ii. 16
Indefinitum æquipollet univerſali xi. 49
Indigni ſunt, qui de minimis judicent i. 283
Indignum rege vii. 147
In dubiis benignior fieri debet interpretatio vii. 278
In dubiis benigniora præferenda ſunt vii. 417
In dubiis et generalibus benignior ſenſus eſt præferendus iii. 1056.
In dubio ſemper in mitiorem partem eſt præſumendum v. 590
In delictis præſumitur dolus, niſi probatum contrarium vii. 282
In delictis voluntas, non finis, attenditur i. 440
In eo quis rectiſſime plectitur, in quo peccat xi. 113
In facto jus oritur ii. 442
In favorem vitæ iv. 188
In figurâ judicii, ſed amicabiliter i. 272
In furore belli ii. 15
In genere, non in individuo xi. 61
Ingrediturque ſolo, caput inter nubila condit vii. 151
In ipſa vindicta libertatis i. 305
Iniquum petere, ut æquum ferrent i. 628
Iniquus dignitatis judex, qui aut invidet, aut nimium favet i. 305
In jure quod uſu invaluit i. 464
Injuriæ non factum quæritur ſed cauſa faciendæ expreſſa i. 441
Injuria non fieri ſine animo injuriandi i. 441. See i. 456

Injuria non judicium vii. 99
In majorem cautelam ii. 13
In majorem ſecuritatem xi. 56
In maleficiis voluntas ſpectatur, non exitus i. 441. ix. 606
In medio ſpatio mediocria firma locantur i. 225
In odium ſpoliatoris x. 445
In omnibus judiciis ſuis æquitatem, non rigorem legis, obſervare i. 219
In ore, in manu, in conſummatione i. 214
In pænalibus cauſis ſemper benignius interpretandum eſt ii. 138. vii. 274. xi. 216
In pares eſt nullum imperium vii. 245
In patientiâ poſſidentur animæ i. 275
In planis non opus eſt conjecturis xi. 49
In præſentiâ majoris, ceſſat poteſtas minoris vii. 92
In probatione aſſaſſinii, probabilia ſufficiunt argumenta v. 584
In quâcunque horâ peccator ingemuerit i. 263
In ſe magna ruunt i. 283
In ſenatu nemo tenetur de conſilio vii. 408
In ſummo gradu i. 214
Integralis unitas, in ſolutione continui i. 269
Inter arma leges ſilent i. 536, 547, 585. vii. 400
Intereſt reipublicæ ut maleficia non maneant impunita vii. 247. x. 40. See vii. 112
In terminis terminantibus vii. 169, 172
Inter omnia probationum genera, major eſt illa, quæ ſit per teſtes de viſu v. 584
Interpretantur legem conſuetudo et princeps xi. 105
Inter utrumque volat dubiis victoria pennis i. 973
Inter voluptates, tam numeratur id quod habes, quam id quod ſperas i. 271
In verba veritatis i. 299
In victoriâ veritatis, ſoli veritatis inimici perierunt i. 302. xi. 106
Ira furor brevis ix. 18. xi. 113
Judex bonus nihil ex arbitrio ſuo faciat, nec propoſito domeſticæ voluntatis, ſed juxta leges et jura pronunciet xi. 96
Judex debet procedere ſecundum naturam rei prohibitæ i. 463
Judex eſt lex loquens xi. 87
Judex ex his quæ deciſa ſunt, ſtatuet, et de ſimilibus ad ſimilia procedat xi. 37
Judicandum eſt legibus, non exemplis i. 684. v. 97
Judicium non redditur, niſi in invitum iv. 252. vii. 110, 112
Juramentum cum ſeptimâ manu x. 25
Jura naturalia ſunt immutabilia xi. 91
Jura, perjura, ſecretum prodere noli i. 278
Jurat? crede minus, non jurat? credere noli i. 256
Jurat, non jurat hoſtis, ab hoſte cave i. 256
Juriſprudentia legis communis Angliæ eſt ſcientia ſocialis et copioſa xi. 97
Jus gentium omni humano genere commune eſt i. 970
Jus originis nemo mutare poteſt ii. 5
Juſtitia columna et corona reipublicæ vii. 144
Juſtiſſima lex eſt, ut quæ agit aliquis, talia patiatur vii. 100
Juſtitia confirmata non eget authoritate i. 347
Juſtitiâ fruendi cauſâ reges conſtituti ſunt i. 993
Juſtitia totius Angliæ xi. 260
Juſtum non juſte xi. 59
Jus venit, quod uſus comprobavit xi. 100

K

King (The) cannot alter the law xi. 53
King (The) cannot do wrong i. 625, 642, 672. ii. 305, 306, 753. vii. 183, 184
King (The) is truſted with the ſtate of the commonwealth i. 625

L

Lapis Lydius i. 290
Law againſt the law of God is void v. 115
Law delighteth in certainty, and it doth abandon incertainty, as the mother of all debate and confuſion, than which there is nothing more odious in law ii. 209
Legati ſuo regi ſoli judicium faciunt vii. 245
Legatus fit rex in alieno ſolo vii. 348
Leges egregiæ apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gignuntur Em. Pref. vi.
Leges humanæ naſcuntur, vivunt, et moriuntur xi. 96
Leges naturæ perfectiſſimæ xi. 96
Leges per deſuetudinem tacito conſenſu cenſentur abrogatæ i. 437
Leges poſteriores priores abrogant xi. 14
Leges temporis i. 586. xi. 101
Legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet xi. 101
Levia judicia ſufficiunt i. 465
Lex caveat de futuris vii. 194
Lex eſt, quando quis aliquid alicui concedit, concedit et id ſine quo res ipſa non poteſt i. 625
Lex eſt ratio ſumma, jubens ea quæ facienda ſunt, et prohibens contraria xi. 103
Lex eſt regula et menſura actuum agendorum vel omittendorum, non actorum et omiſſorum vii. 334
Lex et conſuetudo parliamenti quærenda eſt ab omnibus, ignota a multis, et cognita a paucis i. 616. v. 101. viii. 161, 162. xi. 336
Lex facit, quod ipſe ſit rex xi. 80
Lex in ſermone tenenda i. 236, 249
Lex inſpicit quod veriſimilius xi. 61
Lex juſtior nulla eſt, quam necis artifices arte perire ſuâ i. 242
Lex juſto non eſt poſita i. 298
Lex non cogit ad impoſſibilia i. 655, 689. xi. 135
Lex non facit ſaltum i. 525
Lex non ſcripta i. 1004
Lex talionis xi. 31.
Libertas populi eſt ſalus populi vii. 150. n.
Libertas potius auro vii. 184
Libellus nihil ambiguitatis vel obſcuritatis continere debet vii. 399
Ligamentum fidei inter Deum et animam i. 673
Ligandi et ſolvendi poteſtatem privat qui eam injuſte exercet i. 298
Ligeantia dicitur a ligando xi. 87
Ligeantia eſt ligamentum xi. 87
Ligeantia eſt quaſi legis eſſentia xi. 87, 109
Ligeantia eſt vinculum fidei xi. 87, 102, marg.
Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare poteſt, nec patriam exuere ii. 9
Lingua detractionis eſt lancea triplex vii. 104
Littera ſcripta manet ii. 464
Localis ligeantia eſt ligeantia infima, et minima; et maximè incerta xi. 88
Longa patientia trahitur ad conſenſum i. 544
Loquendum ad vulgus ii. 346
Lubricum linguæ facile ad pænam non eſt trahendum i. 447
Luce clariores i. 249, 322, 453, 454. iii. 462. v. 588, 590. xi. 83

M.

Magis docet, qui prudenter interrogat xi. 105
Magna eſt charta, & prævalebit vii. 187
Magna eſt veritas, et prævalebit i. 261, 545. vii. 187. xi. 106, 124
Major hæreditas venit unicuique noſtrum a jure et legibus, quam a parentibus vii. 172
Major relatio trahit ad ſe minorem ii. 5, 9
Major ſingulis, univerſis minor v. 733
Majus dignum trahit ad ſe minus dignum ii. 10
Maledicta expoſitio, quæ corrumpit textum v. 695
Malitia ſupplet ætatem xi. 103
Malum in ſe i. 214. vi. 637, 708. vii. 614
Malum prohibitum v. 708. vii. 614
Marceſcere in carcere vii. 184
Maris & fœminæ conjunctio eſt de jure naturæ xi. 91
Maxime ſpectanda eſt ſententia proferentis vii. 275
Memoria ejus ſemper erat in benedictione i. 252
Mendax infamia xi. 331
Mentiri ſalvâ reverentiâ vii. 277
Metus & noxa conſcientiæ pro fœdere i. 302
Minæ præcedentes, & damnum ſequutum iv. 289, 291
Minima pœna corporalis eſt major quâlibet pecuniariâ vii. 171
Minime nunquam creſcit ex poſt facto præteriti delicti æſtimatio i. 440
Mira cano, ſol occubuit, nox nulla ſequuta eſt i. 236
Miſera eſt ſervitus, ubi jus eſt vagum, aut incognitum ii. 28. n. iii. 763. vii. 334. Em. Pref. vii.
Miſeria conſtat ex duobus contrariis, ſcilicet, copiâ & inopiâ; ex copiâ tribulationis, & inopiâ conſolationis i. 252
Miſericordia puniens i. 240. vii. 28
Moderamen inculpatæ tutelæ v. 586
Modo mentem injuratam gereret, etiamſi lingua juraret i. 278
Modus non factum efficit culpam vii. 27, 28
Mora trahit periculum i. 626
More interpretatio capienda eſt vii. 416
Mors in olla i. 333
Mortuæ mortiferæ ii. 171
Mortuus homo non eſt homo vii. 170
Multi committunt eadem diverſo crimina fato i. 300
Multitudo errantium non parit errori patrocinium i. 656
Mutatâ ratione legis, mutatur lex ii. 13
Mutatio hypotheſis xi. 60
Mutua debet eſſe domini & fidelitatis connectio xi. 87

N.

Naturæ ordo ii. 8
Naturâ ſervus xi. 79
Natus ad fidem regis xi. 83
Nec decor effecit fragilem, non ſceptra ſuperbam,
Sola potens humilis, ſola pudica decus i. 252
Neceſſitas culpabilis ii. 7
Neceſſitas eſt lex temporum i. 546, 566, 586
Neceſſitas legem irridet vii. 391
Neceſſitas magnum humanæ imbecillitatis patrocinium, omnem legem frangit i. 535
Neceſſitas non habet legem i. 638
Neceſſitas quod cogit, defendit i. 566
Nec inflatur, nec eſt ambitioſa i. 278
Negativum valet i. 586
Nemini oportet eſſe ſapientiorem legibus vii. 170. xi. 87
Nemo bis puniri debet pro eodem delicto ii. 851. vi. 405, 465. vii. 446 Em. Pref. ix.
Nemo læditur niſi a ſeipſo vii. 107
Nemo legibus ſapientior iii. 792
Nemo moriturus præſumitur mentiri i. 219
Nemo prudens, &c. i. 332
Nemo repente fit peſſimus i. 391. ii. 875. v. 464. x. 300
Nemo tenetur accuſare vel prodere ſeipſum Em. Pref. iii. i. 169, 176, 260. ii. 24, 463. iv. 606. vi. 545, 548, 549, 704.
Nemo tenetur ad impoſſibilia i. 619
Nemo tenetur jurare in ſuam turpitudinem viii. 199
Ne plus ultra vii. 144
Ne quid detrimenti reſpublica capiat xi. 349. See i. 566
Ne trahatur in exemplum ii. 560
Nihil aliud poteſt rex, quam de jure poteſt i. 653. ii. 10
Nihil efficit conatus, niſi ſequatur effectus ii. 304
Nihil eſt tam contrarium conſenſui, quam error i. 444
Nihil fælicitati meæ deerat, niſi moderatio i. 308
Nihil iniquum eſt præſumendum in lege i. 653
Nihil relictum eſt arbitrio judicis viii. 67
Nil dat quod habet ii. 15

Nil refert quod notum ſit judici, ſi non notum ſit in formâ judicii vi. 405 See v. 96.
Nimium nihil probat ii. 636
Nobile officium judicis xi. 220
Nobilis ira leonis vii. 391
Nodos in ſcirpo quærere i. 323
Nolite judicare de occultis i. 237
Nolumus mutare leges Angliæ vii. 186
Non admittitur exceptio ejuſdem rei, cujus petitur diſſolutio iii. 563
Non dicitur notorium, niſi per decem ſaltem tranſeat i. 469
Non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu;
Nec venenatis gravida ſagittis,
Crede pharetrâ iii. 760
Non eſt cunctatio longa de vitâ hominis i. 347. See De morte, &c. De vitâ, &c.
Non eſt reus niſi mens ſit rea ii. 138, 472
Non eſt opus ſævientis animâ ſed medentis ſtudio i. 278
Non eſt vagandum in crimine vii. 406
Non facimus malum, ut inde veniat bonum vii. 27, 28
Non factum, ſed faciendi cauſa inſpicienda viii. 198
Non hos quæſitum munus in uſum xi. 114
Non injuria abſque dolo et animo injuriandi committitur viii. 198
Non invenire quod quærit, quam invenire quod puniat i. 270
Non laudantur niſi peracta i. 260. See Id. 257
Non liquet in favorem vitæ ii. 8
Non mutant ſed aptant legem vii. 112
Non notum eſt judici, quod non notum eſt judicialiter i. 415. vi. 405. See Nil refert, &c.
Non nunc honoris fui tempus eſſe i. 277
Non pacem petimus, ſuperi, date gentibus iras i. 305
Non poteſt patriam in quâ natus eſt exuere, nec ligeantiæ debitum ejurare ii. 9
Non regis ſed regni i. 235
Non recurrendum eſt ad extraordinaria, quando fieri poteſt per ordinaria i. 525, 654
Non ſapientis judicis eſt incerto experimento credere, quod certâ ratione dirimendum eſt iv. 286
Non ſic itur ad aſtra vii. 172
Non valeat argumentum ab incommodo i. 438
Non valet privilegium contra rempublicam ii. 8
Noſce teipſum i. 674
Noxia caput ſequitur vii. 400, 402
Nudus conatus et affectus delinquendi reputatur pro effectu ii. 633. See ii. 628.
Nudus cum nudâ i. 324. v. 592. x. 518. n.
Nulla regula quin fallit i. 637
Nulla ſalus bello, pacem te poſcimus omnes i. 305
Nullius addictus jurare in verba magiſtri ix. 97. See ii. 561. vi. 475
Nullum tempus occurrit regi i. 344, 391, 562, 669
Nummus menſura rerum i. 633
Nunc tua res agitur, jam proximus ardeti. 506. See ix. 296. When our, &c.
Nunquam creſcit ex poſt facto præteriti delicti æſtimatio i. 461
Nunquam debet judex procedere ad aliquem actum, niſi prius illi conſtet delictum ipſum fuiſſe commiſſum v. 593
Nunquam nimis dicitur, quod nunquam ſatis dicitur i. 249. See i. 215
Nunquam præſumitur bona intentio niſi probetur, ad eludendum crimen vii. 277

O.

Obedientia eſt melior quam ſacrificium vii. 27
Occupanti concederetur, et melior eſſet poſſidentis conditio i. 705
Oculus diei vii. 145
Oculus patriæ i. 214
Oculus quæſtionis xi. 77
Odia ſunt reſtringenda vii. 417
Offenſo creatore, offenditur omnis creatura i. 251
Omne regnum in ſe diviſum, deſolabitur i. 245, 284
Omne regnum ſub graviore regno v. 115
Omnes prudentes illa admittere ſolent, quæ probantur iis, qui in ſuâ arte bene verſati ſunt xi. 93
Omnia dat qui juſta negat vii. 622
Omnia habere in memoriâ, et in nullo errare, divinum potius eſt quam humanum vii. 186
Omnibus viis et modis, quibus mediis ſciri poterit v. 77
Omni exceptione majus i. 265
Omnis ignoratio juris eſt improbabilis et punibilis i. 461
Omnis impoſitio eſt odioſa xi. 48
Omnis poteſtas a Deo, et non eſt poteſtas niſi pro bono xi. 31
Onere, frigore, et fame i. 325
O nimium dilecta Deo, cui militet æther,
Et conjurati veniunt ad claſſica venti i. 251
Oportet neminem eſſe ſapientiorem legibus xi. 61
Oppoſita juxta ſe poſita, magis eluceſcunt xi. 84
Optima legum interpres conſuetudo Em. Pref. i.
Optimus portus eſt mutatio conſilii i. 308
Ortu magna, viro major, ſed maxime prole i. 256
O tempora! O mores! vii. 60
Otium cum dignitate v. 682
Ovum ovo i. 760

P

Pœna corporalis eſt major quâlibet pecuniariâ ii. 212
Pœna legis ſanctio vii. 396
Pœna ſit paucis, culpa ab aliis i. 49
Pœnam alicui non eſſe indicendam, niſi expreſſo jure cautum ſit i. 968
Par in parem non habet imperium ii. 450
Pari ratione xi. 220
Parliaments are the pulſe of the people vii. 483
Parliamentum pars corporis regis i. 517
Pars præcipua legis eſt voluntas i. 438
Pars pro toto i. 88
Patria dicitur a patre xi. 91
Partus ſequitur ſemen ii. 12
Pecuniæ omnia obediunt i. 633
Penitus toto diviſus orbe Britannos i. 264. ii. 10
Pœnitentia vera nunquam, ſera ſed pœnitentia rarò vera i. 243
Perdere domum, familiam, vicinos, patriam ii. 211. vii. 171
Per Deum regnant reges i. 274
Pereat peccans, ne pereat reſpublica i. 327, 328
Pereat unus, ne pereant omnes i. 327, 328
Peregrina et unuſquiſque in arte ſuâ artifex vii. 112
Per errorem nulla eſt voluntas i. 444
Per illum fides proborum collucet i. 268
Perſpicuè vera, non ſunt probanda vii. 148, 170
Peſſima eſt injuſtitia quæ fit ſub colore juſtitiæ vii. 303
Petitio principii vii. 223, 629
Placentia potius quam ſolida i. 305
Plectuntur Achivi vii. 184
Plenitudo poteſtatis, plenitudo tempeſtatis xi. 80
Plura argumenta conjuncta crimen manifeſtare poſſunt v. 592
Pluralitas eandem ſententiam ſemper ſuperat xi. 101
Plurima indicia conjuncta fidem faciunt v. 584, 592
Plus peccat author quam actor i. 250
Poſſimus quod jure poterimus i. 563
Potentia juris eſt non injuria vii. 184
Potentia ligata in creaturis i. 755
Poteſtas juris rex eſt, et non injuriæ i. 653
Præceptum domini regis in curiâ, non in camerâ vii. 144
Præſumptio affectionis naturalis prævalet contrariis præſumptionibus iv. 287
Præſumptio delicti removetur propter bonam famam i. 442
Præſumptio non delicti excludit præſumptiones delicti v. 590
Præſumptio pro eo eſt, quod maxime eſt ſecundum naturam toto vii. 276
Præſumptio verſatur circa id quod geſtum eſt, ſed ignoratur qualiter geſtum v. 593
Præſumptiones quæ ſtant pro reis, prævalent iv. 287
Præſumptioni ſtabitur, donec probetur in contrarium ii. 8
Praxis ſanctorum eſt interpres præceptorum i. 544. xi. 102
Præces regum ſunt armatæ vii. 145
Precipitantur principes i. 275
Præmoniti præmuniti vii. 602
Primæ impreſſionis i. 225
Princeps indulgendo hæreticis, amittit regnum i. 256
Principium et finis inducunt medium i. 451, 454
Prius et poſterius vii. 210
Privatio præſupponit habitum i. 293
Probabile eſt, cædem feciſſe qui cruentatus eſt v. 592
Probantur indicia ad torturam per unicum teſtem v. 592
Probatio per evidentiam omnibus eſt potentior v. 584
Probationes oportent eſſe luce clariores ii. 144
Pro conceſſo vii. 209
Proniores eſſe debemus ad liberandum i. 458, 461, 464
Propinquitas et antiquitas regalis ſanguinis i. 252
Propoſitio indefinita æquipollet univerſali iii. 457
Propria quarto modo vii. 170
Proprietas precaria xi. 58
Proprio ore nullus regum uſus eſt ii. 212. vii. 172
Proregis dedecus redundat in regem ii. 8
Proſperum ſcelus virtus vocatur i. 300
Protectio trahit ſubjectionem, et ſubjectio protectionem xi. 87
Publicus inſpector regni i. 749

Q

Quæ fuerant olim vitia, nunc mores ſint i. 278
Quæ mala cum multis patimur, leviora videntur i. 338
Quæ non proſunt ſingula multa juvant v. 583, 590
Quæ te tam læta tulere ſaccula! i. 256
Quæ verſatur tantummodo in bonæ fidei judiciis i. 301
Qualis vita, finis ita i. 256
Qualitas facti ex perſonâ facientis præſumitur i. 441
Qualitas perſonæ auget peccatum vii. 303
Quando ſunt dubia, ſimiliter declaratio ab aliis verbis præcedentibus vel ſubſequentibus, vel ab utriſque i. 442
Quando verba confeſſionis ſunt dubia, debent interpretari in meliorem partem i. 464
Quatenus et quomodo eum loqui jubeat i. 277
Quatenus ad omne valet conſequentia viii. 69
Queſtus immodicus imminuitur imperio vi. 631
Qui ad pauca reſpicit, facile pronunciat i. 621
Qui contemnit præceptum, contemnit præcipientem xi. 109
Quicquid neceſſitas cogit, defendit i. 545, 566
Qui cum poſſit, non prohibet, jubet i. 258
Quicunque teſtes in cauſis civilibus eſſe non poſſunt, iis nec in criminalibus teſtimonii dictio eſt; at non contra v. 592
Qui defamat, jugulat vii. 277
Quid facit in pectore humano lupi feritas, canis rabies, ſerpentis venenum i. 262
Quid te exempta juvat ſpinis de pluribus una i. 382
Qui deliberant, deſciverunt ii. 314
Qui facit per alium, facit per ſe v. 61. x. 442
Qui hæret in literâ, hæret in cortice xi. 81
Qui jacet in terrâ, non habet unde cadat i. 701
Qui juſſu judicis aliquid, non videtur dolo malo facere i. 967
Qui negat medium, deſtruit finem i. 623
Qui nimis emungit, elicit ſanguinem iii. 1056

Qui non bene reſpondet, non reſpondet i. 337
Qui non cadunt in conſtantem virum vani timores æſtimandi ſunt. xi. 96
Qui non habet in crumenâ, luat in cute Em. Pref. xi. ii. 829
Qui non luet in corpore, ſolvit in burſâ vii. 303
Qui non prohibet quod prohibère poteſt, conſentire videtur i. 260
Qui non propulſat injuriam cum poſſit infert i. 341
Qui omnes dixerit, nullos excipit xi. 47
Qui rapit jus alienum, perdit jus ad ſuum vii. 100
Qui ſani ſunt, nec medicis egent nec metuunt medicinam i. 271
Qui ſentit commodum, ſentire debet et onus i. 516, 619, 617, 633, 664
Qui tanti talem genuere parentes i. 256
Quid, de quo, cuique vii. 112
Quo jure petatur vii. 397
Quo minus ab ortu aberant i. 279
Quod cogit defendit i. 566
Quod conſtat clare, non debet verificari iii. 251
Quod deeſt operi, ineſt voluntati i. 268
Quod dubitas, ne feceris i. 263. v. 62
Quod eſt nullum de jure, nullum ſortitur effectum i. 996
Quod fieri poſſit, quamplurima legibus ipſis definiantur, quam pauciſſima judicis arbitrio relinquantur iii. 763. See JUDGES.
Quod inſitum alieno ſolo eſt, in id quo alitur, naturâ vertente, degenerat i. 245, 246
Quod intempeſtivum, injucundum vii. 170
Quod meum eſt, ſine facto meo, alterius fieri non poteſt xi. 53
Quod non relevat, non aggravat i. 967
Quod omnes tangit, ab omnibus approbatur i. 280, 524, 633
Quod omnes tangit, per omnes debet ſupportari i. 516, 616, 617, 664 682
Quod populus dici non poſſe, niſi ſint decem i. 469
Quod præcepto non jubetur, exemplo caveat i. 274
Quod principi placet, legis vim habet i. 518
Quod quis in tuitione ſui corporis fecerit, jure id feciſſe exiſtimatur vii. 145
Quod quiſque novit, in hoc ſe exerceat xi. 93
Quod ſurreptum eſt, ejus rei æterna auctoritas eſſet v. 594
Quod tardè acquiſivit, diu retinet i. 268
Quod tumultuando adipiſci petiiſtis, quiete obtuliſſet reſpublica i. 305
Quomodo licuit et ipſis expedierit i. 277
Quorum eſt commune ſymbolum facillimus eſt tranſitus i. 246
Quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat ix. 426

R.

Radix juſtitiæ eſt pietas i. 338
Raſh judgments reflect on the perſons adjudging, not adjudged i. 298
Ratio confeſſa dicti præponderat et præſumit contra proferentem vii. 276
Ratio eſt anima legis vii. 129
Ratio naturalis, jus gentium xi. 76
Ratio ſapienti neceſſitas xi. 97
Ratio ſuadet, authoritas vincit xi. 36
Ratione regiæ dignitatis et per juramentum eſt aſtrictus ad providendum ſalvatione regni undequâque i. 516
Rebus ſic ſtantibus vii. 210, 213
Rectus in curiâ i. 228, 267
Reddendo ſingula ſingulis xi. 260
Reges vindices doloris proprii i. 335
Regis corona eſt facere juſtitiam et judicium, et tenere pacem i. 654
Regis eleemoſyna i. 281
Regis non eſt dare legem i. 281
Regis non eſt dare regnum, quod eſt reſpublica, ſine aſſenſu baronum qui tenentur regnum defendere i. 281
Regula juris lex eſt, quando quis aliquid alicui concedit, concedit et id ſine quo res ipſa eſſe non poteſt i. 625
Regula non facit jus i. 637
Res eſt ſoliciti plena timoris amor vii. 209
Res inter alios acta, aliis non nocet xi. 220, 229
Res ipſa conſilium dedit vii. 171
Res judicata pro veritate accipitur xi. 101
Reſpublica continetur pænâ et præmio xi. 81
Reus judiciis gravatus, eſt morte plectandus ii. 631
Rex ad tutelam corporum et bonorum erectus eſt i. 524, 654. xi. 87
Rex cenſetur habere omnia jura in ſcrinio pectoris ſui i. 625
Rex eſt capitalis juſticiarius totius Angliæ i. 594, 632
Rex eſt legalis et politicus xi. 31
Rex eſt lex loquens i. 625. xi. 105
Rex eſt medicus regni, et ſponſus reipublicæ i. 594
Rex eſt omnibus et ſingulis de regno ſuo juſtitiæ debitor i. 524
Rex eſt perſona mixta xi. 80
Rex eſt recordum ſuperexcellens i. 548, 634
Rex eſt ſola et ſuprema juſtitia regni i. 672
Rex eſt ubi dominatur lex, non voluntas xi. 54
Rex eſt vicarius Dei i. 594, 664
Rex et ſubditi ſunt relativa xi. 105
Rex in multis caſibus eſt ſupra legem i. 548
Rex natus i. 214
Rex non habet parem in regno i. 993
Rex non habet ſuperiorem, niſi Deum ii. 260
Rex non poteſt gratiam facere cum injuriâ et damno alterius vii. 626
Rex poteſt facere, quod de jure poteſt facere i. 642
Rex ſolus judicat de cauſâ a jure non definitâ xi. 105
Rex vicarius Dei eſt in terrâ ſuâ i. 664. See 653
Rode caper vitem; tamen hic cum ſtabis ad aras,
In tua quod fundi cornua poſſit, erit iii. 788. v. 819
Right can never die i. 1002

S.

Sævire in ſaxa i. 301
Sæpe fugiendo mala, in majora incurrimus i. 302
Salus populi ſuprema lex i. 516, 545, 566, 585, 586, 664. ii. 199. v. 86. vii. 149. n.
Salvo honore Dei et eccleſiæ vii. 199
Salvo jure ſuo vii. 199
Salus reipublicæ ſuprema lex, et ſummè neceſſaria; lex legis i. 626, 637
Sanguis nullo modo expiari poteſt, niſi ſanguine vii. 170
Sapere quæ ſunt carnis i. 304
Sapiens contentio aut prodeſt aut non obeſt ii. 76
Sapiens incipit a fine vii. 171
Sat ſupereſt i. 261
Sat verbum, &c. iii. 782
Satis eſt quod ſufficit i. 682
Satius eſt impunitum relinqui facinus nocentis, quam innocentem damnari iv. 287. v. 588
Scientia juris infinita vii. 112
Scotus patriâ, Anglus privilegio ii. 9
Scribere eſt agere iii. 817. v. 88
Scriptum eſt i. 214
Secundum allegata et probata i. 223. iii. 119. v. 48, 49, 83, 119. vi. 405. xi. 217
Secundum æquum et bonum in foro conſcientiæ vii. 107
Secundum communem uſum loquendi vii. 278
Secundum mentem extenſivam legis xi. 55
Secundum morem majorum xi. 58
Secundum ſanam diſcretionem xi. 33. See xi. 326
Secundum ſubjectam materiam ii. 15
Semper honos nomenque tuum laudeſque manebunt i. 252
Semper præſumit ſæva perturbata conſcientia i. 264, 303
Semper ſpecialia generalibus inſunt vii. 272
Sententia contra matrimonium nunquam tranſit in rem judicatam xi. 209, 212, 217, 231
Sententia facit jus xi. 101
Sententia judicis, quamvis injuſta, timenda eſt i. 286, 298
Sententia lata per colluſionem, habetur pro non ſententiâ xi. 220
Sententiam judicis in rem judicatam tranſeat i. 275
Sermo eſt index animi iii. 780
Servare jus illæſum. [This Jefferies ſaid he would do in all caſes] iii. 1088
Severos quidem facit juſtitia, inhumanos non facit Em. Pref. xiv.
Sic judicate tanquam ab alio mox judicandi i. 223
Si excommunicaturus venerit, excommunicatus diſcederet i. 288
Si inſeparabiles, inſuperabiles xi. 86
Silentii tutum præmium xi. 97
Sine clade victor v. 774
Sine nomine i. 235
Sine religione, ſine ſede, ſine fide, ſine re, et ſine ſpe i. 237
Sine ſtrepitu judicii ii. 15. xi. 218
Singuli teſtes haudquaquam fidem faciant v. 592
Socrates puer differt a Socrate ſene vii. 112
Solo tempore lapſus amor xi. 111
Solum Deum habes ultorem vii. 248
Solum rex hoc non poteſt facere, quod non poteſt injuſtè agere vii. 146
Solus conatus capite puniendus ii. 630
Sontica dignum horribili flagello i. 436
Specioſa nomina culpis imponit i. 49
Spectatum admiſſi, riſum teneatis amici! i. 262
Spiritus in naribus i. 274
Stat pro ratione voluntas vii. 474. xi. 193
State ſuper viis antiquis vii. 111
Stricta contra impoſitiones, at largè in favorem gravatorum, interpretanda eſt lex xi. 48
Subjecta ſunt talia qualia prædicata demonſtrant i. 465
Subſedit dubius totam dum colligit iram i. 304
Subverſa jacet priſtina ſedes ſoliorum vii. 112
Sufficit ei ad pœnam, quod Deum expectat ultorem i. 288. ii. 260. vii. 135
Sui juris xi. 299, 301
Summa ſcelera incipiuntur cum periculo, peraguntur cum præmio i. 302
Summis negatum eſt ſtare diu i. 283
Summum jus, ſumma injuria xi. 134. ii. 138, 199. x. 188. Ap.
Suorum flagitiorum proditores i. 304
Supplicat celſitudini, &c. xi. 56
Suppreſſion of truth is oppreſſion of innocence ii. 558
Sunt tolerabilia, quæ conſuetudo comprobat vi. 631

T.

Tabefacere in carcere vii. 184
Tabula poſt naufragium iii. 758
Tandem triumphans x. 202
Tanquam in acie ordinatâ i. 278
Tanta fuit unius viri majeſtas, ut nec bonis, neque contra malos opus armis foret i. 306
Tantæne animis cœleſtibus iræ! i. 262
Tantum permiſſum quantum commiſſum vii. 75
Tarda ſolet magnis rebus adeſſe fides i. 235
Tardior ad pœnas Deus eſt, ad præmia velox i. 716
Tempeſtas abiit, et ecce nova facta ſunt omnia i. 305
Tempus guerræ eſt tempus injuriæ i. 536
Tempus ſuum vii. 210
Tentandi gratiâ i. 748
Terminum diminuentem vii. 209
Terret per ſomnia i. 303
Teſtes ſint omni exceptione majores v. 592, 594
Teſtibus non teſtimoniis iv. 290
Teſtimonia rerum, loquentia ſigna i. 249
That which was never done before, cannot now be done i. 639
There muſt be an end in all things ii. 203
Theſaurus regis eſt fundamentum belli et firmamentum pacis i. 522. See xi. 150

Theſaurus regis eſt pacis vinculum, et bellorum nervi i. 616. See xi. 150
Tortura legum peſſima xi. 111
Tractent fabrilia fabri i. 722
——Tu regere imperio populos
Hæ tibi erunt artes vii. 436
Turpis eſt admiſſio rei ad ſe non pertinentis i. 338
Tutius eſt ut expectetur ſententia regis xi. 107

U.

Ubi eadem ratio, eadem lex iv. 415. viii. 121, 129. ix. 145. xi. 38, 93
Ubi confidit Deus et lex, et nos etiam confidamus i. 687
Ubi conſtet ſcelus non interveniſſe ſilebit proceſſus v. 593
Ubi dolor ibi digitus; ubi amor ibi oculus vii. 210
Ubi factum nullum, ibi fortia nulla x. 435
Ubi lex eſt ſpecialis, et ratio ejus generalis, generaliter accipienda eſt iv. 560
Ubi lex non diſtinguit, nec nos debemus i. 237, 391, 457, 459, 463, 464, 465, 571. iii. 1098. viii. 345. xi. 88
Ultimum neceſſitatis præſidium vii. 636
Ultimum refugium xi. 126
Ultimum remedium peſſimum v. 110
Ultimum ſupplicium viii. 74
Umbra eò major quò ſerior i. 268
Una hirundo non facit ver viii. 354
Una præſumptio aliam juvit v. 584, 592
Una præſumptio tollit aliam iv. 287
Unius damnum utilitate publicâ rependitur vii. 184
Unum pondus et una menſura v. 277
Unumquodque diſſolvitur iiſdem modis quibus eſt colligatum iii. 628, 629. xi. 56
Unus judex, unum tribunal i. 223
Unuſquiſque in arte ſuâ artifex vii. 112
Unus teſtis non eſt audiendus v. 592
Uſage a good interpreter of law vi. 713
Ut ceſpes unus, et regem noſtrum et rempublicam tegeret i. 304
Utlegatus eſt quaſi extra legem poſitus xi. 91
Ut ore ſimularent juramenti profeſſionem, cum mente retinerent perfidiæ impietatem i. 278
Ut pœna ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat i. 261
Uxor et filius ſunt nomina naturæ xi. 84

V.

Valeat quantum valere poteſt ii. 162. v. 70, 96
Verba debent intelligi, ne ſonent in delictum vii. 406
Verba juramenti intelliguntur ſecundum mentem et intentionem ejus cui fit juramentum iii. 455
Verba propter adjunctam mutant naturam ſuam i. 440
Veritas fortiſſima, et prævalebit xi. 79
Veritas temporis filia i. 235
Veſcuntur inteſtinis reipublicæ xi. 52
Via facti via juris vii. 246
Via regia vii. 214
Vindices doloris proprii i. 335
Vindictæ tarditas ſupplicii gravitate compenſetur i. 454
Violenta præſumptio plena probatio ix. 425
Virtutis curſus celerior quam ætatis i. 305
Vis expers conſilii mole ruit ſuâ i. 279
Vis unita fortior xi. 105
Vita pejor morte vii. 147
Vitia temporis et hominis i. 383
Voluntas et propoſitum delinquentis diſtinguunt facinora vii. 417
Volenti et ſcienti non fit injuria i. 245, 442. ii. 8. x. 439
Voluntas non cogitur vii. 244
Voluntas reputabitur pro facto xi. 101
Vox audita perit ii. 464

W.

When our neighbour's houſe is on fire, we ought to take care of our own ix. 296
Wherever there is a right, there is a remedy v. 681
Where there is no law, there can be no tranſgreſſion i. 1004. ii. 73, 78. v. 126

* MAY, WILLIAM v. 1. See DAWSON.

MAYNARD, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech in the houſe of lords on Laud, lord archbiſhop of Canterbury, his not anſwering the firſt articles of his impeachment for treaſon i. 836, 837
Opens the evidence on the trial of Tonge and others, for treaſon ii. 479
Opens the evidence in general on Coleman's trial for treaſon ii. 662
Sums up the evidence on lord Cornwallis's trial for murder ii. 729
Sums up the evidence, on Taſborough and Price, their trial for ſubornation of perjury ii. 1034
He opens the evidence on the trial of Sir Thomas Gaſcoigne, for treaſon iii. 4
Sums up the evidence iii. 27
Opens the evidence of the popiſh plot, in general, on the trial of viſcount Stafford, impeached before the houſe of peers, for being concerned therein iii. 104
His ſpeech for Thomas Papillon, eſq; at the ſuit of ſir William Pritchard, for arreſting him during his mayoralty, without cauſe iii. 1075, 1087
States the evidence in the caſe of Norkot, for murder, which is ſingularly remarkable x. 29. Ap. See MORLEY, THOMAS Lord.

MAYOR.

Lord-mayor of London arreſted during his mayoralty iii. 1072, 1076
Lord-mayor of London ſent to the Tower by the houſe of commons, for committing one of their meſſengers, who had arreſted a printer in the city by virtue of the ſpeaker's warrant xi. 335
A mayor of London cauſed great and monſtrous ſtocks to be made in his mayoralty, to impriſon men in; as alſo an uncommon axe to ſtrike off the heads of ſuch as ſhould reſiſt his will and pleaſure i. 14. n.

* MEAD, WILLIAM ii. 610. See PENN.

* MEDIETAS LINGUÆ. See ALIEN. SA PANTALCON.

MEGGOTT, Sir GEORGE,
His caſe in parliament viii. 111

MELDRUM, ROBERT. See BERNARDI JOHN.

MEMORIALS.

Sir James Whitlocke's memorial of the queſtions propoſed to the judges on lord Audley's trial i. 387
His memorial concerning lord Rea's diſcovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conſpiracy xi. 126
The archbiſhop of Canterbury's memorials, touching the nullity between the earl of Eſſex and his lady. x. 4. Ap.
The lord-mayor of London's memorial to the king, on behalf of a convict under ſentence of death for a robbery x. 236
Memorial of doctor Leighton's eſcape, and execution of his ſentence, in the biſhop of London's diary xi. 121

MEMORY.

The reaſon why the chancery obliges a man to anſwer as to his own acts poſitively for ſeven years, is, becauſe a man of ſenſe is ſuppoſed to remember all his own acts for that time iv. 191
A perſon muſt be of ſane memory to make a will iv. 194

MERCHANDIZE.

By a remarkable law in one of the wiſeſt of the Grecian governments, no man bred up to merchandize ſhould be admitted into any office of judicature, till he had quitted that employment for at leaſt ten years vi. 556

MERCY.

Inſtance of the jury's recommendation to the royal mercy having no effect x. 412

MERRIAM, JOHN. See DENEW NATHANIEL.

* MERRICK, Sir GILLY,
His trial i. 209. See BLUNT Sir CHRISTOPHER.

* MERVIN Lord AUDLEY. See AUDLEY.

* MESSENGER, PETER,
* Richard Beaſley, William Green, Thomas Appletree, Edward Cotton, John Earles, William Wilks, Richard Farrel, William Ford, Edward Bedle, Richard Latimer, Thomas Limerick, Richard Woodward, John Richardſon, and John Sharpleſs, their trial for high-treaſon, 20 Car. II. 1668 ii. 585
* Four indictments for levying war againſt the king ii. 585
* Evidence on the trial of Meſſenger, Beaſley, Green, and Appletree, for aſſembling under pretence of pulling down bawdy-houſes, and actually pulling down ſeveral houſes ii. 586
* The evidence on the trial of Bedle and Latimer ii. 588
* The evidence againſt Cotton, Earles, Wilks, Farrel, and Ford, for aſſembling under pretence of breaking open priſons ii. 589
* Evidence on the trial of Richardſon, Limerick, and Woodward ii. 590
* The jury find a ſpecial verdict ii. 591
* The ſpecial verdict at large ii. 591
* The chief baron Hale is of opinion, theſe facts did not amount to high-treaſon ii. 593
* All the reſt of the judges reſolve, that theſe offences were high-treaſon ii. 593
* Riſing to pull down bawdy-houſes in general, or break open priſons in general, and putting ſuch deſign in execution, is high-treaſon ii. 593
* Lawful for private perſons to arm themſelves to oppoſe riots, rebellions, or common enemies ii. 593
* The matter found againſt Meſſenger, Beaſley, Cotton, and Limerick, reſolved to be high-treaſon; and they are executed ii. 594
* But as to Appletree and Latimer, the judges being divided in their opinion, they were recommended to the king's mercy ii. 594
* As to Green and Bedle, they being only found to be preſent, and not found that any act of force was committed by them, or that they were aiding or aſſiſting, they were diſcharged ii. 594

* MEYNE, SIMON iii. 399. See REGICIDES.

MIDDLEMORE, HUMPHREY,
William Exmew, and Sebaſtian Nudigate, monks, their trial in Weſtminſter-hall, before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, for treaſon, Trinity-term, 27 Hen. VIII. xi. 23
Subſtance of indictment xi. 23
They plead not guilty xi. 23
Found guilty xi. 23
Judgment xi. 23
Not permitted to receive the ſacrament without order from the king xi. 23

MIDDLESEX, Earl of. See BACON FRANCIS Lord.

MILAN.

The duke of Milan beheads a French ambaſſador for plotting againſt him during his embaſſy i. 119

MILDMAY, Sir WALTER, Chancellor of the Exchequer. See DAVISON. vii. 19, 2,325.

MILITARY.

Mr. ſheriff Janſſen much commended for refuſing the aſſiſtance of the military in the execution of criminals xi. 282

* MILLINGTON, GILBERT ii. 399. See REGICIDES.

MILLS, RICHARD. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

MILTON.

Upon what occaſion he wrote the famous pamphlet called Areopagitica xi. 322

MINISTERS.

The corruption of judges generally ended in their downfall, and of the miniſters whoſe tools they were; the politics of thoſe times not being arrived at that height, to know how to influence the repreſentative body of the nation: for what need could miniſters have to corrupt the interpreters interpreters of the laws, when the makers of them were entirely at their devotion Em. Pref. i.

Treaſon was the fatal engine ſo often employed by corrupt and wicked miniſters againſt the nobleſt and braveſt patriots, whoſe laudable oppoſition to their pernicious ſchemes, thoſe miniſters were very ready to conſtrue into treaſon and rebellion againſt their prince; thereby confounding their own and the prince's intereſt together, as if the one could not be oppoſed without the other. Em. Pref. iii. See PETITIONS.

MIRROUR of JUSTICES.

The principal copy of this book is in Bennet college library, in Cambridge, and there is another in Lincoln's-Inn library vii. 226

MISADVENTURE.

Homicide in ſhooting at a wild fowl, wherein no man hath any property, is not felony, but only miſadventure vi. 222

If parent or maſter being provoked by ſome miſcarriage of child or ſervant, corrects with a moderate weapon, and chances to kill him, it is but miſadventure ix. 64

MISDEMEANOUR.

To petition the king to put the penal laws in execution, adjudged a miſdemeanour in the reign of James the firſt iv. 305

Forgery formerly only a miſdemeanour ix. 67, 77, 94, 103. x. 64

Records of miſdemeanours vi. 10, 16, 45, 46. Ap.

Of the puniſhment of miſdemeanours Em. Pref. x.

Indictments for miſdemeanours iii. 823

The crime of Fitz-harris was only a miſdemeanour iv. 171. See
BRADDON LAWRENCE.
BREWSTER THOMAS.
CELLIER ELIZABETH.
CHARNOCK ROBERT and ANNE.
DAVISON WILLIAM.
GREY of WERK, FORD Lord.
HALES WILLIAM.
HAMPDEN JOHN.
HARRIS BENJAMIN.
JOHNSON SAMUEL.
JONES DAVID.
JONES FRANCIS.
JONES REBECCA.
KEACH BENJAMIN.
KINNERSLEY WILLIAM, Clerk.
KNOX THOMAS.
MACCLESFIELD, Earl of.
OXFORD, EDWARD Earl of.
READING NATHANIEL.
SPEKE HUGH.

MISNOMER.

A fatal one in an ex officio information for a libel x. 197

MISPRISION OF TREASON, viii. 468.

Opinion of ſeveral eminent civilians concerning concealing treaſon ii. 428, 429. vii. 418. See DAVISON. FISHER JOHN, Biſhop of Rocheſter. * TREASON.

* MIS-SPELLING

* In an act of parliament offered in behalf of a priſoner, but over-ruled ii. 310

MIS-TRIAL. See TRIAL.

* MITCHELL, JAMES,

* His trial for attempting the murder of the archbiſhop of St. Andrews, and wounding the biſhop of Orkney, 30 Car. II. 1678 ii. 623. See viii. 436.

* His examination before a committee of council ii. 623

* He is put to the torture ii. 625

* His examination whilſt under it ii. 626

* The libel againſt the priſoner ii. 627

* Warrant from the privy council for proſecuting him ii. 628

* Counſel aſſigned the priſoner ii. 628

* They inſiſt that an endeavour, or attempt, to commit murder ought not to be puniſhed as murder ii. 628

* That mutilation was not capital by their laws; though diſmembering was ii. 629

* As to the aſſaulting a privy-counſellor, it ought to have been laid to have been done in the execution of his office, to make it capital ii. 629

* The priſoner's confeſſion out of court ſhall not convict him ii. 629

* Alledged, that the priſoner, and other of his followers, held it lawful to kill a biſhop ii. 630

* An endeavour to aſſaſſinate, puniſhable with death by the civil law; unleſs the offender can ſhew ſome provocation: and it is not neceſſary to ſhew the offender took money to denominate him an aſſaſſin ii. 630

* An attempt to rob or raviſh puniſhable with death in Scotland ii. 630

* A promiſe of pardon by a magiſtrate who cannot grant it, of no avail ii. 630

* The party's confeſſion the ſtrongeſt evidence againſt him ii. 631

* The court of opinion, that it appeared the priſoner made the attempt on his grace for doing his majeſty's ſervice ii. 637

* That his confeſſion before the council could not be retracted; but, if it were proved to be on promiſe of life, the priſoner ſhould have the benefit of it ii. 637

* The priſoner's confeſſion, and the witneſſes produced againſt him ii. 637

* The lord chancellor depoſes, no promiſes of life were made the priſoner on his confeſſion ii. 638

* An act of council concerning his confeſſion ii. 639

* The verdict ii. 640

* The court paſſes ſentence of death on the priſoner ii. 640

* His laſt ſpeech ii. 640. See MAITLAND.

MODERN REPORTS.

The ſecond edition of 8 and 9 modern, is much improved xi. 324. marg.

* MODERS, MARY. See GERMAN PRINCESS ii. 498.

* MOHUN, CHARLES Lord,

* His trial before the houſe of peers, for the murder of William Mountford, Jan. 31, 1692, 4 W. and M. iv. 510

* The lords ſit in Weſtminſter-hall iv. 510

* The certiorari and return, &c. read iv. 511

* The priſoner brought to the bar iv. 512

* The marquis of Carmarthen, lord high ſteward iv. 512

* His ſpeech to the priſoner iv. 512

* Admitted that a peer need not hold up his hand iv. 512

* The indictment iv. 513

* Sir John Somers, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 513

* The evidence againſt the priſoner iv. 516

* Evidence of the declaration of the deceaſed, after he was wounded iv. 516

* That lord Mohun promiſed to aſſiſt mr. Hill in his deſign to carry off mrs. Bracegirdle; and ſaid he would ſtand by his friend iv. 517

* That they accordingly made an attempt together, but were diſappointed iv. 518

* Evidence that Hill ran the deceaſed through before he could draw his ſword iv. 520

* Evidence of my lord Mohun's ſword being drawn juſt before the murder iv. 520

* My lord Mohun careſſes Mountford at the time he was wounded iv. 521, 524

* Evidence of the watch meeting my lord Mohun and mr. Hill with their ſwords drawn, before mrs. Bracegirdle's lodging iv. 524

* Evidence of the terror my lord Mohun was in when he was taken iv. 523

* Evidence that Mountford was run through before his ſword was drawn, and while my lord Mohun was by him iv. 523

* The two ſurgeons evidence iv. 525

* Lord Mohun's witneſſes iv. 526

* The evidence of Hill's boy iv. 526

* He ſwears that my lord ſtood upon the flat ſtones whilſt Hill and Mountford fought in the middle of the ſtreet iv. 527

* Other witneſſes to the ſame purpoſe iv. 528

* A depoſition of Hill's boy before the coroner read againſt the priſoner, though the witneſs was examined in court viva voce iv. 534

* Sir Thomas Trevor, ſolicitor-general, ſums up the evidence iv. 535

* The lords debate the points of law in their houſe above iv. 537

* Their lordſhips require the judges opinions in a point of law iv. 538

* The priſoner's counſel permitted to argue the point, before the judges gave their opinions iv. 538

* The king's counſel refuſe to reply, unleſs their lordſhips would admit that the caſe put was my lord Mohun's caſe iv. 540

* The judges reſolutions iv. 541

* Second queſtion, with the judges reſolutions iv. 542

* Third queſtion iv. 544

* Fourth queſtion iv. 545

* Fifth queſtion iv. 547

* Sixth queſtion iv. 549

* The priſoner's counſel not ſuffered to reply, after the judges had given their opinions in any point iv. 549

* Seventh queſtion iv. 550

* Lord Mohun is acquitted iv. 553

* MOHUN, CHARLES Lord,

* His trial for the murder of Richard Coote, eſq. March 29, 1699, 11 W. III. v. 180

* Lord high ſteward, lord Somers, his ſpeech to the priſoner v. 180

* The indictment v. 181

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his ſpeech v. 182

* The evidence given by the drawer of the Grey-Hound-Tavern v. 182

* The chairman's evidence v. 183

* The ſurgeon, who viewed captain Coote's body, his evidence v. 189

* The lord Mohun calls a witneſs v. 189

* Lord Mohun's obſervations on the evidence v. 190

* Mr. ſolicitor's obſervations for the king v. 191

* My lord Mohun is acquitted v. 193

* He promiſes to avoid all quarrels for the future v. 193

* The court diſſolved v. 194

MONARCHIES.

The ſpiritual monarchies of the church compared with the temporal monarchies of the world xi. 71

MONCRIEF, HUGH. See GOWRIE Earl of.

MONEY.

Neceſſity of money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in coining money xi. 66

Things eſſential to the legitimation of money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in putting a value on money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in changing the ſtandard of coin xi. 66

Derivation of the term moneta xi. 66

The king's prerogative in enhancing or debaſing the value of coin in England and Ireland xi. 66

Different ſtandards in England and Ireland xi. 67

Sterling money what, and from whence ſo called xi. 67

Weight and purity xi. 67

Whether mixed money be deemed ſterling xi. 68

Iriſh money lawful money of England xi. 68

If obligee refuſeth a tender at the time and place, in mixed money, viz. under the pure ſtandard, the obligor ſhall not be bound to pay better money afterwards xi. 68

MONEY, JAMES. See LEACH DRYDEN.

MONMOUTH, Duke of.

Paſſages in Account of what paſſed at the execution of the duke of Monmouth, given in evidence on the trial of doctor Sacheverel v. 739

The duke of Monmouth was attainted by act of parliament, 1 Jac. II. ix. 584

MONOPOLIES.

The great caſe between the Eaſt-India company and mr. Sandys, concerning their patent trade, excluſive of all others, 35 Car. II. vii. 493
The argument of mr. Holt, in behalf of the company vii. 493
That the perſons traded with being infidels, it is not lawful for a ſubject of England to trade with them, without a licence from the king vii. 494, 508
The ſubjects of England have not ſuch a right to foreign trade, that they can, ad libitum, trade without controul vii. 494, 530
By common law, cuſtom but of three things due to the king; wool, woolfell, and leather vii. 495
Definition of a monopoly vii. 496, 499, 514
Precedents of charters granted, excluſive of other perſons than the grantees vii. 497
Sir George Treby's argument for mr. Sandys vii. 497
That the patent does not differ from the reaſon of other monopolies, and conſequently void vii. 499, 514
Objections againſt trading with infidels anſwered vii. 501, 521
Objection, that ſubjects are not to trade with foreigners ad libitum anſwered vii. 502, 552
Precedents of grants for ſole trading, not good vii. 505
Mr. ſolicitor-general Finch's argument for the company vii. 507
Mr. Pollexfen's argument for the defendant vii. 511
That the proviſo in the ſtatute of monopolies extends only to charters, or letters patents, before that act made vii. 518
Sir Robert Sawyer's argument for the company vii. 528
Precedents of licences for foreign trade granted vii. 538, 563
This charter diſtinguiſhed from a monopoly vii. 543
This action maintainable by the company vii. 544
Mr. Williams's argument for the defendant vii. 545
The judges of opinion that the grant is good vii. 554
Lord chief juſtice Jefferies his ſpeech at delivering his opinion vii. 555
The king's prerogative conſidered, as to inland and foreign trade vii. 557
Corporations for trade to be diſtinguiſhed from monopolies vii. 565
Judgment for the plaintiffs vii. 570. See BATES JOHN. EAST-INDIA COMPANY, and SANDYS.

*MONSON, Sir THOMAS,

Arraigned for the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, but not tried i. 347

MONTACUTE, Lord,

He is tried by his peers, Dec. 3, 1539, 30 Hen. VIII. xi. 24
Sent to the Tower xi. 24
Accuſed xi. 24

MONUMENT.

Copy of inſcription on lord Lovat's monument erected to his memory at Kirk-Hill, in Scotland x. 193. Ap.

MOORE, FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,

Extract from his book of reports xi. 76

MOORE, HENRY,

The trial of his cauſe with the corporation of the town and port of Haſtings, before lord chief juſtice Hardwicke, on a mandamus for admitting Moore to be a freeman of the ſaid town and port, in purſuance of a cuſtom there x. 138. Ap.
The plea x. 138. Ap.
Mr. Clarke opens the declaration x. 140. Ap.
Sir Thomas Abney argues for the plaintiff x. 140. Ap.
Mr. Strange argues on ſame ſide x. 141. Ap.
Mr. Marſh deſires to read copies, as they had not the originals of the corporation books x. 142. Ap.
Sir J. Willes (attorney-general) owned, they had the originals, ſo could not read copies; but ſaid, the original itſelf is no evidence x. 142. Ap.
Lord Hardwicke's opinion, if an original corporation-book is produced, they cannot read a copy x. 142. Ap.
Town-clerk examined x. 142. Ap.
Sir Thomas Abney propoſes reading an ancient book produced by him x. 142. Ap.
Attorney-general objects to it x. 142. Ap.
Lord Hardwicke ordered it to be read x. 143. Ap.
The cuſtomal of the town of Haſtings read x. 143. Ap.
Counſel object to it, as containing ſeveral miſcellaneous matters x. 143. Ap.
Town-clerk may bind up what he pleaſes with it x. 143. Ap.
Several entries from the corporation-books read x. 144. Ap.
And pariſh regiſters x. 146. Ap.
Examination of witneſſes relating to the right of freedom, and the fine to be paid x. 153. Ap.
Plaintiff's evidence cloſed x. 157. Ap.
Attorney-general ſtates the caſe for the defendant x. 158. Ap.
Mr. ſerjeant Skinner on the ſame ſide x. 161. Ap.
Debate about the fine x. 162. Ap.
Lord Hardwicke ſays, the notion of law is, that there is an eſſential difference between a fine certain and a reaſonable fine x. 162. Ap.
In ſome of the Cinque Ports, a diſtinction is made between voting for a mayor and members of parliament x. 162. Ap.
Evidence for defendant x. 162. Ap.
Several entries read x. 164. Ap.
Serjeant Parker aſks, if they make any difference between the eldeſt and youngeſt ſons? Anſwered, No x. 165. Ap.
Sir Thomas Abney's reply, wherein he lays down four things, 1. That he muſt be an eldeſt ſon. 2. That he be born within the borough. 3. It muſt be after the admiſſion and ſwearing of his father; and, 4. It muſt be upon paying a reaſonable fine x. 167. Ap.
A charge againſt a witneſs for what he ſaid, but denied x. 168. Ap.
Mr. Strange ſtates the caſe, and obſerves on the fine x. 169. Ap.
The meaning of the words, "in reſpect thereof" x. 171. Ap.
The jury muſt determine, 1. Whether there be any cuſtom within the borough for an eldeſt ſon to be free. 2. Whether being born within the town, after his father was made free, be neceſſary qualifications or not. 3. If they believe reſiance to be another qualification. 4. If the jury be of opinion that either of theſe two qualifications, of being born within the town, or after the father was made free, are neceſſary; or that that commoranty is not neceſſary, they muſt find for plaintiff. But if they ſhould be of opinion that the two former are not eſſential, and the laſt neceſſary, they muſt find for the defendants x. 171. Ap.
Lord Hardwicke ſums up the evidence, and ſtates the caſe to the jury x. 172. Ap.
Verdict for the plaintiff x. 175. Ap.
Jury find, that the eldeſt ſon of a freeman, born within the borough after his father's freedom, has a right, and that reſidence is not neceſſary, and they find 6s. 8d. to be the fine, and that reaſonable x. 175. Ap.
Lord Hardwicke obſerved, the point of the reaſonableneſs of the fine muſt be ſaved for the opinion of the court x. 175. Ap.
The ſpecial verdict afterwards argued and determined in favour of the plaintiff Moore x. 175. Ap.

*MORDANT, JOHN, Eſq.

* His trial before the High Court of Juſtice for high-treaſon, June 1, 1658 ii. 292
* Impeached of high-treaſon againſt the protector and ſtate ii. 292
* He is refuſed a trial by jury ii. 293
* Pleads not guilty ii. 294
* Evidence of his making an intereſt to bring in king Charles ii. 295
* A witneſs withdrawing himſelf, the juſtice who took his examination permitted to give in evidence what the witneſs depoſed before him ii. 296
* The preſident (Liſle's) ſpeech to ſir H. Slingeſby, dr. Hewet, and mr. Mordant, before judgment ii. 298
* Tells them, God had done as miraculouſly for the cauſe, as he did of old for the Iſraelites againſt the Egyptians ii. 298
* That they owed natural allegiance to the protector ii. 298
* Mr. Mordant acquitted ii. 299, 300

*MORE, Sir THOMAS,

* Tried for high-treaſon in denying the king's ſupremacy 26 Hen. VIII. 1535 i. 59. xi. 23
* Barton Eliz. and ſeveral others, attainted of high-treaſon by act of parliament i. 59
* Names of his judges i. 59
* The ſolicitor-general comes to him, to pump him i. 59
* They debate the points of ſucceſſion and ſupremacy i. 59
* His reaſon for being againſt the king's ſecond marriage i. 60
* The ſolicitor ſwears ſeveral things againſt him that paſſed at his examination; which ſir Thomas denies i. 60
* His refuſing the oath of ſucceſſion, his principal crime i. 60
* Complains he had been impriſoned fifteen months, and his eſtate confiſcated before his trial i. 60
* Puts the lord chancellor in mind, that before ſentence it ought to be demanded of the priſoner, what he has to ſay why judgment ſhould not be pronounced againſt him i. 61
* And then he aſſerts, that the act of parliament concerning the ſupremacy was repugnant to the law of God i. 62
* That no temporal prince may preſume to take upon him the ſupreme government of the church i. 62
* That this kingdom was but part of the catholick church; and that the act was contrary to ſeveral ſtatutes in force, and particularly magna charta, and contrary to the king's coronation-oath i. 62
* He has judgment as a traitor i. 62
* But is beheaded i. 63. xi. 23. See FISHER JOHN, Biſhop of Rocheſter.

MORETON, JOHN,

His ſpeech for the priſoner, on the trial of Eliz. Canning x. 289
Reſts the evidence on Canning's trial on the teſtimony given x. 374

MORETON, Sir WILLIAM, Recorder of London,

His charge to the jury on the proſecution of Eliz. Canning, for perjury x. 390
Said he could not receive their verdict, "Guilty of perjury, but not wilful and corrupt" x. 390
He paſſes ſentence on Eliz. Canning x. 407

MORGAN, DAVID,

His trial for treaſon, July 18, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 561
Evidence againſt him ix. 561
His defence and ſpeech ix. 563
Solicitor-general's reply ix. 564
Found guilty and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 565
Some account of him ix. 565
Part of his dying ſpeech ix. 565

MORLEY, THOMAS Lord,

His trial for murder, April 30, 1666, 18 Car. II. in the court of the lord high ſteward vii. 421. See ix. 23.
Reſolutions of the judges reſpecting the trial.
1. That they were to attend upon the letter of the lord high ſteward in their ſcarlet robes, and the chiefs in their collars of S. S. vii. 421
2. That the peers were the triers vii. 421
3. That in caſe, after the evidence given, the priſoner withdrawn, and the peers gone to conſult of their verdict, they ſhould ſend for them, if the lord ſteward required it, they were to go to them; but not to deliver any opinion without conference, and only openly in court vii. 421
4. That if lord ſteward ſhould in open court demand any of their opinions, tho' in the abſence of the priſoner, they were to give it vii. 421
5. That the examinations of witneſſes taken by the coroner, dead or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that they are the ſame without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421
6. That the examination of a witneſs taken by the coroner, who is abſent by means or procurement of the priſoner, their lordſhips being ſatisfied he was ſo detained, may be read; but oath that all endeavours have been uſed uſed to find out ſuch a witneſs, and cannot, is not ſufficient to authorize the reading ſuch examination vii. 421

Liſt of the lords triers vii. 424
Witneſſes on the priſoner's behalf not ſworn vii. 424
Lord Morley was found guilty of manſlaughter, and upon claiming the benefit of clergy, and of the ſtat. Edw. VI. the lord ſteward granted them, firſt obtaining the conſent of all the judges; whereupon the noble priſoner was diſcharged on paying his fees vii. 428

MORRIS, JOHN,
Two judgments of the lords againſt him, Mary his wife, Smith, Darby, and Harris, for forging and publiſhing a copy of a pretended act of parliament, 1647 vii. 317
A breviate of his caſe, preſented to his excellency ſir Tho. Fairfax vii. 319

MORRIS, Colonel, Governor of Pontefract Caſtle,
His trial for high-treaſon, at York, 1649 vii. 320
Urges, he ought to be tried by martial law vii. 320
Pleads his commiſſion from the prince, and conſequently no crime committed againſt the king and his crown, as laid in the indictment vii. 321
Is condemned vii. 322
Whitlocke's account of this affair vii. 322
His ſpeech at the place of execution vii. 323

MORTGAGES.
Mortgagor in poſſeſſion, with benefit of redemption, qualified to vote as a freeholder in the election of members to ſerve in parliament viii. 94. n.

MORTIMER, Lord,
He was attainted without being heard v. 97

MOUNTAGUE, Sir HENRY, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
His ſpeech on granting execution againſt ſir Walter Raleigh viii. 339
His ſpeech on cenſuring Wraynham in Star-chamber, for ſlandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 110

MOUNTAGUE, JAMES,
His ſpeech for Tutchin on his trial for a libel v. 538
Is charged by the attorney-general (ſir Edward Northey) with juſtifying defendant's principles, and is threatened with a proſecution v. 540
His argument on motion in arreſt of the judgment againſt Tutchin v. 557
Ordered into cuſtody for pleading on return of habeas corpus on a parliamentary commitment viii. 139
Writ of habeas corpus ſerved on ſerjeant at arms, on behalf of mr. Mountague viii. 142
Argues that the Ayleſbury-men were bailable, and objects to return viii. 158

MOUNTAGUE, Sir JAMES, Attorney-General,
Opens the evidence againſt Robert Fielding, eſq. for bigamy v. 611
His obſervations on the evidence and defence v. 624
Shews the neceſſity the commons were under to proceed againſt doctor Henry Sacheverel, for preaching a ſeditious ſermon, by impeachment v. 648
Holds, that thoſe who were not ſatisfied with what was done at the Revolution, muſt be enemies to the preſent eſtabliſhment v. 651. See RESISTANCE.

MOUNTAGUE, Sir JAMES, Baron of the Exchequer,
His argument in the prince's caſe xi. 296, 298
His opinion xi. 300, 302

MOUNTAGUE, WILLIAM, Eſq. Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
Appealed to by a priſoner, and ſpoke in his favour as to the particular fact referred to ii. 998, 999
Examined as a witneſs on dr. Oates's firſt trial for perjury iv. 40

* MULLINS, DARBY v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.

* MURDER.
* The procurers of murder guilty of murder i. 348, &c.
* Where the concealment of an intended murder ſhall bring one within the guilt of murder i. 343
* Poiſoning made high-treaſon by a ſtatute, and the perſon guilty to be boiled to death i. 324
* Murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey ii. 760
* Where one preſent at a murder ſhall be deemed guilty of murder, and where not ii. 728
* One engaged in a deſign of murder, and poſted ſo as to give any aſſiſtance to thoſe that actually do it, is, in the eye of the law, preſent, though not upon the ſpot where the murder was committed, nor even in ſight or hearing of it vi. 822, 828
* Murder made high-treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
* One convicted of murder on circumſtantial evidence iv. 488
* Murder of mrs. Stout, four perſons tried for it v. 194
If a man hath judgment to be hanged, and the ſheriff behead him, it is murder ii. 209
Where many are engaged in an unlawful deſign, and one commits murder, the reſt are guilty, though at a diſtance ii. 729
If ſundry perſons be together, aiding and aſſiſting to an action, wherein a man-ſlaughter doth enſue, as in caſe of a ſudden buſineſs without malice prepenſe, they are equally guilty of the man-ſlaughter, as they are in the caſe of murder prepenſe. So reſolved by all the judges of England ii. 730
Trials for attempts to murder ii. 623. iii. 65
In caſe of murder, no friends or relations of deceaſed to be on the jury iii. 468
Of the puniſhment of murder Em. Pref. x
Parliament declared, that perſons who were ſuppoſed to be guilty, as acceſſaries to a barbarous murder, and were equally, if not more guilty, than the principal, ſhould not, if found guilty, have their clergy iv. 174. See PARLIAMENT.
Inſtances of the fatal conſequences of convictions for murder, previous to finding the dead bodies iv. 204. vi. 425. x. 29
* The crime of thoſe who are in company at time of murder committed, may be ſeparated from crime of perſon who committeth murder, ſo as in ſome caſes to be only guilty of man-ſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges of England iv. 541
* A, conſcious of an animoſity between B and C, accompanieth B where C happeneth to come, and B killeth him; A having no malice to C, or any actual hand in his death, is not guilty of murder, or indeed of any offence whatever. So reſolved by all the judges of England iv. 543
* If A hears B threaten to kill C, and ſome days after A is with B upon ſome other deſign, and C paſſes by, or comes in the place where A and B are, and C is killed by B;—A ſtanding by without contributing to the fact, his ſword not then being drawn, or any malice ever appearing on A's part againſt C;—A will not be guilty of murder, or man-ſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges of England iv. 544
* If a perſon knowing of the deſign of another to lie in wait to aſſault a third man, who happeneth to be killed (when the perſon who knew of the deſign is preſent), ſuch perſon is not guilty in law of murder or man-ſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges of England iv. 546
* If a perſon knowing of the deſign of another to lie in wait to aſſault a third man, and accompanying him in that deſign, if it ſhall happen that the third perſon be killed at that time, in the preſence of him who knew that deſign, and accompanied the other in it, he is guilty in law of the ſame crime with the party who had the deſign, and accompanied the other, and killed him, though he had no actual hand in his death iv. 548. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
* If a perſon be by, named William, when Thomas ſaid he would ſtab John, upon which William ſays he will ſtand by his friend, and afterwards Thomas does actually murder John; quære, whether William is equally guilty with Thomas, or of what crime? iv. 550. Doubted by the judges.
* If A accompanies B in an unlawful action, in which C is not concerned, and C happeneth to come in the way of B after the unlawful action is fully over, and happeneth to be killed by B without the aſſiſtance of A, A is not guilty at all iv. 551, 552. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
* No words are in law ſuch a provocation as to reduce the offence of murder to man-ſlaughter v. 296. ix. 64
But if upon ill words both parties ſuddenly fight, and one kills the other, this is but man-ſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges vii. 421
If one calls another ſon of a whore, or gives him the lie, and thereupon he to whom the words were ſpoken kill the other, this is murder, in the opinion of all the judges vii. 421. See WORDS.
If two fall out ſuddenly, and before any blows preſently appoint to go to the field and fight, one kills the other, this is murder vii. 421. n.
Two play at tables, and fall out ſuddenly, and one with a dagger kills the other; if there be a quarrel, and a reaſonable time before they fight, it is murder vii. 422. n. ix. 63, 535
Two fall out ſuddenly, fight preſently, and one kills the other, it is but man-ſlaughter vii. 422. n.
So if after they have quarrelled, they preſently go into the field and fight, and one kills the other, it is but man-ſlaughter vii. 422. n.
Sir Heneage Finch, ſolicitor general, obſerved, that in ſome places abroad, the ſame people, who would riſe up in arms as one man to purſue a pilferer, yet make a lane through the midſt of them for a man-ſlayer to eſcape vii. 426, 427
One bore malice to another, and having provoked him to draw his ſword, fled away to tempt the adverſary to purſue, and ſtill retired till he came to the wall; now ſeeing himſelf at his laſt refuge, he thought to kill him ſafely, and in his own defence; but this was held murder vii. 426 ix. 63
Homicide in ſhooting at tame fowl, wherein another hath property, without intention to ſteal it, is man-ſlaughter vi. 222
Accidental killing of a man in ſhooting at ſuch tame fowl, with intention of ſtealing it, is murder vi. 222
The caſe of a moſt extraordinary murder in Hertfordſhire, found amongſt the papers of that eminent lawyer ſerjeant Maynard x. 29. Ap.
If an officer be killed in the execution of a warrant for a breach of the peace, it will be murder, though the warrant be obtained by undue means ix. 6. n.
What is murder, and what man-ſlaughter ix. 17, 18
Indictment for an aſſault and an attempt to murder iii. 65
Indictment for murder vi. 12. Ap.
Records againſt peers for murder iv. 511, 513. v. 137
Indictments againſt peers for murder ii. 642. iv. 513. v. 140, 181. x. 480*, 519*
Indictment againſt a Scots peer for murder vii. 86
If a perſon be indicted for murder at common law, and on the coroner's inqueſt, and on the ſtatute of ſtabbing; if found guilty of manſlaughter on the former indictments, was generally acquitted of the latter ix. 533
A caſe to the contrary ix. 533
Inſtance from the Roman Hiſtory, of a father being conſidered as acceſſary to murders committed by his ſon, though he never ſpoke to, or ſaw him x. 435
Where ſeveral people join to do an act in itſelf unlawful, and death enſues from any thing done in proſecution of that unlawful deſign, they will be all conſidered as principals in murder, if they were all preſent aiding and abetting therein ix. 734
Being threatened to be killed, if party would not go on a murderous expedition, no legal defence, on a proſecution for murder ix. 732. See FEAR.
By divers old ſtatutes, no charter of pardon ought to be granted in caſe of murder Em. Pref. ix. n.
Occaſion of the diſtinction between murder and man-ſlaughter ix. 61
The term "murder" deſcribed ix. 61, 62
The law called "Engleſhire" explained ix. 61
A miſtake in chap. 26 of the ſtatute of Marlebridge rectified, and its true meaning explained by lord chief juſtice Holt ix. 61, 62
The difference between murder and man-ſlaughter ix. 62

Of pardon for murder ix. 62
Wilful poiſoning murder ix. 62
Of the indictment for murder ix. 62
If a parent or maſter uſes an improper inſtrument in correction, and thereby kills the child or ſervant, it is murder ix. 64
What judgment to be given in murder by ſtat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37. x. 40
If A of malice prepenſe diſcharge a piſtol at B, and then runs away, B purſues him, and A turns back, and in his own defence kills B, it is murder. By Holt, chief juſtice x. 63
Taking away the life of an innocent man by perjury, in a courſe of legal proceeding, amounts not to murder x. 445, 446, 447
Mr. juſtice Foſter's obſervations on indictment for murder x. 30, 39
If proceſs be defective, or miſtake in name or addition, or if officer's name be inſerted without authority, and after iſſuing proceſs, officer exceeds his authority, and is killed, it will be only manſlaughter x. 476
A very extraordinary trial in appeal x. 31. Ap. See
ADULTERY.
BRAINS.
BUCKNER.
COWLAND.
DUELS.
GREY.
HOLLOWAY.
HUSBAND AND WIFE.
MASTER AND SERVANT.
MISADVENTURE.
PARENT AND CHILD.
PETTY TREASON.
POISON.
PRESS WARRANTS.
SPECIAL VERDICTS.
STATUTE OF STABBING.
WILLIAMS.

MURPHY, TIMOTHY,
His trial for forgery, January 13, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 183
The indictment x. 183
Mr. Hume-Campbell opens the evidence x. 184
Serjeant Nares, for the priſoner, ſtates a point of law x. 187
That an accomplice indicted cannot be a witneſs x. 188
Serjeant Davy on the ſame ſide x. 188
Mr. Hume-Campbell's reply x. 189
Mr. Pratt's reply on the ſame ſide x. 189
Court over-ruled the objection to his competency x. 190
Witneſs proceeds x. 198
Witneſſes to his character, and why x. 198
Priſoner's counſel objects, that the will and probate differ x. 198
Court, the probate being a wrong deſcription, does not alter the caſe x. 198
Murphy's confeſſion x. 198
Executed at Tyburn x. 201

MURRAY, JOHN, the Pretender's Secretary,
Being called to be ſworn, in order to give evidence on lord Lovat's trial, the noble priſoner objected to his competency, becauſe he was attainted by act of parliament ix. 650, 651. x. 436
Counſel heard as to reading the record of thoſe proceedings ix. 652—664
The record admitted to be proved and given in evidence ix. 664*—668*
Then the priſoner lord Lovat deſired to falſify the record, and to prove by witneſſes, that Mr. Murray did not ſurrender himſelf within the time preſcribed by the act of parliament ix. *669
But his lordſhip's counſel were not permitted to argue this point ix. 670*
Nor that his ſurrender was not a ſurrender within the act ix. *669
Letter of lord Lovat to him ix. 712*
The evidence of this witneſs objected to by ſeveral lords ix. 672*, *673
This witneſs is often interrogated by ſeveral lords ix. 672*, 673, 678, 679, 680
The late judge Foſter's opinion on the validity of Mr. Murray's evidence. x. 188 Ap.
The objection to it anſwered by Foſter x. 188 Ap.
Mr. Murray's evidence on lord Lovat's trial in ix. vol. p. 678*, ſeems contradicted by the Gazette x. 188. Ap. See ATTAINDERS.

"MURRAY's CASE."
Reſolutions of the commons reſpecting a libel ſo called x. 196. Ap. See OWEN WILLIAM.

MURRAY WILLIAM, Solicitor-General,
His reply to lord Lovat's defence ix. *735
His argument againſt the objection, that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs in treaſon ix. *659
His ſpeech on the proſecution of Owen the bookſeller for publiſhing "Murray's caſe" x. 205. Ap. See MANSFIFELD Lord

MUSEUM. See BRITISH MUSEUM.

MUTE.
One ſtanding mute, and refuſing his trial, condemned upon ſtat. 35 Hen. VIII. for foreign treaſons viii. 346
The puniſhment for one ſtanding mute, and the reaſon of it i. 325 * See TRIAL.

MUTILATION.
Mutilation is not capital by the law of Scotland, though diſmembering is ii. 629

N.

NAIRN, KATHERINE,
Her trial for inceſt with her huſband's brother, and the murder of her huſband, by poiſoning him, Auguſt 1765, 15 Geo. III. before the High Court of Juſticiary in Scotland x. 479
Indictment againſt her x. 479
Liſt of aſſize x. 481
Liſt of witneſſes on behalf of the proſecution x. 481
Liſt of writings, &c. adduced in evidence x. 482
Procurators for and againſt the pannel x. 482
Arguments of counſel for and againſt her x. 482, &c.
Her jury x. 488
Evidence againſt her x. 488, &c.
Her letters x. 505
Her firſt declaration before the ſheriff-ſubſtitute of Forfar x. 505
Second declaration x. 506
Refuſes to anſwer the queſtions put to her by the ſheriff-ſubſtitute of Edinburgh x. 508
Witneſſes for her x. 510—512
Found guilty x. 513
Minute of debate in arreſt of judgment x. 513
Interlocutor thereon x. 517
Pleads her belly x. 518
Midwives cited to inſpect her, not poſitive whether ſhe is pregnant or not x. 520
Sentence reſpited x. 520
Found pregnant, and ſentence again reſpited x. 520
Delivered of a daughter in the Tolbooth at Edinburgh x. 520
Eſcapes out of the Tolbooth, after having lain in but ſeventeen days x. 520

NAIRN, WILLIAM Lord,
His petition to the houſe of peers to intercede with the king for mercy vi. 11, 12. * See vi. 1. DERWENTWATER Earl of NAMES.

Though perſon may have divers ſurnames, yet purchaſe by either ſufficient vi. 804
By the practice in the Weſt, many men were hanged for having old Jewiſh names, as Obadiah, or the like, with a jeſt, that their godfathers hanged them iv. 175
Name of place common deſcription in Scotland, as Lochiel for Cameron of Lochiel ix. 26. n.

NARES, GEORGE, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech for Elizabeth Canning, tried for perjury x. 298
States a point of law for Murphy x. 187
Gives Butler, the author of Hudibras, the character of a great man, and cites that work ix. 301

*NATURALIZATION.
* The natives of Scotland, and formerly of Gaſcoigne, &c. when united to the crown of England, were denizens of England, and needed not to be naturalized here ii. 9, 11
* An act naturalizing the father, naturalizes his children born before the act ii. 12
It cannot be but by act of parliament ii. 6
Huſſey J. ſaid, that 25 Edw. III. ſtat. 2. was but a deelaration of the common law xi. 81

NAYLOR, JAMES,*
* His trial before a committee of the houſe of commons for blaſphemy, 1656 ii. 265
* Report of the committee ii. 265
* James Naylor's account of himſelf ii. 265
* Charged with perſonating our bleſſed Saviour ii. 265
* A paper containing the deſcription of our Saviour, as it was given to the ſenate of Rome by Pub. Lentulus, found upon him ii. 266
* His perſon not unlike that deſcription ii. 266
* He aſſumes the titles due only to our Saviour ii. 267, &c.
* The committee reſolve, that he is guilty of the charge ii. 269
* His followers, who were in cuſtody with him, give him divine worſhip ii. 270
* As did many quakers who came to ſee him ii. 270
* The houſe agree with the committee ii. 270
* Sentenced to be bored through the tongue, whipped, &c. ii. 272
* Lord commiſſioner Whitlocke's ſpeech in the houſe of commons thereon ii. 273

NEGRO.
Authority of owner of a negro to inforce his right by tranſporting him out of England, conſidered xi. 347. See SLAVERY. SOMERSET. VILLENAGE.

* NEVIL, ALEXANDER, Archbiſhop of York. See BRAMBRE.

NEVIL, Sir EDWARD. See POLE Sir GEOFREY.

NEWCASTLE, Duke of,
His grace's ſingular vote on the trial of her grace of Kingſton for bigamy xi. 256

NEW ENGLAND. See QUELCH JOHN.

NEWGATE.
In Newgate, no ſtate priſoner has any allowance made him from government, and in caſe he hath not of his own, he muſt live upon charity, or ſtarve; and if he hath any known ſubſtance, he muſt expect to be ſqueezed out of a great part of it, or he will have much worſe lodging than many a tolerable dog-kennel of a kind good-natured country ſquire would make, be loaded with irons, and uſed worſe than a dog x. 75, 76 Ap.

NEW ROMNEY. See ELLES RICHARD. GIBBON JOHN.

NEWTON. See GOLDING.

NEW YORK. See BAYARD NICHOLAS. ZENGER PETER.

NEWS.
Queen Anne's proclamation for reſtraining the ſpreading falſe news v. 782
Lord chief juſtice Scroggs cenſured the folly of the age in being ſo fond of newſpapers iii. 64. See LIBELS.

NEW TRIALS.
Court will grant a new trial, where jurymen make affidavits, that the verdict was taken wrong by the judge and miſtakenly recorded, and was not the verdict they meant or intended to bring in x. 406, 407, 413

But

But not where two jurymen recant, after they have conſented, and given in a general verdict according to their oath x. 407, 408. See JURY. TRIAL.

* NITHISDALE, WILLIAM Earl of vi. 1. See DERWENTWATER Earl of.

NOBILITY.

The king may ſuperſede his writ to ennoble any one under the great ſeal, before the parliament ſits. viii. 60. See PEERAGE and PEERS.

NOBLE, RICHARD,

His trial for the murder of John Sayer, and of Mary Sayer for petty treaſon, and Mary Saliſbury for aiding and abetting the ſaid murder, at Kingſton aſſizes in Surry, March 12, 13, 1712-13, 11 Anne ix. 1
Motion to put off trial from abſence of witneſſes ix. 1
No affidavit being made that the abſent witneſſes were material, court ordered the trial to go on ix. 1
Queen's counſel alledge, that the priſoners endeavoured to procure witneſſes to perjure themſelves ix. 1
It appearing that ſome of the jurymen ſummoned had been tampered with, they were all ſet aſide, and a new jury ſworn ix. 2, 3
Noble challenged 20 of the jury, mrs. Sayer 35, and mrs. Saliſbury 20 ix. 3
Noble moved that he might be tried ſeparately, his crime differing from thoſe of the other priſoners, but over-ruled ix. 3
The evidence ix. 3
Mrs. Sayer's defence ix. 4
Mrs. Saliſbury's ix. 5
Noble's defence ix. 5
Witneſſes to the characters of the priſoners ix. 6
Noble deſires counſel to a point of law, viz. to the legality of the warrant, whereby Mrs. Sayer was apprehended ix. 6
Hopes the court would therefore direct the jury to find a ſpecial verdict ix. 6
Court declare warrant legal ix. 6
Evidence ſummed up ix. 7
Noble found guilty, the other priſoners not guilty ix. 7
Court, on motion, ordered Mrs. Sayer and Mrs. Saliſbury to give bail for their appearance at any time within twelve months, to anſwer any other indictment or appeal; which they accordingly did, and were diſcharged ix. 7
Noble's motion in arreſt of judgment, which was over-ruled ix. 7
His ſpeech previous to receiving ſentence ix. 7
Sentence paſſed, and execution ordered ix. 9
His behaviour in gaol ix. 9
His ſpeech at execution ix. 9
The lord chief juſtice Parker's reaſon for over-ruling Noble's motion in arreſt of judgment, made upon the ground of having a miſ-trial, for that his crime was murder, and Mrs. Sayer's petty treaſon, confuted ix. 10

NOEL, the Honourable WILLIAM,

Of counſel for Francklin on trial for libel ix. 261
His ſpeech in his favour ix. 271
His argument on lord Lovat's trial, reſpecting the competency of a witneſs who was attainted ix. 660*
His reply to lord Lovat's defence ix. 742*

NOEL, WILLIAM, Juſtice of the C. P.

Of opinion, that killing an officer attempting to arreſt by virtue of a warrant ſealed before his name inſerted therein, was only man-ſlaughter at moſt x. 478

NOLI PROSEQUI.

Noli proſequi entered by attorney general, on lord Grey's proſecution for ſeduction iii. 544

NON COMPOS MENTIS.

Stat. 1 & 2. P. & M. c. 10. did juſtly repeal ſtat. 35 Hen. VIII. c. 20. which puniſhed a man for treaſon, though he became non compos mentis before execution ii. 7
No leſs juſtly did ſtat. 25 Edw. III. & 5 *Car.*II. by the word imagination, alter in like point that law which was in uſe till then, concerning ſuch a perſon's committing the act of treaſon, ſuch an one being no better than quaſi inanimatus ii. 7. See ARNOLD EDWARD. BATEMAN CHARLES. BRADSHAW JAMES. FERRERS Earl. INSANITY. LUNATIC. MADMAN.

NONJURING CLERGYMEN,

Three of them, mr. Collier, mr. Cook, and mr. Snatt, proceeded againſt for publicly abſolving ſir William Perkins and ſir John Friend, at Tyburn, 1696 x. 43. Ap.
Biſhop Burnet's account of the affair x. 43. Ap.
An account of what paſſed at the execution of Perkins and Friend x. 43. Ap.
Cook and Snatt committed to Newgate, Collier kept out of the way x. 44. Ap.
Collier's defence of the abſolution given them x. 44. Ap.
A declaration of the archbiſhops and biſhops concerning the behaviour of theſe clergymen x. 45. Ap.
Collier's further defence of the abſolution, occaſioned by a declaration of the archbiſhops, biſhops, &c. x. 46. Ap.
Proceedings againſt Cook and Snatt in B. R. x. 49. Ap.
An argument in their behalf x. 50. Ap.

NORFOLK, HENRY Duke of,

Proceedings between the duke and ducheſs, in the houſe of lords, for a divorce, 1691 viii. 7
Ducheſs heard by counſel againſt the bill viii. 7
The bill for a divorce viii. 7
Reaſons offered to the lords on behalf of the duke viii. 8
Civil lawyers heard, and the duke ordered to bring in his charge particularly, as to perſon, time, and place viii. 8, 9
The duke charges Mr. John Germaine viii. 9
The ducheſs's anſwer viii. 9
Her anſwer to the new charge viii. 10
Charges the duke with adultery viii. 10
The witneſſes names viii. 11
Witneſſes examined, and counſel heard on both ſides viii. 12
Depoſitions of the witneſſes read, and proceedings of the lords thereon viii. 13
Obſervations upon the ſeveral evidences by her grace's friends viii. 13
Evidence on behalf of the ducheſs, intimating a reconciliation viii. 23
Bill thrown out viii. 25
Brings his action againſt mr. Germaine in the King's-Bench viii. 27
Defendant pleads not guilty within ſix years viii. 27
Jury's names viii. 27
Damages laid 100,000l. viii. 27
Evidence for the duke viii. 28
Counſel for the defendant urge, no fact proved within the time of the declaration between the ducheſs and mr. Germaine viii. 32
Witneſſes examined for the defendant, and againſt the credit of the duke's witneſſes viii. 32
A letter from the duke to the ducheſs read in court viii. 35
Lord chief juſtice ſums up the evidence, and declares matters before the ſix years may be given in evidence, to explain ſome actions ſince, but to no other purpoſe viii. 35
The jury next morning find for the plaintiff, with 100 marks, damages and coſts viii. 36
Are ſeverely reprimanded by the court viii. 36

* NORFOLK, HENRY HOWARD, Duke of,

* Proceedings in parliament upon the bill of divorce between him and his ducheſs, 1699, 12 W. III. v. 239
* The bill of divorce v. 239
* Complaint made to the houſe, that the duke cannot get his witneſſes to attend v. 241
* The depoſitions of Eleanor Vaneſs for the duke v. 243
* Depoſitions of Nicholas Hoſier v. 246
* Of William Bayly v. 251
* Depoſitions of Thomas Hawkſworth for the ducheſs v. 253
* Depoſitions of John Peacock v. 254
* Depoſitions of Frances Knight v. 256
* Depoſitions of William White v. 258
* Depoſitions of Matthew Macdonald, and others v. 260
* The bill paſt the lords, and ſent down to the commons v. 265
* The ducheſs's petition v. 266
* The duke's caſe v. 266
* Biſhop Coſin's argument, whether adultery is a juſt cauſe of divorce v. 268
* The ducheſs's caſe v. 271
* The bill read a ſecond time by the commons v. 274
* Sir Thomas Powys's ſpeech for the ducheſs v. 274
* Mr. Dodd's ſpeech v. 277
* Dr. Pinfold's ſpeech on the ſame ſide v. 278
* Mr. ſerjeant Wright's ſpeech for the duke v. 279
* Mr. Northey on the ſame ſide v. 281
* Mr. Oldys's ſpeech for the duke v. 282
* The ducheſs's counſel reply v. 282
* Mr. Northey opens the evidence v. 283
* The witneſſes examined v. 284
* The ducheſs's counſel deſire to read the depoſitions taken before the lords, in order to prove that the witneſſes contradict themſelves v. 285
* Which being refuſed, they decline making any further defence v. 285
* The bill is paſſed v. 286

* NORFOLK, THOMAS HOWARD, Duke of,

Lord high ſteward on the duke of Buckingham's trial xi. 5
Again, on lord Dacres's trial xi. 10
Again, on queen Anne Boleyn's trial, and on viſcount Rochford's, her brother xi. 10
Again, on duke Northumberland's, marquis Northampton's, and earl Warwick's xi. 26
Proceedings againſt him for treaſon, December 1546, 37 Hen. VIII. xi. 17
He is committed xi. 18, 20
Evidence of witneſſes xi. 18
His goods ſeized xi. 19
He is committed to the Tower xi. 19
His letter to the king xi. 19
To the lords xi. 19
His ſubmiſſion xi. 19
Eſcaped execution by the king's death xi. 19, 20
* His trial by commiſſion the 16th of January 1571, 14 Eliz. i. 82
* Names of his peers i. 83
* The indictment charges him with a deſign of marrying the queen of Scots; with aiding the earl of Northumberland and other rebels; with adhering to the queen's enemies, correſponding with the pope and king of Spain, and promoting a foreign invaſion i. 83, 84. See viii. 335
* He is denied counſel, though he cites a precedent for it i. 86
* Is required by the court to anſwer directly, whether he knew of the queen of Scots making pretenſions to the crown of England i. 89
* The biſhop of Roſſe's examination read i. 90
* Earl of Murray's letter read i. 92
* Biſhop of Roſſe's letter to the queen of Scots read i. 94
* A letter from the duke to the earl of Murray read i. 95
* The duke's own examinations and letters read i. 96, 97
* An old prophecy given in evidence i. 100
* The court denied to let the witneſſes be examined vivâ voce i. 95, 98
* The duke in his defence objects to the biſhop of Roſſe's evidence, as being a foreigner, &c. particularly as he was a Scot, and might be made a priſoner in time of peace i. 102

* A title derived to the queen of Scots above the Conqueſt i. 106
* The pope's depoſing power i. 106
* Foreigners, bondmen, and perſons confeſſing themſelves guilty of treaſon, may be witneſſes, if they do not ſtand indicted, outlawed, or attainted i. 113
* Where the ſubjects of a foreign prince may be deemed enemies, though the prince be in amity with us i. 115
* The crown entering into a war with any other nation, a ſufficient declaration of their being enemies i. 115
* The duke is convicted i. 115
* Judgment is pronounced on him as a traitor i. 110
* His behaviour at execution i. 116

NORKOT, JANE,

Being murthered, the queſtion was, how ſhe came by her death x. 29. Ap.
Perſons tried at Hertford for her murder, and acquitted x. 29. Ap.
An appeal brought, and they were convicted and executed; but confeſſed nothing x. 30, 31. Ap.
Serjeant Maynard ſtates the evidence x. 31. Ap.

NORRIS, HENRY,

Mark Smeton, William Brereton, and ſir Francis Weſton, their trials for high-treaſon, before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, in May 1536, 28 Hen. VIII. xi. 10, 12
They were twice indicted xi. 12
Three pleaded not guilty xi. 12
Smeton confeſſed he had known the queen carnally three times xi. 11, 12, 13, 14
They are all found guilty xi. 12
Judgment xi. 12
None of them were quartered xi. 13
Three were beheaded xi. 13
Smeton was hanged xi. 13

NORTH, Sir FRANCIS, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of C.B.

Directs the jury on the trial of Reading, counſellor at law, for a miſdemeanour, in endeavouring to ſtifle the king's evidence againſt the popiſh lords, by ſuborning the king's witneſſes, and bribing them to retract their evidence ii. 827. See COUNSEL.
His charge to Reading's jury ii. 829
Ordered to be impeached when chief juſtice iii. 224. vii. 486
Tells Stephen Colledge, that he muſt not call one witneſs to diſprove what another of his witneſſes has depoſed iii. 373
Tells the jury, that whoever imagine to depoſe or impriſon the king, are in law guilty of imagining his death iii. 406
That if one witneſs proves an overt act of treaſon in county wherein priſoner is indicted, and another witneſs proves another overt act of the ſame treaſon in another county, theſe are two witneſſes, as the law requires, and ſufficient to ſupport the indictment iii. 407
His ſpeech before ſentence iii. 408
His conduct on Colledge's trial condemned iv. 174, 175, 180
Publiſhed Colledge's trial iv. 185
Sir John Hawles obſerved, that lord chief juſtice North would have deceived any man by his countenance, who had not known his practice iv. 191
His argument againſt the judgment in Barnardiſton and Soame viii. 441
Examines captain Bedlow, in his laſt ſickneſs, in the year 1680 viii. 460
His narrative of it at the council-board viii. 460
His letter to ſir Leonel Jenkins, ſecretary of ſtate viii. 461
His ſpeech, when lord keeper, to lord mayor and aldermen of London, on delivering their petition to his majeſty in council, relating to the quo warranto, 1683 iv. 851. viii. 463

NORTH, ROGER,

Opens the indictment on the trial of Colledge iii. 351
His argument on challenge to the freehold, againſt lord Ruſſel, indicted and tried for high-treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king iii. 711
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Sacheverel and others, for a riot, in being unlawfully preſent at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election iii. 951
He is examined before committee of lords, relative to the adviſers and proſecutors of the murders of lord Ruſſel, colonel Sidney, ſir Thomas Armſtrong, mr. Corniſh, and others viii. 478

NORTHAMPTON, WILLIAM Marquis of. See NORTHUMBERLAND, Duke of.

NORTH BRITON.

The proceedings on the proſecution of a libel ſo called xi. 307

NORTHEY, EDWARD,

His argument for Godwin, at the ſuit of ſir Edward Hales, for neglecting to take the oaths of ſupremacy and allegiance i. 686. vii. 613
Opens the evidence on trial of Mary Butler, for forgery v. 233
His ſpeech for the duke of Norfolk, on the ſecond reading of the bill in the houſe of commons, for a divorce v. 281
Opens the evidence on the ſaid bill v. 283

NORTHEY, Sir EDWARD, Attorney-General,

His ſpeech on the trial of Lindſay, for treaſon, in returning from France without licence v. 521
His obſervations on the evidence for the queen, at the trial of John Tutchin, informed againſt for a libel, for writing a periodical paper called The Obſervators v. 540
Charges James Mountague, one of the defendant's counſel, with juſtifying his principles, as to the power of the people, and declares he will proſecute any man who maintains ſuch doctrine v. 540
His argument, on motion in arreſt of judgment, againſt John Tutchin v. 547
His reply v. 574
His ſpeech in the houſe of peers, on trial of earl Wintoun, impeached for treaſon, in being concerned in the rebellion vi. 29, 53
His ſpeech on the trial of Francia, for treaſon vi 62
He had been in and out of the office of attorney-general ſo often, that mr. Hungerford obſerved, he might eaſily be led into a miſtake as to the actual time of his being attorney-general vi. 74
His behaviour towards Bernardi, a ſtate priſoner in Newgate for forty years x. 66, 69, 76. Ap.

NORTHINGTON, ROBERT Earl of,

His proceſſion on the trial of lord Byron x. 517*
His commiſſion of lord high ſteward x. 517*
His addreſs to the noble priſoner previous to the evidence x. 519*
His lordſhip's ſpeech to him, on acquainting him with the verdict of the lords xi. 548*

NORTHUMBERLAND, JOHN DUDLEY, Duke of,

William Parr, marquis of Northampton, and John Dudley, earl of Warwick, their trials for high-treaſon, in the court of the lord high ſteward, at Weſtminſter, Auguſt 18, 1553, 1 Mary xi. 26
The lord high ſteward xi. 26
The duke aſks two queſtions of the court xi. 26
They are anſwered xi. 26
His defence xi. 26
All confeſs the indictment xi. 26
Judgment pronounced xi. 26
The duke requeſts ſeveral favours xi. 26
The marquis pleads xi. 26
The earl requeſts that his debts may be paid xi. 26
They are brought to execution xi. 26
The duke makes a ſpeech xi. 26

NOTE of HAND.

Indictment for forging a promiſſory note of hand x. 95. Ap. See HALES ROBERT. HALES WILLIAM. KINNERSLEY THOMAS.

NOTE-TAKING,

Unleſs it be habitual, it is very difficult iv. 182

NOTICE.

Priſoner cannot inſiſt on any notice of trial iii. 343, 732. iv. 143. See xi. 6, 7.

NOTTINGHAM, HENEAGE FINCH, Earl of, Lord Chancellor,

His ſpeech as lord ſteward, on earl Pembroke's trial, for murder ii. 641
His ſpeech before evidence, to lord Cornwallis, on his trial for murder ii. 725. See iv. 234
His ſpeech to the priſoner previous to the examination of witneſſes ii. 725
His charge to the peers ii. 726
He ſaid courts of juſtice protected counſel in the advice they gave their clients, and that they ought to be able to maintain it in point of law iii. 204
Lord chancellor Nottingham uſed to ſay, that counſel ſhould not ſpeak as if they would abet the guilt of their clients, rather than advocates for their innocence iii. 567. ix. 309
He refuſes an Habeas Corpus to Jenkes vii. 471. See DAVENTRY Lord. FINCH HENEAGE.

* NOTTINGHAM TOWN.

* A riot at an election there tried iii. 194. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM, Eſq.
* The caſe of that corporation in 1684, ſtated by the late William Sacke, eſq; v. 978

NOY, WILLIAM,

His argument in B. R. on Hab. Corp. brought by perſons impriſoned for refuſing to lend upon commiſſions for loans vii. 119
His anſwer to the attorney (ſir Robert Heath) his objections vii. 183

NOY, WILLIAM, Attorney-General,

Opens and enforces the charge, on information in the Star-chamber, againſt Prynne, for writing, &c. Hiſtriomaſtix i. 420, 421
His anſwer to the defence of Sherfield, proſecuted by information in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glaſs window in a church i. 407
Vindicated from the reflections caſt on him by Prynne, by ſir Edward Littleton, ſolicitor-general, on the proceedings againſt Prynne, for ſeveral libels, in Star-chamber i. 483

NUDIGATE, SEBASTIAN. See MIDDLEMORE HUMPHRY.

O.

OATES, TITUS,*

* Proceedings on the writ of enquiry, between his royal highneſs James duke of York, and the ſaid Oates, June 18, 1684, 36 Car. II. iii. 987
* The high ſheriff preſent in court, and ſits covered during the executing the writ. Fifteen ſworn on the jury iii. 987
* The writ at large in Engliſh iii. 988
* The duke had declared on the ſtatute de ſcandal. magnat. the words laid to have been ſpoken were, "That the duke of York was a traitor" iii. 988
* The words proved to be ſpoken at the biſhop of Ely's table iii. 990
* Other words proved to be ſpoken; as, that "the duke fired the city;" that "he was a ſon of a whore, and ſhould never ſucceed to the crown," &c. iii. 991
* The chief juſtice Jefferies's obſervations on the evidence iii. 993
* Damages given by the jury, 100,000l. iii. 996
* His trial at the King's-Bench bar, in Eaſter-Term, the 8th of May 1685, 1 Jac. II. upon an indictment of perjury iv. 1
* The defendant permitted to ſit within the bar iv. 1

* The having been on the grand jury, a good cauſe of challenge iv. 2
* The court deny to bring up the priſoner's witneſſes, who were in execution for debt, in the King's-Bench, either by habeas corpus or rule of court; alledging it would be an eſcape iv. 2
* The indictment iv. 2
* The defendant's exceptions to it iv. 5
* He is told he moves them out of time iv. 5
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 5
* Evidence of his former teſtimony iv. 7
* Lord Gerrard's evidence of Oates's being at St. Omers, when he ſwore he was in London iv. 21
* A clergyman of the church of England, and about twenty other witneſſes depoſe to the ſame effect iv. 22
* Oates ſays he is proſecuted to ſerve a turn;—the court reſent it iv. 24
* Mr. Oates's defence iv. 27
* He inſiſts his evidence ought not to be queſtioned or impeached, while the records of conviction remained in force, and unreverſed againſt the parties who were convicted on his evidence iv. 27
* Complains of being proſecuted ſo long after the ſuppoſed crime; eſpecially when the parliament and courts of juſtice had expreſſed their ſatisfaction of the truth of what he had depoſed iv. 27
* The defendant's witneſſes, to prove he was in London in April 1678 iv. 30
* Earl of Devonſhire called as a witneſs for mr. Oates iv. 38
* Earl of Clare alſo examined by him iv. 39
* Earl of Huntingdon called as a witneſs by him, who ſays, though the defendant was believed once in the houſe of lords, they had now altered their opinions of him iv. 40
* Oates ſhews he had the thanks of the houſe of lords for diſcovering the plot iv. 41
* Several of the judges examined iv. 40, 41
* Mr. attorney-general replies to mr. Oates iv. 42
* Oates's evidence againſt the queen and ſir George Wakeman, of a conſpiracy to poiſon the king iv. 43
* His evidence againſt the earl of Caſtlemaine iv. 44
* Oates objects, that thoſe who had been indicted on his evidence, and acquitted, ought not to be admitted witneſſes againſt him iv. 44
* Inſinuates, that the deſign of proſecuting him was, to ſmother the popiſh plot iv. 44
* Oates's narrative, ſworn to in the houſe of lords, produced as evidence againſt him iv. 47
* The court refuſe the teſtimony of a perſon who came to ſwear he had forſworn himſelf at a former trial iv. 47
* The king's counſel inſiſt, that this evidence was always admitted to prove a ſubornation iv. 47
* Evidence of Oates's ſuborning and tampering with the witneſſes at the trial of the five Jeſuits iv. 48
* Hearſay evidence admitted to confirm another's teſtimony iv. 48
* Oates objects to the teſtimony of papiſts, as being parties in this cauſe iv. 50
* He appeals to the audience, that the court did not do him juſtice; for which he is reprimanded iv. 51
* Inſiſts that a witneſs for the king cannot be indicted for perjury iv. 52
* Says, it is the Proteſtant cauſe, and not him, they ſtrike at iv. 53
* He appeals to God, as to the truth of his evidence of the plot iv. 53
* Moves he might not be kept in irons iv. 53
* He has leave to withdraw before the evidence ſummed up iv. 54
* Mr. Finch, ſolicitor-general, ſums up the evidence iv. 54
* He ſhews how mr. Oates's witneſſes contradict himſelf and one another iv. 56
* And how it came about, that Oates had once ſuch credit with the parliament and the nation iv. 58
* The chief-juſtice's directions to the jury iv. 58
* Takes notice that Oates was ſtyled the Saviour of the nation iv. 60
* Shews the improbability of Oates's teſtimony iv. 63
* The court offer the jury ſome refreſhment before they go from the bar iv. 65
* Oates is convicted iv. 65
* His trial at the King's-Bench bar, Eaſter term, the 9th of May, 1685 1 Jac. II. upon another indictment for perjury iv. 66
* The indictment iv. 66
* Mr. attorney-general (ſir Robert Sawyer) opens the evidence iv. 71
* Evidence, that the defendant ſwore mr. Ireland was in London between the 8th and 12th of Auguſt, and on the 1ſt or 2d of September, 1678. iv. 71
* Many witneſſes called to prove that mr. Ireland was out of London from the 3d of Auguſt to the 14th of September, 1678 iv. 72—89
* Oates's bold behaviour towards the court iv. 79
* Several of the king's witneſſes proteſtants iv. 80
* Ireland's execution reſpited iv. 82
* Evidence of Ireland's witneſſes being inſulted and threatened iv. 87
* Oates's defence iv. 89
* He urges that witneſſes ought to be allowed a latitude in ſwearing, and not be tied up to a point of time iv. 89
* Oates's witneſſes do not appear iv. 92
* He inſiſts the king's witneſſes ought not to be indicted for perjury iv. 92
* Says, if he had been a witneſs in any other cauſe than the diſcovery of the popiſh plot, he had met with better uſage iv. 93
* He is allowed a week's time to move in arreſt of judgment iv. 94
* Withdraws before the evidence is ſummed up iv. 94
* Mr. ſolicitor's reply to Oates's defence iv. 94
* He ſhews that Oates's evidence againſt Ireland could not be true, even allowing him the latitude he contends for in point of time iv. 94
* The reaſon why the proſecution was ſo long delayed iv. 96
* The factious diſpoſition of the city of London iv. 96
* The chief juſtice's directions to the jury iv. 96
* He intimates that the popiſh plot was a ſham, and the Rye-houſe and lord Ruſſel's plot the only true plot iv. 98
* The reaſons that prevailed upon king Charles II. to permit Ireland to be executed iv. 99
* Of which the king repented iv. 99
* Oates is convicted iv. 101
* Moves for longer time to move in arreſt of judgment iv. 102
* Delivers four exceptions to the indictment iv. 102
* An evidence for the king may be indicted at common law; but not upon the ſtatute of perjury iv. 102
* If any part of the defendant's oath appear to be falſe, it will maintain the indictment for perjury iv. 103
* Perjury anciently puniſhed with death iv. 103
* At this day, it is in the diſcretion of the court to inflict what puniſhment they ſee fit, ſaving life and member iv. 104
* Oates's ſevere and illegal ſentence iv. 104
Immediately after the Revolution, the houſe of commons reſolved, that the proſecution of Titus Oates, upon two indictments in the court of King's-Bench, was a deſign to ſtifle the popiſh plot, and that the verdicts given thereupon were corrupt, and the judgments cruel and illegal iv. 106
Houſe of peers affirms the judgment againſt him, and thirteen lords enter their proteſts viii. 474
The two chief juſtices Holt and Pollexfen, and the chief baron Atkyns, and ſix more judges, did ſolemnly deliver their opinion in the lords, and unanimouſly declare, that the judgments againſt him were barbarouſly inhuman and unchriſtian, and that there was no precedent to warrant the puniſhments of whipping and committing to priſon for life for the crime of perjury, which, however, was only one of his puniſhments; and that they were againſt law and ancient practice, and therefore erroneous and ought to be reverſed viii. 475. See iv. 166, 205. Em. Pref. xii.
There was an attempt to get the above judgments reverſed, but ſtill to continue Oates's diſability as a witneſs; but it did not ſucceed, only the houſe of lords addreſſed the king to grant Oates a pardon, which was accordingly done iv. 106. viii. 474, 475. See vii. 476. PETITIONS.

*OATH.

* Whether any other authority but the parliament can impoſe an oath i. 746
* Oaths enjoined by the canons, without authority of parliament i. 870
* The oath of allegiance permitted to be taken to king Charles I. till his death ii. 9
* A debate whether the privy counſellors, &c. take an oath at nomination of ſheriffs in the court of Exchequer vi. 502
* The oath of a baron of the Exchequer vi. 193
* The oath of a maſter in Chancery vi. 504
Oath of the judges and king's counſel obſerved upon iv. 176
Hardſhip of the old law, that witneſs could not be examined for priſoner on oath iv. 178, 181. See MORLEY THOMAS Lord vii. 424
The religion of an oath is not tied to place or form, but receives its obligation from the appeal therein to God iv. 194. vi. 738
Oath of lord chancellor vi. 484, 596, 736
The king may diſpenſe with the oaths of a privy councillor iv. 399
Of kiſſing the book vi. 920
Cuſtom-houſe oaths cenſured vi. 738
Indictment for not taking the oaths vi. 11. Ap.
Oath to be adminiſtered to a witneſs upon a voire dire ix. *639
Oath againſt oath determines nothing, unleſs of ſuperior weight and credit x. 407. n.
In France and other countries the very holding up the hand is an oath xi. 126. See BOLTON JOHN. CASTLEMAINE ROGER Earl of iv. 397. CROOK JOHN. GREY ISAAC. HALES Sir EDWARD.

OFFENCE.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for ſecond offence, indictment muſt recite record of firſt conviction, which muſt be proved, but matter thereof ſhall never be re-examined x. 433

OGILVIE, JOHN,

Proceedings againſt him for high-treaſon, at Glaſgow, 1615 vii. 95
Confeſſes himſelf a Jeſuit, and is examined concerning the power of the pope over his majeſty vii. 96
Arrraigned before commiſſioners for that purpoſe vii. 96
The indictment vii. 97
Proteſts againſt the commiſſioners vii. 98
Refuſes to anſwer their queſtions, or acknowledge them as judges vii. 100
The archbiſhop of Glaſgow's ſpeech to the jury vii. 100
Found guilty, and ſentenced to be hanged and quartered vii. 101
Account of his execution vii. 101

OGILVIE, PATRICK,

His trial for inceſt with his brother's wife, and aſſiſting in poiſoning him, Auguſt 1765, 15 Geo. III. before the High Court of Juſticiary in Scotland x. 479
Indictment againſt him x. 479
Liſt of aſſize or jury returned x. 481
Witneſſes for the proſecutor x. 481
Writings adduced in evidence for the proſecutor x. 482
Names of advocates for and againſt the pannel x. 482
Counſel for and againſt him x. 482, &c.
Several caſes cited x. 486
His petition for removing Anne Clark x. 487
Ordered to be removed x. 488
The jury or pannel's names x. 488
Several witneſſes examined againſt him x. 488, &c.
His firſt declaration before the ſheriff-ſubſtitute of Forfar x. 506
His ſecond declaration x. 506
His declaration before the ſheriff-ſubſtitute of Edinburgh x. 507
Liſt of witneſſes for the pannel x. 509

Exculpatory proof x. 510—512
Verdict of aſſize x. 513
Minutes of pleadings upon the verdict x. 513
Minutes of pleadings for both pannels x. 514—516
Minutes for the proſecutor x. 516
Interlocutor thereon x. 517
Sentence againſt him x. 518
Proceedings laid before his majeſty and the privy-council, with mr. M'Carty's opinion thereon x. 518
Is executed, with his ſpeech at the gallows denying the fact x. 519, 520

OKEY, Colonel,
One of the regicides, ſeized at Delft, and brought to England, his trial viii. 370
His behaviour after ſentence viii. 371
His ſpeech at his execution viii. 376

* OLDCASTLE, Sir JOHN, Lord COBHAM,
* Accuſed of hereſy, anno 1413, 1 Hen. V. i. 36
* Application made to the king for his concurrence, before proceſs was iſſued againſt him i. 37
* The king examines him himſelf, and then leaves him to be proceeded againſt by the archbiſhop i. 37
* Who cites him, and afterwards excommunicates him for contumacy i. 37
* His confeſſion of faith i. 38
* He challenges any man to fight with him in defence of his faith i. 39
* He is arreſted in the king's preſence i. 39
* His examination before the archbiſhop in the Chapter-Houſe of St. Paul's i. 39
* He is examined to four points: 1ſt, concerning tranſubſtantiation; 2d, penance; 3d, the authority of the church; 4th, pilgrimages i. 41
* His anſwers i. 44, &c.
* His ſentence, to be hanged and burnt i. 46
* His abjuration counterfeited i. 47
* By an act of parliament it is made capital to read the Bible in Engliſh; and the offenders to be condemned as hereticks and traitors, and ſuffer and forfeit accordingly i. 49
* Such hereticks excluded the benefit of ſanctuary, by another act i. 49
* Whereupon thoſe of ſir John Oldcaſtle's perſuaſion are rigorouſly proſecuted, and multitudes fled into foreign countries i. 49
* Sir John Oldcaſtle eſcapes out of the Tower, and flies into Wales i. 49
* Before he got there, narrowly eſcaped being taken at an huſbandman's near St. Albans i. 49
* Divers of his men taken; and ſome of his books, in which the images and paintings were disfigured i. 49
* Sir Roger Acton, maſter Browne, ſir John Beverly, and thirty-ſix more, condemned on the above-ſaid acts, and hanged as traitors, and afterwards burnt as hereticks i. 49
* Sir John Oldcaſtle delivered up by the lord Powis, and again impriſoned, condemned, and cruelly executed, 1418, 6 Hen. V. i. 49
* The proceedings againſt ſir John Oldcaſtle, taken from the records at Lambeth, in Latin and Engliſh i. 50
* His anſwer to the four articles exhibited againſt him i. 53
* The ſenſe of the church as to thoſe articles i. 55
The record of his outlawry for treaſon vi. 4. Ap.

OLDISH, Doctor. See GOLDING.

OLLIBEAR, Mr.
Of counſel for Harris on proſecution for a libel ii. 1038

ONEBY, Major JOHN,
His trial at the ſeſſions-houſe in the Old Bailey, March, 1725-6, for murder ix. 14
The indictment ix. 14
The evidence ix. 14
Jury find a ſpecial verdict ix. 16
Tenor of the ſpecial verdict ix. 17, 19
The ſpecial verdict argued at the inſtance of the priſoner ix. 17
Serjeant Darnall's argument for the king ix. 17
Serjeant Eyre's for defendant ix. 18
Serjeant Darnall's replication ix. 18
Argued before all the judges of England ix. 18
Lord chief juſtice Raymond's argument, on delivering the reſolution of the judges ix. 18
The priſoner found guilty of murder ix. 24
During the four day rule for judgment, demiſe of king Geo. I. happened; however, Geo. II. ordered the law to take its courſe ix. 25
Priſoner deſtroys himſelf with a penknife ix. 25
Some account of him ix. 25

ONSLOW, ARTHUR,
His caſe on an appeal brought againſt him by ſir Nicholas Stoughton, during the time of parliament See FAGG Sir JOHN.

ONSLOW, DENZIL,
His caſe on a falſe return viii. 94

ONSLOW, Lord. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

OPENING COUNSEL.
King's counſel opens the proceedings on the trials of peers, except upon impeachment from the commons. See COUNSEL. KING's COUNSEL.

ORDEAL.
A priſoner offers to put himſelf upon this trial ii. 862
The trial by ordeal was a much more advantageous trial for the ſuſpected, than what was practiſed in the latter part of Car. II.'s reign iv. 178

ORDERS OF COURT.
If it becomes neceſſary to enforce the order of a judge by attachment, there muſt be a motion to make it a rule of court xi. 333

* ORDERS, HOLY. See PLOT POPISH ii. 801, 993

* ORDINARY i. 849

* OVERBURY, Sir THOMAS. See the trials of ELWES Sir JERVIS, FRANKLIN, MONSON Sir THOMAS, SOMERSET Earl and Counteſs, TURNER, and WESTON, for poiſoning him.

* OVERT-ACT.
* Any words or actions which diſcover a deſign againſt the perſon of the prince are overt-acts of high treaſon i. 101. iii. 87, 208, 817, 1055. iv. 593, 658
* Levying war an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death ii. 163
* If any one overt-act laid in the indictment be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314. ii. 339
* One witneſs proving an overt-act in the county where the indictment is found, and another witneſs proving another overt-act in another county, are two witneſſes ſuch as the law requires in treaſon ii. 873. iii. 204, 366. iv. 640, 657
* A conſult with traitors, an overt-act of treaſon iv. 689
* A conſpiracy to levy war againſt the king directly, an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death iii. 722. iv. 625
* But a conſpiracy to levy war, which by conſtruction only is againſt the king, is not an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death iii. 713. iv. 625
* The ſame overt-act laid to prove the treaſon of adhering to the king's enemies, as to prove the compaſſing the king's death iv. 413
* Whatever manifeſts a treaſonable intention is an overt-act of treaſon iv. 593, 657
* Meeting and conſulting to levy war, or to procure the kingdom to be invaded, overt-acts of compaſſing the king's death iv. 772. v. 88
All meetings and agreements to riſe and ſeize the king's guard, are plain overt-acts of treaſon viii. 467
Overt-acts not laid, tending directly to the proof of overt-acts laid, may be given in evidence ix. 550, 551. n. x. 580. See TREASON.

OUTLAWRY.
Armſtrong's caſe on outlawry declared a precedent not fit to be followed iii. 983. n.
Priſoner allowed to be within the benefit of the proviſo in the ſtatute of outlawry, though eſcaped out of priſon and retaken in England, and admitted to prove himſelf beyond ſea at time of outlawry, which he did, and his outlawry was reverſed, he admitted to trial, and acquitted iii. 983. n.
Court put a ſtrained ſenſe on the ſtatute of outlawry in Armſtrong's caſe, in order to deprive Armſtrong of his trial iii. 985. n. See viii. 469, 470.
Outlawry to be reverſed if party beyond ſea when pronounced iv. 198
Reaſon of making ſtat. 6 Edw. VI. whereby it is no error that party was beyond ſea at time of pronouncing outlawry in treaſon iv. 198
A record of outlawry for treaſon vi. 4. Ap.
A general pardon good for outlawries againſt all perſons, but the party at whoſe ſuit vii. 69
Quære, whether the particular judgment of treaſon ſhould be given againſt an outlaw for treaſon, or only execution generally awarded x. 204. n.
Defendant in execution upon an outlawry, after conviction for a miſdemeanour, in crown proſecutions, cannot be admitted to bail, without the conſent of the attorney-general xi. 327
Outlawry, though a very important part of the law, is but little underſtood xi. 328. See * ARMSTRONG Sir THOMAS iii. 983. BERKSTEAD JOHN. * HOLLOWAY JAMES iii. 943. OKEY JOHN. * PARDON. WILKES JOHN.

OWEN, WILLIAM,
His trial for printing a libel called, "The Caſe of Alexander Murray, Eſq." at Guildhall, July 6, 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 196. Ap.
The reſolutions of the commons reſpecting the libel x. 196. Ap.
The information, wherein the whole caſe is ſet forth at large x. 197. Ap.
A miſnomer therein x. 197. n. Ap.
Names of the counſel for the proſecution x. 204. Ap.
Names of the defendant's counſel x. 204. Ap.
Names of the ſpecial jury x. 204. Ap.
Mr. Yorke (afterwards lord chancellor) opened x. 204. Ap.
Mr. attorney-general (afterwards lord chief juſtice Ryder) ſpoke next x. 204. Ap.
The evidence of the publication x. 205. Ap.
Mr. ſolicitor-general (now lord chief juſtice, earl Mansfield) his ſpeech x. 205. Ap.
Mr. Ford, his ſpeech, arguments, and defence of Owen x. 205. Ap.
Evidence for defendant x. 207. Ap.
Mr. Pratt (late lord chancellor, and preſent lord Camden), his ſpeech, arguments, and defence of Owen x. 207. Ap.
The attorney-general's reply x. 208. Ap.
Lee, chief juſtice B. R. ſummed up the evidence x. 208. Ap.
The jury find defendant not guilty; at which there was a prodigious ſhout x. 208. Ap.
The jury having miſtakingly ſaid 'guilty' at firſt, the attorney-general artfully aſked them a leading queſtion, which they refuſed to anſwer x. 208. Ap.
And was deſirous of aſking them more queſtions, but the judge would not permit it x. 208. Ap.

* OWENS, ABEL v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.

* OXFORD, Earl of v. 339. See PORTLAND Earl of, & al.

* OXFORD and MORTIMER, ROBERT Earl of,
* Proceedings againſt him, on an impeachment for high-treaſon, and other high crimes and miſdemeanours, June 24, 1717, 3 Geo. I. vi. 102
* Lord high ſteward's commiſſion vi. 102
* The articles againſt him read, being ſixteen in number vi. 103
* The articles of high-treaſon vi. 111, 112
* Six additional articles vi. 116
* The earl's anſwer vi. 123
* His anſwer to the articles of high-treaſon vi. 132, 133
* The cloſe of the earl's anſwer vi. 143
* The commons replication vi. 147
* Mr. Hampden opens the articles vi. 148

* The lords inſiſt that judgment be given on the articles of high-treaſon, before they proceed upon the articles of high crimes and miſdemeanours vi. 150

* The commons reaſons for proceeding in their own method vi. 151

* The lords reaſons for their reſolution vi. 152

* After ſome meſſages, the lords adhere to their reſolutions, and the commons to theirs vi. 154

* The commons not appearing, the lords diſmiſs the impeachment, and diſcharge the earl vi. 156

OXFORD UNIVERSITY. See MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

OYER and TERMINER.

The difference between this court and the High Court of Juſtice, in the time of the Uſurpation ii. 87

Sir John Hawles dared ſay, there had been more men deſtroyed by the irregular judgments of commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, than by all the acts of attainder, legal or illegal v. 97

P.

PAGE, FRANCIS,

Ordered into cuſtody for a breach of privilege, in the caſe of the Ayleſbury-men viii. 139

His argument on their praying a habeas corpus viii. 158

PAGE, Sir FRANCIS, Juſtice B. R.

Sums up the evidence to the jury on Huggins's trial, for murder ix. 133

And on Bambridge's trial for ſame offence ix. 150

Sums up the evidence againſt Hales for forgery x. 115

PAKINGTON, Sir JOHN,

His charge againſt the biſhop of Worceſter viii. 82

PALACE.

Ceremony of puniſhment for ſtriking in the king's palace xi. 16

PALMER, Sir JEFFERY, Attorney-General. See MORLEY THOMAS Lord vii. 424.

* PALMER, ROGER, Eſq. See CASTLEMAINE Earl of.

PALMER, Sir THOMAS. See GATES Sir JOHN.

*PANNEL

Called over, and defaulters marked, before the priſoner was put upon his challenges ix. 550. See COOK PETER iv. 728 to 733. *JURY.

PAPERS.

Remarks on paper ſaid to have been delivered by lord Ruſſel to ſheriffs at his execution viii. 464

Sir Bartholomew Shower was of opinion, it was no anſwer to the material part of the evidence on that nobleman's trial viii. 465

Copy of paper delivered by lady Armſtrong to lord keeper North, lord chief juſtice Jefferies, and the attorney-general, on behalf of her huſband, ſir Thomas Armſtrong viii. 470

Paper delivered by ſir Thomas to ſheriffs iii. 397, 398. viii. 471

Paper delivered by Anderton to ſheriffs viii. 72

Seizure of papers illegal iv. 174, 175

Papers found in accuſed party's cuſtody, read in evidence as overt-acts of the treaſons they were charged with x. 77. n.

Copy of part of a paper Aſhton left in a friend's hand viii. 482

Of all ſorts of evidence, the finding of papers in a perſon's poſſeſſion is the weakeſt iv. 182

There is no proceſs againſt papers in civil cauſes xi. 323. See ENTICK JOHN.

Copy of paper delivered to ſheriff by lord Lovat x. 196. Ap.

Account of paper found in the pocket of Lawrence Hill at his execution, relative to the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey viii. 441

Account of the papers delivered to the populace by Fletcher, one of the Scotch rebels, in 1746, at the place of execution ix. 555

* PAPILLON, THOMAS, Eſq. iii. 1072. See PRITCHARD Sir WILLIAM.

PAPISTS.

Said not to be credited even on oath ii. 8[illegible]6

Sufficient to ſhew that party exerciſed office of prieſt, and not neceſſary to ſhew how he was ordained ii. 804. iii. 339

The five popiſh lords were, William earl Powis, William viſcount Stafford, Henry earl Arundel of Wardour, William lord Petre, and John lord Belaſis iii. 102

Papiſt bookſeller convicted of publiſhing a libel, ſhewn compaſſion and mercy iii. 420. vii. 483

The evil conſequences ariſing from the judges being papiſts in the reign of James II. v. 748, 749. See PLOT POPISH ii. 801.

*PARDON.

* A pardon muſt have expreſs words, and cannot be by implication or inference i. 227. ii. 350

* A pardon of life only i. 367

* Articles entered into by military officers cannot amount to a pardon, or bind the civil power otherwiſe than in honour ii. 14. See CAPITULATION.

* Where one pleads a pardon that has exceptions in it, he muſt ſhew that he is not excepted ii. 562

* Where one ought in honour to have his pardon, though the officer or magiſtrate engaging for it, had not the power of pardoning ii. 630, 636

* The commons held, that a pardon could not be pleaded in bar to an impeachment ii. 739. iii. 245

* Perſons accuſed diſcharged on the king's writ declaring their innocence ii. 750

* A pardon will not reſtore one convicted of perjury to his credit; but he ſhall have an action againſt any one who upbraids him with his crime afterwards ii. 44, 47

* A general pardon does not reſtore one outlawed for felony to blood or credit; but a felon admitted to his clergy is purged, and reſtored to his credit iii. 36, 46. iv. 139, 149

* One convicted of felony is, by the king's pardon, or a ſtatute pardon, reſtored to his credit; but one who is attainted of felony, &c. neither the king's pardon nor a ſtatute-pardon will reſtore either to blood or credit, without ſpecial words iv. 682

* The king might pardon the burning in the hand in an appeal v. 168

* What a convict is reſtored to, on his purgation or pardon v. 171

* One pardoned in Scotland has no benefit of it in England v. 510, &c.

* Whether, if a man pleads a defective pardon, he may plead over; or whether ſuch a plea is fatal? ii. 754

Whether an admiral's commiſſion does not amount to a pardon in honour, if not in law i. 227

Bacon told ſir Walter Raleigh he had a ſufficient pardon i. 227, 228

Motives that induced king James I. to grant earl and counteſs of Somerſet their pardon, for being acceſſaries to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, by poiſon i. 367, 369

The counteſs of Somerſet's pardon i. 367

The earl of Somerſet's pardon i. 369

A pardon cannot be without the broad ſeal ii. 350

Copy of a pardon ii. 738. vi. 49. Ap.

No pardon under the great ſeal can diſcharge a judgment obtained upon the impeachment of the commons iv. 167. vi. 4

Pardon takes away the guilt as well as the puniſhment iv. 681. vi. 703. ix. 653*

Pardon under great ſeal equal to pardon by act of parliament iv. 682

Pardon for a miſdemeanour only, may be pleaded without either going to the bar, or kneeling ix. 68. n.

Of pardon for murder ix. 62.

Petition to the lords juſtices in his majeſty's abſence, by an infant, for pardon of murder ix. 539

The firſt act of parliament for a general pardon, which had a clauſe to enable the party to avail himſelf of the pardon on the general iſſue, without ſpecially pleading the ſame, that mr. juſtice Foſter had ever met with, was the act of oblivion, 12 Car. II. chap. 11, and all ſuch acts ſince that time have had clauſes to the ſame purport ix. 584. n.

Convict of murder having the king's pardon, allowed a legal witneſs, tho' not burnt in the hand x. 76. Ap. n.

Pardons by ſtatute, how to be taken advantage of ix. 583, 584. See KNEVET Sir EDMUND.

PARENT AND CHILD.

Child's curſing his father a capital offence in Scotland iv. 293

Lucius Junius Brutus ſat as judge, and condemned his own ſons as traitors to their country, and cauſed their heads to be ſtruck off in his preſence ix. 296

His memorable ſaying upon that great occaſion ix. 296

Extraordinary affliction of a parent for the loſs of a child who came to an untimely end ix. 66

If a parent be provoked to a degree of paſſion, by ſome miſcarriage of the child, and ſhall correct with a moderate weapon, and by chance give an unlucky blow, ſo as to kill him, it is but miſadventure; but if the parent uſes an improper inſtrument in the correction, then if he kills the child, it is murder ix. 64

A parent hoped, by ſending his ſon into the rebellion to join the Pretender, and remaining at home himſelf, he might be rewarded by his ſon's ſervices, if ſucceſsful, or his ſon alone be the ſufferer, if the undertaking failed ix. 627*

Inſtance, from the Roman hiſtory, of a father being conſidered as acceſſary to murders committed by his ſon, though he never ſpoke to or ſaw him x. 435. See PARRICIDE. PETIT TREASON.

PARHAM, Sir EDWARD. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

PARKER, Sir THOMAS, Queen's Serjeant at Law,

His argument, on motion in arreſt of judgment againſt Tutchin, for publiſhing "The Obſervators" v. 562

His argument in maintenance of the fourth article, in the impeachment exhibited by the commons to the lords againſt doctor Sacheverel for ſedition v. 690

His reply to defence of fourth article v. 819

PARKER, THOMAS Lord, Chief-Juſtice Q. B.

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Dammaree viii. 243

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Purchaſe, 1710 viii. 282

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Willis viii. 265

His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 295, 296, 300

His opinion xi. 300, 302. See x. 70. Ap. NOBLE RICHARD.

PARKER, THOMAS, Earl MACCLESFIELD, Lord Chancellor,

His ſpeech of thanks of the houſe to the lords of the committee, on the proceedings in parliament againſt the biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 390

He did not approve of ſetting ſtate priſoners in the pillory x. 92. Ap.

PARKER, THOMAS,

Opens the information againſt Francklin ix. 255. See x. 165. Ap.

* PARKYNS, Sir WILLIAM,

* His trial for high-treaſon, in promoting an invaſion and rebellion, and endeavouring the aſſaſſination of the king's perſon, 24 March, 1695, 8 W. III. iv. 627

* The court of opinion the priſoner ought to have his plate and effects to ſubſiſt him iv. 627

* The court deny to put off the trial on allegations of the abſence of a material witneſs, without an oath made of it iv. 631

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 633

* Porter's evidence, that he agreed to invite king James over iv. 636

* And engaged in the aſſaſſination iv. 637

* Sir George Barclay concerned in the aſſaſſination iv. 637

* Evidence of a quantity of arms found in ſir William's houſe in the country iv. 642

* Sir John Hawles, ſolicitor-general, his reply iv. 652

* Mr. Cowper's ſpeech iv. 653

* Lord chief juſtice's directions iv. 655

* The priſoner is convicted iv. 658

* Sentence paſſed on ſir John Freind and ſir William Parkyns iv. 659

* Their dying ſpeeches iv. 660. See x. 43. Ap. PORTER Captain GEORGE.

* PARLIAMENT

* Grant a commiſſion for ordering and diſpoſing publick affairs, to certain great men, with extraordinary powers i. 3

* Some of the king's miniſters adviſe him againſt it; which is made an article of treaſon againſt them i. 7

* The lords adjudge an accuſation to be good, after it had been declared by the judges not to be according to civil and common law i. 11

* Orders of parliament determine with the ſeſſions ii. 210, 749

* For treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace, there is no privilege of parliament ii. 336

* The long parliament held to be diſſolved by the death of king Charles the firſt, notwithſtanding the act that it ſhould not be diſſolved but by their own conſent ii. 444

* Whether the power of the parliament, as to declaratory treaſons, be not taken away by 1 Mar. &c. i. 760. ii. 565

* Inferior courts may judge of privilege of parliament, where it is incident to a ſuit the court is poſſeſſed of; but not of matters ariſing originally in parliament ii. 620

* Appeals, writs of error, and impeachments, are not to be begun de novo on calling a new parliament; but they remain in the ſame ſtate they were at the diſſolution of the old ii. 747

* But inferior courts may grant execution in the vacancy of parliaments, notwithſtanding appeals or writs of error lodged in the houſe of peers ii. 748

* Counſel may not argue concerning the law and courſe of parliaments iii. 208

* The courts of Weſtminſter are to take notice of the adjournment, prorogation, and diſſolution of parliaments iii. 254

* The parliament in their judicial capacity to be governed by the ſtatute and common laws, as well as the courts at Weſtminſter iii. 255. vi. 426, 632

* The power of declaring new treaſons was lodged in the houſe of lords by 25 Edw. III. and could only be uſed when matters of difficulty were brought before them from inferior courts v. 110

* Whether it be juſt in the parliament to take away a man's life by bill of attainder, on leſs evidence than the law of the land requires in inferior courts? v. 114

* Whether the convention acted conſonant to the laws of this kingdom, when they declared the throne vacant on king James's abdication? Or whether they went upon that principle, that the people, on any great emergency, might conſtitute a new government for their preſervation? v. 116

* That may be legal evidence in parliament which is not ſo in the courts of Weſtminſter v. 132

The judgment againſt lord chancellor Pole, earl of Suffolk, and lord chief juſtice Treſilian reverſed in the parliament of 21 Rich. II. but this parliament declared to be held by force in parliament rolls of 1 Hen. IV. and is therefore entirely repealed by ſtat. 1 Hen. IV. chap. 3, and the parliament of 21 Rich. II. confirmed and approved of, for the honour and profit of the realm, by ſtat. 1 Hen. IV. chap. 4. i. 15. n.

Peer may be tried by commiſſion, during prorogation of parliament i. 164. ii. 725. iv. 212

The petition of both houſes of parliament on behalf of ſir Henry Vane ii. 459

Court of K. B. may examine parliamentary matters ii. 617

Of the trial of a peer in full parliament ii. 641. iii. 101. iv. 233. vii. 422

Whether order of parliament of any force after prorogation or diſſolution ii. 749

Parliament cannot declare any thing treaſon which is not ſo already by ſome ſtatute in being i. 760

In all times the parliaments have practiſed, and it is neceſſarily incident to all ſupreme powers in all governments, to enact extravagant crimes to be greater than by the eſtabliſhed law they are declared to be, but not by virtue of the clauſe in ſtat. Edw. III. iv. 172, 173

It was not injuſtice in the parliament of 2 and 3 P. and M. to enact, that Smith and others, who were ſuppoſed to be guilty, as acceſſaries to a barbarous murder, and were equally, if not more guilty than the principal; that if they ſhould be found guilty as acceſſaries, they ſhould not have their clergy iv. 174

To enact a fact after committed, to be a crime, which when done was not, is high injuſtice iv. 174

The diſtinction between the proceedings in the court of the high ſteward, and that before the king in parliament iv. 214. x. 209. Ap.

The judges declare, that at the trial of a peer in parliament the houſe may, and often has adjourned, becauſe there the lords are judges iv. 232

At a trial in full parliament, the lords cannot conſult the judges in the priſoner's abſence; but they may aſk queſtions of the lord ſteward in his abſence, and he may withdraw with them iv. 233

In full parliament the lord ſteward has a vote iv. 233

The parliament that paſſed the ſtatute of treaſons 25 Edw. III. was called The bleſſed Parliament v. 433. vi. 74

Whether it be an high crime and miſdemeanour to diſſent in opinion from the reſolution of both houſes of parliament v. 768

The parliament is a ſupreme court of Oyer, and the proper ſubject of their Oyer is ſuch offences for which right cannot otherwiſe be had, and to deal with delinquents too high for ordinary courts vi. 408

The proceedings of the houſe of lords concerning captain Porteous vi. 763

Debates in parliament concerning the election for Bucks, 1603, between ſir Francis Goodwin and ſir John Forteſcue, ordered to be printed by the houſe vii. 67

Concerning the grievances of the ſubject, in billeting ſoldiers, and impriſonment for not ſubſcribing to the loan, 3 Car. I. vii. 140

Members of parliament ſummoned before the council vii. 217

Members of parliament refuſing to anſwer act of parliament committed to the Tower, and their ſtudies ſealed up vii. 217

Speaker of the houſe of commons held in his chair till ſome proteſtations made vii. 217

Anſwers of the judges to ſome queſtions put to them concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament vii. 218

The judges agree they have juriſdiction to puniſh offences committed in parliament vii. 247

What things concerning parliament court of King's-Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437

The parliament never give damages viii. 98

Member of parliament may be committed by a common juſtice for a breach of the peace viii. 162

No lord of parliament impeached ſhall be precluded from voting, except on his own trial, and at that he ſhall not ſtand without the bar viii. 528

" Parliamentary Hiſtory" commended, and an error therein pointed out xi. 3

The earl of Surrey, heir of the duke of Norfolk, was tried for treaſon by a common inqueſt, not of the peers, becauſe the earl was not a parliament lord xi. 19, 20

Lawyers gave their aid to attempts made by the crown againſt the rights of parliament xi. 29

The antiquity of parliaments xi. 50

Over-ruling peer's privilege of parliament, fining him, and committing him in execution, great violations of privilege of parliament. So reſolved by the lords xi. 136

Caſe of the Bankers in parliament xi. 160

If even the ſaving of lives be contrary to law, nothing leſs than an act of parliament can indemnify the party xi. 282, 283

Sir F. Bacon the firſt attorney-general permitted to ſit in parliament xi. 273

Member of parliament diſcharged without bail, being committed for writing a ſeditious libel xi. 302, 305

Peers who have been tried before the king, in parliament:

Balmerino, Arthur lord	ix. *596	Lovat, Simon lord	ix. *621
Byron, William lord	x. *517	Mohun, Charles lord	iv. 512. v. 137
Carnwarth, Robert earl of	vi. 5	Nairn, William lord	vi. 5
Cromartie, George earl of	ix. *590	Nithiſdale, William earl of	vi. 5
Derwentwater, James earl of	vi. 5	Oxford, Robert earl of	vi. 102
Ferrers, Lawrence earl of	x. 478	Pembroke, Philip earl of	ii. 641
Kenmure, William viſcount	vi. 5	Stafford, William viſcount	iii. 101
Kilmarnock, William earl of	ix. *590	Strafford, Thomas earl of	i. 736
Kingſton, Elizabeth ducheſs dowager of	xi. 198	Widdrington, William lord	vi. 5
		Wintoun, George earl of	vi. 18. See

ACTS of PARLIAMENT.
ASHBY and WHITE.
ELLIOT Sir JOHN.
HOLLIS ARTHUR.
HOLLIS DENZIL.
IMPEACHMENTS.
PARLIAMENTARY CORRUPTION.
PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.
PEERAGE and PEERS.
STATUTES.
VALENTINE BENJAMIN.

PARLIAMENTARY CORRUPTION.

The politics of thoſe times wherein the judges, who were the tools of the miniſters, were corrupt, were not arrived at the height, to know how to influence the repreſentative body of the nation; for what need could miniſters have to corrupt the INTERPRETERS of the laws, if the MAKERS of them were entirely at their devotion? Bn. Pref. i.

The price of an houſe of commons, and of an Engliſh parliament, was known, and eſteemed a moſt valuable knowledge, 26 Car. II. viii. 109

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

Qualification of elector and right of elected ſolely cognizable in parliament viii. 123

No action lay for a double return till ſtat. 7 and 8 Will. III. chap. 25. viii. 151

Whether an outlaw eligible vii. 68, 69

Writs for electing members iſſued by lord chancellor during a prorogation, declared void at next meeting of the parliament viii. 146

The election of burgeſſes, the freeneſs of which is the greateſt fundamental of government, monopolized and put into few hands iv. 172. See vii. 428.

Mortgagor in poſſeſſion, with benefit of redemption, qualified to vote viii. 94. n.

Declaration between Paty and White reſpecting members of parliament viii. 135. See
ASHBY and WHITE.
BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL, and SOAME.
FALSE RETURN.
GOODWIN Sir FRANCIS.
RAPLEY WILLIAM.
WORCESTER Biſhop of vi. 712.

PARR, WILLIAM. See NORTHAMPTON Marquis of.

PARRICIDE.

Though a child attainted of felony cannot be heir to her parents, yet if ſhe kill either of them after attainder, it will be parricide and petit treaſon xi. 91. See BLANDY MARY. STANSFIELD WILLIAM.

* PARRIS, alias PARRY, CHARLES ii. 993. See ANDERSON, & al.

* PARROT, HUGH v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.
* PARRY, WILLIAM, Doctor of Laws,
* His trial for high-treaſon i. 121
* Names of the commiſſioners i. 121
* Indicted for conſpiring the death of the queen i. 121
* Pleads guilty i. 122
* His confeſſion afterwards read in court, wherein he owns that " he looked on it as meritorious to kill the queen" i. 122
* His letter to the queen i. 124
* A letter to him from cardinal De Como i. 125
* His letter to the lord treaſurer, and the earl of Leiceſter i. 125
* He talks diſtractedly i. 127
* Lord chief juſtice Wray's ſpeech before judgment i. 127
* His execution i. 128
PARSONS, FATHER. See COKE Sir EDWARD.
* PARTICEPS CRIMINIS See ACCOMPLICE.
PARTITION TREATY. See PORTLAND Earl of.
* PAYNE, WILLIAM iii. 505. See THOMPSON, & al.
* PEACHEL, JOHN, D. D. Vice-Chancellor. See CAMBRIDGE.
PATENTS.
Patent of the clerk of the cuſtodies vi. 510, 511
Letters patents being once under the great ſeal, the king cannot countermand them viii. 60
Are a conveyance at common law viii. 60
Extend not to Ireland, unleſs it be ſpecially named viii. 62. See PEERAGE and PEERS.
PEACE-OFFICERS
Having a legal warrant to arreſt for a breach of the peace, may break open doors, after having demanded admittance and given due notice of their warrant ix. 6
PECK, EDWARD, Serjeant at Law,
Taken into cuſtody for a breach of privilege in the caſe of a parliamentary appeal brought by doctor Shirley againſt ſir John Fagg vii. 459
PECKHAM, Mr.
Opens declaration for Fabrigas againſt Moſtyn xi. 162
Argues for him on error in ſame cauſe xi. 186
PEERAGE and * PEERS.
Peer not to be tried by jury of commoners in capital caſes, though deſired i. 388
All the peers muſt be ſummoned to the trial of a peer Em. Pref. vi.
Peer cannot waive his trial by peers. So reſolved by all the judges i. 388. vii. 350.
Peer cannot challenge his peers. So reſolved i. 198, 388, 390. vii. 18, 422, n.
Peer cannot have counſel but upon points of law. So reſolved i. 388
Lords may eat and drink before they are agreed, but cannot ſeparate or adjourn till after verdict. So reſolved i. 388
Verdict cannot be given by leſs number of lords than twelve Em. Pref. iii.
And if twelve are for the king, and thirteen for the priſoner, he ſhall be acquitted. So reſolved i. 388
* Several queſtions concerning the privilege of the peers reſolved i. 388
Caſe of peer as to benefit of clergy, in ſodomy and rape i. 388
Indictment againſt an Iriſh peer for treaſon i. 949. viii. 341
Peer cannot be brought to trial on charge exhibited againſt him by another peer in houſe of lords ii. 558
The lords are the peers of a nobleman only in capital caſes ii. 560
The trial of a peer for miſdemeanours is not to be by the lords, but by the commons ii. 560
Peer who has his clergy not to be burnt in the hand ii. 655. See xi. 263
A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cauſe iii. 141
Peereſs deſired to ſtand up while ſhe gives her evidence iii. 283
Mr. J. Dolben doubted, whether court could commit a peer on an homine replegiando iii. 544
Peer need not hold up his hand on arraignment iv. 211, 512
Peer may be tried by commiſſion on prorogation of parliament iv. 212
May be committed for treaſon, felony, or breach of the peace iv. 315
Peer who inſiſts on his peerage muſt produce his patent iv. 413, 414. viii. 51.
Records againſt Engliſh peers for murder iv. 511, 513. v. 137. x. *480, *519
They ſhall not be burnt in the hand v. 167
Peer on trial before the lords for miſdemeanour, ſhall not ſtand without the bar v. 364
Record againſt a peer for debauching a young lady of quality vi. 16. Ap.
The marquis of Hertford reſtored to the title of duke of Somerſet vii. 18
Debates in the houſe of peers concerning the liberty of the ſubject vii. 150
Upon an appeal of murder, which is a ſuit of a ſubject, peers ſhall be tried by an ordinary jury of freeholders vii. 152. See APPEAL.
The reſolutions of the judges in ſeveral points relating to the trials of peers vii. 421
If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward, they ſhall be reverſed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248
Debates in the houſe of peers in the caſe of Charles Knowles, eſq. commonly called earl of Banbury viii. 55
Peerage by creation triable by record only viii. 59
A perſon a complete nobleman by his letters patents, without any other ceremonies viii. 59
Name of a place in a nobleman's ſtile no farther neceſſary than to give the patentee an eſtate in his honour, within the ſtatute de donis viii. 59
A perſon nobilitated under the great ſeal of England, is a peer of England, though the place from whence he takes his name of honour be in a foreign country, unleſs diſtinguiſhed, as Iriſh peers are, in their patents viii. 59
A biſhop who is a peer jure eccleſiæ, muſt plead his peerage, that he is unus de paribus regni, for he hath no letters patents to plead viii. 59
How peerage is to be pleaded viii. 59
Nobility not to be granted over, or barred by him that hath it viii. 60
Nor can the heir on whom it deſcends waive it, or the privilege of it, as to being tried by his peers viii. 60
By what means peerage may be taken away viii. 60
Though the houſe of peers be a ſupreme court of record, yet every vote paſſed there is not an act of judicature, unleſs the proceedings in order to it be judicial viii. 60
Houſe of peers have no power over any one's peerage, unleſs the king on a petition refers the matter to them viii. 60
Their juriſdiction aſcertained by the common law viii. 61
The journals of the houſe of lords not the records of parliament; and when they act as judges, the ſtyle is, Per cur. parliamenti viii. 61
Original cauſes not within the cognizance of the houſe of peers, who are the dernier reſſort viii. 62
No writ of error lies in parliament out of the King's-Bench for any error in fact, though it doth for any error in law viii. 62
Debates in the houſe of peers in the caſe of the Ayleſbury-men viii. 125
Iriſh peers mere eſquires in England viii. 348
Peers of parliament not by inherent nobility, but in right of their baronies, which they hold in auter droit, ſhall be tried for treaſons or felonies at the king's ſuit by an ordinary jury viii. 360
Peer convicted of murder is within ſtat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37, to all intents as a commoner x. 208, 209. Ap.
The office and duty of the high ſteward on the trial of a peer in the court of the high ſteward x. 209. Ap.
And in the court of the peers in full parliament x. 209, 213 Ap.
Multiplying the number of peers, and raiſing perſons of mean extraction to that dignity, tend to render the peerage contemptible xi. 133
Over-ruling a peer's plea of privilege of parliament, and fining him 30,000l. for an aſſault, and committing him to the King's-Bench in execution, are great violations of the privileges of the peers of this realm. So reſolved by the lords xi. 136
Peers, and the widows and dowagers of temporal peers, to anſwer in all courts as defendants, and on examinations by interrogatories in all cauſes, as well criminal as civil, upon proteſtation of honour only xi. 108. n.
Peereſs entitled to benefit of clergy on conviction for bigamy xi. 264
King's counſel opens the proceedings upon the trials of peers, except upon impeachment from the commons. See KING's COUNSEL.
Peers indicted. See INDICTMENT.
Peers impeached. See IMPEACHMENT.
Peers tried before the lord high ſteward of England. See COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARD. BANBURY Earl of. CLERGY. HIGH STEWARD. KNOWLES CHARLES. TRIAL.
PEINE FORTE & DURE.
That puniſhment deſcribed i. 325, 326
PEMBERTON, FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,
Ordered into cuſtody for appearing as counſel at the bar of the houſe of lords, in the proſecution of a parliamentary appeal, wherein a member of the houſe of commons was concerned vii. 459
PEMBERTON, Sir FRANCIS, Judge B. R.
Prevents Harris being adjudged to be whipped for a libel ii. 1040. vii. 483
Juſtifies himſelf, upon being called to the bar of the houſe of commons, for his judgment in the cauſe of Jay and Topham viii. 3
Gives his reaſons for the judgment viii. 4
Voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into cuſtody viii. 6.
Succeeded ſir William Scroggs iv. 166, 167
See the reaſon of this preferment iv. 166, 167
Reprimands Edmund Saunders for moving the court to bail the earl of Danby ii. 743
His opinion, that tho' his court could bail for treaſon, yet, as the earl of Danby was impriſoned by an higher authority, court could not interfere ii. 752
Refuſed, on ſame motion being made again ii. 760
Opinion that the plea of Fitzharris, in order to ouſt the court of juriſdiction, was inſufficient iii. 261
His directions to the jury on his trial iii. 287
This chief juſtice did not ſhew the ſame favour to Fitzharris which he ſhewed to count Coningſmark iii. 265. n. 465. iv. 169
His conduct on Fitzharris's trial condemned iv. 168
Fitzharris's trial was publiſhed by his authority iv. 189
He directs the jury on the trial of Plunket, on indictment for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, and ſubverſion of eſtabliſhed religion and government in Ireland iii. 294
Pronounces ſentence on Plunket as a traitor iii. 314
Charge to the grand jury on an indictment preferred to them againſt the earl of Shafteſbury, for treaſon iii. 418
PEMBERTON, Sir FRANCIS, Lord Chief Juſtice C. B.
Lord chief juſtice Pemberton was removed between Mich. and Hil. Terms, 34 Car. II. and made chief juſtice C. B. iii. 547. n.
The chief juſtice, out of favour to count Coningſmark, would not permit examinations to be read in court, as he ought to have done on that trial iii. 474. n.
He did not aſk Boroſky or Sterne what they had to ſay for themſelves iii. 501. n. iv. 199
Sums up the evidence on the trial of Ford lord Grey and others, for ſeducing, carrying away, and adulterouſly ſoliciting lady Henrietta Berkley ii. 541
He preſided at the trial of lord Ruſſel, indicted for conſpiring the king's death iii. 730
His conduct on this trial cenſured iv. 176, 187
This trial condemned by the legiſlature viii. 471
Sir Francis Pemberton was ſubpœnaed, but did not appear, on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41. See ANDERSON. TASBOROUGH.
PEMBROKE, Earl of.
In the caſe of the earl of Pembroke, A. D. 1677, for blaſphemy and abuſe of the ſacrament, the lords declared, that the ſingle teſtimony of a commoner, though on oath, was no ſufficient evidence againſt a peer denying the fact upon his honour; and upon that they addreſſed his majeſty that he might be releaſed from his impriſonment vi. 427

* PEMBROKE and MONTGOMERY, PHILIP Earl of,
* His trial for murder, April 4, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 641
* The earl brought to the bar ii. 641
* The lord high ſteward makes a ſpeech to him ii. 641
* The indictment ii. 642
* Sir William Jones the attorney-general's ſpeech ii. 643
* Malice expreſs, and malice implied, defined ii. 643
* Evidence of the earl of Pembroke's being in the company of the deceaſed, at a tavern in the Hay-market ii. 644
* That my lord threw the deceaſed down ii. 644
* That my lord kicked the deceaſed when he was down ii. 645
* The deceaſed troubled with fits ii. 647
* The phyſician's evidence of the pain the deceaſed was in, after theſe blows ii. 647
* The deceaſed imputed his illneſs to the uſage he received in my lord Pembroke's company ii. 649
* The evidence of ſome of the coroner's inqueſt, who depoſed that they obſerved ſeveral bruiſes, and a great deal of clodded blood in the bottom of his belly ii. 649
* The earl of Pembroke's witneſſes examined ii. 651
* The doctors of opinion, that hard drinking occaſioned his death, and not any ill uſage ii. 651
* A ſurgeon depoſes, that the body had no bruiſes to be ſeen upon it ii. 651
* Sir Francis Winnington, ſolicitor-general, ſums up the evidence ii. 653
* My lord Pembroke is found guilty of manſlaughter ii. 655
* Where a commoner ſhould have read, and been burnt in the hand, a peer was to be diſcharged without either ii. 655

PENALTY.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for ſecond offence, indictment muſt recite record of firſt conviction, which muſt be proved; but the matter thereof ſhall never be re-examined x. 433

PENGELLY, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law,
Opens the evidence on Layer's trial, for treaſon vi. 249
His reply on earl Macclesfield's trial, on his impeachment in the lords, for ſelling the places of maſters in chancery vi. 742, 744, 753

PENGELLY, Lord Chief Baron,
Sums up evidence on Hales's trial for forgery ix. 73
His opinion reſpecting caſes of forgery, put by counſel ix. 83
Sums up on Kinnerſley's trial for forgery ix. 87, 94

* PENN, WILLIAM,
* And William Mead, their trial for a riot and conſpiracy, 22 Car. II. 1670 ii. 610
* The indictment ii. 610
* The priſoners fined forty marks each, for ſtanding before the court with their hats on ii. 611
* Cook's evidence of Penn's preaching to the mob in Grace-church-ſtreet, and Mead's abetting him ii. 611
* Penn juſtifies their meeting ii. 612
* Demands upon what law the indictment is grounded ii. 612
* Penn is violent in his defence, and is ordered to be carried away ii. 613
* Mead's defence ii. 613
* Mead is carried into the Bail-Dock ii. 613
* The recorder directs the jury in the abſence of the priſoners; which they object to as unlawful ii. 613
* The jury give a ſpecial verdict ii. 614
* And are ſent out again ii. 614
* They put their verdict into writing ii. 614
* The court refuſe it again, and adjourn till next morning, when they give the ſame verdict again ii. 615
* They are threatened by the court, and locked up till the next morning; and then they acquit both the priſoners ii. 616
* The jurors are fined for going contrary to evidence, and ſent to Newgate with the priſoners ii. 616
* Their commitment afterwards adjudged illegal ii. 616

* PENNINGTON, ISAAC ii. 391. See REGICIDES.

* PENRUDDOCK, Colonel JOHN,
* His trial for high-treaſon, before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, at Exon, 19 April, 1655 ii. 259
* Several other cavaliers arraigned with him ii. 259
* He inſiſts that there could be no treaſon but againſt the king ii. 260
* Says he ſurrendered to capt. Crook on articles ii. 261
* That the law knows no ſuch perſon as Protector ii. 260, 262
* He is found guilty ii. 262
* Sentence paſſed on him and twenty-ſix more ii. 262
* Declares in his dying ſpeech, that, by his articles, his life, liberty, and eſtate were ſtipulated for ii. 263
* His behaviour at execution; and letters from and to his lady ii. 264

* PERJURY.

* One convicted of perjury a witneſs in law, till the record of his conviction be produced ii. 1006
* One convicted of perjury, a pardon will not reſtore him to his credit iii. 47
* Whether a witneſs for the king may be indicted for perjury on the ſtatute iv. 52, 92, 102
* Perjury anciently puniſhed with death; but at this day the puniſhment is in the diſcretion of the court, ſaving life and member iv. 104
If any part of oath is falſe, it will maintain indictment for perjury iv. 103
Indictment and record for ſubornation of perjury vi. 12. Ap.
A miſtaken falſe oath, without wilful corrupt deſign, is not perjury x. 407. n. See vii. 352.
The eſſence of perjury is, that the party knew what he ſwore to be falſe x. 407. n.
Perjury puniſhed with death in foreign countries x. 408
Murder by means of perjury is not a capital offence by the Engliſh law x. 449
One may be guilty of perjury, though oath adminiſtered when court forbade it x. 137. Ap. See
CANNING ELIZABETH.
FAULCONER RICHARD.
HURLEY PATRICK.
INDICTMENTS.
MAITLAND CHARLES, Lord HALTON.
OATES TITUS.
PRANCE MILES.
TASBOROUGH JOHN.
WARD Sir PATIENCE.

* PERROT, Sir JOHN, Lord Deputy of Ireland,
* Tried at Weſtminſter, for high-treaſon, 1592 i. 188
* Commiſſioners names i. 188
* Indicted, 1. for treaſonable correſpondence, 2. for diſobedience to the queen's orders, 3. for harbouring traitors i. 189
* Twenty-four only returned on the pannel, and twelve ſworn i. 189
* Several indecent expreſſions ſpoken by him in Ireland of the queen, given in evidence; moſt of which he denies i. 190
* Seager ſwears he exhorted him to murder a man i. 191
* Archbiſhop of Caſſils, that he connived at the eſcape of a traitor i. 192
* Proved that he diſcharged ſeveral who had made ballads on the government i. 192
* A treaſonable correſpondence ſworn againſt him by ſir Dennis Oraughan i. 192
* Sir John objects againſt him, as a perſon of infamous character i. 193
* He is convicted; but his judgment reſpited i. 194
* Being called to judgment, he denies Seager's evidence; and affirms the other witneſſes to be perjured, and himſelf to be innocent i. 195
* Receives judgment of death i. 196
* He dies in the Tower i. 197

PERRY, JOHN,
And Richard Perry, their remarkable trial for robbery and murder iv. 204. x. 29. Ap. n.

PERRYN, RICHARD,
Of counſel for Stevenſon, charged with murder x. 472

* PETERS, HUGH ii. 357. See REGICIDES.

PETITIONS.

Earl Somerſet's to Charles I. for his eſtate, never granted i. 373
Prynne's petition to long parliament i. 500
Baſtwick's i. 502
Burton's i. 503
Of both houſes of parliament, on behalf of ſir Henry Vane ii. 459
Petition of earl of Clarendon to the lords and commons in parliament ii. 578
This petition was voted ſcandalous ii. 580
Petition of ſir Thomas Pilkington and others, on behalf of themſelves and the perſonal repreſentatives of ſir Thomas Player and others, to king William III. that the proſecutors and judges on their trials might be excepted in the act of grace, as to their reſpective judgments for a pretended riot in Charles II.'s reign iii. 661
Lord Nairn's to the houſe of peers, to intercede with the king for mercy vi. 11, 12
Captain Porteous's petition to queen Caroline, then regent of the kingdom, on his conviction of murder, for her royal interpoſition vi. 791
Petitions of John Lilburne to the parliament vii. 297, 298. See 280.
Petition of many well-affected people, in behalf of the juſt liberties of the free people of England, highly concerned in the ſentence againſt Lilburne vii. 355. See 357.
The marquis of Argyle's petition to the parliament of Scotland vii. 385
Petition to the king, for a writ of ſummons to parliament viii. 54
The like to the houſe of peers viii. 57
Petition of the city of London to the king, reſpecting the judgment in quo warranto viii. 462
Petition of Algernon Sidney, preſented to the king viii. 469
Petition of Titus Oates to parliament, with the proceedings thereon viii. 474
The petition of an infant convicted of murder, to the lords juſtices, in the abſence of the king, for a pardon ix. 539
Petition of lord Lovat, to have counſel and ſolicitors aſſigned, copy of articles of impeachment, and time to prepare and put in his anſwer; and that his property might be returned to him, to enable him to fee counſel, &c. ix. 616*, 617*
Another to put off trial, and to compel the appearance of witneſſes ix. 619*
Another to put off trial further ix. 620*
Petitions to the throne and the queen conſort, to be diſcharged under acts for ſuſpending habeas corpus acts, in ſeveral reigns x. 71. Ap.
Earl of Kilmarnock's petition to the king x. 181. Ap.
Petition of grievances from the commons xi. 62. * See LIBELS.
It is lawful for the ſubject to petition the king for redreſs iii. 567. iv. 367. vii. 481
In moſt courts of Europe, there is an office for receiving petitions, and days appointed to read them; the anſwers are inſerted in the margin; here the petitioners take them out, and ſo, ſoon know the ſucceſs of their reſpective applications x. 70. Ap.
Court of England ſaid to have the leaſt regard to petitions of any court in Europe, which neglect is chiefly imputed to the prime miniſter x. 70. Ap.
The king, having a petition put into his hand, generally gives it to one of the lords in waiting, whereby it is too often thrown aſide, and never heard of more x. 70. Ap.

Petition of Richard Chambers to the long parliament xi. 119

PETITION of RIGHT,

Preſented to the lords by the commons vii. 197

The lords propoſe an addition, and it is debated by the commons vii. 199

After ſeveral conferences, agreed to by the lords vii. 211

The petition, and his majeſty's anſwer vii. 212

Means taken to ſuppreſs the petition of right, by the ſame royal command that granted it vii. 216

Gifts, loans, and benevolences were declared to be contrary to law, by the petition of right xi. 29, 110

PETIT-TREASON.

Murdering miſtreſs petit-treaſon, though only maſter is mentioned in the act of parliament, for they are in effect ſame word, differing only in gender iii. 764, 770

Though a child attainted of felony cannot be heir to his parents, yet if he kills either of them after attainder, it will be parricide and petit-treaſon xi. 91

One charged with murder, appearing upon evidence to have been guilty of petit-treaſon, diſcharged, and indicted again for that crime vi. 224, 225, 226, 227

Peremptory challenge of thirty-five in petit-treaſon x. 38

Petit-treaſon is within ſtat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37. for preventing murder x. 40

Petit-treaſon is ouſted of clergy, by ſtat. 1 Edw. VI. chap. 12. under the denomination of murder x. 40

Mr. juſtice Foſter's obſervations on indictments for petit-treaſon x. 38, 39. See NOBLE RICHARD. SWAN JOHN.

PEYTE, WILLIAM. See POLE Cardinal.

PHILIP and MARY.

Their ſtyle was king and queen of England, France, Naples, Jeruſalem, and Ireland, defenders of the faith, princes of Spain and Sicily, arch-dukes of Auſtria, dukes of Milan, Burgundy, and Brabant, counts of Haſpurg, Flanders, and Tyroll vii. 598, 608, 610

Their title is recognized in the preamble to the ſeſſions of parliament of that reign; and Spain being inſerted next before France, and both the Sicilies inſtead of Naples, and princes of Spain and Sicily being inſerted next immediately after defenders of the faith in their title in a deed, led to a diſcovery of the forgery of it vii. 598, 601. See vii. 575, 584, 585

PHILIPS, Sir AMBROSE, Counſellor at Law,

Examined before committee of lords, touching the adviſers and proſecutors of the murders of lord Ruſſel, colonel Sidney, ſir Thomas Armſtrong, mr. Corniſh, and others viii. 476

* PHILIPS, GEORGE ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

PHILIPS, Sir ROBERT,

His ſpeech in parliament concerning the grievance of the ſubjects, in billeting ſoldiers, and impriſonment for not ſubſcribing to the loan vii. 142

PHILLIPS, Sir EDWARD, King's Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech on the proſecution of the conſpirators in the gun-powder plot i. 234

Craved judgment againſt them i. 248

PHIPPS, Sir CONSTANTINE,

Of counſel for Rookwood, tried for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king iv. 664

His defence of captain Vaughan, tried before the Admiralty, for aſſiſting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 26

His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Hathaway, for a cheat v. 485

His argument in doctor Henry Sacheverel's defence as to the firſt article in the impeachment before the lords for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 721

His argument on behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the ſecond article v. 753

His argument as to the third article v. 764

His argument as to the fourth article v. 776

His ſpeech in arreſt of judgment, on behalf of earl Wintoun, convicted before his peers, on an impeachment of treaſon, for being in rebellion vi. 49

His ſpeech for Francis Atterbury, biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 398

His recapitulation of the evidence vi. 429. See x. 68. Ap.

* PICKERING, THOMAS ii. 696. See IRELAND, & al.

PILKINGTON, Sir THOMAS. See PETITIONS.

* PILKINGTON, THOMAS, Eſq.

* Samuel Shute, eſq. ſheriffs; Henry Corniſh, alderman; Ford, lord Grey, of Werk; ſir Thomas Player, knight, chamberlain of London; Slingſby Bethel, eſq. Francis Jenks, John Deagle, Richard Freeman, Richard Goodenough, Robert Key, John Wickham, Samuel Swinock, John Jekyll, ſenior, their trial, May 8, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 630

* An information brought againſt them for a riot in continuing the poll for election of ſheriffs, after the common-hall was adjourned by the lord mayor, and for aſſaulting the lord mayor, &c. iii. 630

* The counſel for the defendants challenged the array, becauſe the pannel was returned by the ſheriffs, the legality of whoſe election they diſputed; and urged, that if their election was admitted to be valid, their client's cauſe was prejudged, for that was the point in diſpute iii. 631

* They are over-ruled by the court, and the jury ſworn iii. 634

* Sir Robert Sawyer and mr. Finch open the evidence iii. 635

* Sir George Jefferies gives a particular account of the manner of electing ſheriffs, and other officers, on midſummer-day iii. 635

* Evidence to this purpoſe for the king iii. 636

* Evidence againſt the ſeveral defendants iii. 645

* The rioters defence iii. 647

* Several witneſſes examined for the defendants, as to the power of adjournment iii. 650

* Whoever can call or diſſolve an aſſembly, may adjourn it iii. 658

* Whether a common-hall are bound to elect the perſon my lord mayor drinks to, for ſheriff iii. 651, 652

* Whether a number of perſons inſiſting upon, and aſſerting their right, where they have a probable cauſe, can be ſaid to be guilty of a riot in ſo doing iii. 659

* Ignorance of the law no excuſe iii. 659. See MAXIMS.

* The rioters convicted iii. 660

* And fined iii. 660

The record vi. 40. Ap.

* The judgment reverſed in parliament after the Revolution iii. 661

PILLORY.

The ears of a forger and impoſtor nailed to the pillory i. 202. n.

A counſellor at law pilloried for ſuborning and bribing the king's evidence ii. 829. See READING NATHANIEL.

A perſon gagged in the pillory vii. 270, 296. n.

Obſervations on the puniſhment of the pillory Em. Pref. xii. xiii. See vii. 302

A gentleman of the long robe held infamous, for having ſtood in the pillory ix. 309

Serjeant Whitaker compared the ſtanding in the pillory, to looking through a wooden caſement ix. 106

Inſtance of a man being killed in the pillory x. 446

Standing in the pillory does not affect the competency of witneſſes x. 42. Ap.

Lord chancellor Parker diſapproved of putting ſtate priſoners into the pillory. See PARKER THOMAS, Lord Chancellor.
BREWSTER THOMAS.
CELLIER ELIZABETH.
FULLER WILLIAM.
GILES JOHN.
HARRIS BENJAMIN.
HATHAWAY RICHARD.
KEACH BENJAMIN.
LANE JOHN.
NAYLOR JAMES.
OATES TITUS.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.
THOMPSON NATHANIEL.

PINFOLD, Sir THOMAS. See GOLDING, & al.

*PIRACY.

* Thoſe on board a pirate, preſumed to concur with him, unleſs they can make the contrary appear v. 14

Pirates are uſually executed at Execution-dock v. 18

Foreigners in ſervice of enemy (though their ſtate be in amity with ours) deemed ſubjects to enemy, and not pirates, while in enemy's ſervice v. 34

If ſervant go voluntarily with pirate, and accepts ſhare of booty, he is a pirate v. 314

* Thoſe who are ſervants on board a pirate directed to be acquitted v. 314

* Engliſh pirates tried in Scotland v. 572

Perſons acting under commiſſion of Jac. II. after his abdication conſidered as pirates, proceeded againſt as ſuch, and convicted viii. 73. See GOLDING.

Doctor Oldys diſplaced for refuſing to proſecute pirates viii. 75

Pirates in plantations proceeded againſt in a ſummary way, by commiſſioners, without a jury viii. 214. See
BARLICORN RICHARD.
BONNET STEDE.
DAWSON JOSEPH.
FORSEITH EDWARD.
GREEN THOMAS.
HOWE JAMES.
JENKINS WILLIAM.
KIDD WILLIAM.
LAMBLEY ROBERT.
LOFFE GABRIEL.
MAY WILLIAM.
MULLINS DARBY.
OWENS ABEL.
PARROT HUGH.
QUELCH JOHN.
SPARKES JOHN.

*PLANTATIONS.

* Whether private ſubjects in the plantations have a right to petition the king or parliament of England v. 431

* Whether an act of aſſembly in the plantations can create a new treaſon v. 432, 433

Pirates in the plantations proceeded againſt in a ſummary way, by commiſſioners, without a jury viii. 214

Account of governor Nicholſon's extraordinary proſecution of an American parſon, in queen Anne's reign ix. 295. See BARBOT JOHN.
BOSTON.
FABRIGAS ANTHONY.
NEW YORK.
QUELCH JOHN.
SOUTH CAROLINA.
ZENGER PETER.

* PLAYER Sir THOMAS Knight iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

*PLEADING AND PLEAS.

* Where one pleads a defective pardon, whether he ſhall be admitted to plead over; or whether ſuch plea will be fatal? ii. 15

* Exceptions to an indictment ought to be made before plea pleaded ii. 89

* If the priſoner demurs to the indictment, he confeſſes the fact ii. 92
iii. 796

* Counſel

INDEX.

* Counſel aſſigned a priſoner to put his plea in form iii. 228
* Time given a priſoner to maintain his plea to the juriſdiction iii. 238
* A record cannot be pleaded in general terms; but the ſpecial matter muſt be ſet forth iii. 233
* A private act of parliament muſt be pleaded ſpecially iii. 233
* Averments neceſſary in pleading, and what averments ſhall be good, and what not iii. 248, 251
* One cannot plead Auter foitz arraigned iii. 252
* Where an averment ſhall reduce a general allegation to a certainty iii. 253
* No fact is admitted by a demurrer that is not well pleaded iii. 253
* An action brought cannot be pleaded in bar to another action for the ſame cauſe, unleſs a declaration be delivered in the firſt action iii. 256
* Matter of fact averred ſhall not enlarge the record iii. 257
* A plea in paper, and without a counſel's hand, is not to be received iv. 213
* Where one pleads to the juriſdiction, he ought to be ready to maintain his plea preſently iv. 214
* In capital caſes the criminal is allowed no time to plead iv. 323
* Where one appears upon a ſummons, he ſhall have an imparlance; but if he comes in cuſtody, or on a recognizance, he ſhall plead preſently iv. 324
* Where one pleads to an indictment, he admits the copy delivered him according to 7 Will. III. chap. 3. to be a true copy iv. 668
* Time refuſed to conſider of a joinder in demurrer vi. 242
Plea that party is a peer of Ireland i. 950
Plea of pardon ii. 737. vi. 48. Ap.
Cannot plead guilty to part, and not guilty to the reſt iii. 703. vii. 47. n.
Cannot plead to the juriſdiction of the court after pleading in chief iv. 167
Where matter of plea is naught, no form can make it good iv. 168
Innocence and a pardon may be pleaded to ſame offence vi. 703
Eſtoppel, how to be pleaded vii. 624
Difference between pleading in bar, and to the juriſdiction viii. 3
Authority by acts of parliament pleadable by way of bar, but not to the juriſdiction viii. 3
When letters patents are pleaded, and ſhewn to the court, the adverſe party cannot deny them, or plead nul tiel record viii. 59
Party fined for inſiſting on a frivolous plea, though ſigned by counſel x. 33

* PLOTS.

* Aſſaſſination plot againſt king William III. iv. 562
* Plotters againſt queen Elizabeth i. 121, 128, 134
* Popiſh plot ii. 656, &c.
* Powder plot i. 232, 248. See vi. 408
* Ryehouſe plot iii. 684

PLOWDEN.

Plowden aſcertains in his Commentaries of what authority thoſe ancient writers, Bracton, Glanville, and Hengham, are in point of law vii. 235. See BRACTON. GLANVILLE. HENGHAM.

* PLUMTRE, HENRY, Eſq. iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* PLUNKET, JOHN vi. 335. See ATTERBURY.

* PLUNKET, OLIVER, D. D. Titular Primate of Ireland,
* His trial the 8th of June, Trinity term, 33 Car. II. 1681, at the King's-Bench bar, Weſtminſter, for high-treaſon committed in Ireland iii. 293
* Arraigned before, in Ireland, for the ſame fact iii. 293
* Five weeks time allowed the doctor to ſend for his witneſſes iii. 293
* His trial comes on iii. 294
* The indictment, for conſpiring the death of his majeſty, and the ſubverſion of the eſtabliſhed religion and government in Ireland iii. 294
* The king's counſel open the indictment iii. 295
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iii. 295
* The king's witneſſes called iii. 296
* Evidence of the French king's deſign to invade Ireland, and the priſoner's collecting money of the popiſh clergy to incite a rebellion in Ireland, to favour the invaſion iii. 296
* The priſoner enters upon his defence iii. 309
* Complains that the time allowed him was not ſufficient to bring over his records and witneſſes iii. 309
* Mr. ſolicitor ſums up the evidence iii. 309
* He inſiſts much on a letter the doctor ſent to invite the French king to invade Ireland iii. 310
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies's obſervations on the evidence iii. 310
* An evidence examined for the priſoner, after the king's counſel had made their obſervations iii. 311
* The chief juſtice directs the jury iii. 311
* The priſoner is convicted iii. 312
* He is called to his ſentence, and makes a ſpeech, wherein he complains of being tried in a foreign kingdom by a jury of ſtrangers, who neither knew the character of him or the witneſſes; and endeavours to ſhew the improbability of what had been ſworn againſt him iii. 312
* The chief juſtice tells him he is tried in England by virtue of an ancient ſtatute; and that he was not the firſt inſtance, for O'Rurke and ſeveral others had been tried in England for crimes committed in Ireland iii. 313
* The chief juſtice pronounces ſentence on dr. Plunket as a traitor iii. 314
* He is executed iii. 314
* His dying ſpeech iii. 314

* POCKLINGTON, JOHN, Eſq. vi. 188. See GILBERT JEFFERY.

POISON.

One boiled alive for poiſoning i. 324. v. 97
Poiſoning once made high-treaſon i. 353
Solomon le Roch, a judge, 21 Edw. I. was poiſoned by a monk i. 337
The poiſoner of a judge not allowed the ſanctuary of the church i. 337
The emperor, Henry of Luxenburgh, poiſoned in the ſacrament iii. 757
Pope Victor poiſoned in receiving the chalice iii. 757
Where poiſon is intended to be given to one perſon, and another takes it and dies, the procurer of the poiſon is guilty of murder vi. 222
' An Antidote againſt Poiſon ' viii. 463
Anſwer thereto iii. 757
Wilful poiſoning murder ix. 62. See
BLANDY MARY.
ELWES Sir JERVIS.
FRANKLIN JAMES.
* MURDER.
NAIRN KATHERINE.
OGILVIE PATRICK.
SOMERSET, Earl and Counteſs of.
TURNER ANNE.
WESTON RICHARD.

POLE, Cardinal,

Michael Throgmorton, John Hilliard, Thomas Goldwell, and William Peyte, were attainted in abſence xi. 25

POLE, Sir GEOFREY,

And Sir Edward Nevill, George Crofts and John Collins, indicted for treaſon xi. 25
All except Nevill plead guilty xi. 25
Pole the only one not executed xi. 25

* POLE, MICHAEL DE LA, Earl of Suffolk, Lord Chancellor,
* Impeached i. 1
* Diſputes the ſenſe of the chancellor's oath i. 2
* Cenſured on the firſt, fourth, and fifth articles i. 2
* His judgment i. 3. See BRAMBRE.

POLLEXFEN, HENRY,

His defence for John Taſborough indicted for ſubornation of perjury ii. 1030
His argument for Fitzharris, on his plea to the juriſdiction of the court iii. 252
His ſpeech for the city of London, in the quo warranto iii. 604
His ſpeech againſt ſir Patience Ward, on his trial for perjury iii. 678
His argument on challenging juryman for want of freehold, on behalf of lord Ruſſel, tried for treaſon, in compaſſing the king's death iii. 709
His argument for Sandys, at the ſuit of the Eaſt India Company vii. 511
His ſpeech for Sacheverel and others, informed againſt for a riot, in being unlawfully preſent at the election of mayor, where they had no concern iii. 964
His argument in arreſt of judgment given againſt Roſewell, for ſpeaking treaſonable words iii. 1055
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of lady Alice Liſle, for treaſon, in harbouring a traitor in Monmouth's rebellion iv. 106

POLLEXFEN, Sir HENRY, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of Common Pleas,

His obſervations on trial of viſcount Preſton, for treaſon iv. 453
His obſervations on the trial of Aſhton, for compaſſing the death of their majeſties, and adhering to their enemies iv. 484
Reflected on by the priſoner iv. 488

POLYGAMY.

A ludicrous idea thereon xi. 224
Sentence in ſpiritual court againſt a marriage in ſuit of jactitation of marriage, is not concluſive evidence in indictment for polygamy xi. 262. See BIGAMY.

POPE.

Pope Victor poiſoned in receiving the chalice iii. 757
The pope had no juriſdiction in England in time of the Britons xi. 71
The firſt uſurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71
In the time of William Rufus, the pope attempted to draw appeals to Rome, but prevailed not xi. 71
In the time of king Henry the firſt the pope uſurped the donation of biſhopricks xi. 71
In the time of king Stephen the pope gained appeals to the court of Rome xi. 72
In the time of king Henry the ſecond the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the ſecular power xi. 72
Four points of juriſdiction uſurped upon the crown of England by the pope before the reign of king John xi. 72
The cauſe of the quarrel between king John and the pope xi. 72
King John's round and kingly letter to the pope xi. 73
The pope curſeth the king, and interdicteth the realm xi. 73
King Edward the firſt oppoſed the pope's uſurpation xi. 73
Edward the ſecond ſuffered the pope to uſurp again xi. 73
Edward the third reſiſted the uſurpation of the pope xi. 74
During the nonage of king Richard the ſecond, the pope began once again to encroach upon the crown xi. 74. See TALBOT WILLIAM.

POPHAM, JOHN,

Attorney-general to queen Elizabeth, on the trial of Babington for treaſon i. 129
And on Abington's for ſimilar offence i. 135
His ſpeech on the arraignment of Daviſon in the Star-chamber vii. 19

POPHAM, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.

When mr. Popham, attorney-general, was made lord chief juſtice of the Queen's-bench i. 194
Libelled in the time of Elizabeth i. 336
His declaration on the trial of the earls of Eſſex and Southampton for treaſon i. 200
Cenſured for his conduct on the trial of ſir Walter Raleigh iv. 169. See i. 218
His ſpeech on pronouncing judgment againſt ſir Chriſtopher Blunt and others vii. 62
Lord chief juſtice Popham and his brethren were of opinion, that one man coming by another, making wry mouths, laughing, and making ſuch ſigns as uſually put men in a paſſion, and the other preſently falling upon upon and killing him, that it was murder, and he was hanged upon appeal vii. 425

POPULARITY.

Lord chief juſtice Holt deſerved popularity, by doing that which was right, upon great, trying, and important occaſions; he obtained popularity becauſe he deſpiſed all other means of aiming at it, but that of doing right upon all occaſions xi. 293
Lord chief juſtice Mansfield ſaid, that he wiſhed for popularity, but that it was that popularity which followed, not that which was run after xi. 331

* PORDAGE, Dr. JOHN, Rector of Bradfield,

* His trial before the commiſſioners of Berks, for ejecting ſcandalous and inſufficient miniſters, 1654 ii. 217
* The firſt nine articles exhibited againſt him ii. 218
* Charging him with maintaining ſeveral heterodox opinions in religion ii. 218
* The doctor objects, that he had already been tried, and acquitted of this charge; which does not avail him ii. 218
* His anſwer to the firſt articles ii. 219
* A ſecond charge, of ſpeaking againſt the ſtate of matrimony; and of dealing with conjurors iii. 221, 222
* His anſwer ii. 222
* A third charge, of erroneous doctrines; and of ſaying he converſed with angels, and ſaw dragons, and the devil ii. 224
* Evidence to prove it ii. 225
* A fourth charge, of criminal converſation with a woman, and having a child by her ii. 226
* Evidence to the ſecond charge ii. 226
* Evidence to the third charge ii. 227
* The doctor's defence ii. 227
* As to doctrinal points ii. 228
* As to converſing with angels, &c. ii. 230
* To the fourth charge ii. 232
* As for what he is accuſed of before 1651, he pleads the general pardon ii. 234
* The depoſitions as to the firſt charge for and againſt the doctor ii. 235
* Evidence pro and con of the ſecond charge ii. 244
* Evidence pro and con of the third charge ii. 245
* Hear-ſay admitted as evidence againſt the doctor ii. 251
* The ſentence paſſed upon him, to turn him out of his living ii. 259

* PORTEOUS, Captain JOHN,

* Proceedings on the trial of him for murder, before the Court of Juſticiary, at Edinburgh, in July 1736, 10 Geo. I. vi. 763
* The indictment, ſubſcribed by the king's ſolicitor vi. 764
* The information, by the king's advocate vi. 765
* Captain Porteous's defence, by his counſel vi. 770
* Interlocutor upon the relevancy againſt him vi. 781
* The libel found relevant vi. 781
* The jury ſworn vi. 781
* The priſoner confeſſes the perſons mentioned in the indictment were killed and wounded vi. 781
* Depoſitions of the witneſſes againſt him vi. 781, &c.
* Depoſitions of the witneſſes for him vi. 788, &c.
* The verdict againſt him vi. 791
* Sentence of death paſſed vi. 791
* His petition to queen Caroline, then guardian of the three realms vi. 791
* A letter from the duke of Newcaſtle, ſecretary of ſtate, by order of her majeſty, to the lords of the juſticiary, for ſtay of execution for ſix weeks vi. 793
* The captain is thereupon reſpited vi. 793
* But taken out of priſon, three days after, and executed by the populace vi. 794
* They order two of their number, for want of clergymen, to officiate at the place of execution vi. 794
Particulars concerning him x. 282

PORTER, CHARLES, Counſellor at Law,

He was ordered into cuſtody for a breach of privilege in the caſe of an appeal againſt ſir John Fagg vii. 459

PORTER, Captain GEORGE (the Witneſs againſt Sir John Fenwick and others),

His trial for the murder of ſir James Hacket, knight, at the Duke's Theatre, in Saliſbury-court, Fleet-ſtreet, Dec. 1684, 36 Car. II. x. 74. Ap. n.
Names of the jury x. 75. Ap. n.
The caſe x. 75. Ap. n.
Priſoner's defence x. 75. Ap. n.
Found guilty of manſlaughter, and acquitted on the ſtatute of ſtabbing, [1 Jac. I. chap. 8.] x. 75. Ap. n.
An appeal brought againſt him x. 75. Ap. n.
Admitted to bail x. 75. Ap. n.
Next ſeſſions pleaded his majeſty's pardon x. 75. Ap. n.
Was excepted againſt on Rookwood's trial, as incapable of being a witneſs, ſtanding convicted of felony; but having got the king's pardon, was allowed a legal witneſs, though not burnt in the hand x. 75. Ap. n. See iv. 681.
Had a penſion of 260l. a year granted him as a reward for giving evidence againſt
Charnock,
Cranburne,
Fenwick, Sir John,
Freind, Sir John,
Keys,
King,
Parkyns, Sir William,
Rookwood;
which annuity continued till Porter's death x. 75. Ap. n.

* PORTLAND, WILLIAM Earl of,

* John lord Somers, Edward earl of Orford, Charles lord Halifax, their impeachment, together with the charge againſt the lord Haverſham for breach of privilege, exhibited by the houſe of commons, 13 W. III. 1701 v. 339. See viii. 517, 520
The ſtate of the proceedings in the houſe of commons, with relation to him, and the reſt of the impeached lords, and what happened thereupon between the two houſes viii. 512
Copies of ſeveral treaties preſented to the houſe viii. 512
Addreſs of thanks, and to lay before his majeſty the ill conſequences of the partition treaty viii. 513
A committee of lords appointed to draw up, and ſtate the fact, as to the treaty now in debate viii. 514
The report of the committee, and debate thereon viii. 514
Lords addreſs upon the treaty viii. 516
Conference with the lords, and report thereof viii. 517
The letters patents, creating the earl of Portland and earl of Jerſey plenipotentiaries viii. 518
The paper laid before the lords by the earl of Portland viii. 519
The lord Somers admitted into the houſe of commons, and heard viii. 520
The commons addreſs his majeſty, to remove the impeached lords viii. 521
* The lords addreſs the king not to cenſure or puniſh the four lords till the impeachments are tried v. 339
* The lords ſend a meſſage to the commons, to put them in mind of exhibiting articles againſt the lords v. 340
* The commons bring up articles againſt the earl of Orford, and demand he ſhould give ſecurity to abide the judgment of the houſe of lords v. 340
* The lords ſearch their journals, and find it not uſual to take ſecurity v. 340
* The articles againſt the earl of Orford; and his anſwer v. 340
* The earl of Orford deſires a copy of the articles againſt him; which is granted v. 344
* A copy of the lord Orford's anſwer ordered to be ſent down to the commons v. 344
The commons replication thereto viii. 523
* Two counſel aſſigned him for his trial v. 344
* Another meſſage from the lords, to put the commons in mind of exhibiting articles againſt the other impeached lords v. 345
* Articles exhibited againſt John lord Somers; and his anſwer v. 345
The commons replication thereto viii. 523
Meſſage from the lords, that the right of limiting a convenient time for bringing the particular charge before them is lodged in them viii. 525
The commons anſwer viii. 525
Conference appointed, and report thereof viii. 526
Meſſages from the lords, relating to the right of appointing the days for trial of the impeachments, and the commons anſwers viii. 526, 527
Conference appointed, and the report thereof viii. 528
* A meſſage ſent by the lords to the commons, that the houſe having been deſired by the earl of Orford, that a day may be appointed for his ſpeedy trial, their lordſhips finding no iſſue joined by replication of the houſe of commons, think fit to give them notice thereof v. 356
* Another meſſage to put the commons in mind of exhibiting articles againſt the lords Portland and Halifax v. 357
* A meſſage from the lords, that they had appointed a day for the trial of the earl of Orford; and that the commons might reply, if they thought fit v. 357
* The commons inſiſt upon it as their right to exhibit articles when they ſee fit v. 357
* That where ſeveral are impeached, it is their undoubted right to bring to trial ſuch of them firſt as they ſee fit v. 357
* That their lordſhips ought not to appoint a day of trial, before the commons have ſignified their being ready to proceed thereon v. 358
* Precedents in caſes of impeachment v. 358
* The lords in a meſſage to the commons ſet forth, that they can find no precedent where articles have been ſo long deferred after a general impeachment v. 359
* The lords inſiſt on their right of appointing the time for the trial v. 359
* The commons propoſe a conference on the methods of proceeding in impeachments v. 359
* The lords agree to it v. 359
* Precedents ſearched by the lords v. 360
* The lords again aſſert their right to appoint a day for the trial of an impeachment, without any previous ſignification from the commons of their being ready to proceed v. 361
* In a meſſage by mr. Harcourt, the commons inſiſt on their propoſition for a committee of both houſes, to adjuſt the preliminaries for the trial: particularly, whether the impeached lords ſhall appear at their trials at their lordſhips bar as criminals; and whether they ſhall ſit as judges on each other's trials for theſe crimes, or give their votes in theſe caſes v. 361
* Precedents concerning the regulation of trials before the lords v. 362
* The lords refuſe to appoint a committee to meet a committee of the houſe of commons, to ſettle the preliminaries in relation to the trial of the impeached lords v. 363
* A meſſage to the commons, that they have appointed a day for the trial of the lord Somers v. 365. viii. 531
The commons forbid any member to attend lord Somers's trial viii. 531
* In a meſſage from the commons, they take notice that the lords have omitted naming a place for the trial v. 365
* They ſtill inſiſt on a committee of both houſes, before they proceed upon the trial v. 365
* The lords reaſons given at a conference for not appointing a committee v. 365
* The lords reſolve, that no lord of parliament impeached of high crimes and miſdemeanours, ſhall at his trial be without the bar v. 364. viii. 529
* And that no lord of parliament, impeached as aforeſaid, can be precluded cluded from voting on any occaſion, except in his own trial v. 364. viii. 529

The commons anſwer thereto viii. 529
* Exceptions taken by the commons to ſome expreſſions of my lord Haverſham's at a free conference v. 366. viii. 530
* The commons deſire the lords to proceed againſt the lord Haverſham for the words ſpoken by him, and inflict ſuch puniſhment upon the ſaid lord, as ſo high an offence againſt the houſe of commons deſerves v. 366. viii. 530
* Articles brought up againſt Charles lord Halifax, and demanded he ſhould give ſecurity to abide the judgment of the houſe of lords v. 367
* His anſwer to the articles v. 367
* The commons refuſe a conference, till ſatisfaction be given them as to the words ſpoken by the lord Haverſham v. 372. viii. 533
* Ordered, that the lord Haverſham have a copy of the charge delivered in againſt him by the commons; and that he have counſel allowed him v. 373
* The lords acquaint the commons with their intended method of proceeding at the trial of the lord Somers v. 373
* An order of the houſe of lords for the lord Somers's witneſſes to attend the trial v. 374
* Reaſons given by the commons why they refuſe to proceed to the trial of the lord Somers v. 374. viii. 532
* And an anſwer thereto by the lords v. 374
* A meſſage from the lords, that they intend preſently to proceed to the trial of the lord Somers; the meſſengers acquaint the lords that the houſe of commons is adjourned v. 376
* The lords proceed to the trial, notwithſtanding v. 376. viii. 534
Thirty-two lords diſſent, but the reaſons expunged by order of the houſe viii. 534
Lord Orford and lord Halifax withdraw at the trial viii. 534
Reſolved, the queſtion for acquitting lord Somers be put in the court below; 31 lords proteſt; the reaſons expunged viii. 534
The impeachment diſmiſſed viii. 535
The commons proteſt againſt it viii. 535
* Proclamation made in the king's name v. 376
* No proſecutor appearing, he is acquitted by the majority of voices v. 377
* The lords appoint the 23d of June for the trial of the lord Orford v. 378. viii. 533
The commons forbid any member to appear at lord Orford's trial viii. 535
* The commons anſwer, they will proceed firſt to the trial of the lord Somers, when they have received ſatisfaction in relation to my lord Haverſham, &c. v. 378
* The lord Haverſham's anſwer to the charge of the houſe of commons v. 378. viii. 533
* The lords declare that, unleſs the commons proſecute their charge againſt the lord Haverſham before the end of this ſeſſion, they will adjudge him innocent v. 381
* An order of the lords for my lord Orford's witneſſes to attend the trial v. 381
* A complaint that the commons in their printed votes had reflected on the houſe of peers v. 381
* Reſolved, that thoſe reflections of the commons are contrived to cover their affected and unreaſonable delays in proſecuting the impeached lords v. 381
* That they tend to the ſubverting the conſtitution, &c. v. 381
* They proceed to the trial of the earl of Orford v. 382
* They acquit him nemine contradicente, no proſecutor appearing v. 382
* Ordered, that the charge againſt the lord Haverſham be diſmiſſed v. 382
* That the impeachment againſt the lord Portland be diſmiſſed, no articles being exhibited againſt him v. 383
* That the impeachment againſt the lord Halifax, and the articles againſt him, be diſmiſſed v. 383
* That the impeachment againſt the duke of Leeds for high crimes and miſdemeanours, and the articles againſt him, be diſmiſſed v. 383

POSTNATI.

The caſe of the union of the realm of Scotland with England xi. 75
Extract from Moore's reports xi. 76
Speech of lord Bacon, as counſel for Calvin, in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79
Lord Coke's report of Calvin's caſe xi. 86
Lord chancellor Elleſmere's ſpeech in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 97

* POTTER, VINCENT ii. 398. See REGICIDES.

POULTNEY, Mr.

Opens the information againſt ſir Samuel Barnardiſton iii. 934

POWELL, Sir JOHN, Juſtice B. R.

Declares his opinion on the trial of the ſeven biſhops, that the petition was not libellous iv. 393, 394
This judge characteriſed for his noble conduct on the above trial ix. 288
His ſpeech before judgment on Swenſden, for a forcible marriage, and Sarah Baynton, for abetting and aſſiſting therein v. 479
Of opinion, that erroneous proceedings againſt Tutchin, convicted for publiſhing "The Obſervators," might be amended v. 569
Directs the jury on the trial of Fielding, for bigamy v. 625
His argument in controverted point of peerage, in the caſe of Charles Knowles, commonly called earl Banbury viii. 58
His ſpeech on giving his opinion, that the Ayleſbury-men were not bailable viii. 159
He ſaid, on Cook's trial, that if the ſheriff had returned all new men on a jury, without regard to thoſe who appeared and were ſworn or challenged before, it had been well enough iv. 744. ix. 587
The houſe of lords declared, that the court of King's-Bench, one of the juſtices whereof was ſir John Powell, over-ruling the earl of Devonſhire's plea of privilege, was a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136

POWER.

Abuſe of power well defined ix. 296

POWIS, Sir LYTTLETON, Judge B. R.

Sums up the evidence on the trial of the reverend William Hendley, for preaching a charity ſermon x. 88. Ap.
His letter to lord chancellor Parker, containing an account of his proceedings on the ſummer home circuit, for Kent, in 1719 x. 89. Ap.
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 300
His opinion xi. 300, 302

POWIS, Sir THOMAS, Attorney-General,

Prays the information may be read on the ſeven biſhops Hab. Corp. iv. 305
He prays the biſhops may plead to information iv. 320
States the caſe and opens the evidence for the king, on their trial iv. 334
His reply to Somers, defendant's counſel iv. 385
His argument on the bill of attainder brought into the houſe of commons againſt ſir John Fenwick v. 82
His argument on behalf of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, as to the competency of a witneſs, on his trial before the houſe of peers for murder v. 167
His ſpeech for ducheſs of Norfolk, in the houſe of commons, on the proceedings for a divorce between the duke of Norfolk and her grace v. 274
His reply to the defence of Lindſay, tried for treaſon, in returning from France without licence v. 519
His argument on motion in arreſt of judgment againſt Tutchin, convicted by information, for writing "The Obſervators" v. 545
His reply v. 564

POWIS, Sir THOMAS, Judge Q. B.

Is of opinion, there is a miſtake in proceedings againſt Tutchin v. 569. See 570
His parliamentary ſpeech againſt the action brought by Aſhby againſt White, lying viii. 95
His argument for ſir Edward Hales, at the ſuit of Godwin vii. 614
Gives his opinion, that the Aylesbury-men were not bailable viii. 159

POWLE, HENRY,

His ſpeech and motion, that earl Danby be committed on his impeachment for high-treaſon, before the houſe of lords ii. 734
His ſpeech on ſumming up the evidence, on the trial of viſcount Stafford, impeached by the commons, before the lords, of treaſon, for being concerned in the popiſh plot iii. 200

POWRIE, WILLIAM,

His depoſition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, huſband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 321
His trial and ſentence viii. 331

* POYSON. See MURDER. POISON.

PRACTICE.

The ancient practice of every court is the law of that court vi. 624
Matters of practice are not to be known from books xi. 332, 333

PRÆMUNIRE.

Statute of præmunire made at the prayer of the commons xi. 70. See
BOLTON JOHN.
CROOK JOHN.
GREY ISAAC.
IRELAND.
LALOR ROBERT.

PRANCE, MILES.

Account of the ſentence of the court on him, on his conviction of perjury on the trial of Green, &c. for the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, on his own confeſſion viii. 442

PRAT, WALTER. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.

PRATT, CHARLES.

His reply on Timothy Murphy's trial x. 189
His ſpeech, argument, and defence of Owen, the bookſeller, for publiſhing "Murray's Caſe" x. 207. Ap.

PRATT, Sir CHARLES, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas.

His ſpeech in that court, on delivering mr. Wilkes, on his Hab. Corp. from a commitment by a ſecretary of ſtate; taken from mr. ſerjeant Wilſon's reports xi. 304
The ſame from "Digeſt of the Law concerning Libels" xi. 304. See CAMDEN, CHARLES Lord.

PRATT, Sir JOHN, Juſtice of the King's-Bench,

His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 299
His opinion xi. 300, 302

PRATT, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's-Benco,

His directions to the jury, on the trial of Reaſon and Tranter, ſheriff's officers, for murder vi. 208
His directions to the jury, on the trial of Layer, for treaſon vi. 318

PREAMBLE.

The preamble to an act of parliament is the key that openeth the entrance into the meaning of the maker of the law vii. 154. See STATUTES.

PRECEDENTS.

Precedents and examples of former times are ſingularly uſeful, if not abſolutely neceſſary, to a right underſtanding of the laws of England Em. Pref. i. See vii. 69, 108, 111, 118, 137, 139, 144, 157, 158, 167, 497, 538, 563. viii. 549, 554, 566. COMMISSIONS. DECLARATIONS. INDICTMENTS. INFORMATIONS. JUDGMENTS. PARDON. PLEADING and PLEAS. RECORDS. SPECIAL VERDICTS. WARRANTS. WRITS.

PRECEPTS on the TRIALS of PEERS. See
BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord ix. *596
BYRON, WILLIAM Lord x. *517
CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of ix. *590
FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl of x. 478

KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of ix. *590
KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Ducheſs Dowager of xi. 198
MOHUN, CHARLES Lord iv. 512. v. 137
MORLEY, THOMAS Lord vii. 222
WARWICK, EDWARD Earl of v. 137

WRITS.

In what a precept differs from a venire iv. 745
Precept iſſues before ſeſſions, and before iſſue joined; and only commands the ſheriff to return jurors ſufficient to try the priſoners in general iv. 744, 745

PRELATES

Not de jure divino i. 496
Not to iſſue writs in their own name i. 496

PREROGATIVE.

Lord Bacon endeavoured to reconcile parliament to impoſitions by prerogative xi. 29
Proceedings againſt Whitelocke for contempt of the king's prerogative xi. 106
Hakewell's argument againſt impoſitions by prerogative xi. 29, 36
Yelverton's on the ſame ſubject xi. 29, 52
Mr. juſtice Foſter is of opinion, that the right of preſſing mariners into the public ſervice is a prerogative inherent in the crown xi. 350. See ROYAL FAMILY. * See i. 547. and ii. 305.

* PRESSICKS, MARY iii. 79. See THWING.

PRESSING.

Warrant to preſs ſeamen xi. 349
Queſtion touching of preſſing mariners for the public ſervice, is a point of very great and national importance xi. 349
No perſons ſeem liable to be preſſed into land ſervice xi. 349
Nor landmen to be preſſed into the ſea ſervice xi. 349
Perſons who have choſen a ſea-faring life, whoſe education and employment have fitted them for the ſervice, and inured them to it, ſuch perſons, being mariners, may, in the opinion of mr. juſtice Foſter, be legally preſſed into the ſervice of the crown, whenever the public ſafety requireth it xi. 349
His reaſons for being of this opinion, ſeem chiefly founded on the public utility of preſſing xi. 349
Hard to preſs ſailors homeward bound, after a long voyage xi. 349
Yet impreſs on even outward bound veſſels is ſometimes neceſſary xi. 349
Mr. juſtice Foſter is of opinion, that the right of impreſſing mariners for the public ſervice is a prerogative inherent in the crown, grounded upon common law, and recognized by many acts of parliament xi. 350
Several mandatory writs and commiſſions for preſſing cited xi. 350
Obſervations on them xi. 351
Of the ſtatutes concerning preſſing xi. 351
A ſhort view of the acts xi. 352
Preſſing mariners never mentioned in any act of parliament, as illegal xi. 352
Preſs-warrants never had the ſanction of one judicial determination, and ſeem not reconcileable to the law of the land Em. Pref. v. xi. 349
Preſſing is one of the miſchiefs which war brings with it xi. 315, 349, 350
If a man ſees another preſſed, though the perſon abuſed does not complain, or call for aſſiſtance, and others out of compaſſion come to his reſcue, and kill any of thoſe that reſtrained him of his liberty, that is man-ſlaughter ix. 65

* PRESTON, Lord Viſcount (alias Sir RICHARD GRAHME, Baronet),

* John Aſhton, and Edmund Elliot, their arraignment for high-treaſon, Jan. 16, 1690, 2 W. and M. iv. 410
* The indictment for compaſſing the death of the king and queen, and adhering to their enemies iv. 410
* The ſame overt-acts laid to prove the adheſion, as to prove the compaſſing the king and queen's death iv. 413 iv. 413
* The lord Preſton inſiſts upon his peerage iv. 414
* The court tell him he muſt produce his patent iv. 414.
* That the houſe of lords had over-ruled his claim of peerage See vi. 240.
* And that his lordſhip had diſclaimed his right to peerage there iv. 414
* The indictment read in Latin at the priſoner's requeſt iv. 415
* Produces a ſtatute of 46 Edw. III. upon which he prays a copy of his indictment iv. 417 iv. 418
* Which is refuſed him iv. 418
* It is not regular to put off a trial before plea pleaded
* The priſoners plead not guilty, and then move for a longer time to prepare for their trial, urging that the haſty proceedings in the late reign in capital caſes were looked upon as great hardſhips, and given by king William as one of the reaſons for his coming over, in one of his declarations iv. 419
* A trial never put off on a ſuggeſtion that witneſſes are out of the way, without oath made of it iv. 421
* The priſoners refuſing to join in their challenges, are ordered to be tried ſeparately iv. 423
* The lord Preſton comes upon his trial, and Aſhton and Elliot remanded to Newgate, and not permitted to be preſent at his trial iv. 423
* Jurors diſcharged for want of freehold iv. 423
* The king need not ſhew his cauſe of challenge till the pannel is gone through iv. 423
* Mr. ſolicitor-general (ſir John Somers), his ſpeech before evidence iv. 425
* Captain Billop's evidence of taking the priſoners on board a ſmack at Graveſend, as they were going to France with treaſonable papers iv. 433
* Lord Nottingham, ſecretary of ſtate, marquis of Carmarthen, lord preſident, and lord Sidney, depoſe, that the papers produced in court were the ſame that were brought to them by captain Billop iv. 436, 437
* The papers read, giving an account of the ſtate of the Engliſh fleet and garriſons, &c. iv. 440
* Witneſſes produced to prove ſome of the papers to be my lord's hand iv. 446
* Lord Preſton's defence. He objects that no treaſon was proved againſt him in the county of Middleſex iv. 447
* That ſimilitude of hands was not evidence of a man's hand-writing in capital caſes iv. 447. See vi. 478.
* His objections anſwered iv. 447
* The lord chief juſtice Holt directs the jury iv. 448
* Lord chief juſtice Pollexfen adds his obſervations iv. 453
* The lord Preſton ſuffered to ſpeak in his defence after the evidence ſummed up iv. 454
* He is convicted iv. 455
Lord Preſton pardoned, on making a pretended diſcovery, which he afterwards denied v. 96

* PRESUMPTION. See EVIDENCE.

PRETENDER.

The alterations in favour of the ſubject on proſecutions for treaſon, which were not to take place during the life of the Pretender Em. Pref. vi. See vi. 76.
"Reaſons for attainting and abjuring the pretended Prince of Wales," cenſured by the lords viii. 82
Judge Powys ordered a man to be whipped in open market twice, till his back was bloody, a month intervening between the firſt and ſecond whipping, for drinking the Pretender's health x. 91. Ap.
He fined another man 100l. for drinking the health of king James III. and ſaying, he knew no ſuch perſon as king George x. 91, 92. Ap.

* PRICE, ANNE ii. 1017. See TASBOROUGH.

* PRICE, JOHN, Eſq.

* And one hundred other proteſtants, their arraignment for high-treaſon, at Wicklow, in the kingdom of Ireland, March 6, 1688—9 iv. 401
* An introduction, giving an account how they came to be charged with high-treaſon iv. 401
* Ten of the grand jury papiſts iv. 402
* The lord chief juſtice Keating's charge to them iv. 402
* The Iriſh papiſts arm themſelves upon the Revolution with half-pikes and ſkeans iv. 402
* Encouraged by the regular troops in their depredations on the Engliſh iv. 402
* No petit-treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
* Murder made high-treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
* People may aſſemble for their common defence, without ſtaying for permiſſion from authority iv. 404
* The indictment againſt mr. Price and the reſt iv. 404
* Priſoners to the civil power ought not to be guarded by ſoldiers, or with fire-arms iv. 405
* The grand jury ought to be all freeholders iv. 405
* A capital crime muſt be tried in the county where it is committed iv. 406
* For want of jurors qualified, the trial put off to another aſſizes; and moſt of the priſoners bailed by order of the government, tho' committed for high-treaſon iv. 407
* The proteſtants complain to the court of their being ſtripped and plundered by a rabble of Iriſh papiſts iv. 407
* Two convicted for ſtealing cattle; and the court directing the ordinary not to aſſiſt them in reading, they receive ſentence of death iv. 408
* The lord deputy Tyrconnel's letter read at the aſſizes, requiring a loan of particular perſons towards ſubſiſting king James's army iv. 409
* The grand jury excuſe themſelves, through the poverty of their county, and are reprimanded by the judge iv. 410

PRICE, ROBERT, Baron of the Exchequer,

His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 296
His opinion xi. 300, 302

PRIDEAUX, EDMUND, Attorney-General for the Commonwealth,

Opens the indictment againſt Fox, Vowell, and Gerhard, for treaſon ii. 213
Prefers an impeachment for treaſon againſt Gibbons, upon which he is tried ii. 184
Applies the evidence on the trial of John Lilburne, to prove him guilty of treaſon ii. 56
Makes his obſervations on the evidence for the commonwealth ii. 76
Is charged by priſoner with being an impeached traitor vii. 364
Joins iſſue with Love on his impeachment for treaſon, in correſponding with, and conſpiring to bring in, king Charles II. ii. 92
His reply to the priſoner's defence ii. 139
His further reply ii. 145
He moves for judgment againſt the priſoner ii. 177

* PRIEST, ——— ii. 801. See PLOT POPISH.

PRIEST, WILLIAM,

The caſe of duels, or proceedings in the Star-chamber, againſt mr. William Prieſt, for writing and ſending a challenge, and mr. Richard Wright for carrying it, Jan. 26, 1615, 11 Jac. I. xi. 112
Charge of ſir Francis Bacon, the king's attorney-general xi. 112
Decree of the Star-chamber againſt duels xi. 114
They were fined, impriſoned, and to acknowledge offence at the aſſizes xi. 115. See BARBOT JOHN. BYRON Lord. REA Lord.

PRINCE.

The judges of Oliver Cromwell declared, that a prince was a ſubject, and triable by the ſame law as a commoner vii. 322. n.
The Prince's caſe in George the firſt's reign. See ROYAL FAMILY.

PRINCIPAL and ACCESSARY.

Principal ought to be convicted before acceſſary tried iv. 199
Though principal and acceſſary be tried together, yet verdict is always given againſt the principal, before it is given againſt the acceſſary iv. 199
Inſtance from the 'Roman Hiſtory,' of a father being conſidered as acceſſary ſary to murders committed by his ſon, though he never ſpoke to, or ſaw him x. 435. See ACCESSARY.

*PRINTING.

Printer on his trial for treaſon, is allowed to have his jury bookſellers or printers ii. 530
No excuſe for printer of ſedition to ſay, that printing is his trade ii. 547
Or that he printed the dying ſpeeches or words of a dying man ii. 542
Printing an overt-act of treaſon viii. 64. See ANDERTON WILLIAM. DOVER SIMON. *LIBELS. MATTHEWS JOHN. TWYN JOHN.

*PRISONERS and IMPRISONMENT.

* Sir Thomas More impriſoned fifteen months, and his eſtate confiſcated before he is brought to trial i. 61
* One kept in priſon after his being tried and acquitted of high-treaſon i. 77
* A priſoner denied the liberty of taking notes at his trial i. 135
* Falſe impriſonment to detain one committed by order of parliament, after the diſſolution of the parliament ii. 209
* The goods of a priſoner accuſed of treaſon or felony may be ſecured; but the priſoner ſhall have a ſubſiſtence out of them till he is convicted ii. 504. iv. 627. v. 290
* A priſoner indicted for felony, denied proceſs by the court to bring in his witneſſes ii. 505
* The jury directed in the abſence of the priſoner ii. 613
* Earl of Danby impriſoned forty months without any proſecution ii. 744
* Reſolved by all the judges, that the king could not give him leave to go to his houſe ii. 753
* Where any queſtion of law ariſes, it ought to be put in the priſoner's preſence ii. 729. v. 169
* Counſel aſſigned a priſoner ſhall not be diſcharged without his aſſent iii. 233
* A priſoner in capital caſes may not have any inſtruction in writing, or otherwiſe, from counſel or others, without they are aſſigned by the court to aſſiſt him iii. 344
* A peer impriſoned on a homine replegiando till the party eſſoigned was produced iii. 544
* The court of King's-Bench deny the priſoner a habeas corpus to bring up his witneſſes, who were priſoners for debt iv. 2
* A priſoner for high-treaſon, not uſual to let his friends be in private with him iv. 209, 662, 737
* A priſoner to the civil power ought not to be put under a guard of ſoldiers iv. 404, 405
* A priſoner brought by habeas corpus to the King's-Bench, may be remanded to the county gaol from whence he came, or to any priſon in the county where the King's-Bench ſits iii. 1000
* Where a witneſs is a priſoner, he cannot be brought out of the rules but by habeas corpus iv. 599
* The priſoner's irons ought to be taken off during the trial ii. 303. iv. 698. v. 18.
* But not upon his arraignment vi. 232
* A ſtatute made to impriſon ſeveral perſons for life v. 81
* Whether a peer may be committed for a miſdemeanour? iv. 312
* Whether a commitment to the cuſtody of a meſſenger be a lawful impriſonment? iv. 556
Inſtance of a perſon being committed to priſon, and never more heard of i. 36
The uſe of chains and fetters in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
Sending the ſubject to remote and private priſons complained of by the judges, in 34 Eliz. Em. Pref. v. and n.
Why the law requires, whenever any die in priſon, the coroner to ſit on their bodies Em. Pref. xvi. n.
Priſoners removed, that they might loſe the benefit of the judgment of a court of juſtice in their favour vii. 239
Inſtance of a ſtate-priſoner being confined above forty years, without trial x. 76. Ap.
Reſolutions of the houſe of commons, in the report of their committee appointed to enquire into the ſtate of the gaols, reſpecting the cruel uſage of the priſoners ix. 107
Though the opinion of judges muſt be aſked, it need not be given in preſence of the priſoner i. 207
Priſoner cannot inſiſt on any notice of trial iii. 343. iv. 143
Priſoner departing from priſon with keeper's leave, puniſhable as well as keeper. So reſolved by the judges vii. 241
Priſoners fined for coming into court at their trial, with their hats on ii. 611
Priſoners in Scotland have many conſiderable advantages not allowed them in England Em. Pref. i.
Inſtance of priſoners not being aſked what they had to ſay i. 61. iv. 199
Priſoner ſuffered to ſpeak in his defence after evidence ſummed up iv. 454
How priſoners may be lawfully removed Em. Pref. v. n.
Witneſſes produced on the part of priſoners ought always to have been examined on oath Em. Pref. v. and n. iv. 178
Crown priſoners ought not to be taken out of cuſtody without leave vii. 537
Priſoner can demand no time to prepare for his trial in Scotland ii. 1097
Priſoners may be indulged with, but not claim as their rights, the uſe of pen, ink, and paper i. 355. ii. 177, 330. iii. 346, 708. iv. 143, 513, 565. v. 143, 181. vi. 22. ix. 622*
A chair to ſit upon i. 993, 994, 995. iii. 102. vi. 1, 477. vii. 424
Copy of pannel of jury (except in treaſon) iii. 350. n. 465, 707. iv. 191, 566
The liberty of croſs-examining witneſſes ix. 638, 691. xi. 10, 239
Or of their being examined apart v. 20
Several inſtances of priſoners being moſt cruelly uſed in gaols ix. 107
See ACTON WILLIAM. BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. BASTILE. HUGGINS JOHN. NEWGATE.

* PRITCHARD, Sir WILLIAM, late Lord Mayor of London,
* And Thomas Papillon, eſq. the trial between them, Nov. 6. 1684. 36 Car. II. iii. 1072
* The plaintiff declares that the defendant cauſed him to be arreſted, being then lord mayor, having no probable cauſe of action againſt the plaintiff iii. 1072
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, ſuggeſts that this was part of the plot of the diſcontented party to throw the city into confuſion iii. 1072
* The manner of the arreſt is proved iii. 1073
* The lieutenancy raiſe the militia, and prevent any diſturbance; and my lord mayor is releaſed iii. 1075
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard's ſpeech for the defendant iii. 1075
* The lord mayor not exempt from an arreſt, where there is a probable cauſe iii. 1076
* The defendant's counſel urge that they had a probable cauſe, the plaintiff making ſuch a return to the mandamus for admitting him ſheriff, as he had reaſon to apprehend was falſe iii. 1076
* Mr. Williams's ſpeech iii. 1077
* Mr. Ward's ſpeech iii. 1077
* The chief juſtice reprimands him iii. 1078
* Evidence that the plaintiff refuſed to give an appearance iii. 1079
* Evidence that the defendant had a majority of votes on the poll for ſheriff iii. 1084
* The attorney-general's reply iii. 1085
* The plaintiff's counſel ſhew that the poll where the defendant pretends he was elected ſheriff, was taken in a riotous manner, and by perſons who had no authority to take it iii. 1085
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard's anſwer iii. 1087
* The chief juſtice's obſervations upon the evidence iii. 1088
* The purſuing malicious methods to obtain a right, makes the party doing it liable to an action iii. 1090
* Inſtances of malice in the defendant iii. 1091
* The true deſign of this arreſt, to procure an inſurrection iii. 1093
* Damages directed to be given anſwerable to the miſchief intended, and not according to what the plaintiff ſuſtained iii. 1094
* Damages given 10,000l. iii. 1094
* The chief juſtice commends the verdict iii. 1094
The record vi. 50. Ap.

PRIVILEGE of PARLIAMENT.

Court of King's-Bench over-ruling peer's plea of privilege of parliament, and forcing him to plead over in chief, it being within time of privilege, did thereby commit a manifeſt breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136
The ſpeaker of the houſe of commons detained in priſon upon a civil action, notwithſtanding the privilege of parliament, 31 Hen. VI. xi. 99
The houſe of commons reſolved, that the judgment given againſt ſir John Elliot, &c. 5 Car. I. was illegal, and againſt the freedom and privilege of parliament ii. 571
Privilege of parliament does not extend to a proſecution for a ſeditious libel xi. 305
A maſterly and ſpirited proteſt againſt narrowing the privilege of parliament xi. 305
See CRISPE, Sir NICHOLAS, and DALMAHOY. FAGG Sir JOHN, and Doctor SHIRLEY. FINCH Sir HENEAGE. JAY and TOPHAM.

PRIVY COUNCIL.

As the juriſdiction of the privy council is limited, the cauſe of their commitment ought to appear vii. 126
The lords of the council uſed in ancient times to meddle with matters of meum and tuum, which are now left to the king's courts of law and equity xi. 112
Aſſaulting privy counſellor muſt be laid to be done in the execution of his office, to make it capital in Scotland ii. 629
A ſingle privy counſellor hath not a right to commit in any caſe xi. 319
Lord Holt's opinion to the contrary, denied to be law xi. 319

PROBYN, EDMUND, Serjeant at Law,

Opens the defence of Thomas earl of Macclesfield (late lord chancellor) impeached by the commons before the houſe of lords, for high crimes and miſdemeanours, in ſelling the places of the maſters in chancery, May 1725, 11 Geo. I. vi. 618, 663, 664, 685, 686

PROBYN, Mr. Juſtice,

His opinion reſpecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229

PROCESS.

If proceſs be defective, or miſtake in name or addition, or if name of officer be inſerted without authority, and after iſſuing proceſs, or officer exceeds his authority, and is killed, it will be only manſlaughter x. 476

PROCESSIONS of LORD HIGH STEWARDS.

See CARMARTHEN Marquis.
CLARENDON Earl.
COWPER Lord.
DAVENTRY Lord.
DERBY Earl.
ELLESMERE Lord.
HARDWICKE Lord.
HENLEY Lord.
NORTHINGTON Earl.
NOTTINGHAM Earl.
SACHEVEREL HENRY, D. D.
SOMERS Lord. See viii. 572.

PROCLAMATIONS.

They may be of great uſe towards the obſervation of a law, but never uſed inſtead of a law vii. 479
Proclamation iſſued for prohibiting the printing of news vii. 480
The judges eſpouſed proclamations againſt law iii. 223. vii. 481
Proclamation of reward and pardon, on the aſſaſſination plot in William III.'s reign iv. 684, 685
A falſity inſinuated in a royal proclamation of Jac. I. i. 226. n.
A proclamation reſpecting pirates v. 298
A proclamation of indemnity v. 519

A proclamation for reſtraining the ſpreading of falſe news, and printing and publiſhing libels v. 782. See xi. 63

PROMISSORY NOTE.

Indictment for forging a promiſſory note of hand x. 95. Ap. See HALES ROBERT. HALES WILLIAM. KINNERSLEY THOMAS.

*PROOF. See EVIDENCE. WITNESSES.

PROSECUTIONS.

Inſtances of illegal proſecutions, during the reigns of the Stuart family, in civil as well as criminal matters, but more eſpecially in capital caſes, and thoſe chiefly for treaſon iv. 165

See ARMSTRONG Sir THOMAS.
BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.
BATEMAN CHARLES.
CARR HENRY.
COLLEDGE STEPHEN.
CORNISH HENRY.
FITZHARRIS EDWARD.
GAUNT ELIZABETH.
HARRIS BENJAMIN.
LANGHORNE RICHARD.
LISLE LADY.
PILKINGTON THOMAS.
RUSSEL Lord.
SHAFTESBURY Earl.
SIDNEY Colonel.
VANE Sir HENRY.
WILMER.

PROSTITUTION.

Perſon proſtituting himſelf guilty of felony, as well as the actor i. 396

In many countries, an action may be maintained by a courtezan for the price of her proſtitution; but no ſuch action is allowed in England xi. 188

PROTESTS.

Proteſt made againſt the reſolution of the houſe of lords, that privilege of parliament does not extend to the caſe of writing and publiſhing ſeditious libels, contains a maſterly and ſpirited argument againſt thus narrowing the privilege of parliament xi. 305

PROVERBS.

A very wiſe chancellor affirmed, that proverbs were the wiſdom of a people x. 208. Ap.

*PROVOCATION. See MURDER.

PRYNNE, WILLIAM,* Eſq.

* His trial in the Star-Chamber in Hilary term, 1632-3, 9 Car. I. for writing and publiſhing a libel, intitled, Hiſtriomaſtix; or, a Scourge for Stage-players, &c. as alſo the trial of Michael Sparkes for printing, and William Buckner for licenſing, the ſaid libel; and of four others concerned in printing part of it i. 418

* The libel cenſures all manner of plays and recreations as unlawful, and caſts reflections on the king, queen, and court, &c. for allowing them and being preſent at them i. 418

* The keeping of feſtivals does not pleaſe this author i. 418

* Prynne's anſwer to the information i. 419

* Buckner's anſwer i. 419

* Sparkes's anſwer i. 419

* Mr. attorney-general opens and enforces the charge i. 420

* Muſic, dancing, church-ceremonies, and mèn and women's hair offends Mr. Prynne. He inſinuates that we are returning to paganiſm, and perſuades people to fly their country i. 420

* Prynne affirms that he would rather die than put on his maid's clothes i. 421

* King Charles's reign compared with Nero's i. 422

* Mr. Atkyns and Mr. Holbourn, of counſel for Prynne; their arguments in his defence i. 422

* Mr. Herne's argument i. 423

* Commiſſioners ſpeeches before ſentence i. 423

He was ſentenced to be put from the bar, and to be for ever incapable of his profeſſion; that the ſociety of Lincoln's-Inn do put him out of the ſociety, and that he be degraded at Oxford i. 424, *428

The parliament in 1640, reſolved that Mr. Prynne ought to be reſtored to his degrees in the univerſity of Oxford, and to the ſociety of Lincoln's-Inn, and to his exerciſe of his profeſſion of an utter barriſter at law, and to his chamber again at Lincoln's-Inn i. 504

His cenſure was one of the charges againſt archbiſhop Laud i. 864, 882

* Buckner and Sparks cenſured i. 428

Prynne was the proſecutor of colonel Fiennes for cowardice i. 766

His argument in the caſe of Connor lord Macguire condemned in England for treaſon committed in Ireland viii. 341

Account of his 'Chronological vindication of the king's ſupreme eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction' xi. 75. * See i. 481. BASTWICK JOHN.

*PUBLICATION. See LIBEL.

PUCKERING, Sir JOHN, Queen's Serjeant at Law,

Of counſel for the crown on the proſecution of Abington for treaſon i. 135

His reaſons, as ſpeaker in the lower houſe, for the expediency of executing Mary queen of Scots, for a conſpiracy againſt queen Elizabeth i. 158

His ſpeech on the arraignment of Daviſon, in Star-Chamber vii. 23

When made lord keeper i. 194

PUNISHMENTS.

The execution of puniſhments complained of Em. Pref. xii.

Of the puniſhment of peine forte et dure Em. Pref. ix. i. 325, 326

Of the inequality of puniſhment of crimes in general Em. Pref. ix. x.

Of theft in particular Em. Pref. ix.

Of murder in particular Em. Pref. ix.

Of adultery in particular Em. Pref. x.

Of leſs crimes and miſdemeanours Em. Pref. xi.

For ſtriking in the king's palace xi. 16

Cruel puniſhments oppreſs many, terrify all, and conſequently make government odious to the ſubject iv. 172

Inſtances of cruel puniſhments during the reigns of the Stuart family in civil as well as criminal matters, but more eſpecially in capital caſes, and thoſe chiefly for treaſon iv. 165. See
BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.
DANGERFIELD.
HAMPDEN JOHN.
JOHNSON SAMUEL, Clerk.
LEIGHTON.
LILBURNE JOHN.
OATES TITUS.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.

The above cruel puniſhments, and of ſeveral other perſons, as they were againſt law, ſo they were without precedent iv. 165. See DAMAGES. FINES.

PURCHASE, GEORGE,

His trial for high-treaſon, in levying war, under pretence of pulling down meeting-houſes, 1710 viii. 267

Mr. Thomſon opens the indictment viii. 268

The attorney-general's ſpeech viii. 268

Tolboy's evidence of their intention of pulling down the meeting-houſes viii. 269

Mr. Orrell's evidence, that the priſoner thruſt ſeveral times at the officer of the guards viii. 270

Ruſſell's evidence to the ſame purpoſe viii. 272

Richardſon's evidence to the ſame purpoſe viii. 273

Mr. Darnell for the priſoner, urged no general previous intention proved, but this only a ſudden execution of a deſign viii 273

That the priſoner being in drink, was forced about by the mob, but no ways concerned in the intention or execution of pulling down the meeting-houſes viii. 274

Mr. Major on the ſame ſide viii. 274

Evidence for the priſoner viii. 275

Broad's evidence that he was very much in drink, at near eleven o'clock, and muſt neceſſarily paſs the mob to go home viii. 276

Cheekley's evidence, that he only held his ſword undrawn to keep the horſes off viii. 278

Mr. Darnell's ſpeech viii. 280

Mr. attorney-general's reply viii. 281

Mr. ſolicitor's reply viii. 281

Mr. Thomſon's reply viii. 282

Lord chief juſtice Parker ſums up the evidence viii. 282

The jury find a ſpecial verdict viii. 285

A copy of the ſpecial verdict in his caſe, as it was drawn up for the conſideration of all the judges viii. 285

Solemn argument on his caſe viii. 289

PYM, JOHN,

Opens the charge againſt earl Strafford tried for treaſon i. 736

Seconds John Glynn i. 757

His ſpeech on delivering the articles of treaſon againſt archbiſhop Laud i. 826

Q.

QUAKERS.

The quakers give a blaſphemer divine worſhip ii. 270. See NAYLOR JAMES.

A quaker cannot be a witneſs upon an appeal ix. 122. n. See BOLTON JOHN. CROOK JOHN. GREY ISAAC.

QUEEN CAROLINE. See PETITIONS.

QUEEN CONSORT. See PETITIONS.

QUEEN REGENT. See PETITIONS.

QUEENSBERRY, Duke of. See BAILLIE DAVID.

QUELCH, JOHN,

And others, their trials at Boſton, for piracy and murder viii. 205

Arraigned with Matthew Pymer, John Clifford, and James Perrot, upon ſeveral articles viii. 205

That being fitted out to cruiſe on the French and Spaniards, they had plundered the Portugueſe, allies of her majeſty viii. 206

Quelch pleads not guilty, the reſt guilty viii. 207

The reſt of the crew arraigned, and plead not guilty viii. 207

Paul Dudley, eſq. queen's advocate, opens the evidence viii. 208

Pymer, Clifford and Perrot, evidence againſt the priſoners viii. 209

The counſel for the priſoners urge the London Gazettes no evidence of the alliance viii. 213

That the witneſſes were not competent witneſſes, not having received her majeſty's pardon viii. 213

Pirates in the Plantations proceeded againſt in a ſummary way, by commiſſioners, without a jury viii. 214

Found guilty viii. 214

He and four more executed viii. 217

QUESTIONS of LAW,

Propounded to, and reſolved by, all the judges of England. See JUDGES: MOHUN Lord. KINGSTON Ducheſs of. RESOLUTIONS.

QUIDLEY, PATRICK. See GOLDING, & al.

QUO WARRANTO.

By bringing the quo warranto againſt the city, the credit of it was loſt, and many orphans ſtarved, and more impoveriſhed, beyond the poſſibility of recovery; which was heightened by the judgment given in the higheſt caſe that ever came in Weſtminſter-Hall, by two judges only, only, and that without one word of reaſon given at the pronouncing iv. 172, 187

If quo warranto had been a legal method, Henry VIII. would have proceeded by it to diſſolve the religious corporations iii. 556. iv. 187
The quo warranto was brought againſt the city in Hilary term, 1681, upon which there was a demurrer, of which judgment was not given till Trinity term, 1683 iv. 186, 187
Two arguments were only permitted in it of each ſide, one in Hilary term, the other in Eaſter; and ſo the caſe was ripe for judgment in Trinity term following iv. 187
The information at large vi. 16. Ap. See ELLES RICHARD, x. 128. Ap. GIBBON JOHN, x. 128. Ap.

R.

RABY, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His applicationof the evidence on behalf of the crown, on a counſellor's trial for murder vi. 217
His charge to the jury on Hales's trial for forgery ix. 105
RADLEY, RICHARD,
Fined 200*l*. for ſpeaking ſcandalous words of the lord chief juſtice Scroggs viii. 459
* RALEIGH, Sir WALTER,
* His trial for high-treaſon, in conſpiring to depoſe the king, and to ſet up the lady Arabella Stuart, and correſponding with Spain for that purpoſe, and for publiſhing a book againſt the king's title; before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer ſpecially appointed at Winton, the 17th of November, 1603, 1 Jac. I. i. 212
* Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, his ſpeech i. 214, &c.
* Interrupted by Sir Walter i. 214
* The king is king to all intents on the demiſe of his predeceſſor, before he is crowned; and treaſon may be committed againſt him before his coronation i. 214
* Lord Cobham's examination, who was a priſoner, and charged with the ſame fact, read as evidence againſt Sir Walter i. 216
* The priſoner's anſwer i. 216
* Lord Cobham's ſecond examination read; and the priſoner's anſwer i. 217
* The judges rule, that two witneſſes were not neceſſary to convict one of treaſon; and that the 25 of Edw. III. was not then in force i. 218
* An examination not ſigned by the party, adjudged evidence againſt a third perſon i. 218
* Sir Edward Coke affirms, that circumſtantial evidence alone is ſufficient to convict a man of high-treaſon i. 219
* The court rule that the witneſſes need not be produced viva voce i. 220
* Some hear-ſay examinations read i. 222
* Evidence concerning the book i. 221
* The lady Arabella cleared of being concerned in the plot i. 222
* Mr. attorney gives ſcurrilous language to Sir Walter i. 216, 220
* Is reproved by the court i. 223
* A letter of lord Cobham's read in juſtification of the priſoner i. 224
* Sir Walter is convicted i. 224
* Sentence paſſed i. 225
* After fourteen years impriſonment in the Tower, he is made admiral of a ſquadron bound to Guiana i. 226
* Having ill ſucceſs, is executed at his return, upon the former ſentence i. 226, &c.
* Whether his commiſſion did not amount to a pardon, in honour, if not in law? i. 227
* His behaviour before and at execution i. 229, &c.
Of ſir Walter Raleigh's trial all ſince have complained iv. 169
Bacon, when chancellor, told ſir Walter Raleigh, that he had a ſufficient pardon for all that was paſſed i. 227, 228. See BACON Sir FRANCIS.
Inſtead of conſults, &c. in lord Ruſſel's trial, the cant words of the ſurpriſing 'the bye,' and 'the main,' were made uſe of in ſir Walter Raleigh's, interpretable as the counſel thought fit; at leaſt it was aſtoniſhing to the jury, which was all that was deſigned by the counſel, and fatal to the priſoner vii. 63. n.
His trial is printed before his Hiſtory of the World vii. 63. n.
If ſir Walter Raleigh was guilty of the things he was accuſed of by the witneſſes, though the accuſation did not amount to legal proof, it was treaſon, in the opinion of ſir John Hawles, ſolicitor-general to Wil. III. vii. 63. n.
Account of bringing him to execution viii. 339
The attorney-general demands execution of the judgment given againſt him fifteen years before viii. 339
The chief juſtice's ſpeech at granting it i. 227. viii. 339
The king's ſpecial warrant for beheading him viii. 340. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN viii. 64. n.
RAMSEY, DAVID. See REA, DONALD Lord.
RANDAL, Mr.
Burton prays he may be aſſigned his counſel i. 502, 503
RAPE.
There muſt be penetration in rape. So reſolved by all the judges i. 388
Indictment for a rape vi. 4. Ap.
Upon an acquittal for a rape, court oftentimes directs a proſecution for an aſſault with intent to commit a rape x. 518, 519. n. See * AUDLEY MERVIN Lord. BRODWAY GILES. * BUGGERY.
RAPLEY, WILLIAM. See viii. 94, 95. n.
RATCLIFFE, CHARLES, Eſq.
Proceedings againſt him on an attainder for high-treaſon, at the King's-Bench, Nov. 21, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 582
His counſel preſſed to put off the trial, but refuſed by the court ix. 582
His counſel moved, that poſſibly mr. Ratcliffe might be entitled to the benefit of the act 3 Geo. II. ix. 583
But the priſoner having once pleaded in bar of execution, and that plea having been falſified by the verdict, his plea is peremptory, and the verdict concluſive ix. 583
His caſe ſtated ix. 583
Mr. juſtice Foſter's opinion on this caſe ix. 583
Award of execution in mr. Ratcliffe's caſe, agreeable to many precedents which were cited ix. 583
Beheaded on Tower-Hill ix. 583
Some account of him ix. 586
* RAWLINS, PLEASANT v. 449. See SWENSDEN, & al.
RAYMOND, ROBERT,
His ſpeech for Lindſay, arraigned for treaſon, in returning from France without licence v. 516
Opens the indictment againſt Fielding, for bigamy v. 611
RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Solicitor-General,
His reply on the trial of Dammaree, for treaſon viii. 241
His reply on the trial of Willis, for treaſon viii. 263
His reply on the trial of Purchaſe, for treaſon viii. 281
RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-General,
Demurred to the plea of Layer, for treaſon vi. 238
Seconds opening the evidence vi. 254
RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Ld. Chief Juſtice of the King's-Bench,
Delivers the opinion of the judges of that court, on the ſpecial verdict found in major Oneby's caſe, for murder ix. 19
And on that found in Huggins's, for ſimilar charge ix. 142
Sums up the evidence on the appeal againſt Bambridge and Corbet, for murder ix. 177
His opinion reſpecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229
His opinion reſpecting evidence on Francklin's trial, for a libel ix. 260, 267
Of opinion, that it is not material whether libel be true or falſe, if proſecuted by indictment or information ix. 269. See Id. 271.
Sums up the evidence ix. 275
RAYMOND, Sir THOMAS, Juſtice B. R.
Declined giving his opinion on earl Danby's caſe, who moved, on a commitment by lords for treaſon, that he might be bailed ii. 754
Refuſed to bail his lordſhip on motion ii. 760
He was ſent down to the court of Common-Pleas, to know their opinion on earl Caſtlemaine's caſe iii. 46
Of opinion, that the plea of Fitzharris was inſufficient to ouſt the court of their juriſdiction iii. 261
His Reports cited xi. 25
RAVAILLAC,
Who killed Henry IV. of France, juſtified the murder by his conſcience, and ſaid he had done a good thing v. 126. See viii. 369. xi. 116.
RAYNSFORD, Sir RICHARD, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
Of opinion, on the earl of Shafteſbury's motion to be diſcharged or bailed, on a commitment by his peers for contempt, that though he was illegally committed, the commitment could not be examined in B. R. and that he could neither be bailed or diſcharged by that court, but did not declare how his opinion would have been in caſe there had been a prorogation ii. 622
REA, Lord,
Proceedings in the court of Chivalry on appeal of treaſon, by Donald lord Rea, againſt David Ramſey, A. D. 1631, 7 Car. I. xi. 124
Occaſion of the trial xi. 124, 126
The earl of Lindſay, lord high conſtable pro tempore xi. 124, 126
Names of the other commiſſioners xi. 124, 126
Place where the court was held xi. 124
Proceſſion and entry of the earl marſhal and high conſtable xi. 124
Form of preſenting the commiſſion xi. 124
Purport of the commiſſion xi. 124. See xi. 126
Appellant uſhered into court by the herald, accompanied by four knights his ſureties xi. 124, 126, 128
He is very richly apparelled, with a ſword xi. 124
Doctor Reeves his counſel xi. 124
Defendant uſhered in in like manner, accompanied by two lords his ſureties xi. 124, 126, 128
Very richly dreſſed, without a ſword xi. 124
Earl marſhal's ſpeech xi. 124, 126
Effect of doctor Duck's ſpeech, the king's advocate for the marſhal's court xi. 124, 127
Appellant's petition to the king for counſel xi. 128
His majeſty's anſwer xi. 128
Charge or appeal againſt the defendant xi. 124, 127
Appellant challenges the defendant xi. 124, 128
Defendant challenges the appellant xi. 125, 128
He anſwers the appellant's bill xi. 125
Being adviſed by the court to take counſel, craves counſel to anſwer xi. 125, 128
Court is adjourned xi. 125
Appellant entered as before in manner and habit xi. 125
Defendant was new ſuited xi. 125
He preſents his anſwer and defence in writing xi. 125, 128
Craves revenge upon the appellant's perſon by dint of ſword xi. 125
Doctor Eden, of counſel for the defendant, his ſpeech xi. 125
Time given for the appellant's replication xi. 125
His counſel reprimanded by the court xi. 125
Appellant appears as before xi. 125
Defendant appears in another new ſuit xi. 125
Appellant's replication is preſented to the high conſtable xi. 125
Appellant's counſel enforce the charge againſt the defendant xi. 125
Defendant ſeeking flight from juſtice by ſending appellant a private challenge ſufficient conviction in law, according to ancient precedents in this court xi. 125
Doctor Duck's anſwer xi. 125

Doctor Reeves conſents to combat xi. 125
Doctor Duck interrupted by the earl marſhal xi. 125
Letters read xi. 125, 128
Doctor Duck opened the whole matter xi. 125
Doctor Reeves proſecutes the matter xi. 125
Doctor Eden ſpeaks in his excuſe xi. 125
Earl marſhal interpoſes concerning a point of honour xi. 125
Pleaders proceed xi. 125
The court clears the marquis of Hamilton from diſhonour xi. 126
Witneſſes examined vivâ voce xi. 126, 128
Doctor Duck ſummed up all the proceedings xi. 126
Doctor Eden's objections xi. 126
Doctor Duck's anſwer xi. 126
Doctor Reeves's concluſion xi. 126
Court adjourned xi. 126
The buſineſs referred to the king's pleaſure xi. 126
In this appeal conviction incurs no corruption of blood, or forfeiture at common law xi. 126
Defendant releaſed from the Tower upon bail xi. 128
His ſureties become his bail, and enter into a bond xi. 128
The defendant's proteſtation xi. 128
His ſureties releaſed, he remanded to the Tower, and the bonds rendered xi. 129
Doctor Duck's further ſpeech xi. 129
Bill and anſwer ſubſcribed and ſealed by the reſpective parties xi. 129
Duel adjudged between the parties xi. 129
Form of it xi. 129
Appellant's ſpeech hereupon xi. 129
The defendant moves for a ſhorter time to be aſſigned for the duel xi. 129
Sureties for appearance on ſame being appointed xi. 129
Defendant releaſed xi. 129
Weapons aſſigned combatants by the court xi. 129
Appellant's proteſtations or demands xi. 129
Court's anſwers to them xi. 129, 130
The dimenſions of the weapons xi. 130
The defendant's petition to the lord high conſtable and the lord marſhal xi. 130
The anſwer thereto xi. 130
Day of combat prorogued xi. 129
Sureties remitted xi. 130
The appellant aſks the judges, whether he may uſe defenſive arms at diſcretion xi. 130
They anſwer, that both parties may xi. 130
The conſtable and marſhal find the defendant not guilty of treaſon, but that he had ſeditiouſly committed many attempts againſt his majeſty xi. 130
Court decree both parties to be committed to the Tower, till, by ſureties to be approved by his majeſty, they gave in ſufficient caution not to attempt any thing one againſt the other xi. 131
Letter from his majeſty diſmiſſing the court, and diſcharging the combat xi. 131
Marquis of Hamilton's power with the king got all favour for the defendant, who was well rewarded in due time xi. 126
The appellant having done the duty of a loyal ſubject, left the court and kingdom, and returned to his command in Sweden xi. 126. See UCHILTREE JAMES Lord of.

READING.

Inſtance of convicts being put to read for their clergy in Ireland iv. 408, 409

* READING, NATHANIEL, Eſq.

* His trial for a miſdemeanour, April 24, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 806
* Sir James Butler's charge to the grand jury ii. 806
* Probable evidence ſufficient for them to find the bill ii. 806
* Eleven judges aſſiſt at the trial ii. 806
* The indictment, for endeavouring to ſtifle the king's evidence againſt the popiſh lords, by ſuborning the king's witneſſes, and bribing them to retract their evidence ii. 807
* No peremptory challenge but in capital caſes ii. 808
* The priſoner complains of too ſtrict and illegal a confinement ii. 808
* One cannot be convicted of treaſon in an indictment, where the treaſon is not formally laid, though the facts charged do amount to treaſon ii. 808
* Whether he may not be indicted for treaſon, on thoſe very facts, after he had been convicted of a miſdemeanour for them. See Mr. HAMPDEN's trial ii. 808
* Juryman may be examined as a witneſs ii. 809
* The priſoner confeſſes, he believes there was a plot ii. 810
* Bedloe's evidence of the priſoner's tampering with him to retract his evidence againſt the lords ii. 810
* Speke depoſes, that he over-heard the bargain between Bedloe and the priſoner ii. 815
* Bedloe's ſervant depoſes, that he over-heard the treaty between the priſoner and his maſter ii. 817
* Mr. Reading's defence; he ſhews how he became concerned for the popiſh lords ii. 818
* He is told he muſt not aſperſe the king's witneſſes, unleſs he brings proof of what he charges them with ii. 821
* The priſoner to have 100l. per ann. out of every 1000l. per ann. Bedloe got ii. 821
* Bedloe owns he had been engaged in a deſign to fire the city of Weſtminſter ii. 822
* But the priſoner is told, he muſt not aſk him any queſtions tending to make him accuſe himſelf ii. 822
* The priſoner avers that Bedloe firſt propoſed the matter to him ii. 824
* Bedloe owns he pitched upon an eſtate in Glouceſterſhire for his reward ii. 825
* The priſoner clears the popiſh lords of any deſign to bribe Bedloe ii. 825
* He ſays, that his treating with Bedloe was to prevent the ſhedding of innocent blood ii. 825
* Bedloe receives 500l. of the government for his diſcovery ii. 820
* No man ought to be counſel in treaſon or felony, till he is aſſigned ii. 826
* The lord chief juſtice North directs the jury ii. 827
* The jury can have no papers out of court that are not under ſeal ii. 828
* The judgment againſt mr. Reading ii. 829
* He is ſet in the pillory ii. 829. See ix. 309.

* REASON, HUGH, and ROBERT TRANTER,

* Their trial for the murder of Edward Lutterell, eſq. at the King's-Bench bar, Feb. 3, 1721, 8 Geo. I. vi. 195
* The indictment vi. 195
* Mr. ſerjeant Cheſhyre's ſpeech before evidence vi. 197
* Evidence for the king, that the deceaſed was arreſted, and killed by the priſoners whilſt in their cuſtody vi. 198
* Evidence of what the deceaſed declared after he was wounded vi. 201
* Debates about giving evidence of what the deceaſed ſaid on his death-bed, the examination not being produced vi. 203
* The judgment of the court vi. 204
* The ſurgeon's evidence vi. 205
* The priſoners defence vi. 205
* Evidence for the priſoners vi. 205
* Mr. Reeve and mr. Hungerford, their reply vi. 207
* Lord chief juſtice Pratt's directions to the jury vi. 208
* The priſoners found guilty of manſlaughter vi. 212

REBELLION.

Lawful for private perſons to arm themſelves to oppoſe rebellions, &c. ii. 593
There is not, nor ever was a tenure, which obligeth tenants to follow their lords into rebellion ix. 567
The fear of having houſes burnt, or goods ſpoiled, is no excuſe in law for joining and marching with rebels ix. 567
The only force that doth excuſe is a force upon the perſon, and preſent fear of death; and this force and fear muſt continue all the time the party remains with the rebels ix. 568
It is incumbent on every man that makes force his defence, to ſhew an actual force, that he joined the rebels for fear of death, and quitted the ſervice the very firſt opportunity ix. 568
Of what church and religion the rebels executed for the rebellion of 1745, were ix. 565. See TREASON.

RECOGNIZANCE.

Upon oath of party being ſick, his recognizance is reſpited, and admitted to plead by attorney iii. 933
Heretofore when ſwords were not uſually worn but by ſoldiers, if a man was bound to his good behaviour, the wearing one might be a breach of his recognizance for keeping the peace; but now ſwords are worn by all ſorts of people, it is not iv. 198

RECORDER.

Sir George Treby was reſtored to the place of recorder of the city of London, Oct. 6, 1688 iii. 628

RECORDS.

The whole record in caſe of ſhip-money, in Engliſh i. 510
All the records produced in the caſe of ſhip-money, ſtated i. 656, &c.
Thoſe of cowardice i. 815
The record againſt Titus Oates, for perjury iv. 1
The ſecond record againſt the ſame perſon for the like offence iv. 85
Of old time before Edward III. the reaſons of judgments uſed to be entered of record in caſes of difficulty iv. 168. n.
The reaſons of judgments are ſeldom expreſſed in the record of it iv. 168
Corniſh ſuffered for want of the copy of a record iv. 175
Records againſt peers of the realm, for murder iv. 511, 513. v. 137. x. *479, *480. *518, *519
Records in cauſes for miſdemeanours vi. 10, 16, 45, 46. Ap.
Record on ſubornation of perjury vi. 12. Ap.
Record againſt a peer for debauching a young lady of quality vi. 16. Ap.
Record of cauſe for a riot vi. 40. Ap.
Records in treaſon vi. 48, 50, 51, 55, 57. Ap.
Record in action of falſe impriſonment vi. 50. Ap.
Records of proceedings againſt a cheat vi. 58, 59. Ap.
Record of the court of King's-Bench of the proceedings on an information againſt ſir John Elliot, Benjamin Valentine, and Denzil Holles, members of the houſe of commons, for ſeveral ſeditious ſpeeches in the ſaid houſe, and aſſaulting the ſpeaker, and forcing him to ſit in the chair after the king had ſignified his pleaſure that the houſe ſhould be adjourned vii. 253
Record in Latin between Soame and Barnardiſton concerning the election of members to parliament vii. 427
Record in Latin againſt Charles Knowles, commonly called earl of Banbury, for murder in a duel viii. 50
Record in Aſhby and White viii. 89
The record againſt Thomas duke of Norfolk, for treaſon viii. 335
Record of ſurrender in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 664*
Record cannot be falſified by parole evidence ix. 670*
If record avers death of party, court will not admit his appearance to falſify the record x. 433
Indictment on an act of parliament inflicting penalty for ſecond offence muſt recite record of firſt conviction, which muſt be proved; but matter of it is never to be re-examined x. 434
Record in Moore and the port of Haſtings, on a mandamus for admiſſion into the freedom of that corporation x. 138, 139, Ap.
Record in the Bankers caſe, Latin xi. 138

Record of the proceedings in Fabrigas and Moſtyn, a Plantation governor, for falſe impriſonment xi. 186
Record in caſe of a ſeditious libel amended xi. 324
Record of information amended xi. 332
Order of a judge to amend ſeems erroneouſly termed an alteration of a record xi. 333. * See EVIDENCE.

*RECUSANT.

* The beginning of recuſancy, and the reaſon of making the penal laws againſt popiſh recuſants i. 232
Reaſonableneſs of laws againſt them i. 240
* Three perſons, quakers, convicted of recuſancy for refuſing to take the oaths of allegiance and ſupremacy ii. 463
* A popiſh recuſant a good witneſs, till the record of his conviction is produced i. 392. iv. 45
* The juries who tried the priſoner for the popiſh plot directed by the court not to give any credit to the teſtimony of the popiſh witneſſes, how numerous ſoever ii. 876, 907
* King James's mandate to the univerſity of Cambridge to admit a popiſh recuſant to his degree iv. 254

REDDING, JOSEPH. See ANNESLEY JAMES ix. 315

REEVE, THOMAS,

His reply on the trial of Reaſon and Tranter, ſheriff's officers, for murder vi. 207
His reply on the parliamentary proceedings againſt Francis Atterbury, biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 445

REEVES, THOMAS,

Of counſel againſt Corbet, on appeal of murder ix. 152

REFORMATION.

The biſhop of Saliſbury's Hiſtory of the Reformation approved by the houſe of commons, and the author of it received the thanks of parliament v. 86

*REGICIDES,

* Twenty-nine, their trial for high-treaſon, which began at the Old Bailey, London, October 10, 1660, 12 Car. II. ii. 302. See vi. 408
* Reſolutions of the judges and king's counſel upon a conſultation preparatory to the trial ii. 302. See vi. 328
* That any of the king's counſel might privately manage the evidence to the grand jury ii. 302
* In caſe a juror convict a man, it is no cauſe of challenge to a priſoner who is to be tried on the ſame indictment ii. 303
* The lord chief baron's charge to the grand jury ii. 304
* The intention only puniſhable in treaſon ii. 304
* Of which words may be an overt-act ii. 304
* The people have no coercive power over the perſon of the king ii. 305
* The Spencers treaſon; the holding that the king might be impriſoned, or compelled per aſpertee to ſubmit to the people's demands ii. 305
* Any perſon executing an illegal act, though by the king's command, is puniſhable ii. 306
* The king cannot in perſon arreſt any man, or be arreſted ii. 306
* The king cannot ſit in judgment in his own perſon; and his poſſeſſions are ſubject to a trial by jury ii. 306
* The priſoners brought from the Tower to Newgate ii. 307
* They are ſeverally arraigned ii. 307
* Sir Hardreſs Waller pleads guilty ii. 308, 401
* Henry Marten offers to the court, that his name is miſ-ſpelt in the exception in the act of indemnity ii. 309
* And is over-ruled ii. 310
* George Fleetwood pleads guilty ii. 311
* The reſt plead not guilty ii. 308, &c.
* Thomas Harriſon brought upon his trial ii. 314
* Sir Heneage Finch aggravates the charge ii. 314
* Holds, that if any one of the overt-acts laid in the indictment, or any other overt-act tending to the ſame treaſon, be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314
* An account of the number of the regicides, and where diſperſed ii. 315
* Sir Edward Turner's ſpeech ii. 315
* The witneſſes called ii. 316
* Proved, that Harriſon ſat in the court ſeveral days, and particularly on the day of the ſentence ii. 317
* That he ſigned the warrant for ſummoning the High Court of Juſtice ii. 318
* That he ſigned the warrant for the execution of the king ii. 318
* Proved, that Harriſon adviſed to blacken the king in their charge againſt him ii. 317
* Copy of the warrant for the execution of the king ii. 319
* Harriſon's defence ii. 319
* He juſtifies the fact as approved by Heaven ii. 319
* Says, that many upon the bench were as active in the rebellion as himſelf ii. 320
* He excepts to the juriſdiction of the court ii. 320
* And ſays he acted by authority of the parliament, for which he was not to be queſtioned here ii. 320
* Some on the bench anſwer him ii. 320, 321
* The lord chief baron directs the jury ii. 323
* An endeavour to impriſon the king, an overt-act of compaſſing his death ii. 323
* Harriſon convicted ii. 324
* Judgment againſt him ii. 324
* Adrian Scroop, his trial ii. 324
* The evidence againſt him the ſame as againſt Harriſon ii. 325
* Scroop's defence ii. 327
* That he acted under the then ſupreme authority ii. 327
* But forty-ſix members in the houſe, when the act for erecting the High Court of Juſtice paſſed ii. 328
* Whoever obeys a court, where it exceeds its juriſdiction, is puniſhable ii. 328
* The chief baron directs the jury ii. 329
* Scroop convicted ii. 330
* John Carew, his trial ii. 330
* The evidence againſt him the ſame as againſt the two former ii. 330
* Carew's defence ii. 331
* He juſtifies the fact, and inſiſts that the cauſe was approved by Heaven ii. 331
* Carew convicted ii. 333
* Thomas Scot, his trial ii. 334
* Proved, that he ſat as judge in the High Court of Juſtice, that he was there upon the day of ſentence, and that he ſigned the late king's death-warrant ii. 334
* Proved, that he gloried in the fact, and deſired it might be inſcribed on his tomb ii. 335
* Scot's defence ii. 336
* For treaſon and felony there is no privilege of parliament ii. 336
* He endeavours to prove, that the rump-parliament were a rightful and lawful authority ii. 337
* The biſhops excluded by act of parliament ii. 337
* Scot convicted ii. 338
* Gregory Clement retracts his plea, and pleads guilty ii. 338
* John Jones, his trial ii. 339
* Evidence againſt him the ſame as againſt Harriſon ii. 339
* Jones convicted ii. 340
* Scroop, Carew, Scot, Jones, and Clement called to their ſentence ii. 340
* The chief baron's ſpeech to them ii. 340
* He ſhews them the thing was never the leſs ſinful for their pretending conſcience, and that the man who killed a father and mother made the ſame pretence ii. 340
* Sentence pronounced on the laſt five ii. 340
* John Cook, his trial ii. 341
* Proved, that he exhibited the charge againſt the king to the High Court of Juſtice ii. 342
* The king refuſing to plead, the priſoner moved the court that the charge might be taken pro confeſſo ii. 343
* That he demanded judgment againſt the king ii. 344
* That he examined witneſſes againſt the king ii. 345
* Cook's defence ii. 346
* He pleads that he was aſſigned to be counſel againſt the king ii. 346
* That he acted only for his fee, and not with a malicious intention ii. 347
* That he was not inſtrumental in taking away the king's life, having no power in the court, and acting only as counſel ii. 348
* Claims the act of oblivion ii. 348
* Inſiſts upon the king's declaration from Breda ii. 348
* He objects, that his writing treaſonable words, which others dictated, was not treaſon ii. 348
* Mr. ſolicitor's reply to the priſoner's defence ii. 349
* Words tending to the perſonal hurt of the king, treaſonable ii. 350
* A pardon cannot be by implication, but muſt have expreſs words ii. 350
* Sir Edward Turner's reply ii. 351
* Mr. Windham's reply ii. 352
* The chief baron's directions to the jury ii. 352
* Tells them, the exhibiting the charge againſt his majeſty was high-treaſon ii. 352
* The chief baron ſhews, he was not within the equity of 11 Hen. IV. which indemnifies thoſe who aſſiſt a king de facto ii. 356
* Cook is convicted ii. 357
* Hugh Peters brought upon his trial ii. 357
* The evidence againſt him ii. 357
* That he confeſſed he adviſed Cromwell to put the king to death ii. 358
* That he commanded the ſoldiers to cry out, Juſtice! Juſtice! againſt the king ii. 361
* That he was active at the king's execution ii. 361
* That he preached on that text, "Bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron" ii. 362
* Hugh Peters's defence ii. 364
* The lord chief baron's directions to the jury ii. 365
* He tells the priſoner, that the encouraging, aiding, or abetting thoſe who ſat upon the king, and brought him to his death, was as much treaſon as if he himſelf had ſat upon him and ſentenced him; and that his ſeditious ſpeeches in the pulpit, or out of it, were a ſufficient overt-act of his treaſonable imagination ii. 365
* Mr. ſolicitor obſerves, that this was the man who had ſeduced the reſt, who ſaid, they acted in the fear of the Lord; and that his execution might be a means to bring ſome of them to their ſenſes; that his death would preach much better than his life had done, and might in ſome meaſure vindicate the pulpit from that diſhonour he had brought upon it ii. 367
* Hugh Peters convicted ii. 368
* Cook and Peters called to their ſentence together ii. 368
* Cook objects to the indictment, that it does not aver that he is the ſame John Cook, who is excepted in the act of indemnity ii. 368
* The court tells him, he has admitted it, by pleading to it ii. 368
* The chief baron's ſpeech before ſentence ii. 368
* He tells mr. Cook, that thoſe words in the oath of ſupremacy, which he had taken, "That the king is the only ſupreme governor in theſe realms," excludes any co-ordinate power ii. 368
* Judgment pronounced on Cook and Peters ii. 369
* William Hulet, alias Howlet, arraigned ii. 369
* Daniel Axtell brought upon his trial ii. 369
* The king's counſel open the indictment and evidence ii. 369
* The witneſſes produced againſt Axtell ii. 369
* Evidence of Axtell's commanding the guards at the king's trial, and beating the ſoldiers who did not cry out, Juſtice! Juſtice! &c. ii. 370

* Axtell's defence ii. 373

* He inſiſted, that the authority by which he acted, was acknowledged, both at home and abroad, to be the ſupreme authority of the nation; and what he had done was as a ſoldier, by the command of his general, whoſe command if he had refuſed, he muſt have died: that he was no more guilty than general Monk, who acted by the ſame authority; and though it was but an authority in fact, and not of right, he ought not to be queſtioned ii. 374

* He repeats and conſiders diſtinctly the evidence againſt him ii. 377

* The chief baron directs the jury, and tells the priſoner, that no authority can bear him out in being concerned in the king's death ii. 381

* Axtell is convicted ii. 382

* Francis Hacker brought upon his trial ii. 382

* Mr. ſerjeant Keyling opens the evidence againſt him ii. 382

* Hacker confeſſes he was upon the guard, and kept the king for his execution; and being ſhewn the warrant, he acknowledged that to be the warrant he had for it ii. 382

* Two of the commiſſioners come down from the bench to give evidence; but did not go up to the bench again during the trial ii. 384

* Evidence that Hacker acknowledged he did, by virtue of that warrant, ſign another warrant for executing the king; but he did not remember to what perſon ii. 384

* His defence, that he was a ſoldier, and what he did was by command ii. 385

* The chief baron directs the jury, and tells them, that this being the perſon who had the care of the execution, and ſigned the warrant to the executioner, it was not to be doubted but he was guilty of imagining the king's death ii. 385

* Hacker is convicted ii. 385

* William Hulet brought upon his trial ii. 386

* The king's counſel open it, that Hulet was the man who cut off the king's head ii. 386

* Evidence of Hulet's confeſſing he did the execution, and other circumſtantial evidence of his being the man ii. 386

* Hearſay evidence allowed againſt him ii. 387

* Hulet's defence ii. 388

* He produces ſeveral witneſſes to prove, that the common hangman owned he did it ii. 388

* The chief baron directs the jury ii. 389

* Hulet is convicted ii. 390

* Edmond Harvey brought upon his trial ii. 390

* He acknowledges his ſitting in the High Court of Juſtice; but ſays, he did not ſign the warrant ii. 391

* Calls witneſſes to extenuate his crime ii. 391

* Iſaac Pennington brought upon his trial ii. 391

* He acknowledges his ſitting in the High Court of Juſtice, but denies he had any malice to his majeſty ii. 391

* Henry Marten brought upon his trial ii. 392

* Evidence that he was very active in the counſels againſt the king, and very merry at ſigning the warrant for the king's execution ii. 392

* He confeſſes his ſitting in judgment on the king, and ſeems to juſtify it ii. 393

* Gilbert Millington brought upon his trial ii. 393

* He acknowledges himſelf guilty ii. 394

* Robert Titchburn brought upon his trial ii. 394

* He acknowledges his offence ii. 394

* Owen Roe brought upon his trial ii. 394

* He acknowledges his ſitting in judgment on his majeſty, and ſigning the warrant for his execution ii. 394

* Robert Lilburn brought upon his trial ii. 394

* He acknowledges the charge alſo ii. 394

* Henry Smith being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his ſitting in judgment on his majeſty ii. 395

* The lord chief baron's charge to the jury ii. 395

* Harvey, Pennington, Marten, Millington, Titchburn, Roe, Lilburn, and Smith convicted ii. 396

* John Downes brought upon his trial. He confeſſes his ſitting in judgment, and ſigning the warrant for execution; but in his excuſe ſays, he cauſed the court to adjourn, and did his utmoſt to ſave the king; but was induced by threats to comply with the reſt ii. 396

* Vincent Potter being brought upon his trial, confeſſes his ſitting in the High Court of Juſtice ii. 398

* Auguſtine Garland brought upon his trial, confeſſes his ſitting and ſigning the warrant for the execution ii. 398

* Evidence of Garland ſpitting in the king's face ii. 398

* He confeſſes he was chairman in the houſe, when the act for trying the king paſſed ii. 399

* Simon Meyne brought upon his trial ii. 399

* He acknowledges his ſitting upon the king, and ſigning the warrant for his execution ii. 399

* James Temple being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to the warrants ii. 399

* Peter Temple being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to both warrants ii. 399

* Thomas Waite being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to the warrants ii. 399

* William Heveningham being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his ſitting in judgment on the king ii. 400

* Downes, Potter, Garland, Meyne, James Temple and Peter Temple, Waite, and Heveningham, convicted ii. 401

* Sir Hardreſs Waller, Iſaac Pennington, Henry Marten, Gilbert Millington, Robert Titchburn, Owen Roe, Robert Lilburn, Thomas Waite, Edmund Harvey, John Downes, Vincent Potter, Auguſtine Garland, George Fleetwood, James Temple, Simon Meyne, Peter Temple, Francis Hacker, Daniel Axtell, and William Hulet called to their ſentence ii. 402

* The chief baron's ſpeech before judgment ii. 403

* He acquaints the priſoners, that as to all but three of them, execution is to be ſuſpended till another act of parliament ſhall direct how they ſhall be dealt with ii. 403

* Judgment pronounced againſt theſe 19 as traitors ii. 405

* Judgment pronounced alſo on William Heveningham ii. 405

* The behaviour, dying ſpeech, and execution of Harriſon ii. 405

* Of Carew ii. 408

* Of Cook ii. 409

* Of Scot ii. 412

* Of Peters ii. 413

* Of Clement ii. 413

* Of Jones ii. 413

* Of Axtell and Hacker ii. 414

* Of Scroop ii. 416

The regicides were the parricides who took off the head of both kingdoms in a day ix. *651

Several of the regicides juſtify the doctrine of reſiſtance. See their Trials.

They aſſert the principles of reſiſtance at their executions ii. 536, 540. See RESISTANCE.

REGISTER.

The expedient of a voluntary regiſter for ſeamen attempted in king William the third's time, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.

RELIGION.

Proceedings againſt various perſons in reign of Hen. VIII. for denying the ſupremacy, and other capital crimes relating to religion xi. 22

REMARKS. See
* ATKINS Sir ROBERT.
* ATWOOD WILLIAM.
* HAWLES Sir JOHN.
* SHOWER Sir BARTHOLOMEW.
ZENGER PETER.

REPLY.

Priſoner may not reply after evidence ſummed up iii. 1048. See v. 784. ix. 177

When counſel may or may not reply See vii. 136. ix. 132. xi. 266, 271, 288

To call witneſſes after the reply is irregular ix. 743

REPORTS.

After Edward the third's time, the reaſons of judgments were conſtantly pronounced by the court, that they might be publiſhed in books of caſes and reports iv. 168. n.

The reports are nothing but a relation of what is ſaid by counſel and judges in giving judgment, and contain the reaſons thereof iv. 168

Lord Coke challenges that which is due to every reporter of right, that is, to reduce the ſum and effect of all to ſuch a method, as, upon conſideration had of all the arguments, he himſelf thinks fitteſt and cleareſt for the right underſtanding of the true reaſons and cauſes of the judgment and reſolution of the caſe in queſtion vii. 635

The ſecond edition of 8 and 9 "Modern Reports" is much improved xi. 324

So is the report of "Caſes in the time of lord Hardwicke" xi. 213. See COKE Sir EDWARD.
FORD JOHN.
SOMERS Lord.
STRANGE Sir JOHN.

REPUTATION.

Reputation ſignifies nothing againſt poſitive evidence v. 464, 465. See CHARACTER.

RESISTANCE.

The act for conſtituting the High Court of Juſtice, wherein the doctrine of reſiſtance, and the lawfulneſs of calling kings to account, and judging and condemning them by their ſubjects, are avowed and maintained i. 1009

The charge againſt king Charles I. wherein they ſuggeſt that he is but the people's truſtee, or rather ſervant, and charge him that he had traitorouſly levied war againſt his maſters the people i. 1018

And in purſuance of theſe principles, as a tyrant, traitor, and murderer, they adjudge him to death i. 1040

Impeachment for aſſerting the unlawfulneſs of reſiſtance on any pretence whatſoever, and ſuggeſting that the reſiſtance (or neceſſary means) whereby the Revolution was effected, was odious and unjuſtifiable, &c. v. 642

Said, that all government was founded in reſiſtance or compact v. 680

The doctrine of the utter illegality of reſiſtance, on any pretence whatſoever, ſaid to be the doctrine of the church of England, and agreeable both to the common and ſtatute law of the kingdom v. 719

That the Spencers' treaſon (viz. that the king might be depoſed for maladminiſtration) had been condemned by two acts of parliament, and was damned by my lord Coke in Calvin's caſe v. 714, 715

The archbiſhop and other biſhops who attended the duke of Monmouth at his execution, inſiſted that he muſt acknowledge the doctrine of non-reſiſtance to be true, if he would be thought of the church of England; and that archbiſhop Tillotſon preſſed the ſame point on my lord Ruſſel; and that biſhop Sanderſon ſays, the taking up arms offenſive or defenſive againſt a lawful ſovereign, being a thing in its nature ſimply and de toto genere unlawful, may not be done by any man, at any time, in any caſes, upon any colour or pretence whatſoever v. 724

Paſſages out of the Homilies confirming the doctrine of non-reſiſtance v. 730

Several acts of parliament declaring the unlawfulneſs of reſiſtance v. 740
See REVOLUTION.
CHARLES the KING.
COOK JOHN.
HAMILTON Duke of.
HEWET Doctor.

MORDANT JOHN.
PENRUDDOCK Colonel.
REGICIDES.
SACHEVEREL Doctor HENRY.
SIDNEY ALGERNON.

RESOLUTIONS of the COMMONS.
Their reſolutions in report of their committee appointed to inquire into the ſtate of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel uſage of the priſoners, and which occaſioned the following trials, viz. of William Acton, Thomas Bambridge, and John Huggins ix. 107

RESOLUTIONS of the JUDGES.
That a peer cannot waive his trial by peers i. 388
That on a trial by peers, a peer cannot challenge the peers that are returned on his jury i. 388
That a peer cannot have counſel, but upon points of law i. 388
That examinations taken without oath cannot be uſed, unleſs of the party to be tried i. 388
That wife may be a witneſs againſt her huſband in rape i. 388
That there muſt be penetration in rape i. 388
That bail is not to be granted ex gratiâ in ſodomy i. 388
That lords may eat and drink before agreed, but not ſeparate or adjourn till after verdict i. 388
That verdict cannot be given by leſs number of lords than twelve; and that if twelve were for the king, and thirteen for the priſoner, he ſhall be acquitted i. 388
That lord ſteward, after verdict given, may take time to adviſe for any point of law i. 388
That his office continued till judgment, and that it was but a commiſſion pro hac vice notwithſtanding i. 388, 389
That the examination of witneſſes taken by the coroner, they being ſince dead, or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that it is the ſame without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421
That the examination of a witneſs taken by the coroner, the witneſs being abſent by means or procurement of priſoner, upon proof that witneſs was ſo detained, the ſame may be read; but oath that all endeavours were uſed to find out ſuch witneſs, and could not, is not ſufficient to authorize the reading ſuch examination vii. 421
That no words are in law ſuch a provocation as to diminiſh the offence of killing a man, from murder to manſlaughter v. 296. vii. 421
That if upon ill words both parties ſuddenly fight, and one kills the other, this is but manſlaughter vii. 421
That if upon words two men grow to anger, and afterwards ſuppreſs that anger, and then fall into other diſcourſes, or have other diverſions for ſuch a ſpace of time as in reaſonable intendment their heat might be cooled, and ſome time after they draw upon one another and fight, and one is killed, this is murder vii. 422. See vii. 425. MURDER. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8. under STATUTES. SACHEVEREL HENRY, D.D. WORDS.
That a ſentence in the ſpiritual court againſt a marriage in a ſuit of jactitation of marriage, is not concluſive evidence, ſo as to ſtop the counſel for the crown from proving the marriage in an indictment for polygamy xi. 262
Admitting ſuch ſentence to be concluſive upon ſuch indictment, the counſel for the crown may avoid the effect of ſuch ſentence by proving the ſame to have been obtained by fraud or colluſion xi. 262
That a peereſs convicted of a clergyable felony, praying the benefit of ſtat. 1 Edw. VI. chap. 12, is not only excuſed from capital puniſhment, but ought to be immediately diſcharged, without being burnt in the hand, or liable to any impriſonment xi. 264
That all reſolutions of judges ſhould always be given in public in the court of the lord high ſteward of England vii. 421
Reſolutions of the judges and king's counſel upon conſultation preparatory to the trials of the regicides ii. 302
Reſolution of the judges on dr. Sacheverel's trial cenſured vi. 330
The reſolutions of the judges on the ſtatute of forcible marriages v. 464
See APPEALS.
ATTORNEY-GENERAL.
BAIL.
CONVOCATION.
EVIDENCE.
IMPRISONMENT.
INFORMATIONS.
JUDGES.
JURY.
PARLIAMENT.
PRISONERS.
RAPE.
3 Hen. VII. chap. 2. under STATUTES.

RETALIATION,
The beſt pattern for imitation Em. Pref. x. See Lex Juſtior, &c. and Lex Talionis, under MAXIMS.

RETURN.
Return muſt be of an officer's own act, or of another, not what he is certified of by another vii. 119. * See WRITS.

REVERSAL.
Judgment againſt Pilkington and others for a riot, in continuing poll for election of ſheriffs, after common hall adjourned by lord-mayor, and for aſſaulting his lordſhip, &c. reverſed in parliament after the Revolution iii. 661
Attainder of treaſon reverſed, and reverſal affirmed in parliament iii. 752.
See CORNISH HENRY.
LISLE Lady ALICE.
RUSSEL Lord.
SIDNEY ALGERNON.

REVOLUTION.
Sir John Hawles remarks, that undue and irregular proſecutions in the preceding reigns, were one of the great and immediate cauſes of the Revolution iv. 165, 166. vi. 426
The Revolution only reſtored the conſtitution to its firſt principles xi. 321
The Revolution was a moſt auſpicious period, for then the principles of liberty were well underſtood and moſt glorioully aſſerted xi. 352.
* See i. 116, 645, 671.
The reſiſtance at the Revolution was ſaid to be a caſe of neceſſity; and all ſuch caſes are to be excepted in every general rule v. 673, 693, &c. See RESISTANCE. SACHEVEREL Doctor HENRY.

REWARD.
Witneſs's competency objected to, becauſe intitled to a reward on priſoner's conviction iv. 684

REYNOLDS, JAMES, Serjeant at Law,
His argument in the Prince's caſe, being ſolicitor-general xi. 296

REYNOLDS, Judge,
Sums up evidence on trial of Hales and Kinnerſley for forgery ix. 100
* REYNOLDS, JOHN v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
* RICCARDS, ARTHUR iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

RICH, RICHARD, Solicitor General,
Comes to ſir Thomas More, lord chancellor, charged with treaſon in denying the king's ſupremacy i. 59
He ſwears ſeveral things againſt ſir Thomas, that paſſed at his examination, which ſir Thomas denies i. 60

RICHARD the SECOND.
Lord chancellor Elleſmere ſays, that power and might of ſome potent perſons oppreſſed juſtice and faithful judges, in Richard the ſecond's time, for expounding the laws ſoundly and truely xi. 99, 101
Bills of attainder were frequent in Richard the ſecond's time v. 53
During the non-age of Rich. II. the pope began once again to encroach on the crown xi. 74
* RICHARDS, SAMUEL iii. 678. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.
* RICHARDSON, JOHN ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

RICHARDSON, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Juſtice of the court of King's-Bench,
His ſpeech for a mild ſentence on Sherfield, convicted by information, in Star-Chamber, for breaking a painted glaſs-window in a church i. 410
His ſpeech on cenſuring and paſſing ſentence on Prynne, on his conviction in the Star-chamber, for writing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 425. See i. 387, 389

RIGBY, Mr.
His ſpeech in the houſe of commons, in anſwer to lord keeper Finch's juſtification of himſelf, 1640 vii. 312

RIGHT OF COMMON.
If a man who has right of common lays it for ſheep, and proves he has ſuch right for them, cows and horſes too, he ſhall prevail x. 170. Ap.
* RING, WILLIAM iv. 131, 134. See CORNISH, & al.

* RIOTS AND ROUTS.
* Lawful for private perſons to arm themſelves to oppoſe riots, rebellions, or common enemies ii. 593
* A riot is, when three or more are together to do an unlawful act, and enter upon their deſign ii. 613
* Where a number of perſons lawfully convened, continue together to do an unlawful act (after the aſſembly is diſſolved by the proper officer), it is a rout and unlawful aſſembly, though there be no diſorder committed iii. 660
Whether a number of perſons inſiſting upon, and aſſerting their right, where they have a probable cauſe, can be ſaid to be guilty of a riot in ſo doing iii. 659
Citizens who were at Guildhall, innocently conteſting their right of election, were puniſhed as rioters iii. 661. iv. 172
Record of proceedings for a riot vi. 40. Ap. See iii. 629.
HATHAWAY RICHARD.
INFORMATIONS.
PENN WILLIAM.
PILKINGTON THOMAS, & al.
SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.
* ROBERTSON, ANDREW v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

ROBBERY.
The common law does not require the putting in fear to conſtitute the crime of robbery x. 434, 445. See BELCHIER's CASE x. 438
Whether in robbery the putting the perſon actually in fear be a neceſſary ingredient x. 444, 445
Robbery on the highway, without putting in fear, held to be a capital offence x. 438

ROBES.
Reſolved by all the judges of England, that they were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high ſteward in their ſcarlet robes vii. 421. See COLLARS of S. S.

ROBINS, Mr.
His ſpeech in defence of earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), impeached by the commons before the lords of high crimes and miſdemeanours, in ſelling the places of the maſters in chancery vi. 658, 688
His obſervations on the whole trial vi. 697

ROBINSON, the Prothonotary,
Gives evidence on the trial of Green and others, for murder ii. 765
ROCHESTER, Biſhop of. See * ATTERBURY Dr. FRANCIS. FISHER JOHN. SPRATT Doctor THOMAS.
ROCHFORD, Lord Viſcount. See BOLEYN ANNE.

ROCHFORD, Lady, Wife of the Viſcount,
Was attainted and executed for ſerving queen Katherine Howard in her beaſtly practices xi. 11
* ROE, OWEN ii. 394. See REGICIDES.
* ROE, RICHARD. See KENDALL.
* ROGERS, WILLIAM. See COWPER SPENCER.

ROLFE, Serjeant at Law,
Pleaded, that he was a ſerjeant at common law, and not bound to be a knight, but he was forced to it i. 547

ROMAN HISTORY.

Lucius Junius Brutus ſat as judge, and condemned his own ſons as traitors to their country, and cauſed their heads to be ſtruck off in his preſence ix. 296
His memorable ſaying upon that great occaſion ix. 296
Inſtance, from the Roman Hiſtory, of a father being conſidered as acceſſary to murders committed by his ſon, though he never ſpoke to, or ſaw him x. 435
The noble anſwer Pompeius Sextus made on a propoſition made him to break his faith for the acquiſition of an empire ii. 202
Tully bore a great figure in the Roman empire, was very knowing, and well read in the Greek and Roman Hiſtories iv. 172. See TULLY.
When a man names the Poet, the Latiniſts underſtand Virgil vii. 181

ROMISH CHURCH. See POPE.

* ROOKWOOD, AMBROSE,

* His arraignment, 14 April, 1696, 8 Wil. III. iv. 661
* He is indicted for high-treaſon in conſpiring the death of the king, and to that end conſulting and agreeing with other traitors to attack the guards, and aſſaſſinate his majeſty iv. 661
* None permitted to be in private with a priſoner committed for high-treaſon, but his counſel iv. 662
* The indictment againſt the priſoner and three others jointly; but the court ordered them to be tried ſeparately iv. 663
* The court having ſigned the precepts for ſummoning the petit juries, adjourned for a week iv. 663
* Rookwood's trial comes on iv. 663
* Sir Bartholomew Shower and Mr. Phipps, his counſel iv. 664
* So as the priſoner have a copy of the pannel arrayed, the intent of the act is anſwered, though it be not at that time returned iv. 667
* No habeas corpus iſſues on trial for capital offences; but the jury come in upon the venire iv. 667
* The priſoner's counſel object, they have not a true copy of the indictment, the ſtyle of court, &c. being omitted; but were anſwered they had admitted it a true copy, by pleading to it iv. 668
* No exceptions can be taken to the indictment after the jury are ſworn, though the words of 7 Will. III. are, that it may be done before evidence given iv. 677
* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iv. 678
* Where the king pardons under the great ſeal, it has the full effect of a general pardon by act of parliament iv. 682
* Porter's evidence of Rookwood's concern in the aſſaſſination iv. 682. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.
* The priſoner's counſel oppoſe the ſwearing of Harris, becauſe he was intitled to 1000*l.* reward on the priſoner's conviction; but this appeared to be a miſtake iv. 684
* Harris's evidence that the priſoner agreed to be one of the aſſaſſins iv. 686, 687
* Sir Bartholomew Shower's defence for the priſoner iv. 689
* Conſulting and agreeing, an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death iv. 689
* No evidence can be given of an overt-act not laid in the indictment iv. 691
* No evidence ought to be produced without opening iv. 692
* Lord chief juſtice Holt ſums up the evidence iv. 694
* Any thing may be given in evidence that tends to prove an overt-act laid in the indictment, though the thing itſelf that is teſtified be an overt-act not laid in the indictment iv. 697. See i. 224. WINTER ROBERT.
* Rookwood is convicted iv. 698. See vi. 326.

* ROSEWELL, THOMAS,

* His trial for high-treaſon at the King's-Bench bar, 18 November 1684, 36 Car. II. iii. 997
* The indictment is removed out of the county of Surry into the King's-Bench iii. 997
* The words in the indictment which are laid to be treaſonable iii. 997
* The indictment read in Latin, at the priſoner's requeſt iii. 998
* A rule made to bring him up again on the day appointed for his trial iii. 999
* A priſoner brought by habeas corpus to the King's-Bench, may be remanded to the county gaol where he was indicted, or to any priſon in the county where the King's-Bench ſits iii. 1000
* The trial begins iii. 1000
* Two women, the king's witneſſes, depoſe that the words laid were ſpoke by the priſoner at a conventicle iii. 1000, 1008
* Other words permitted to be proved than were laid in the indictment iii. 1010
* Mr. Roſewell has the indictment read to him in Latin a third time at his requeſt, and objects to ſeveral phraſes in it iii. 1012
* The priſoner inſiſts, he never ſpoke the words in the manner the witneſſes teſtified iii. 1012
* Gives an account of the ſubſtance of his ſermon iii. 1014
* He calls his own witneſſes to atteſt what he did ſay iii. 1017
* The chief juſtice uſes the priſoner's witneſſes with contempt iii. 1018
* The chief juſtice obſerves the difficulty of getting the truth out of the priſoner's witneſſes iii. 1023
* The priſoner calls witneſſes to his character iii. 1024
* Evidence that the priſoner uſed to keep the 30th of January as a faſt iii. 1028
* And preached up kingly government as the beſt iii. 1029
* Several perſons examined to impeach the credit of the witneſſes againſt the priſoner iii. 1030, &c.
* Sir John Talbot's evidence to this purpoſe iii. 951
* The evidence cloſed iii. 1037
* Roſewell proceeds in his defence iii. 1037
* The chief juſtice Jefferies directs the jury iii. 1039
* The priſoner may not reply, after the evidence is ſummed up iii. 1048
* The priſoner is convicted iii. 1049
* Deſires the jurors may give their verdict ſeverally; but it is denied iii. 1049
* The king's counſel move for judgment on the conviction iii. 1049
* The priſoner moves in arreſt of judgment, and that counſel may be aſſigned him as to matter of law iii. 1050
* He objects to the indictment, that the words are not poſitively averred to be ſpoken iii. 1050
* Innuendo's inſufficient without a poſitive averment iii. 1051
* His counſel move for a copy of the indictment; but it is denied iii. 1052
* Mr. Wallop's argument for the priſoner iii. 1053
* He quotes a report of the lord Coke iii. 1054
* An innuendo cannot give an original certainty, where a certainty is not fixed before iii. 1055
* Mr. Pollexfen's argument iii. 1055
* Words may be an overt-act of treaſon iii. 1055
* An innuendo without a preceding colloquium, or averment, cannot maintain an action, or an indictment iii. 1059
* Mr. attorney's reply iii. 1059
* That where words are plain and expreſs, there needs no averment iii. 1060
* Mr. ſolicitor-general Finch's reply iii. 1062
* The chief juſtice inclines to allow the exceptions iii. 1064
* The chief juſtice ſhews the repugnancy of ſome expreſſions iii. 1065
* The ſolicitor endeavours to make it good grammar iii. 1065
* No ſtatutes of Jeofails extend to criminal caſes iii. 1067
* No judgment given iii. 1067
* The priſoner pardoned iii. 1067
The record vi. 48. Ap.
His plea of pardon vi. 48. Ap.
His pardon vi. 49. Ap.

ROTHERAM, JOHN,

Counſel for Richard Baxter, brow-beat and ill treated by chief juſtice Jefferies x. 39. Ap.
Of counſel for colonel Sidney, and examined before the lords touching the adviſers and proſecutors of the murder of that gentleman viii. 482

* ROUSE, JOHN,

* His trial for high-treaſon the 13th of July, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 731
* He is indicted with William Blague, for conſpiring the king's death, (and to that end meeting and conſulting with divers other traitors how to ſurpriſe the Tower) and providing arms, &c. iii. 731
* No time can be inſiſted on to prepare for trial in capital caſes iii. 732
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies opens the evidence iii. 732
* Leigh's evidence concerning the ſetting up the duke of Monmouth, and ſeizing the Tower iii. 733
* The plotters ſuggeſt that the king was ſworn in France and Spain to bring in popery, and therefore it was no ſin to cut him off iii. 734
* That the king had forfeited his right to the crown iii. 735
* Rouſe's defence, wherein he acknowledges there was ſuch a plot; but ſays he was trepanned into it iii. 736
* Rouſe is convicted iii. 738
* Sentence of death paſſed upon him iii. 745
* His behaviour at execution iii. 749

ROUTS. See RIOTS.

ROYAL FAMILY.

Proceedings on the caſe concerning the king's prerogative in reſpect to the education and marriage of the royal family, Hilary term, 4 Geo. I. A. D. 1717 xi. 295
The judges meet xi. 295
The king's letter to the chancellor read xi. 295
The queſtion ſtated xi. 295
The prince of Wales's ſolicitor-general deſires that counſel may be heard in behalf of his royal highneſs xi. 295
Judges of opinion that they could not, without his majeſty's leave xi. 295
The queſtion conſidered by mr. j. Blencowe xi. 295, 300
By mr. j. Dormer for the king xi. 295, 296
By the chief juſtice King, afterwards lord chancellor xi. 295, 296
By the lord Parker, chief juſtice xi. 295, 296
Their ſecond meeting xi. 296
Mr. ſerjeant Reynolds, the prince's counſel, afterwards lord chief baron, his argument for his royal highneſs xi. 296
The queſtion conſidered by mr. baron Price xi. 296, 299, 300
By mr. juſtice Eyre xi. 296, 300
By mr. baron Montague xi. 296
Mr. baron Forteſcue Aland, his argument on delivering his opinion xi. 296
Mr. baron Montague's argument thereon xi. 298
Mr. juſtice Pratt, afterwards lord chief juſtice of England, his argument on that occaſion xi. 299
Mr. juſtice Eyre, the prince of Wales's chancellor, his argument on his delivery thereof xi. 299
Mr. juſtice Dormer, his argument xi. 299
Mr. juſtice Tracy's xi. 299
Mr. juſtice Blencowe's xi. 300
Mr. juſtice Powis's xi. 300
Lord chief baron Bury's xi. 300
The lord chief juſtice King's, afterwards lord chancellor xi. 300
The lord Parker's, chief juſtice, and afterwards lord chancellor xi. 300
All the above opinions were drawn up and ſigned by the judges, and delivered to the chancellor, for the king xi. 300
Which his majeſty communicated to his privy-council xi. 300
The kings of this realm have always been entruſted with the care and approbation of the marriages of the royal family. So declared by the legiſlature xi. 295

* RUMLEY, WILLIAM ii. 917. See WAKEMAN, & al.
RUSHWORTH, JOHN,
His account of the proceedings between lord Rea and David Ramſey in the court of Chivalry, on an appeal of treaſon xi. 126
* RUSSEL, Lord WILLIAM,
* His trial, 13 July, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 706. See iv. 187. vi. 414
* The indictment for conſpiring the king's death, and to that end conſulting and agreeing to raiſe a rebellion, and to ſeize and deſtroy the iii. 706 king's guards iii. 706
* He is permitted to adviſe with counſel iii. 707
* And has a copy of the pannel, before the trial iii. 708
* He is permitted to have pen and ink, and the uſe of his papers iii. 708
* Inſiſts on the trial being put off till the afternoon iii. 708
* Is allowed two clerks to take minutes for him iii. 708
* But deſires he may have his lady's aſſiſtance
* Challenges a juryman for want of 40s. per ann. freehold in the city, iii. 708 and is allowed counſel to argue it iii. 709
* Mr. Pollexfen and mr. Holt's arguments iii. 710
* Mr. Ward's argument
* Sir Robert Sawyer attorney-general, and Mr. Finch ſolicitor-general, iii. 710 their reply iii. 711
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies and mr. North on the ſame ſide iii. 711
* The challenge is over-ruled
* The priſoner having challenged 31 peremptorily, a jury is ſworn iii. 712
* The attorney-general's ſpeech before evidence iii. 712
* Lord Eſſex's death in the Tower that day mentioned at the trial iii. 713
* Rumſey's evidence concerning my lord Ruſſel's being at the meeting at iii. 713
mr. Sheppard's iii. 713
* Trenchard diſappoints them iii. 715
* Sheppard's evidence concerning the meeting at his houſe iii. 716
* Lord Howard's evidence concerning the inſurrection iii. 717
* A deſign to alter the government to a commonwealth iii. 718
* A deſign upon the king's life
* Lord Howard's evidence concerning a cabal of ſix that met at Mr. iii. 719
Hampden's; of which my lord Ruſſel was one iii. 719
* The Scotch invited into the conſpiracy iii. 721
* Lord Ruſſel makes his defence
* Alledges that a conſpiracy to levy war is not high-treaſon, by the iii. 721
25 Edw. III. iii. 722
* What may be interpreted a deſign upon the king's life
* Two witneſſes to any one ſpecies of treaſon ſufficient, though they do iii. 729 not ſpeak to the ſame overt-act
* If counſel are allowed to argue a point of law, the fact muſt be admitted iii. 722

* A conſpiracy to levy war againſt the king directly, is an overt-act of a iii. 722. iv. 620, 622
deſign upon the king's life
* But a conſpiracy to levy war, which by conſtruction only is againſt the king, is not ſuch an overt-act as to teſtify an imagination of compaſſing iii. 722
the king's death
* Lord Ruſſel calls many witneſſes, to prove that lord Howard often denied iii. 723, &c.
that he knew of the plot iii. 726
* Mr. ſolicitor Finch's reply to my lord Ruſſel's defence iii. 728
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies's reply to my lord Ruſſel's defence iii. 730
* The chief juſtice's directions to the jury iii. 731
* My lord Ruſſel is convicted
* He makes the ſame objections before judgment as he made at his trial iii. 744
iii. 745
* Which are over-ruled, and ſentence pronounced iii. 752. See viii. 464, 476
* His dying ſpeech iv. 172, 176, 178
Lord Ruſſel was illegally proſecuted iv. 186, 187, 191, 201,
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his lordſhip's trial 202, 205. See iii. 758

That my lord of Eſſex killed himſelf, was a fact inſinuated by the king's counſel as evidence againſt lord Ruſſel on his trial, though not proved iv. 177
iv. 189
His trial was ſigned by the lord mayor for publication
Cauſe of putting off lord Ruſſel's trial was, that the inſinuation reſpecting iv. 190
lord Eſſex's killing himſelf might operate on the jury
The uſage of the king's counſel and the court towards him unjuſt and unfair iv. 195
Nothing in print was ſo eagerly accepted or ſought for as what was iv. 196 called "Lord Ruſſel's dying Speech" iii. 756, 760
His lordſhip's character iii. 760
His indictment inſufficient viii. 463
See "Antidote againſt Poiſon" iii. 755, 757
See "Defence of Lord Ruſſel's Innocence" iii. 788
See "The Caſe of William Lord Ruſſel"
He was by undue and illegal returns of jurors, having been refuſed his lawful challenge to the ſaid jurors, for want of freehold, and by partial and unjuſt conſtructions of law, wrongfully convicted, attainted, and executed for treaſon, in the opinion of the legiſlature, as appears by the preamble to ſtat. 1 Will. and M. chap. 4. for annulling the viii. 471
attainder of lord Ruſſel
See "The Magiſtracy and Government of England vindicated" iii. 767
See Two Letters upon the Subject of his Lordſhip's Trial iii. 756
In lord Ruſſel's trial no freehold was not allowed to be a good challenge iii. 265. n.

Though lord Ruſſel was guilty of the things he was accuſed of, yet he was not guilty of treaſon, in the opinion of ſir John Hawles, ſolicitor-general vii. 63, n.
to Will. III.
A conſult in lord Ruſſel's caſe was held to be an overt-act of treaſon v. 88

State of the charge againſt lord Ruſſel viii. 465. See viii. 64. n.
BAILLIE ROBERT iii. 1104.
EXAMINATION.
HAMPDEN JOHN iii. 834.
RALEIGH Sir WALTER.

* RUSSEL, WILLIAM ii. 993. See ANDERSON, & al.
RUTHVEN, ALEXANDER and HENRY. See
GOWRIE Earl of
RYAN, JOHN. See GOLDING.
RYDER, Sir DUDLEY, Attorney-General,
His ſpeech on lord Lovat's trial ix. *629
His argument againſt the objection that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs in treaſon ix. 656*
His further argument thereon ix. *663
His ſpeech on the proſecution of Owen the bookſeller, for publiſhing x. 204. Ap.
"Murray's Caſe" x. 208. Ap.
His reply to his defence x. 208. Ap.
Puts an artful queſtion to the jury
Declined to argue the point of law, whether perjury, whereby innocent perſons had their lives ſworn away, was a capital offence? x. 446

S.

* SACHEVERELL, HENRY, D.D.
Account of what paſſed moſt remarkable in the houſe of commons, viii. 557
1709, relating to him
His two ſermons reſolved ſcandalous and ſeditious libels viii. 557
Committee appointed to draw up articles of impeachment againſt him viii. 558

Affirms the lord mayor's deſiring him to print his ſermon, though his viii. 558 lordſhip denied it
An addreſs to her majeſty reſolved on, for ſome dignity in the church for Mr. Benjamin Hoadley, for having juſtified the principles of her majeſty viii. 558 and the nation viii. 559
The doctor petitions to be bailed viii. 559
Upon debate reſolved in the negative
The report of the committee read paragraph by paragraph, and agreed viii. 560 to by the houſe
The doctor delivered into the cuſtody of the gentleman uſher of the viii. 561 black rod, and, upon his petition, is bailed by the lords v. 648. viii. 561
The doctor's anſwer read, and replied to by the commons
Debates in the houſe of commons, concerning their right to be preſent at viii. 562 the trial
Reſolved to addreſs her majeſty for a proclamation, to diſcover the fomenters viii. 563 of the tumults about the doctor's trial
Debates about leaving out the words, fomented by papiſts, non-jurors, and of viii. 563 adding the word republicans viii. 563
Her majeſty's anſwer, and the addreſs of thanks viii. 564
The managers receive the thanks of the houſe viii. 564
Diviſion in the houſe upon it
* His trial before the houſe of lords, upon an impeachment of the houſe of commons for high crimes and miſdemeanours, began in Weſtminſter-Hall v. 641
on Monday the 27th of February, 1709-10, 9 Annæ
* The order in which the lords proceed from their houſe to the court v. 641 erected in Weſtminſter-Hall v. 641
* Lord chancellor's ſpeech to the priſoner
* The preamble to the articles exhibited againſt the doctor, juſtifying the v. 641
Revolution v. 642
* The four articles exhibited againſt the doctor v. 643
* The doctor's anſwer to the firſt article v. 644
* His anſwer to the ſecond article v. 645
* His anſwer to the third article v. 646
* His anſwer to the fourth article
* Mr. attorney-general (ſir James Montague) ſhews the neceſſity the commons were under of proceeding againſt the doctor by impeachment v. 648

* Mr. Lechmere's ſpeech, ſhewing the nature and tendency of the facts the v. 651 doctor is charged with
* Mr. Jodrell, clerk of the houſe of commons, ſworn, and proves the doctor acknowledged both the ſermons to be his in the houſe of commons; v. 655 and the doctor's counſel admit it in court
* The dedication ſermon preached at Derby read in evidence againſt the v. 655 doctor
* The dedication of the ſermon preached at St. Paul's read in evidence v. 656
v. 656
* The ſermon itſelf preached at St. Paul's read v. 666
* Second day of the trial
* Sir Joſeph Jekyll's argument in maintenance of the firſt article, concerning v. 666
the reſiſtance at the Revolution
* Mr. ſolicitor-general (ſir Robert Eyre) his ſpeech, wherein he ſtates the ſeveral paſſages in the doctor's ſermon preached at St. Paul's, which the commons produced as a proof of the firſt article; and ſhews the inſufficiency v. 669 of the doctor's anſwer v. 673
* Sir John Holland's argument, in maintenance of the firſt article v. 674
* Mr. Walpole's argument, in maintenance of the firſt article v. 676
* Sir John Hawles's argument, in maintenance of the firſt article,
* Major-general Stanhope's argument, in maintenance of the firſt article, wherein he endeavours to ſhew, that the doctor preached this ſermon with a wicked and malicious intention to undermine and ſubvert the government, and the proteſtant religion, &c. as he is charged in the v. 680 preamble to the articles
* Sir Peter King's argument, in maintenance of the ſecond article, concerning v. 683
the toleration v. 689
* Archbiſhop Grindal's character and conduct vindicated
* The lord William Pawlet's argument, in maintenance of the ſecond article v. 690
* Mr. Spencer Cowper's argument, in maintenance of the ſecond article v. 691

* Third

* Third day of the trial v. 693

* Mr. Thomſon's argument, in maintenance of the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 693

* Mr. Compton's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 696

* Lord Coningſby's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 697

* Mr. Dolben's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 697

* Mr. ſerjeant Parker's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article; being a charge of ſedition againſt the doctor, for maintaining, in his ſermon, That there were men of characters and ſtations in church and ſtate who were falſe brethren v. 698

* Mr. ſecretary Boyle's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 706

* Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 706

* Fourth day of the trial v. 707

* Mr. Lechmere's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 708

* Fifth day of the trial v. 709

* Sir Simon Harcourt's argument in the doctor's defence, as to the firſt article, concerning the reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution v. 710

* Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the firſt article v. 717

* Mr. Phipps's argument in the doctor's defence, as to the firſt article v. 721

* Mr. Dee's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the firſt article v. 727

* Dr. Henchman's ſpeech in defence of dr. Sacheverell, as to the charge in the firſt article v. 728

* The doctor's counſel being about to produce ſome paſſages in the Homilies, &c. in maintenance of the doctrine the doctor had delivered, the managers retire to conſider if they ſhould admit of this ſort of evidence; and being returned, they did agree, that the paſſages the doctor's counſel had collected out of the Homilies and other books, ſhould be read; and they were proved to be juſtly tranſcribed by Mr. Trapp v. 729

* Sixth day of the trial v. 729

* The doctor's counſel deſire the paſſages they had collected might be read: the managers admit, that the paſſages out of the Homilies, and the book called, "The Erudition for any Chriſtian Man," might be read; but as to others, deſire they may produce the books and papers themſelves; to which the doctor's counſel conform v. 730

* Seventh day of the trial v. 752

* Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the ſecond article, concerning the toleration v. 752

* Mr. Phipps's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the ſecond article v. 753

* Mr. Dee's argument in the doctor's behalf, as to the ſecond article v. 756

* Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the ſecond article v. 757

* The act of toleration read v. 759

* A letter from queen Elizabeth, the biſhops, and another from archbiſhop Grindall to the council, proved and read v. 762, 763

* Mr. Dodd's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 763

* Mr. Phipps's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge in the third article v. 764

* Mr. Dee's argument, as to the charge in the third article v. 767

* He makes a doubt, whether it be a high crime and miſdemeanour to diſſent in opinion from a reſolution of both houſes of parliament v. 768

* Mr. Thomſon's reply to that objection v. 819

* Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the third article v. 768

* Some blaſphemous and heretical books produced in evidence by the doctor's counſel v. 769

* The managers oppoſe the reading ſuch blaſphemous paſſages; but the doctor's counſel inſiſt on the reading them, as tending very much to the doctor's defence; and they are read accordingly v. 769, &c.

* Eighth day of the trial v. 775

* Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge of ſedition contained in the fourth article, concerning falſe brethren of characters and ſtations in church and ſtate v. 775

* Mr. Phipps's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 776

* Mr. Dee's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 779

* Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 781

* Proclamations againſt prophanene&szlig;ſs, &c. produced in evidence by the doctor's counſel v. 782

* The doctor's counſel move, that he may have leave to ſpeak for himſelf, after the managers have replied; which the managers oppoſe, and inſiſt, that if the doctor have any thing to ſay in his defence, he may offer it before they reply v. 784

* Dr. Sacheverell's ſpeech in his defence v. 784

* Ninth day of the trial v. 790

* Sir Joſeph Jekyll's argument, by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the charge contained in the firſt article, concerning the reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution v. 791

* Mr. ſolicitor-general's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge in the firſt article v. 798

* Mr. Lechmere's animadverſions on ſome expreſſions let fall by the doctor's counſel v. 802

* Sir Peter King's argument, by way of reply to the defence made by the doctor's counſel to the charge contained in the ſecond article concerning the toleration v. 807

* Tenth day of the trial v. 812

* Mr. Cowper's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the ſecond article v. 812

* He takes notice of the mob having demoliſhed ſeveral meeting-houſes during the trial, which he imputes to the doctrine contained in the doctor's ſermons v. 812

* Mr. Thomſon's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 815

* Mr ſerjeant Parker's argument by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the charge of ſedition contained in the fourth article, concerning men of characters and ſtations in church and ſtate who were falſe brethren v. 819

* The lord Nottingham deſires this queſtion may be put to the judges, viz. Whether in all proſecutions, by indictment or information, for crimes and miſdemeanours, by writing or ſpeaking, the particular words ſuppoſed to be criminal, muſt not be expreſsly ſpecified in ſuch indictment or information v. 828

* The judges reſolve, that all words and writings ſuppoſed to be criminal, ought to be ſpecified in ſuch indictment or information v. 828

* This reſolution cenſured vi. 330, 331

* Reſolved by the lords, that by the law and uſage of parliament, in proſecutions by impeachments for high crimes and miſdemeanours, by writing or ſpeaking, the particular words ſuppoſed to be criminal, are not neceſſary to be expreſsly ſpecified in ſuch impeachments v. 828

A liſt of the lords who proteſted viii. 565

Precedents of parliamentary proſecutions, where the words have been conſtantly expreſſed in the articles viii. 566

* Sixty-nine of the lords find dr. Sacheverell guilty of the high-crimes and miſdemeanours charged on him by the impeachment, and fifty-two vote him not guilty v. 829

* The doctor offers ſome exceptions to the impeachment in arreſt of judgment v. 830

Debates, whether the commons ſhould demand judgment againſt the doctor viii. 565

* They demand judgment againſt the doctor v. 830

* The doctor's exceptions to the impeachment are over-ruled v. 831

* Judgment pronounced againſt the doctor v. 831. viii. 565

* The doctor's two ſermons ordered to be burnt before the Exchange by the common hangman v. 831

* The lords alſo order, that the judgment and decree of the univerſity of Oxford paſſed in their convocation, July 21, 1683, which was given in evidence by dr. Sacheverell at his trial, ſhould be burnt by the common hangman at the ſame time with the doctor's ſermons v. 831

* The lord Haverſham his ſpeech in the houſe of lords, on the firſt article of the impeachment of dr. Henry Sacheverell v. 831

* The biſhop of Saliſbury (dr. Gilbert Burnet) his ſpeech, on the ſame article v. 834

* The biſhop of Oxford (dr. William Talbot) his ſpeech on the ſame v. 840

* The biſhop of Lincoln (dr. William Wake) his ſpeech to the houſe of lords, March the 17th, at the opening of the ſecond article, &c. v. 844

* The biſhop of Norwich (dr. Charles Trimnel) his ſpeech on the ſame occaſion v. 850

Proteſt upon the queſtion, Whether the commons have made good their firſt, ſecond, third, and fourth articles againſt the doctor viii. 567

And whether the anſwer of the lords, in giving judgment, ſhall be guilty or not guilty only viii. 567

Proteſt, upon the lords finding him guilty viii. 568

Proteſt, upon his ſentence viii. 568

* SACHEVERELL, WILLIAM, Eſq.

* George Gregory, Charles Hutchinſon, John Greaves, William Greaves, Samuel Richards, Robert Green, Francis Salmon, Arthur Riccards, Ralph Bennet, John Sherwin, William Wilſon, Samuel Smith, Thomas Figge, Richard Smith, John Hoe, William Smith, Joſeph Turpin, Nathaniel Charnel, Joſeph Aſtlin, their trial at the King's-Bench, for a riot committed at Nottingham, 1684, 36 Car. II. iii. 949

* The information for being unlawfully preſent at the election of a mayor when they had no concern in the election, and for carrying away one of the maces iii. 950

* Sir Thomas Jenner (recorder of London) his ſpeech before evidence iii. 950

iii. 951

* Mr. North's ſpeech iii. 952

* Mr. Jones's ſpeech

* Evidence of a diſpute relative to two charters, and that the defendants committed a riot in contending for the old one iii. 953

* Mr. Pollexfen's ſpeech for the defendants iii. 964

* The court refuſe to hear any thing for or againſt either of the charters, the matter in queſtion being only for a riot iii. 967

* Witneſſes examined for the defendants iii. 968

* Lord chief juſtice Jefferies ſums up the evidence iii. 976

* Twenty are found guilty and fined, and one acquitted iii. 978

* Their reſpective fines iii. 978

SAINT ALBANS. See BACON Sir FRANCIS.

SAINT JOHN, OLIVER,

His argument for John Hampden, eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 515, 537

His ſpeech at a conference i. 699

SAINT JOHN, OLIVER, Solicitor-General,

Opens the evidence againſt Love, on his trial for treaſon ii. 92

The caſe of Oliver Saint John on an information in Star-chamber, for writing and publiſhing a letter to the mayor of Marlborough, againſt a benevolence collected under letters of privy-council xi. 110

Copy of the letter xi. 110

Speech of ſir Francis Bacon, attorney-general, thereon, addreſſed to the court of Star-chamber xi. 111. See GREY LEONARD Lord.

* SAINT LEGER, Sir JOHN vi. 188. See GILBERT JEFFERY.

SALIS-

SALISBURY, Biſhop of. See BURNET GILBERT.
His Hiſtory of the Reformation was ſo far approved of by the houſe of commons, that he received the thanks of parliament for it v. 86
Extract from it in cenſure of unjuſt attainders in the reign of king Henry VIII. v. 86

SALISBURY, Counteſs of,
She was beheaded, though ſentenced to be hanged iv. 129

SALISBURY*, Sir JOHN i. 15. See BRAMBRE.

SALISBURY, THOMAS* i. 121. See BABINGTON, & al.

SALMON, FRANCIS* iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.

SALMON, JAMES. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN.

SANCROFT*, Doctor WILLIAM, Lord Archbiſhop of Canterbury,
* His trial at the King's-Bench, for publiſhing a libel, June 29, 1688, Trin. Term, 4 Jac. II. iv. 304

SANDWICH.
Franchiſes thereof ſeized for notorious riots iii. 589

SANDYS, Sir THOMAS, and the EAST-INDIA COMPANY,
The great cauſe of monopolies, 25 Car. II. vii. 493

SANQUHAR, Lord,
His trial at Weſtminſter, for the murder of John Turner, 1612 vii. 86
The indictment, by the name of Robert Creighton, eſq. vii. 86
His confeſſion and ſpeech vii. 87
Sir Francis Bacon's ſpeech vii. 89
Mr. juſtice Yelverton's ſpeech at paſſing ſentence vii. 90
Lord Sanquhar hanged vii. 91
Lord Sanquhar's execution was the nobleſt piece of juſtice, in lord Bacon's opinion, that ever came forth in any king's time xi. 112
Report of the caſe from 9 Co. vii. 91
Lord Coke tells us, that he reported this caſe with all the circumſtances, becauſe this example hath not its parallel vii. 94

SA, PANTALEON Don,
Brother to the Portugueſe ambaſſador, being convicted of murder by a jury of ſix aliens and ſix denizens, was executed viii. 368. n.

SARUM, Counteſs of,
Attainted for treaſon, in the year 1539 xi. 25
She was beheaded xi. 25
In her the name and line of Plantagenet determined xi. 25

SAVAGE, JOHN i. 128. See BABINGTON, & al.

SAUNDERS, EDMUND,
Of counſel for earl Danby upon his motion for bail ii. 742
Reprimanded by the lord chief juſtice Pemberton ii. 743
He juſtifies himſelf ii. 743
Of counſel for Anne Price, charged with perjury ii. 1027

SAUNDERS, Sir EDMUND, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.
Who had been counſel for the king, in drawing and adviſing the pleadings in the quo warranto againſt the city of London, was made chief juſtice B. R. in the room of Pemberton, between Mich. and Hil. Terms, 34 Car. II. iii. 547. n.
His remarks on the proceedings in the quo warranto againſt the city of London iii. 574
His directions to the jury on the trial of captain Walcot, indicted for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, and raiſing a rebellion in Rye-houſe plot iii. 701
His ſumming up the evidence on the trial of ſir Patience Ward, on information for perjury iii. 682
The judgment againſt Pilkington and others for a riot, on which trial ſir Edmund Saunders preſided, was reverſed at the Revolution iii. 662

SAWYER, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-General,
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of ſir George Wakeman, baronet, and others, for treaſon, in conſpiring the king's death ii. 920
Argues, that Fitzharris's plea to the juriſdiction of the court was defective both as to matter and form iii. 234
Anſwers the arguments of his counſel iii. 254
Opens the evidence againſt him for a treaſonable libel iii. 267
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Plunket, D. D. for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of his majeſty, and ſubverſion of the eſtabliſhed religion and government in Ireland iii. 295
Opens the evidence on the trial of Colledge, for treaſon iii. 351
He is ſeverely characteriſed by mr. ſolicitor-general ſir John Hawles, for his conduct on Colledge's proſecution iv. 173, 191. See iv. 166
Opens the evidence on the trial of Ford lord Grey and others, for ſeducing and carrying away, and adulterouſly ſoliciting a young lady of quality iii. 520, 521
His argument on the proceedings againſt the city of London on the quo warranto iii. 546
His ſur-rejoinder and demurrer iii. 548
His reply iii. 575
Opens the evidence on the trial of Pilkington and Shute, ſheriffs, Corniſh alderman, Ford lord Grey of Werk, the chamberlain of London, and ten others, on information for a riot, in continuing the poll for the election of ſheriffs, after common-hall adjourned by lord mayor, and for aſſaulting his lordſhip iii. 635
His ſpeech on trial by information of ſir Patience Ward, for perjury iii. 662
His reply iii. 679
His reply on challenge for want of freehold on the trial of lord Ruſſel, for treaſon, in conſpiring the king's death iii. 710
Sir Robert Sawyer diſclaimed under his hand being author of "Lord Ruſſel's Innocency further defended" iii. 784, 788
His ſpeech before evidence againſt Sidney, tried for high-treaſon, in conſpiring the king's death iii. 797
His argument for the Eaſt-India Company againſt ſir Thomas Sandys iii. 528
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of captain Walcot, for treaſon, for conſpiring the death of the king, and for being concerned in the Rye-houſe plot iii. 685
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Hampden, for a rebellious miſdemeanour iii. 824
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Braddon, for ſubornation of witneſſes iii. 856
His reply to motion in arreſt of judgment on conviction of Roſewell, for ſpeaking treaſonable words iii. 1059
Of counſel for ſir William Pritchard againſt Papillon, for cauſing plaintiff to be arreſted, being then lord mayor of London, without cauſe iii. 1073
His reply iii. 1085
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Oates, D. D. for perjury iv. 5, 71
His reply iv. 42
His ſpeech before evidence againſt alderman Corniſh, for treaſon iv. 147
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of lord Delamere in the court of the lord ſteward, for treaſon iv. 216
Expelled the houſe of commons in 1689, for the part he took as attorney-general in the proſecution of ſir Thomas Armſtrong iii. 986
This attorney-general, of all men who ever came to the bar, hath laid down the moſt rules which depend totally upon the authority of his own ſaying iv. 191

SCANDAL.
Earl of Suffolk charged with ſpeaking ſcandal of mr. Selden, with the proceedings thereupon vii. 182. See LIBEL. WRAYNHAM.

SCANDAL. MAGNAT.*
When the word 'falſely' is inſerted in proceedings for ſcand. mag. defendant ought not to be found guilty, if aſſertion be true Em. Pref. viii.
Writ of enquiry on the ſtatute de ſcand. magnat. iii. 987. See OATES TITUS. YORK JAMES Duke of.

SCOT, THOMAS*,
The regicide, gloried in the fact, and deſired it might be inſcribed on his tomb ii. 335. See ii. 334. REGICIDES.

SCOT, Sir WILLIAM,
Hunney was impriſoned, judged, fined, and ranſomed, for complaining to king Edw. III. that ſir William Scot, chief juſtice, had awarded an aſſize contrary to law vii. 109. See ix. 287.

SCOTLAND.*
The commiſſion of Mary queen of Scots, to try James earl Bothwell, for the murder of her huſband Henry earl Darnley, king of Scots i. 77
* The method obſerved in the trials of criminals there i. 429. ii. 623. iii. 441, 1095. iv. 283
Scotſmen admitted to give evidence in England, even before the Union ii. 11
A nation of great learning and eloquence, and wherein very conſiderable advantages are allowed priſoners, not enjoyed in England Em. Pref. i.
The manner of Scotland is, that when a gentleman is hanged with a man of meaner quality than himſelf, the gentleman hath the honour of the higher gibbet, and thinks himſelf much wronged if he be not ſo diſtinguiſhed vii. 91
Shan O'Neale, a bloody deſperate rebel, was hewn in pieces by the Scots viii. 350
By the laws of Scotland, compeared ſignifies appeared; pannel, priſoner or defendant; purſuers, counſel againſt the priſoner; procurators in defence, counſel for defendant; aſſize, jury; aſſoilzie, acquit ix. 26. n.
The ſtatute of ſtabbing (1 Jac. I. chap. 8.) was enacted in the time of king James I. when many animoſities aroſe between the Engliſh and the Scotch, who, uſing daggers, were accuſtomed to ſtab ſeveral of the Engliſh ex improviſo, which could not have been done by a flat ſword, the uſual weapon of the Engliſh; therefore this ſtatute was deſigned to ſecure defenceleſs people from ſurprize, ſuppoſing whoever ſtruck would be prepared ix. 534. n. 535. n.
Proceedings relating to a plea, that a native of Scotland ought to be tried according to the laws of that kingdom, by virtue of the act of Union, in England ix. 567
By the law of Scotland, in all criminal purſuits, the defender, or his advocate, is always the laſt ſpeaker, except in caſes of treaſon or rebellion x. 106. n.
Of appeals from Scotland to England x. 520. n. See
ARGYLE Earl of.
ARGYLE Marquis of.
ARMS.
BAILLIE DAVID.
BAILLIE ROBERT.
BALMERINO Lord.
BALMERINOTH Lord.
BEHEADING.
BOTHWELL Earl.
CARNEGIE JAMES.
EXECUTION.
GOWRIE, JOHN Earl of.
GREEN THOMAS.
INDICTMENTS.
JURY.
LINDSAY DAVID.
LOGAN ROBERT.
MAITLAND CHARLES, Lord HALTON.
MITCHELL JAMES.
NAIRN CATHARINE.
OGILVIE JOHN.
OGILVIE PATRICK.
PORTEOUS JOHN.
POSTNATI.

SCOTS, MARY Queen of.
SPOTISWOOD Sir ROBERT.
SPROT GEORGE.
STANSFIELD PHILIP.
STEWART ARCHIBALD.
STEWART JAMES.
STIRLING JAMES.
UCHILTREE Lord.

SCROGGS, Sir WILLIAM, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench,
Sums up the evidence, and paſſes ſentence on the trial of Stayley, convicted for ſpeaking treaſonable words in French ii. 659
His directions to the jury on Coleman's trial for treaſon ii. 689
Makes a ſpeech to the priſoner before ſentence ii. 693
Tells him, that whoever brings in popery, conſequently brings in a foreign authority ii. 693
That the actor or agent is anſwerable for the conſequences of all ill actions ii. 693
His directions to the jury on the trial of Ireland and others, for treaſon ii. 719
Directs the jury againſt Green and others, for murder ii. 785
His directions to the jury on the trial of Thomas White or Whitebread, and others, for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, and to ſubvert religion and government ii. 875. See ii. 832, 861
He admits on the trial of Langhorne, for treaſon, that a witneſs may be confronted by another, to prove what the witneſs ſwore at another trial relating to the priſoner, was falſe ii. 900
His directions to the jury ii. 906. See iii. 222. vii. 485.
His directions to the jury on the trial of Kerne, for treaſon ii. 961
Directs the jury to find Bromwich guilty of treaſon, if they believe him from circumſtances, without the evidence of two poſitive witneſſes, to be a prieſt ii. 968
Directs the jury on the trial of Anderſon and others, for treaſon ii. 1000
Sat on the trial of Harris, for a libel ii. 1037
Speech on that trial ii. 1038
Pronounced ſentence of fine, pillory, and ſureties for good behaviour, and would have added whipping, had it not been for mr. juſtice Pemberton ii. 1040. See iii. 219. vii. 483.
The ſeditious libel for which Francis Smith was convicted, in 1679, 32 Car. II. reflected chiefly on lord chief juſtice Scroggs ii. 1040. See iii. 220.
The impriſonment of Smith makes part of one of the articles of impeachment againſt the chief juſtice, for treaſon vii. 487
The trial of mrs. Curtis, for publiſhing a libel reflecting chiefly upon his lordſhip ii. 1042. See iii. 219.
Her impriſonment makes another part of one of the articles of impeachment againſt the chief juſtice, for treaſon vii. 487
Directs the jury on the trial of earl Caſtlemaine, for treaſon iii. 55
In his direction to the jury on the trial of Henry Carr, for a libel, ſhews his reſentment at noiſe and humming made in court iii. 63
The proceedings againſt Carr make the ſubſtance of one of the articles of impeachment againſt the chief juſtice vii. 486, 487
Tells the jury, they are not to expect ſuch ſtrict proof in this as in common caſes iii. 63
That preſumptive evidence is often admitted even in capital caſes iii. 63
That it has been reſolved and ſubſcribed by all the judges, when his majeſty demanded their opinions concerning the regulation of the preſs, that to print or publiſh news books, or pamphlets of news, without authority, was illegal, and diſcovered a manifeſt intent to a breach of the peace, though no ſcandal in them iii. 64
That if there were no ſcandal, the author ought to be convicted for publiſhing ſuch books without authority; that alone being illegal iii. 64
Cenſures the folly of the age in being ſo fond of news-papers iii. 64
Says, it was ridiculous for the author to hope court of juſtice would not underſtand what he deſigned all the reſt of the world ſhould iii. 64
That if jury found defendant guilty of fact, court would judge whether it implied malice, about which jury were not to trouble themſelves iii. 64
That jury, by finding defendant guilty, do not ſay upon their oaths abſolutely that he is the author, but that they believe him to be ſo iii. 64. See iii. 219. vii. 478. n. 482.
Said, he verily believed Langborne died innocently, whom he had condemned himſelf iii. 222. vii. 485
The articles of high miſdemeanours exhibited againſt him to the king and council by captain Bedloe and dr. Oates vii. 476
His anſwer to them vii. 478, 479
His ſpeech, occaſioned by the many libellous pamphlets publiſhed viii. 457
Proceedings againſt him vii. 479
Parliamentary reſolution to impeach him iii. 224. iv. 166. vii. 486
Other articles of impeachment againſt him vii. 488
Speeches in parliament thereon vii. 488
His anſwer to them vii. 490
He was removed from being chief juſtice, but with all marks of favour and reſpect, and allowed a penſion for life iii. 224. vii. 490
Never thought fit for his eminent place viii. 488. See RADLEY RICHARD. TASBOROUGH JOHN.

* SCROOP, ADRIAN ii. 324. See REGICIDES.

* SEAL. See GREAT SEAL.

SEAMEN.
The expedient of a voluntary regiſter for ſeamen attempted in William the third's reign, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.

* SEATON, ARCHIBALD v. 630. See STIRLING, & al.

SECRETARY of STATE.
Commitment by ſecretary of ſtate illegal, and never practiſed till 1678, 29 Car. II. iv. 555, 557
Secretaries of ſtate, when they commit, are conſidered as common juſtices of the peace xi. 304
A ſecretary of ſtate is not a conſervator of the peace ex officio, and therefore not within the equity of the ſtatutes in favour of juſtices of the peace xi. 319, 320
He has not power to commit for any offence under treaſon xi. 319
The hiſtory of this officer xi. 317
Secretary of ſtate's law clerk has no more authority to examine perſons and papers than a common juſtice of peace's clerk xi. 320
His warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302. See ENTICK JOHN, Clerk. KENDALL. WILKES JOHN.

SEDITION.
The meaning of the word ſedition, and what it implies in law vii. 220, 223, 225, 231. See
ELLIOT Sir JOHN.
JENKES FRANCIS.
KNIGHTLEY Sir RICHARD.
LIBELS.
LILBURNE JOHN.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.
SACHEVERELL HENRY, D. D.
TUTCHIN JOHN.
UCHILTREE Lord.
WILKES JOHN.

SEDLEY, Sir CHARLES, Bart.
Was indicted for expoſing himſelf naked in a balcony in Covent-Garden, to a multitude of people x. 94. Ap.
Court of King's-Bench told him they were the cuſtos morum of the king's ſubjects, and would puniſh ſuch actions committed againſt all modeſty x. 94. Ap.
He confeſſed the indictment; and the court, conſidering he was a gentleman of an ancient family in Kent, and his eſtate incumbered (not intending his ruin, but his reformation), fined him only 2000 marks, to be impriſoned a week, and to be of good behaviour for three years x. 94. Ap.

SEDUCTION.
Record of proceedings againſt a peer for debauching his wife's ſiſter vi. 16. Ap. See GREY FORD Lord.
Indictment lies for ſeducing ſervant from maſter's ſervice Em. Pref. x. n.

SEIZURE of PAPERS.
Warrant for the ſeizure of papers cannot be juſtified in the caſe of a ſeditious libel xi. 307, 312, 320, 323
No lord chief juſtice, except Scroggs, ever aſſumed the authority of ſeizing papers xi. 321
The ſeizure of papers is illegal xi. 321
The reaſon iv. 174, 175. xi. 323. See ENTICK JOHN, Clerk.

SELBY, JAMES, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of Coke, counſellor at law, on the maiming act vi. 213

SELDEN, JOHN,
His argument on habeas corpus in B. R. brought by perſons impriſoned for refuſing to lend money upon commiſſions for loans vii. 121. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.
His ſpeech relating to the liberty of the ſubject vii. 148
His argument on a conference with the lords on the ſame ſubject vii. 155
Precedents of perſons committed by the king's command, bailed vii. 157
Precedents è contra anſwered vii. 159
Copies of the records of the precedents cited vii. 162
Earl Suffolk charged with ſpeaking ſcandalouſly of mr. Selden, member of the houſe of commons, and one of the managers of the conference; and proceedings thereon vii. 182
Speech concerning the propoſitions delivered by the lords to the king vii. 187
About the bill concerning magna charta vii. 191
His argument on habeas corpus againſt return vii. 229
Proceedings againſt him in Star-chamber, May 29, 1630, 6 Car. I. for publiſhing a ſeditious writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD Earl of.

* SELLERS, JOHN ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

SENTENCES.
Againſt William Prynne, for writing and publiſhing Hiſtriomaſtix:
That the book be burnt by the hand of the hangman; that mr. Prynne be put from the bar, and be for ever incapable of his profeſſion; that the Society of Lincoln's-Inn do put him out; that the Univerſity of Oxford do degrade him; that he do ſtand in the pillory in Weſtminſter and Cheapſide; that he loſe both his ears, one in each place; that he have a paper on his head, declaring, it is for an infamous libel againſt both their majeſties, ſtate, and government; that he be fined 5000l. [10,000l. i. 428.] to the king; and that he be perpetually impriſoned i. 424, 426, 427, 428
To be reſtrained from writing, neither to have pen, ink or paper i. 426
To be branded in the forehead, ſlit in the noſe, and his ears cropped i. 428
Againſt Thomas Buckner, for licenſing the ſaid book, that he be impriſoned, and fined 50l. to the king i. 425, 426
Againſt Michael Sparkes, for printing and ſelling the ſaid book, to be fined 500l. to the king; to ſtand in the pillory in Cheapſide i. 425, 426, 428
Another againſt William Prynne, for ſeveral libels; to loſe his ears in Palace-yard, Weſtminſter; to be fined 5000l. to his majeſty; and to perpetual impriſonment in a remote part of the kingdom; to be ſtigmatized in the cheeks with two letters (S. and L.) for a ſeditious libeller i. 486, 497, 500, 501
Againſt John Baſtwick, doctor of phyſic, and Henry Burton, clerk, for ſame offence, ſame puniſhment, except ſtigmatizing i. 486, 499, 500, 502, 505
Blaſphemer ſentenced to be bored through the tongue, &c. ii. 272

To paſs ſentence on day of conviction is a violent and precipitate proceeding iv. 779
Sentence of the Eccleſiaſtical Court deemed of no force, although not before controverted for 1475 years xi. 246
Sentence in Spiritual Court againſt a marriage in ſuit of jactitation of marriage, not concluſive evidence in indictment for polygamy xi. 262. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
Effect of ſuch ſentence may be avoided, by proving the ſame fraudulent or colluſive xi. 262. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
Sentence of nullity, and ſentence in affirmance of a marriage, are concluſive evidence on a queſtion of legitimacy ariſing incidentally upon a claim to a real eſtate xi. 261. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
Sentence in cauſe of jactitation is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence againſt a marriage; and ſo it is in perſonal actions, founded immediately on a ſuppoſed marriage xi. 261. By all the judges of England.
A direct ſentence in a ſuit upon a promiſe of marriage, againſt the contract, admitted evidence againſt ſuch contract, in an action upon the promiſe for damages xi. 261. So reſolved by all the judges of England.
Sentence of nullity is concluſive evidence in a perſonal action againſt a defence founded upon a ſuppoſed coverture xi. 261
Elizabeth Gaunt was ſentenced to be hanged for treaſon iv. 160
King Charles the firſt was ſentenced to be beheaded for treaſon i. 1040
See EXECUTIONS. JUDGMENTS. See alſo PUNISHMENTS; and the ſame article in the Alphabetical and Chronological Tables.

SERMONS.
Doctor Binkes's ſermon on 30th of January, 1701-2, cenſured by the lords viii. 81
Doctor Sacheverell's ſermon. See SACHEVERELL HENRY, D. D.
Some paſſages in Hugh Latimer's ſermon, touching lord Sudley's death vii. 10

SERVANTS. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

SEVEN BISHOPS.
Their caſe of the greateſt concernment and conſequence that ever was in Weſtminſter-hall iv. 320, 321, 342
This caſe, as to a libeller being bound to find ſurety of the peace, denied to be law xi. 304, 305
All the counſel for the defendants were lovers of liberty, and the greateſt lawyers of the age xi. 304
Powell was the only honeſt judge of the four who ſat on that trial xi. 304, 305
The counſel on both ſides in this cauſe were the ableſt of their time, and few times have produced abler xi. 319

SEYMOUR, Sir EDWARD,
His ſpeech in the cauſe of Aſhby and White viii. 103

SEYMOUR, Sir FRANCIS,
His ſpeech in parliament, concerning perſons impriſoned for not paying the loan vii. 140

SEYMOUR, Lord SUDLEY,
Proceedings in parliament againſt him, for high-treaſon, 3 Ed. VI. vii. 1
Marries the queen dowager, and endeavours to be made governor of the king's perſon vii. 1
Articles of high-treaſon againſt him vii. 2
Duke of Somerſet's letter to ſir Thomas Hobby, declaring the traitorous proceedings of the admiral vii. 2
Some of the council go to him in the Tower, to deſire his anſwer to the charge vii. 4
The admiral anſwers three of the articles, but would go no farther vii. 5
The act for his attainder vii. 6
The warrant for his execution vii. 10
Some paſſages out of biſhop Hugh Latimer's ſermons, concerning the admiral's manner of dying vii. 11

SHADWELL,
Lady Ivy's trial for great part of it vii. 571

SHAFTESBURY, ANTHONY Earl of.
He was committed to the Tower by the houſe of lords during the king's pleaſure, or that of the houſe, for moving a queſtion in parliament about the legality of a prorogation ii. 616. n.
* His caſe on a motion in the King's-Bench to be admitted to bail, the 27th and 29th of June, 1677, Trin. Term, 29 Car. II. ii. 616
* His commitment by the lords for contempts in general; which his counſel urge is an illegal commitment ii. 617
* And that its being by the houſe of peers, made no difference ii. 617
* And that the court of B.R. might examine parliamentary matters ii. 617
* The king's counſel make a reply ii. 620
* The earl makes a ſpeech in anſwer to the attorney and ſolicitor general ii. 621
* Mr. juſtice Jones delivered his opinion, that though the commitment was ill, it could not be examined here; and that the earl could not be bailed or diſcharged here ii. 622
* Mr. juſtice Wild of the ſame opinion ii. 622
* As was ſir Richard Raynsford, lord chief juſtice ii. 622
* And mr. juſtice Twyſden: but none of them declared what their opinions were in caſe the ſeſſion had been concluded, but mr. juſtice Wild; who ſaid, in that caſe, that the earl ought to have been diſcharged ii. 622
* Proceedings at the Old-Bailey, on an indictment for high-treaſon preferred againſt him, Nov. 24, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 418. See iv. 183
* The grand jury ſworn iii. 418
* The lord chief juſtice Pemberton's charge to them iii. 418
* He tells them, that words would not amount to treaſon within 25 Edw. III. any more than a deſign to impriſon the king; but that by the 13 Car. II. words tending to ſuch a deſign were treaſonable iii. 419
* That two witneſſes to every overt-act are not neceſſary iii. 419
* That if there appear a probability of the party's guilt who is indicted, it is a ſufficient inducement to find the bill iii. 419
* The king's counſel move, that the evidence may be given to the grand jury in court iii. 420
* The grand jury inſiſt, that they ought to examine the witneſſes in private, being bound by their oaths to keep the king's ſecrets, and it being the conſtant practice ſo to do iii. 420
* The chief juſtice tells them, their debates indeed ought to be in private, but anciently the evidence was given in court iii. 420
* The grand jury ſtill inſiſt they are bound to keep the king's ſecrets; and the court tell them, the caſe is altered, where the king waives that matter iii. 421
* The indictment iii. 421
* A paper found in my lord Shafteſbury's cuſtody given in evidence againſt him, being an aſſociation for excluding the duke of York, and deſtroying the king's regular forces; wherein the ſubſcribers bind themſelves to obey ſuch officers as the majority of the parliament ſhall appoint; and in the interval of parliament, ſuch officers as a majority of the ſubſcribers ſhall appoint iii. 424
* Booth's evidence, of his being appointed by my lord Shafteſbury to aſſiſt in ſurpriſing the king, if he ſhould not agree to the demands of the parliament of Oxford iii. 426
* Other evidence to the ſame purpoſe iii. 428
* The grand jury retire to conſider what queſtions to aſk the witneſſes iii. 432
* They deſire to know if any of the witneſſes are indicted; but are told it is not their buſineſs to examine to the credibility of the witneſſes: but if they know any thing of them themſelves, they may conſider of it iii. 432
* The grand jury put their queſtions to the witneſſes iii. 433
* The king's witneſſes in danger of being knocked on the head by the populace iii. 435, 436
* Having withdrawn ſome time, they return the bill ignoramus; at which the people ſhout iii. 441
Sir John Hawles's remarks on the earl's grand jury iv. 183
His lordſhip's ſpeech in the houſe of lords, upon the debate of appointing a day for the hearing doctor Shirley's cauſe vii. 463

SHARPE, Doctor JOHN. See COMPTON Doctor HENRY.
* SHARPLESS, JOHN ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

* SHERFIELD, HENRY, Eſq.
* Proceedings againſt him in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glaſs-window in a church, 8 Car. I. i. 399
* The information againſt him i. 399
* In his anſwer he owns the fact, and juſtifies it i. 399
* Alledges that it was a ſuperſtitious picture, and taken down by order of the veſtry i. 400
* Depoſitions of the king's witneſſes read i. 401
* The defendant's reply i. 403
* Mr. attorney's anſwer i. 407
* The commiſſioners differ in opinion as to the ſentence: the ſpeech of lord Cottington for a ſevere one i. 408
* Sir Robert Heath for a mild one i. 409
* Sir Thomas Richardſon, the ſame i. 410
* Secretary Windebanke, for a ſevere one i. 411
* Secretary Cook and ſir Thomas Jermyn, for a mild one i. 411
* Sir Henry Vane, for a ſevere one i. 411
* Sir Thomas Edmonds, for a mild one i. 412
* Dr. Laud, biſhop of London, for a ſevere one i. 412. See 895.
* Lord Falkland, and earl of Devon, for the ſame i. 414
* Viſcount Wimbleton, and earl of Dorſet, for a mild one i. 414
* Earl of Arundel, for a ſevere one i. 415
* Earl of Mancheſter, for an eaſy one i. 415
* Dr. Neale, archbiſhop of York, for a ſevere one i. 416
* Lord keeper, for a mild one i. 417
* His ſentence i. 418
Cenſure of Robert Sherfield for defacing a church-window, one of the charges againſt archbiſhop Laud i. 895

SHERIFFS OF LONDON.
Whether common-hall bound to elect perſons drank to by lord-mayor, ſheriffs? iii. 651, 652
High ſheriff ſits covered, on his being preſent in court, at execution of writ of inquiry iii. 987
The ſheriffs North and Rich were impoſed on the city iv. 171, 186, 188
The city's right of electing ſheriffs taken away iv. 171, 172, 186
Grand juries returned by ſuch as are ſheriffs in fact, but not in right, illegal iv. 172
The convictions on the preſentments of ſuch grand juries are illegal and void iv. 172. See viii. 464, 471. * PILKINGTON, & al.
* SHERWIN, JOHN iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.

SHIP MONEY.
The king's writ in the caſe of ſhip money i. 510. vi. 5. Ap.
The judgment therein cenſured by the houſe of lords i. 716
Copy of the judgment as entered on record i. 695. vi. 9. Ap.
Property was much invaded by impoſing ſhip money, which at firſt was light and eaſy, but in progreſs of time was encreaſed, according as it was found the nation would bear it; and at length it was juſtly feared that it would become as burthenſome as the impoſitions on the French nation by the French king; and yet when the civil wars broke out, the majority of the nation took part with the king iv. 165. See BATES JOHN. HAMPDEN JOHN.

SHIRLEY, Doctor,
His appeal brought in the houſe of lords againſt ſome members of the houſe of commons, during the ſeſſion, and debates thereon See FAGG Sir JOHN.

SHIVERS, RICHARD. See GOLDING.

SHOOTING AT. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

SHORT-HAND.

Trial allowed to be taken in ſhort-hand, after debate x. 132. Ap.

SHOWER, Sir BARTHOLOMEW,

His obſervations on the paper ſaid to have been delivered by lord Ruſſel to ſheriffs on his execution iii. 668. viii. 464

Author of "The Magiſtracy and Government of England vindicated," as to the proceedings on lord Ruſſel's trial iii. 765. v. 95

His argument on moving, that Kendal and Roe, committed by ſecretary of ſtate for treaſon, might be bailed on hab. corp. iv. 554, 557, 561. See SECRETARY OF STATE.

Defence of Cook for treaſon iv. 767

Of counſel for Rookwood, tried for high-treaſon, in conſpiring death of the king iv. 964

His defence of the priſoner iv. 689

His argument againſt the bill of attainder brought into the houſe of commons againſt ſir John Fenwick v. 86, 87

"Antidote againſt Poiſon" wrote by him viii. 464

Sir Bartholomew was an eminent practicer, and had ſtudied the ſubject of informations well, and taken more than ordinary pains therein ix. 313. See x. 68. Ap.

SHREWSBURY, GEORGE Earl of,

Lord high ſteward on the trial of Thomas duke of Norfolk, for treaſon i. 82

SHREWSBURY, MARY Counteſs of,

Proceedings againſt her before a ſelect council, for contempt in refuſing to anſwer fully before that board, or to ſubſcribe her examination, Trin. 10 Jac. I. 1614 xi. 108

Extract of the caſe from lord Coke's twelfth report xi. 108

Speech of ſir Francis Bacon xi. 109. See xi. 295, 296, 297, 299, 300

• SHUTE, SAMUEL Eſq. iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

* SIDNEY, ALGERNON, Eſq.

• His arraignment for high-treaſon, November 7, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 794

* The indictment, for conſpiring the king's death, and framing a libel, wherein he affirms, that the king is accountable to the people who make him king, &c. iii. 794

* He objects that the crimes laid in the indictment were different in their nature, therefore the indictment was vicious, and he need not plead to it; but is told by the court, he muſt either plead or demur to it; and if he demurs, he admits the facts: whereupon he pleaded Not guilty iii. 795, 796

The plea in form vi. 45. Ap.

* A counſel reprimanded for whiſpering to him in court iii. 796. See iv. 176

* He is brought to trial, Nov. 21, 1683 iii. 797

* He is denied a copy of the indictment; but it is read to him in Latin iii. 797

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iii. 797

* Hear-ſay evidence allowed to be given; and ſome of it ſuch as did not relate to the priſoner iii. 798

* The caſe of the popiſh lords remembered, where a general account of the plot was allowed to be given in evidence, though it did not immediately affect priſoners iii. 798

* The Engliſh and Scotch diſagree in their ſchemes of a new government to be erected iii. 799

* Lord Howard's evidence concerning the cabal of ſix who met at Mr. Hampden's iii. 800

* The libel proved to be the priſoner's by the ſimilitude the hand it was wrote in bore to the priſoner's, and by being found among his papers in his ſtudy iii. 802. See iv. 278. vii. 402

* Part of the book read iii. 803

* The priſoner objects, that ſimilitude of hands is no proof in criminal caſes iii. 805

* That it was no crime to write treaſonable poſitions, ſo as he did not publiſh them; which the court deny iii. 807

* He endeavours to ſhew, that thoſe expreſſions in the libel could never be wreſted to a deſign of killing the king iii. 807

* He objects to my lord Howard's teſtimony, that he had ſaid he could not have his pardon till he had done ſome other jobs, and till the drudgery of ſwearing was over iii. 811

* Col. Sidney's defence, as to the conſult iii. 811

* The ſolicitor-general's reply iii. 813

* Treaſonable poſitions contained in the libel iii. 815

* Lord chief juſtice ſums up the evidence iii. 816

* Writing an overt-act: ſcribere eſt agere iii. 817

* Conſpiring to levy war, evidence of compaſſing the king's death iii. 817

* Or any other act which diſcovers an imagination in the heart to depoſe, deſtroy, or impriſon the king iii. 817

* The priſoner convicted iii. 820

* Alledges in arreſt of judgment, that ſome of the jury were not freeholders; but is told by the court, freehold is not a neceſſary qualification of a juryman in high-treaſon iii. 820

* He is denied a ſight of the indictment iii. 820

* Sentence pronounced upon him iii. 822

* His dying ſpeech iii. 822

* His attainder reverſed at the Revolution iii. 824

Colonel Sidney illegally proſecuted iv. 172

Sir John Hawles's remarks on the colonel's trial iv. 186, 196

The king's counſel applying his writing his book to the time of Charles II. which for any thing that appeared, might have been wrote before that king came to the throne, was wreſting as evidence of the fact, what in ſenſe was not ſo iv. 177, 198

Sidney was tried upon a vicious indictment iv. 177, 197

'That innocence would defend," was a ſaying as mortal to Sidney, as was the letter ⊙ amongſt the Greeks iv. 177

His trial was ſigned by lord chief juſtice Jefferies for publication iv. 189

Colonel Sidney was talked to death, under the notion of a commonwealth's man iv. 196

Sidney's was the firſt indictment of treaſon, whereon any man loſt his life for writing any thing without publiſhing it iv. 197

The duke of York's owning the plot to the king, was the cauſe of Sidney's execution; for the king balanced before viii. 480

He was, by means of an illegal return of jurors, and by denial of his lawful challenges to many of them, and without ſufficient legal evidence of any treaſons committed by him, and by a partial and unjuſt conſtruction of the ſtatute, declaring what was his treaſon, moſt unjuſtly and wrongfully convicted, attainted, and executed for high-treaſon, in the opinion of the legiſlature vi. 278, 279. viii. 472

In Sidney's trial, no freehold was not allowed to be a good challenge iii. 265. n.

His petition to his majeſty viii. 469

Deſires to be admitted into his majeſty's preſence viii. 470

The act for annulling his attainder viii. 472

Examinations taken on oath before a committee of lords appointed to inſpect who were the adviſers and proſecutors of the murder of col. Sidney, lord Ruſſel, &c. viii. 476. See iii. 738. EXAMINATIONS. HAMPDEN JOHN.

The ſame principles of reſiſtance as were maintained by the regicides, may be found in a book of colonel Sidney's, and for writing which he was condemned iii. 815. See viii. 64. n. and RESISTANCE.

SIMONS, HENRY,

He is robbed of five hundred and fifty-four ducats at the White Hart Inn, Cranford-Bridge x. 411

He is indicted of perjury on his evidence reſpecting the robbery x. 411

And upon his trial by a ſpecial jury, in B. R. he is acquitted x. 411

He is indicted at Chelmsford in Eſſex, for a miſdemeanour, in putting three duckets into James Aſhley's pocket, with intent to charge him with a robbery x. 411

The indictment x. 412

He pleads not guilty x. 412

Names of the ſpecial jury x. 413

Found guilty x. 413

Moves for a new trial on the affidavits of the twelve jurymen, that though they found him guilty of putting the ducats into Aſhley's pocket, they did not find that ſame was done with any intent x. 416

Affidavit of the whole trial, and that the jury found the priſoner guilty of the whole indictment x. 416

A new trial is granted x. 416

The priſoner is acquitted by another ſpecial jury x. 417

Simons had ſix trials about this tranſaction, which coſt upwards of 1300l. x. 417

SINDERCOMBE, MILES, alias FISH,

His trial at Weſtminſter, for high-treaſon, 1656 vii. 371

The indictment for conſpiring and imagining the death of the Protector vii. 371

Evidence of his deſign to kill the Protector, and to fire Whitehall vii. 372

The court declare, the compaſſing and imagining the death of the chief magiſtrate, by whatſoever name he was called, high-treaſon vii. 373

And the ſtatute 25 Edw. III. only declaratory of the common law vii. 373

Sentenced to be hanged and quartered vii. 373

Endeavours to corrupt his keeper to ſuffer him to eſcape vii. 374

Is found dead in his bed vii. 374

The phyſicians and ſurgeons who opened him, not able to gueſs by what means he made away with himſelf viii. 375

The coroner's inqueſt bring in their verdict, that he poiſoned himſelf vii. 376

Buried on Tower-Hill, under the ſcaffold erected for his execution vii. 376

His ſiſter's examination, if ſhe ever brought him poiſon vii. 376

The informations of the guards, who watched in his chamber vii. 377

SKIPWORTH, Sir WILLIAM,

Who had been prevented by ſickneſs from being along with the other judges when the commiſſioners were declared guilty of high-treaſon, in the reign of Richard II. was not therefore arreſted, as all the other juſtices were i. 5

SKYNNER, MATTHEW, Serjeant at Law,

His argument on behalf of the mayor, &c. of the port of Haſtings, at the ſuit of Henry Moore x. 161. Ap.

SLAUGHTER, JOHN. See GOLDING.

SLAUGHTERFORD, CHRISTOPHER,

An account of his trial and condemnation on appeal for murder, after acquittal ix. 542

His ſpeech at the gallows denying the fact ix. 542

SLAVERY.

Origin of ſlavery xi. 341

General obſervations on domeſtic ſlavery xi. 340

Difficulty of defining ſlavery xi. 340

Properties uſually incident to ſlavery xi. 340

Bad effects of ſlavery xi. 340

Opinion of modern writers in favour of ſlavery xi. 340

The lawfulneſs of ſlavery conſidered xi. 341, 345

Univerſality of domeſtic ſlavery among the ancients xi. 341

Decline of ſlavery in Europe xi. 341

Revival of domeſtic ſlavery in America xi. 341

Attempt to introduce ſlavery of negroes into England, examined xi. 341

Laws of England will not admit a new ſlavery xi. 341

The rules of law are againſt ſlavery by contract xi. 344. See HAR-

HARGRAVE FRANCIS. NEGRO. SOMMERSETT JAMES. VILLENAGE.
* SLINGSBY, Sir HENRY, Knight,
* His trial for high-treaſon before the High Court of Juſtice, in Weſtminſter-Hall, May 25, 1658 ii. 277
* Impeachment for high-treaſon againſt the Protector and commonwealth ii. 277
* John Liſle, preſident of the court ii. 277
* The priſoner is refuſed a trial by jury ii. 278
* Evidence of his endeavouring to bring over ſome of the officers in Hull to the king's intereſt ii. 278, &c.
* Sir Henry in effect acknowledges the deſign with which he is charged ii. 280
* See the judgment in mr. Mordant's trial ii. 299
* He is beheaded ii. 300
* His behaviour upon the ſcaffold ii. 300
SMETON, MARK. See NORRYS HENRY.
SMITH, AARON,
His depoſition, that he was deſired to be a witneſs againſt colonel Sidney viii. 477
SMITH, FRANCIS*,
* Indictment againſt him for a libel, 1679, 32 Car. II. ii. 1040. iii. 220. vi. 13. Ap. vii. 484
The libel reflects chiefly on lord chief juſtice Scroggs ii. 1040
Defendant's counſel admit the record, and priſoner is convicted ii. 1041
* SMITH, HENRY ii. 395. See REGICIDES.
SMITH, ISABEL. See MORRIS.
* SMITH, RICHARD ii. 1041.
SMITH, SAMUEL iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
SMITH, Sir THOMAS,
His writings no authority in Weſtminſter-Hall xi. 143
SMUGGLING.
Some excellent obſervations on that hazardous employment ix. 733. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
SMYTHE, SIDNEY STAFFORD, King's Counſel,
His ſpeech againſt ſmugglers, for murder ix. 720, 732
Opens information againſt Gibbon on quo warranto x. 118. Ap.
Of counſel for Elles in quo warranto x. 136. Ap.
SNATT, WILLIAM, a Nonjuring Clergyman,
Proceedings againſt him for abſolving traitors at Tyburn x. 43. Ap.
SOAME and BARNARDISTON.
Thoſe who argued againſt the judgment in the King's-Bench in the above cauſe were made judges, and they themſelves afterwards determined the caſe upon a writ of error brought in the Exchequer-chamber viii. 109. See BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.
SODOMY.
Bail cannot be granted ex gratiâ in ſodomy. So reſolved by all the judges i. 388
Indictment for ſodomy vi. 5. Ap. See AUDLEY MERVIN Lord. BUGGERY.
*SOLICITOR.
* A priſoner may not have a ſolicitor in treaſon or felony without leave of the court iii. 263, 344. iv. 174
* One indicted for high-treaſon, in ſoliciting for a priſoner charged with treaſon iii. 347. See iv. 175, 178, 205.
* Aaron Smith, Colledge's ſolicitor, made to give ſecurity to anſwer the miſdemeanour iii. 349. See ix. 310.
* The court deny the priſoner a ſolicitor to aſſiſt him at his trial iii. 343. iv. 455
"Solicitor" imports his employment v. 85
How far they are privileged from diſcloſing the ſecrets of their clients; whether this privilege extends to criminal caſes; and whether the client can compel the ſolicitor, or prevent his giving evidence, without his conſent ix. 387, 389. See ATTORNEY.
SOLICITOR-GENERAL.
The office of ſolicitor-general has been the rock whereon ſeveral aſpiring lawyers have made ſhipwreck of their virtue and human nature xi. 273
William De Grey, ſolicitor-general to Geo. III. an illuſtrious inſtance of exception to the above obſervation x. *541
Information filed by ſolicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, good in law. So reſolved by the judges xi. 334
SOMERS, JOHN,
Cites the caſe of Thomas and Sorrel, in relation to the diſpenſing power iv. 384
SOMERS, Sir JOHN, Solicitor-General,
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of lord Preſton (or ſir Richard Grahme, baronet), for treaſon, in compaſſing the death of the king and queen, and adhering to their enemies iv. 425
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of lord Mohun, for murder, before his peers iv. 513
SOMERS, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General,
Replies to Charles Knowles (who, upon being indicted at Hicks's-Hall, for murder, removes ſame into B. R. and pleads miſnomer in abatement, viz. that he is earl of Banbury), that the lords, upon his petition to be tried by his peers, had adjudged that he had no title to the earldom viii. 50, 51
The attorney, by order of the houſe of lords, delivers them an account of proceedings of B. R. againſt him viii. 52
SOMERS, Lord Keeper,
Diſtinguiſhed himſelf on giving judgment in the caſe of the Bankers in the Exchequer-chamber, by one of the moſt elaborate arguments ever delivered in Weſtminſter-Hall xi. 137, 143
His lordſhip obſerved, that ſir Edward Coke, in his Reports, does not confine himſelf to the caſe before the court, but does generally lay together all the learning in the law which comes under that title, ſo as to make them in nature of common-place xi. 151, 152
SOMERS, JOHN Lord, Lord Chancellor,
His commiſſion of lord high ſteward for the trials of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, and of Charles lord Mohun, for murder v. 137
His lordſhip's addreſs to the earl of Warwick, previous to the examination of witneſſes v. 142
His lordſhip's addreſs upon informing him of their lordſhips judgment of acquittal v. 180
His lordſhip's addreſs to Charles lord Mohun, previous to the examination of the witneſſes v. 181
His lordſhip's addreſs upon informing him of their lordſhips judgment of acquittal v. 194
Impeached for adviſing the king to the treaty of partition viii. 520. See viii. 512
And for his judgment in the Bankers caſe xi. 137. See v. 355.
Admitted into the houſe of commons, and heard viii. 520
Commons addreſs the king to remove him viii. 521
Articles of impeachment againſt him, with his anſwer v. 345
Lords acquaint commons with intention of proceeding on his trial v. 373
Witneſſes ordered to attend the trial v. 374
Lords appoint a day for his trial v. 363, 365. viii. 531
Commons forbid any member to attend viii. 531
Reaſons of committee for not proceeding to lord Somers's trial viii. 532
Commons reſolve not to go to lord Somers's trial, till ſatisfaction received for affront on them by lord Haverſham viii. 533
Lords proceed to Weſtminſter-Hall, on trial of lord Somers, 32 lords diſſent, but reaſons expunged by order of houſe viii. 534
Lords Orford and Halifax withdraw at the trial viii. 534
Reſolved, the queſtion for acquitting lord Somers be put in court below; 31 lords proteſt, reaſons expunged viii. 534
Impeachment diſmiſſed for want of proſecution viii. 535. See v. 374
Commons proteſt againſt it viii. 535
* See PORTLAND, WILLIAM Earl of v. 339.
SOMERSET, Duke of,
Proceedings againſt him for high-treaſon, and miſdemeanours, 3 and 4 Edw. VI. vii. 12
Proclamation againſt him, ſigned by moſt of the council vii. 12
Committed to the Tower vii. 12
The articles objected to him vii. 13
His firſt ſubmiſſion vii. 13
He is fined 2000l. a year of land, and loſes all his goods and offices vii. 14
His ſecond ſubmiſſion vii. 14
He is pardoned, and reſtored to almoſt all his eſtate vii. 15
Proceedings againſt him for high-treaſon and felony, 5 and 6 Edw. VI. vii. 15
He and ſeveral others ſent to the Tower vii. 15
Several examinations againſt him vii. 15
He is tried in Weſtminſter-Hall vii. 16
The indictment for deſigning to ſeize and impriſon the duke of Northumberland vii. 16
His defence vii. 17
The witneſſes not produced, but only their examinations read vii. 17
Acquitted of treaſon, and found guilty of felony, and ſentenced to be hanged vii. 17
He is beheaded, and his ſpeech before his execution vii. 18
His great-grandſon reſtored to the title vii. 19
* SOMERSET, FRANCES Counteſs of,
* Brought to trial, as acceſſary before the fact to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, May 24, 1616 i. 348
* She pleads guilty i. 349
* The king's counſel ſhew, how ſtrangely this murder was diſcovered, after it had been concealed two years i. 350
* The king's inſtructions to thoſe who were appointed to enquire into the ſaid murder i. 350
* Sentence paſſed on the counteſs i. 351
* SOMERSET, ROBERT CARR, Earl of,
* His trial as acceſſary, before the fact, to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, the 25th of May, 1616, 14 Jac. I. i. 351
* Lord high ſteward's charge to the peers i. 351
* Mr. attorney (ſir Francis Bacon) opens the evidence i. 352
* He ſhews the ſprings and foundation of this conſpiracy againſt ſir Thomas's life i. 353
* Poiſoning once made treaſon i. 353
* Evidence of the earl's malice to ſir Thomas, for adviſing againſt his marriage with the counteſs i. 356
* Letters ſent by ſir Thomas to the earl from the Tower i. 356
* Sir Dav. Woods's evidence, that the counteſs offered him 1000l. to kill ſir Thomas Overbury i. 358
* Earl of Somerſet's petition to the king, that he might not be brought to trial, read as evidence againſt him i. 358
* The earl owns he was the occaſion of Overbury's impriſonment i. 358
* His hypocriſy and baſeneſs to the whole family of the Overburys i. 359
* Examinations taken without oath read againſt him i. 360
* The counteſs's actions given in evidence againſt the earl i. 361
* The lord ſteward preſſes him to waive his defence, and ſubmit to mercy; which he refuſes, and makes his defence i. 363
* Owns his being privy to ſending the tarts i. 363
* He is convicted, and ſentence paſſed upon him i. 365
* His letter to the king i. 365
* The earl and counteſs pardoned as to their lives, but confined i. 367
* Order of council as to their confinement i. 367
* Motives in the counteſs's pardon, which induced the king to grant it i. 367
* The earl's petition to king Charles I. for his eſtate—never granted i. 373
* He and his counteſs both died in obſcurity i. 373

SOMERSET, Earl of,
Proceedings againſt him, 29 May 1630, 6 Car. I. in Star-chamber, for publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD Earl of.

SOMERSET, Duke of,
He was beheaded for felony, though adjudged to be hanged iv. 129

SOMMERSETT, JAMES, a Negro,
His caſe on an habeas corpus, B. R. 1771, 1772 xi. 339
Habeas corpus, and return xi. 339
Sommerſett diſcharged xi. 339
Argument of mr. Hargrave for the negro xi. 340
Short ſtate of the caſe xi. 340
Importance of it xi. 340
Points that ariſe therein xi. 340
Of the right claimed in the negro's perſon xi. 340
Slavery the foundation of the claim to the negro xi. 340
See NEGRO
SLAVERY.
VILLENAGE.

* SOUTHAMPTON, HENRY Earl of i. 197. See ESSEX ROBERT Earl of.

SOUTH CAROLINA. See BONNET, STEDE, & al.

SOUTHWELL, Sir ROBERT,
His evidence on the trial of Green, and others, for murder ii. 775

* SPARKES, JOHN v. i. See DAWSON.

SPARKES, MICHAEL,
Proceedings againſt him in Star-chamber, for printing Hiſtriomaſtix i. 418
His anſwer opened by mr. Jenkins, of Gray's-Inn i. 419
His cenſure by lord Cottington i. 425
By ſecretary Cook i. 427
By earl Dorſet i. 428

SPECIAL PLEADING.
The nicety of ſpecial pleading cenſured Em. Pref. iii. See PLEA and PLEADINGS.

SPECIAL VERDICTS.
Copy of ſpecial verdict in a caſe of treaſon, drawn up for the conſideration of all the judges viii. 285, 552
Special verdict on the trial of John Huggins, for murder ix. 140, 141
Special verdict on the trial of William Chetwynd for murder ix. 537
Special verdict on the trial of John Stevenſon, for murder x. 477

* SPEKE, HUGH iii. 855. See BRADDON.

SPIRITUAL COURT.
Sentence of Spiritual Court may be avoided by proving ſame fraudulent or colluſive xi. 262. See MARRIAGE.

* SPOTISWOOD, Sir ROBERT,
* His trial for high-treaſon, in the parliament held at St. Andrews in Scotland, Nov. Dec. and Jan. 1645, 21 Car. I. i. 961
* The indictment for abuſing the king, in purchaſing the office of ſecretary of ſtate, lately held by the earl of Lanerk i. 962
* For ſigning a commiſſion to the (late) earl of Montroſe to be generaliſſimo; and for joining with the ſaid earl's army, and committing divers acts of hoſtility with him i. 962
* Sir Robert anſwers, that the king had made him a temporary ſecretary in the abſence of the earl of Lanerk i. 963
* That the ſaid commiſſion was ſigned by his majeſty's ſpecial and expreſs command i. 964
* That his accompanying the earl of Montroſe, with the king's commiſſion, could not be interpreted a taking up arms againſt the kingdom i. 964
* And laſtly, that he is not charged with any thing declared, by any law or act of parliament, to be treaſon i. 964
* The counſel againſt him reply, that to accept any office without conſent of the parliament, is criminal i. 965
* And his ſigning this commiſſion a proof of his framing or adviſing other acts of ſtate againſt them, to diſturb the public peace i. 965
* That his joining the traitor, James Graham (the earl of Montroſe), was a taking up arms againſt his country i. 965
* Which is high-treaſon by an act of parliament in 1584 i. 963, 966
* Sir Robert rejoins i. 966
* Inſiſts that he was promiſed quarter upon ſurrendering himſelf i. 968
* Is anſwered, that it is not in the power of any private man in the army to give quarter to an oppoſer of the ſolemn league and covenant, as he had been i. 969
* And if quarter were to be allowed to other priſoners, yet not to him, whom both parliaments of Scotland and England had excepted from pardon i. 970
* Sir Robert inſiſts further, that the benefit of quarter given is ſecured to all priſoners by the laws of arms, and of all nations, as well in civil as in foreign wars i. 970
* Otherwiſe a door would be opened to all manner of cruelty i. 971
* And no clauſe in the covenant could oblige to go contrary to the laws of war or of nations i. 972
* That the queſtion is not of pardon, but of quarter already granted, for ſecuring his life i. 973
* His reaſons why he cannot enter upon any other defence till this be diſcuſſed i. 977
* The report from the commiſſioners for the proceſs to the parliament againſt him i. 978
* He is declared guilty, and condemned i. 979
* Is going to ſpeak to the people, but ſilenced by the provoſt of the town, at the inſtance of a zealous miniſter of the kirk i. 984
* His ſpeech delivered in writing i. 984
* The ſaid miniſter's inſult, and the priſoner's mild and magnanimous behaviour i. 985
* Sir Robert is beheaded i. 985

SPRATT, Doctor THOMAS, Biſhop of Rocheſter,
Proceedings againſt him before the lords of the privy council, 1692 viii. 37. See vi. 425
Arreſted at Bromley viii. 37
His papers ſeized, and his houſe examined by the clerk of the council viii. 37
Carried to his own houſe under a guard of ſoldiers viii. 37
Examined concerning an aſſociation for reſtoring king James viii. 38
His ſpeech to the council viii 39
Writes to lord Nottingham, and is diſcharged viii. 39
Receives a letter from lord Nottingham, to attend him at his office viii. 39
Is examined in the preſence of one Blackhead viii. 40
Blackhead charges the biſhop with receiving and anſwering a letter from one Robert Younge viii. 40
The biſhop examines Blackhead himſelf viii. 41
The biſhop's ſecretary examined viii. 42
Remembers Blackhead's bringing a letter from one Hookes viii. 42
Blackhead confeſſes he brought the biſhop a letter from one dr. Hookes, and not Younge viii. 42
The biſhop is again diſcharged viii. 43
Brings the letter before the council, and meets Younge there viii. 44
Blackhead confeſſes he left the aſſociation in the parlour, at Bromley, by Younge's direction viii. 46
And took it away again ſince the biſhop's confinement viii. 46
The counterfeit aſſociation viii. 46
Younge and Blackhead confronted, Younge denies all viii. 47
The aſſociation and the letter ſigned Hookes, both the ſame hand viii. 48
Younge and Blackhead afterwards convicted of this forgery viii. 48
Younge executed for coining, and a copy of his laſt ſpeech, confeſſing the forgery viii. 49

* SPROT, GEORGE,
* His trial in Scotland, for conſpiring with the earl of Gowrie to murder king James I. i. 310
* He confeſſes before the privy council his being privy to two letters between the earl of Gowrie, and laird of Reſtalrig, relating to the conſpiracy i. 310
* At his trial his confeſſion is read againſt him i. 312
* He abides by his confeſſion, and is condemned i. 313
* His execution i. 314
* After he had hanged a pretty while, he clapped his hands together aloud three times i. 314

* SPUR, JOHN v. 465. See SWENSDEN.

SQUIRES, MARY The Gipſey,
Her trial for robbing Elizabeth Canning, at the Old-Bailey, February 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 223
Canning's evidence againſt her x. 223
Found guilty x. 234
Her ſpeech to the court x. 235
A memorial in her behalf laid before the king by ſir Criſp Gaſcoyne, lord mayor x. 235
Her execution reſpited, and ſhe pardoned x. 236
Canning's friends anſwer to ſir Criſp Gaſcoyne's memorial x. 236

STABBING.
See MURDER. STATUTE of STABBING, and 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, under STATUTES.

* STAFFORD, WILLIAM Viſcount,
* His trial on an impeachment for high-treaſon before the houſe of peers, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 101
* Five popiſh lords impeached iii. 101
* The commons ſignify their intention of beginning with the trial of the lord Stafford iii. 101
* The day for the trial appointed by the lords iii. 101
* Lord chancellor Finch, lord high ſteward iii. 101
* The biſhops withdraw iii. 101
* The trial begins iii. 102
* The lord high ſteward's ſpeech iii. 102
* The ſeven articles of impeachment read iii. 102
* The lord Stafford anſwers generally, that he is not guilty iii. 104
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard opens the evidence of the plot in general iii. 104
* Sir Francis Winnington ſhews how probable it was there ſhould be ſuch a plot at this time iii. 106
* Mr. Treby's ſpeech iii. 109
* The managers call their witneſſes to prove the plot in general iii. 109
* The records of the attainders, and convictions of thoſe concerned in the popiſh plot, produced as evidence of it iii. 120
* Second day of trial iii. 122
* The lord Stafford's counſel admitted to hear the evidence; but not to ſtand ſo near as to prompt him iii. 122
* Dugdale ſworn a ſecond time, when he came to give a particular evidence againſt the lord Stafford iii. 123
* The priſoner permitted to have a clerk to take notes for him iii. 123
* Dugdale ſwears poſitively that the priſoner conſented to the reſolution on the king's death (at which there was a great hum) iii. 124
* Oates ſworn again, depoſes, that my lord wrote letters and contributed money towards carrying on the plot iii. 126
* Turbervile's evidence of my lord's ſoliciting him to aſſaſſinate his majeſty iii. 127
* The lord Stafford enters upon his defence iii. 129
* He moves to have copies of ſome affidavits that are in the cuſtody of the houſe of commons iii. 131
* Which is oppoſed by the managers iii. 131
* And over-ruled by the lords iii. 135
* The court think themſelves under no obligation to aſſiſt the priſoner with the depoſitions taken by a juſtice of peace concerning him iii. 135
* The third day of trial iii. 136

* The managers produce the affidavit my lord deſires iii. 137
* A peer may give evidence, though he be a judge in the cauſe iii. 141
* The king's witneſſes ought not to be debarred hearing what the priſoner's witneſſes depoſe iii. 141
* The lord Stafford calls his witneſſes againſt Dugdale iii. 141
* Endeavours to prove him forſworn in a former trial iii. 150
* A journal of the houſe of lords read, as evidence for the priſoner iii. 152
* Oates's examination read iii. 153
* Dugdale's examination taken by the juſtices, as it was entered on the lords journal, read as evidence for the priſoner iii. 156
* Turbervile's examination read iii. 159
* The lords adjourn iii. 163
* The fourth day's trial iii. 163
* The priſoner inſiſts, that Oates is not a credible witneſs, having acknowledged his hypocriſy and diſſimulation with God and man iii. 168
* The managers call other witneſſes, to ſupport the teſtimony of the firſt iii. 170
* The managers endeavour to diſcredit my lord Stafford's witneſſes iii. 173
* The lords Stamford and Lovelace ſworn for the king iii. 183
* The lords adjourn iii. 185
* The fifth day iii. 185
* The lord Stafford deſires he may examine witneſſes, to diſcredit thoſe who had been produced to diſcredit his iii. 185
* Which is allowed him iii. 186
* The lord Stafford makes his obſervations on the evidence iii. 187
* A member of the houſe of commons ſworn as a witneſs iii. 189
* Sir William Jones ſums up the evidence for the commons iii. 190
* He anſwers the priſoner's objections to the credit of their witneſſes iii. 193
* The teſt firſt impoſed iii. 198, 199
* Mr. Powle's ſpeech at the ſumming up the evidence iii. 200
* His lordſhip's exceptions in point of law anſwered by the managers iii. 201
* Whether thoſe large allowances made Oates, Bedloe, &c. were not ſome objection to their teſtimony iii. 202
* Counſel may not argue as to the law and courſe of parliaments iii. 208
* The judges deliver their opinions, that two witneſſes to every overt-act are not neceſſary; but one to one overt-act, and another to another, is ſufficient iii. 204
* The lords adjourn iii. 205
* The ſixth day iii. 205
* The lord Stafford petitions the lords to be heard again iii. 206
* He repeats ſome points of law he had inſiſted on before iii. 206
* The priſoner declares his opinion of the ſeveral plots charged on the papiſts ſince the Reformation iii. 207
* A toleration granted by king Charles II. to all diſſenters iii. 207
* The diſſenters permitted to offer their reaſons to the houſe of lords againſt the penal laws iii. 207
* A comprehenſion deſigned iii. 207
* His lordſhip concludes with ſolemn proteſtations of his innocence iii. 208
* The managers reply to what his lordſhip laſt offered iii. 210
* The ſeventh day iii. 211
* The lord high ſteward takes their lordſhips votes iii. 211
* Thirty-one find the lord Stafford not guilty, and fifty-five guilty iii. 211
* The lords adjourn to their houſe iii. 211
* The commons, with their ſpeaker, go up to the lords houſe, and demand judgment iii. 212
* A judgment for high-treaſon muſt be in uſual form, or the king loſes his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213
* The lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner before judgment iii. 213
* Judgment pronounced, to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, &c. iii. 214
* The king iſſues a writ to the ſheriffs to execute the priſoner, by cutting off his head only iii. 214
* Slingſby Bethel and Henry Corniſh, ſheriffs, apply to the lords for their direction as to the execution, who declare the king's writ ought to be obeyed iii. 215
* The ſheriffs alſo apply to the commons iii. 215
* Who concur in opinion with the lords iii. 215
* Lord Stafford's ſpeech at execution iii. 215
* He is beheaded iii. 215

STAGE-PLAYERS. See HISTRIOMASTIX.

STAMFORD, Lord.

In lord Stamford's caſe, in king James the ſecond's reign, A. D. 1685, where there was one poſitive and a ſtrong circumſtantial evidence, yet the lords thought that not ſufficient to find him guilty vi. 427. See DELAMERE Lord.

STAMFORD, Sir WILLIAM.

This judge's book miſled lord Coke vii. 150
A judge of great authority vii. 182

* STANDSFIELD, PHILIP, Son of Sir James Standsfield, of New Milns, near Edinburgh,

* His trial, as well for high-treaſon, as the murder of his father, Feb. 6, 1688, 4 Jac. II. iv. 283
* The indictment, in which are crimes of different natures iv. 283
* The priſoner's counſel anſwer the charge iv. 285
* His majeſty's advocate replies to the defence, and opens the evidence iv. 287
* The priſoner's counſel rejoin iv. 290
* The jury, conſiſting of fifteen perſons, are ſworn, and the evidence is given iv. 292
* Proof of the priſoner's drinking confuſion to the king; which in Scotland is high-treaſon iv. 293
* Of his curſing his father; which is there puniſhed with death iv. 293
* Circumſtantial evidence admitted, of his being the author of his father's murder iv. 295
* The ſurgeons who inſpected the corpſe give their reaſons why they believe ſir James was not drowned, but ſtrangled iv. 297
* The college of phyſicians of the ſame opinion iv. 297
* Two infants permitted to declare what they knew of the murder, before the jury, without oath iv. 300
* Sir George Mackenzie's ſpeech to the inqueſt iv. 301
* The priſoner is convicted, and receives ſentence iv. 304

STANLEY, Sir WILLIAM,

His trial for high-treaſon, 1494-5, 10 Hen. VII. xi. 1
Sir Robert Clyfford was his accuſer xi. 1, 2
His offence xi. 1, 2
He is examined xi. 2
Reckoned the richeſt ſubject in the kingdom xi. 2
Arraigned, condemned, and beheaded xi. 2

* STAPLETON, Sir MILES, Bart.

* His trial for high-treaſon, at the aſſizes for the county of York, June 18, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 317
* The indictment removed to the King's-Bench; but the priſoner ſent back to Yorkſhire to be tried iii. 317
* The indictment for conſpiring the king's death, and the ſubverſion of the eſtabliſhed religion and government iii. 317
* A challenge offered by the king's counſel againſt a juror, becauſe he gave his dogs the names of Oates and Bedloe, the king's witneſſes; but not allowed, which would have been allowed had there been proof iii. 317
* The trial put off till next aſſizes, for want of jurors iii. 318
* The trial comes on at the ſummer aſſizes iii. 318
* Sir Thomas Stringer's ſpeech before evidence iii. 318
* The king's witneſſes called iii. 319
* They gave evidence, firſt of the plot in general iii. 319
* Bolron's evidence againſt ſir Miles in particular iii. 320, 321
* Sir Miles's defence iii. 322
* Mr. juſtice Dolben directs the jury, and tells them, there being no records of conviction produced againſt the king's witneſſes, they ought to be deemed competent witneſſes iii. 328
* Mr. baron Gregory's direction to the jury iii. 328
* Sir Miles is acquitted iii. 328

* STAR-CHAMBER.

The court of Star-chamber was by common law, confirmed by ſtat. 3 Hen. VII. chap. 1. and diſſolved by ſtat. 16 Car. I. chap. 10. Em. Pref xii.
Priſoner laid in irons by command from the Star-chamber vii. 271
* Difference among the commiſſioners as to a ſentence in this court, and their ſpeeches i. 408, &c.
Judgments given in the court of Star-chamber, eſpecially in caſes of libels, are good law at this day ix. 310
Lord chief juſtice Holt declared, that B. R. poſſeſſed all the lawful power the Star-chamber had ix. 310
Sir Edward Coke ſays, that the Star-chamber is a moſt ancient and honourable court ix. 310
Mr. Weſt, lord chancellor of Ireland, author of "A Diſcourſe concerning Treaſons and Bills of Attainder;" and alſo of "An Enquiry into the Manner of creating Peers," ſpeaks much in commendation of this court ix. 310
Sir Thomas Mallet, one of the juſtices of B. R. wrote a treatiſe on this court, and obſerves therein, that it was the moſt ancient of any court of juſtice, and the mother court of the kingdom ix. 312, 313
There is an original manuſcript treatiſe concerning the Star-chamber in the Britiſh Muſeum xi. 329
Stat. 3 Hen. VII. chap. 1. was the foundation of the court of Star-chamber xi. 337. See BASTWICK JOHN.
BEDFORD Earl of.
CHAMBERS RICHARD.
DAVISON.
FOWLIS Sir DAVID.
LEIGHTON Doctor.
PRIEST WILLIAM.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.
SHERFIELD HENRY.
SAINT JOHN OLIVER.
TALBOT WILLIAM.
WHITELOCKE JAMES.

STARKEY, HENRY ii. 1010. See ANDERSON, & al.

STATE.

In ancient times, more eſpecially in the reign of Henry VIII. to be accuſed of a crime againſt the ſtate, and to be convicted, were almoſt the ſame thing xi. 10

STATE LAW.

The ſhip-money judges were impeached for holding, that ſtate-neceſſity would juſtify the raiſing money without conſent of parliament, and that the king was judge of that neceſſity i. 711. xi. 323. See BERKLEY Sir ROBERT.
The king himſelf has no more prerogative, than the judges have authority, to declare that the law may be violated for reaſon of ſtate xi. 323
Lord chancellor Bacon, when attorney-general on earl Somerſet's trial, told the noble priſoner, on his wiſhing a witneſs was preſent, whom he named, as he could clear up many things that appeared obſcure, that if he was preſent he could not be ſworn for reaſons of ſtate i. 364
The lord chief juſtice, ſir Nicholas Hyde, is ſaid to have delivered in effect this judgment from the bench, that for ſeveral reaſons of ſtate the king may do or act contrary to law ii. 202
Lord chief juſtice Camden obſerved, that with reſpect to the argument of ſtate neceſſity, or a diſtinction that has been aimed at between ſtate offences

fences and others, the common law does not underſtand that kind of reaſoning, nor do our books take notice of any ſuch diſtinctions xi. 322
That ſerjeant Aſhley was committed to the Tower by the lords, only for aſſerting in argument that there was a law of ſtate different from the common law xi. 323
That the conſtitution does not allow of reaſons of ſtate to influence the judges xi. 330

STATE PRISONERS.

Much humanity and relief is ſhewn and uſed towards ſtate priſoners in diſtreſs in France, under an abſolute and arbitrary government; and much oppreſſion is ſuffered to be practiſed againſt them in England, a free and chriſtian nation x. 76. Ap.
Whether it be lawful to commit ſtate priſoners to the cuſtody of meſſengers iv. 556, 557
Lord chancellor Parker was againſt ſetting ſtate priſoners in the pillory x. 92. Ap. See BASTILE. NEWGATE. TREASON.

STATUTE LAW.

Criminal caſes very much depend on ſtatute law Em. Pref. i.
The beſt expoſitor of ſtatutes is the conſtant received practice, ever ſince they were made Em. Pref. i.
The judges are the interpreters of the ſtatute law Em. Pref. i, vi.
Statute law wants reducing into a leſs number of acts Em. Pref. xv.
The intent of the law-makers in the preface of the ſtatute, is always to be conſidered in conſtruing the act i. 174
Statutes to be conſtrued according to the true intent of the legiſlature i. 650
By ſtat. 1 Hen. VI. chap. 10. proviſo as to declaratory treaſons in ſtat. 25 Edw. III. ſtat. 5, chap. 2, is repealed i. 761
Reaſon for making ſtat. 6 Edw. VI. concerning outlawry in treaſon iv. 198, 199
The preamble of an act is as the key to open the mind and meaning of the law-makers ii. 348, 465. v. 517
No crime of what nature or magnitude ſoever, can fall within the purview of a penal ſtatute, but ſuch as is identically the ſame in every circumſtance with that deſcribed by the words of the ſtatute itſelf vi. 223, 224
Several inſtances given of the nicety in the conſtruction of penal ſtatutes vi. 224
Statutes in reſtraint of trade to be conſtrued literally vi. 417
A private act of parliament, though printed in an authentic collection of ſtatutes, diſallowed, if not examined with the record vi. 417
All penal laws are to be conſtrued favourably for the benefit of the ſubject, and not to be extended beyond the letter vi. 622
When a ſtatute appoints a penalty for doing a thing, which was no offence before, and appoints how to be recovered, it ſhall be puniſhed by that means, and no other vi. 622, 741
The parliament roll is the original and warrant for the ſtatute roll, and therefore of greater authority vi. 735
Statutes of jeofails extend not to criminal or other cauſe, where the king is party viii. 58
Statutes that preſcribe new forms of trial, to be punctually complied with viii. 349
Statutes that take away clergy, are to be taken by equity x. 436
If a ſtatute is made ſuppletory to the common law, in a ſimilar caſe, and takes away clergy, it muſt be conſtrued liberally x. 436
The preamble of an act is ſuppoſed to contain the whole ſubſtance, extent, and meaning of the act xi. 251
All ſtatutes in pari materiâ are to be conſtrued alike xi. 260
Statutes to be conſtrued according to their meaning, and the intent of the makers xi. 320. See LEGISLATURE. STATUTES.
Stat. de attinctis vi. 708
Stat. Glouceſter, chap. 9 ii. 200
Statute of Marlebridge. A miſtake in chap. 26 of that ſtatute rectified, and its true meaning explained by lord chief juſtice Holt ix. 61, 62
Stat. Merton, chap. 7 iv. 188. n.
Stat. de Scandal. Magnat. Writ of inquiry on this ſtatute iii. 987. See SCANDAL. MAGNAT.
Stat. of ſtabbing. All the judges were of opinion, that ſtat. 1 Jac. I chap. 8, of ſtabbing, was only a declaration of the common law, and made to prevent the inconveniences of juries, who were apt to believe that to be a provocation to extenuate murder, which in law was not vii. 421, 422. ix. 533. n.
Stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, was enacted, when many animoſities aroſe between the Engliſh and Scotch, who uſing daggers were accuſtomed to ſtab many of the Engliſh ex improviſo, which could not have been done by a flat ſword, the uſual weapon of the Engliſh; therefore this ſtatute was deſigned to ſecure defenceleſs people from ſurprize, ſuppoſing that whoever ſtruck would be prepared ix. 534. n. 535. n.
Stabbing with a tobacco pipe, and with an halberd, hath been adjudged to be a ſtabbing within the ſtatute, by Glynn, ch. j. ix. 535. n.
So hath with a candleſtick, that being adjudged a weapon drawn, by Maynard, ſerjeant ix. 535. n.
This is a good law, and to be interpreted ſtrictly, by Glynn, ch. j. ix. 535. n. See CHETWYND WILLIAM.
COWLAND JOHN.
LEGISLATURE.
Stat. 1. Jac. I. chap. 8.
Stat. Weſt. 1. chap. 9 vii. 144
——— chap. 15 vii. 117, 132, 144, 146, 182, 184, 229, 230

Other principal Statutes cited, conſtrued, commented on, and explained; arranged in a chronological ſeries.

JOHN.

1 John, chap. 7 vii. 120

HENRY the THIRD.

9 Hen. III. chap. 19 vii. 148, 202
——— chap. 26 ii. 212
——— chap. 29 ii. 199, 201, 207. vii. 121, 130, 146. xi. 260. See MAGNA CHARTA.
20 Hen. III. chap. 7 iv. 188. n.
52 Hen. III. ix. 61, 62

EDWARD the FIRST.

3 Edw. I. chap. 26 vi. 734
6 Edw. I. chap. 9 ii. 200
13 Edw. I. chap. 24 vi. 737
——— ſtat. 4 See CIRCUMSPECTE AGATIS.
20 Edw. I. chap. 1 ii. 201
27 Edw. I. chap. 3 vii. 154

EDWARD the SECOND.

1 Edw. II. ii. 198
9 Edw. II. ſtat. 2 vi. 711

EDWARD the THIRD.

1 Edw. III. chap. 9 vii. 125
2 Edw. III. chap. 2 ii. 200
——— chap. 9 vii. 229
5 Edw. III. chap. 8 vii. 125
——— chap. 9 vii. 131, 152
14 Edw. III. chap. 1 vii. 191
——— chap. 7 vi. 711
20 Edw. III. chap. 1 ii. 201. vi. 734
——— chap. 12 vii. 126
23 Edw. III. chap. 17 vii. 145
25 Edw. III. chap. 2 iii. 722, 758, 759, 763. vii. 220. viii. 467
——— chap. 3 iv. 173
——— chap. 4 ii. 199. v. 47, 86. vii. 117, 124, 131, 191, 228, 248. xi. 263
25 Edw. III. ſtat. 2 ii. 12
——— ſtat. 3, chap. 5 x. 436
——— ſtat. 4, chap. 1 vii. 126
——— ſtat. 5, chap. 2 i. 739, 758, 759, 761. ii. 11. iii. 419, 755, 757, 758. iv. 171, 173, 181, 184, 203, 206. v. 89, 97, 124, 125, 131. vii. 488
27 Edw. III. ſtat. 2, chap. 8 ii. 11
28 Edw. III. chap. 3 vii. 117, 131, 148, 152, 181, 191, 246 See Articuli ſuper Chartas.
28 Edw. III. chap. 9 ii. 207, 212. vii. 118
——— chap. 13 ii. 11
37 Edw. III. chap. 10 vii. 124
——— chap. 18 vii. 120, 131, 152, 181
38 Edw. III. chap. 1 xi. 70
——— chap. 9 vii. 131
42 Edw. III. chap. 3 ii. 11, 197, 199, 207. vii. 117, 181, 246
——— chap. 10 ii. 12
——— chap. 13 vii. 152
43 Edw. III. chap. 1 ii. 212. See TREASON.

RICHARD the SECOND.

1 Rich. II. chap. 11 vii. 124
——— chap. 12 ii. 8. vii. 131
5 Rich. II. chap. 2 ii. 12
——— chap. 6 vii. 227, 232, 238
11 Rich. II. chap. 3 vii. 236
——— chap. 5 vii. 236
12 Rich. II. chap. 2 vi. 503, 504, 705, 710, 735. See MACCLESFIELD, Earl of.
16 Rich. II. chap. 5 xi. 69, 70
17 Rich. II. chap. 8 vii. 220, 227, 232, 238
——— chap. 31 ii. 207
21 Rich. II. chap. 11 vii. 236
——— chap. 12 vii. 236
——— chap. 16 v. 107

HENRY the FOURTH.

1 Hen. IV. chap. 3 v. 107. vii. 236
——— chap. 6 vii. 238
——— chap. 10 vii. 220
——— chap. 14 ii. 208
2 Hen. IV. chap. 15 vii. 220, 232. xi. 261
5 Hen. IV. chap. 1 i. 760
7 Hen. IV. chap. 14 ii. 11
11 Hen. IV. chap. 9 iv. 172. vi. 759

HENRY the FIFTH.

1 Hen. V. chap. 1 vi. 712. vii. 245
2 Hen. V. chap. 9 vii. 227, 232, 238
——— ſtat. 2, chap. 3 iv. 188, 189

HENRY the SIXTH.

2 Hen. VI. chap. 10 vi. 744
3 Hen. VI. chap. 55 ii. 12
8 Hen. VI. chap. 14 vii. 227
9 Hen. VI. chap. 11 xi. 33, 53, 93, 210, 218, 233
11 Hen. VI. chap. 11 vii. 246
20 Hen. VI. chap. 9 xi. 258, 260, 262, 263
——— chap. 11 xi. 259
23 Hen. VI. chap. 10 vi. 708
——— chap. 15 vi. 712

EDWARD the FOURTH.

4 Edw. IV. chap. 3 vii. 222
7 Edw. IV. chap. 27 ii. 11
9 Edw. IV. chap. 7 ii. 12

HENRY the SEVENTH.

3 Hen. VII. chap. 1 See STAR-CHAMBER.
——— chap. 2 v. 449. See SIWENSDEN HAAGEN.
4 Hen. VII. chap. 12 ii. 201
——— chap. 13 xi. 257, 259, 263, 264
——— chap. 20 xi. 94, 233
7 Hen. VII. chap. 1 i. 740
——— chap. 5 iv. 187

10 Hen. VII. chap. 12 i. 745, 749
11 Hen. VII. chap. 7 vii. 227, 232
HENRY the EIGHTH.
4 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 vii. 217, 244, 247, 249, 252, 253
——— chap. 3 iv. 187
——— chap. 8 vii. 217, 244, 247, 249, 252, 253
22 Hen. VIII. chap. 9 i. 335. v. 51
23 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 x. 436
——— chap. 3 iv. 187
25 Hen. VIII. chap. 19 xi. 213, 261
27 Hen. VIII. chap. 4 xi. 229
——— chap. 10 vii. 245
——— chap. 11 xi. 316, 317
——— chap. 24 ii. 14
28 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 xi. 259
——— chap. 15 vii. 245
31 Hen. VIII. chap. 10 xi. 316
32 Hen. VIII. chap. 3 xi. 259
——— chap. 4 v. 114
33 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 ix. 76
——— chap. 20 ii. 7. iv. 206
35 Hen. VIII. chap. 2 v. 114. viii. 342, 344, 345, 346. xi. 126
——— chap. 6 iv. 190
EDWARD the SIXTH.
1 Edw. VI. chap. 11 xi. 263, 264
1 Edw. VI. chap. 12 i. 749. ii. 40, 173. iv. 181. v. 82, 90, 131, 133. vii. 220. xi. 257, 258, 259, 263, 264
3 and 4 Edw. VI. chap. 5 vii. 220, 227
——— chap. 16 xi. 264
5 and 6 Edw. VI. chap. 11 ii. 40, 173. iv. 181, 198. v. 82, 102
——— chap. 16 vi. 622, 631, 709, 710, 712, 740
——— chap. 26 iv. 198, 199
7 Edw. VI. chap. 11 vii. 233
PHILIP and MARY.
1 Mar. ſeſ. 1, chap. 1 i. 760. viii. 346
——— chap. 10 xi. 126
——— ſeſ. 2, chap. 12 vii. 227, 233
1 and 2 P. and M. chap. 3 vii. 220
——— chap. 10 ii. 7. iv. 169, 206. viii. 346
——— chap. 11 v. 135
——— chap. 13 v. 66
2 and 3 P. and M. chap. 12 vi. 66
——— chap. 17 iv. 173
4 and 5 P. and M. chap. 4 xi. 264
QUEEN ELIZABETH.
1 El. chap. 1 vii. 232
——— chap. 2 vii. 231
——— chap. 6 vii. 231, 232
——— chap. 7 vii. 238
——— chap. 16 vii. 227, 233
10 El. chap. 6 ii. 199
13 El. chap. 1 ii. 200. vii. 220
——— chap. 2 i. 759. vii. 220, 238
——— chap. 10 vii. 154
14 El. chap. 1 vii. 227, 233
——— chap. 2 vii. 228, 235
18 El. chap. 7 xi. 257, 258, 259, 264
23 El. chap. 2 vii. 220, 231, 232, 238
27 El. chap. 2 ii. 11, 1018. vii. 238
28 El. chap. 8 iv. 190
35 El. chap. 1 vii. 220, 238
JAMES the FIRST.
1 Jac. 1. chap. 1 ii. 9, 10
——— chap. 2 ii. 10
——— chap. 8 ix. 533. See
CHETWYND WILLIAM.
DUELS.
MURDER.
STABBING.
——— chap. 11 xi. 34, 89, 99, 101, 209, 222, 223, 230. See
BIGAMY.
FIELDING.
MARRIAGE.
MODERS.
KINGSTON, Ducheſs of.
PEERS.
POLYGAMY.
SENTENCES.
——— chap. 13 xi. 337
——— chap. 33 vii. 238
3 Jac. I. chap. 3 ii. 10
4 Jac. I. chap. 1 ii. 9, 10, 11
7 Jac. I. chap. 1 ii. 11
——— chap. 5 xi. 315, 319
21 Jac. I. chap. 3 vii. 518
——— chap. 6 xi. 258, 259, 264
CHARLES the FIRST.
16 Car. I. chap. 10 See STAR-CHAMBER.
CHARLES the SECOND.
13 Car. II. chap. 1 viii. 68
22 and 23 Car. II. chap. 1 vi. 217. See
COVENTRY ACT.
MAIMING.
WOODBURNE JOHN.
25 Car. II. chap. 2 vii. 612. See HALES Sir EDWARD.
30 Car. II. ſtat. 2, chap. 1 xi. 263
WILLIAM and MARY.
3 and 4 W. and M. chap. 9 xi. 257, 258, 259, 264
4 and 5 W. and M. chap. 18 xi. 324. See WILKES JOHN.
7 Will. III. chap. 3 iv. 662, 670, 671, 741. v. 18. vi. 74, 76. See
CRANBURNE CHARLES.
ROOKWOOD AMBROSE.
——— chap. 7 iv. 667, 677
9 and 10 Will. III. chap. 15 xi. 338
——— chap. 32 xi. 261
11 and 12 Will. III. chap. 2 xi. 137, 337
12 and 13 Will. III. chap. 3 xi. 3[illegible]5, 337
——— chap. 12 xi. 137
——— chap. 15 xi. 137
Queen ANNE.
2 and 3 Anne, chap. 18 xi. 305
6 Anne, chap. 7 ix. 708
GEORGE the FIRST.
9 Geo. I. chap. 22 viii. 313. See
ARNOLD EDWARD.
BLACK ACT.
BARNARD WILLIAM.
GEORGE the SECOND.
19 Geo. II. chap. 34 See MURRAY JOHN. SURRENDER.
24 Geo. II. chap. 44 xi. 314, 315, 316, 319
25 Geo. II. chap. 37 x. 518. x. 208, 216. Ap.
26 Geo. II. chap. 33 xi. 68, 95, 102, 224, 234
GEORGE the THIRD.
12 Geo. III. chap. 11 xi. 295. See ROYAL FAMILY.

* STAYLEY, WILLIAM,
* His trial at the King's-Bench bar for treaſonable words, 30 Car. II. 1678 ii. 656
* The ſubſtance of the indictment, being for treaſonable words ſpoke in French ii. 656. See vi. 330
* Sir William Jones, attorney-general, his ſpeech ii. 656
* The evidence ii. 656
* The priſoner's defence ii. 658
* The chief juſtice ſums up the evidence, and ſhews the danger of popery ii. 659
* Directs the jury to make the priſoner an example ii. 659
* The priſoner is convicted, and ſentence paſſed ii. 659
* This proceeding afterwards cenſured as violent and precipitate, to paſs ſentence on the day of conviction in the court of King's-Bench iv. 779
An account of the digging up his quarters, becauſe his relations abuſed the king's mercy viii. 439

STEDMAN, MARY. See GERMAN PRINCESS.

STEEL, WILLIAM,
His argument for the commonwealth, on the trial of James duke of Hamilton for high-treaſon ii. 7

STEELE, Mr.
Opens indictment againſt ſmugglers for murder ix. 720

STEPHEN.
In the time of king Stephen, the pope gained appeals to the court of Rome xi. 72

* STEPHENS, ELLIS. See COWPER SPENCER, & al.

STERLING. See MONEY.

* STERNE, JOHN ii. 466. See BOROSKI.

STEVENSON, JOHN,
His trial at Cheſter aſſizes for murder, 27 April, 1759, 32 Geo. II. x. 462
The indictment x. 462
Priſoner challenged Abraham Darlington as he came to be ſworn; but no cauſe was aſſigned for ſuch challenge x. 463
The attorney-general (Mr. Hall) challenged Edward Hamnett as he came to be ſworn, as he owned he was related to the priſoner, and allowed x. 463
Attorney-general opens the caſe and evidence x. 463
Evidence to prove the facts x. 464
Priſoner called no witneſſes, nor ſaid any thing in his defence x. 471
Mr. recorder Townſend's ſpeech, of counſel for the priſoner x. 472
Perryn, alſo counſel for the priſoner x. 472
Mr. Maddocks, on ſame ſide x. 473
Pleads for a ſpecial verdict, and not to be left to the determination of the jury, on account of the illegality of the proceſs x. 473
Mr. juſtice Swinnerton aſked, if they could ſhew any caſe to the court, where an arreſt under a blank warrant had been ſuperſeded x. 474
Anſwered, at preſent they could not x. 474
Mr. Hall, counſel for the crown, in reply, cites the caſe of Harris againſt Aſhley, where a ſheriff's clerk filled up the aſſignment of a bail-bond, and it was held good x. 474, 476
Mr. Falconer on the ſame ſide x. 475
Mr. Townſend, for the priſoner x. 476
Mr. juſtice White, no inſtrument or writing is a deed until it is delivered, but a warrant is a warrant as ſoon as it is ſealed x. 476
What a dangerous confuſion would be created in the country, were the proceedings upon arreſts made by blank warrants to be now ſet aſide x. 476
Mr. juſtice Foſter's opinion upon arreſts and proceſſes x. 476
If a proceſs be defective, or a miſtake in the name or addition, or if the name of the officer be inſerted without authority, and after iſſuing of the proceſs, or the officer exceeds the limits of his authority, and is killed, it will amount to no more than manſlaughter x. 476
Counſel declaring no delay was intended, court conſented to have a ſpecial verdict found x. 477
Special verdict x. 477

Mr. juſtice Noel's opinion, that the priſoner's crime was only manſlaughter; he was burnt in the hand and diſcharged x. 478

STEWARD, Lady ARABELLA. See
RALEIGH Sir WALTER.
ROYAL FAMILY.
SHREWSBURY Counteſs of. See xi. 297, 299

STEWART, ARCHIBALD, Eſq.
Tried for neglect of duty, and miſbehaviour in his office, as lord provoſt of Edinburgh, at the time the rebels got poſſeſſion of that city, June 8, 1747, 20 Geo. II. ix. 589
Bailed by the duke of Newcaſtle ix. 589
Lords of juſticiary continue the diet ix. 589
Debates againſt his diſcharge ix. 590
Indictment againſt him ix. 591
Information for his majeſty's advocate ix. 594
Information for him againſt his majeſty's advocate ix. 610
The lords of juſticiary remit the pannel, with the libel found as relevant, to the knowledge of an aſſize ix. 629
Debate about citing a witneſs ix. 629
Diſmiſs the pannel ix. 630
Second trial ix. 630
Liſt of aſſize or jury ix. 631
Papers and liſt of witneſſes againſt him ix. 632
The evidence againſt him ix. 633, &c.
Liſt of witneſſes for him ix. 667
Proofs for his exculpation ix. 668
Found not guilty, nem. con. ix. 679
His jury having ſat 94 hours, and undergone great fatigue, the court ordered, none of them ſhould be ſummoned on any aſſize for five years ix. 679

STEWART, JAMES,
His trial for murder in Scotland, September 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 40
The indictment againſt him x. 40
Liſt of perſons names that are to paſs on the aſſize, or jury x. 44
Proceedings at the firſt diet of court x. 44
Advocates for and againſt him x. 45
Priſoner pleads not guilty x. 45
Mr. Walter Stewart's ſpeech for him, on the relevancy x. 45
Mr. Mackintoſh on the ſame ſide x. 51
Mr. Frazer's ſpeech againſt the priſoner x. 56
Mr. James Erſkine againſt the pannel x. 62
Lord advocate againſt the pannel x. 64
Mr. Thomas Miller, for the priſoner x. 68
The interlocutor upon the relevancy x. 72
Proceedings at the ſecond diet of court x. 72, 73
The aſſize or jury x. 72, 73
The whole proof brought on the part of the proſecutors, and on the part of the pannel x. 73, &c.
The ſeveral letters produced at the trial x. 105
Lord advocate's ſpeech to the jury after cloſing the evidence x. 106
Mr. Brown's ſpeech for the pannel, after cloſing the evidence x. 125
Verdict of the jury unanimous, that he was guilty x. 137
Sentence and interlocutor of the judges x. 137
Lord juſtice-general's ſpeech at pronouncing ſentence x. 138
The priſoner's ſpeech x. 138
He is executed x. 138

* STIRLING, ARCHIBALD v. 630. See STIRLING JAMES, & al.

* STIRLING, CHARLES v. 630. See STIRLING JAMES, & al.

* STIRLING, JAMES,
* Archibald Seaton, Archibald Stirling, Charles Stirling, and Patrick Edmonſton, their trial for high-treaſon, at Edinburgh, Nov. 15, 1708, 7 Annæ, before George earl of Cromartie, lord juſtice-general, and the reſt of the lords of juſticiary there v. 630
* The indictment for taking up arms, adhering to and correſponding with the French king and the Pretender, and favouring their intended invaſion of Scotland, in 1707 v. 630
* Her majeſty's letter to the lord advocate, directing him to proſecute the priſoners v. 631
* The priſoners' petition for counſel, which is granted v. 631
* The priſoners' information or plea to the charge v. 632
* The lord advocate's replication v. 635
* The court adjudge the charge to be ſufficient v. 639
* The jury ſworn, being 15 in number v. 639
* The evidence produced againſt the priſoners v. 639
* The verdict brought in in writing, and ſubſcribed by the foreman; the priſoners acquitted v. 640
* They are aſſoilzed (or diſcharged) v. 640

STOCKS.
Nicholas Brambre, mayor of London, cauſed great and monſtrous ſtocks to be made in his mayoralty, to impriſon men in i. 14. n.

STOREY's CASE.
There are above forty places in our printed law-books where this caſe is cited, and agreed to be law iii. 775

STOUGHTON, Sir NICHOLAS,
Ordered into cuſtody, for proſecuting an appeal in the houſe of lords againſt Mr. Onſlow, during the time of parliament. See FAGG Sir JOHN.

STOUT, SARAH. See viii. 488, 490, 497, 506. COWPER SPENCER.

STOWE, JOHN,
Extracts from his Chronicle xi. 5
Extracts from his Annals xi. 16

STRACEY, Recorder of London,
Paſſed ſentence of treaſon on Matthews ix. 716

STRAFFORD*, THOMAS Earl of,
* His trial before the houſe of lords, on an impeachment for high-treaſon, March 22, 1640, 16 Car. I. i. 723
* Nine general articles exhibited againſt him i. 723
* Twenty-eight ſpecial articles i. 723
* The earl of Strafford's anſwer to the 28 ſpecial articles i. 730
* The trial comes on i. 736
* The place of trial deſcribed, and the manner of bringing the priſoner to the bar, &c. i. 736
* No ax to be carried before a priſoner impeached i. 736
* The king, queen and prince at the trial i. 736
* Earl of Arundel, lord high ſteward i. 736
* The articles and anſwer read i. 736
* Mr. Pym opens the charge; the earl permitted to reply to him i. 736
* Three additional articles, framed againſt him after the commencement of the trial i. 737
* He is compelled to anſwer them preſently i. 737
* The managers names i. 738
* He is charged with accumulative treaſon i. 738
* He ſhews he is miſrepreſented in that expreſſion he was charged with, "that the king's little finger ſhould be heavier to them than the loins of the law" i. 738. See xi. 131
* From his words they proceed to his actions; and firſt againſt the lives of the ſubjects, as againſt the lord Mountnorris and another, who were condemned by martial law i. 739. See viii. 350
* Charge, that he had not only exerciſed a tyrannical government over the lives, but the lands and goods of the ſubject i. 740
* That he granted a commiſſion for the apprehending ſuch as refuſed to ſubmit to the eccleſiaſtical ordinances i. 741
* His procuring a leaſe of the cuſtoms, and then raiſing the book of rates, whereby he had gained 26,000l. yearly i. 741
* His monopolizing tobacco i. 742
* The charge concerning flax i. 743
* Charged with ſending troops of ſoldiers to execute his decrees againſt the ſubjects lands and goods i. 744
* That he reſtrained the ſubjects from coming over to England, to offer their complaints againſt him i. 745
* His impoſing an oath upon the Scots in Ireland i. 746
* His deſign of reducing the kingdoms of England and Scotland by force of arms, and bringing them under the ſame arbitrary government he had introduced in Ireland i. 747
* Endeavoured to be proved from ſeveral ſpeeches the earl let fall i. 748
* That he adviſed the king to exact ſhip-money i. 750
* And threatened the lord mayor, &c. for not giving in a liſt of thoſe who were able to lend money i. 750
* The earl ſhews that accumulative treaſon was never heard of before; and where none of the particular articles amounted to treaſon, neither could any number of them i. 750
* Charged with adviſing the king to imbaſe the coin, and ſeize upon the bullion in the Mint i. 751
* With impoſing 8d. a day on the county of York, for maintaining the trained-bands, and levying it by force i. 752
* With a deſign of landing the Iriſh army in England i. 753
* The lords and commons break up abruptly, upon the commons inſiſting to offer further proofs after the cloſe of the proceſs, and refuſing the ſame liberty to the earl i. 754
* Agreed, at a conference between the two houſes, that no further proof ſhall be offered on either ſide i. 754
* The earl ſums up the evidence, and makes his obſervations on it i. 754
* Speaks particularly to the 28th article, and ſuggeſts ſome reaſons why it was dropped by the commons i. 756
* Mr. Glynn replies upon him i. 757
* Mr. Pym ſeconds him i. 757
* Debates in the houſe of commons, upon bringing in a bill of attainder againſt the earl i. 758
* The commons threaten the lords, if they refuſe to concur in a bill of attainder i. 758
* The lords hear my lord Strafford's counſel, as to matter of law; but the commons refuſe to attend at their bar, or reply any more in public, having paſſed the bill of attainder in their own houſe i. 759
* The names of the earl's counſel, and the ſubſtance of their arguments i. 759
* 1. That the 25 Edw. III. is a declarative law, and cannot be interpreted by equity i. 759
* 2. A penal law will admit of no conſtructions or inferences beyond the letter of it i. 759
* The doing one or more acts of injuſtice cannot be termed the ſubverſion of the fundamental laws i. 759
* The caſe of John de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, cited; where the ſame offences the earl was charged with were adjudged but felony i. 759
* That the earl was not charged with having ſubverted, but only with an intention to ſubvert, &c. i. 760
* And the intention was only treaſonable, where it was againſt the king's life, &c. by the 25 Edw. III. i. 760
* The reſt of the offences there enumerated, do not become treaſonable, unleſs the party proceeds to action i. 760
* No treaſon at common law at this day; and the parliament cannot declare any thing to be treaſon which is not ſo already by ſome ſtatute in being i. 760
* That by the 1 Hen. VI. 10, the proviſo as to declaratory treaſons, in the 25 Edw. III. is repealed, and no man hath been declared a traitor, either by king or parliament, ſince that ſtatute, except he had offended againſt the letter of ſome ſtatute i. 761
* The earl's counſel deſire their lordſhips, that a ſtate of the queſtion may be made for them to argue upon i. 761

* Upon this the houſe adjourned, and never met again upon this occaſion, the commons inſiſting on their bill of attainder i. 761
* The lords and commons meet at a conference in the hall, where the king, queen, and prince, were preſent incog. but nothing is ſpoken by any one but by Mr. St. John, whoſe ſpeech tended to furniſh the houſes with arguments for the bill of attainder i. 761
* The king's ſpeech to the houſe of commons againſt paſſing a bill of attainder i. 761
* It paſſes the lords i. 762
* The earl's letter to the king i. 762
* The royal aſſent given i. 762
* The earl's behaviour at his execution i. 762
* His dying ſpeech i. 763
* The act for reverſing his attainder i. 764. See vi. 408
* The names of the Straffordians i. 765

STRANGE, JOHN,
His argument for earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), impeached by the commons for high-crimes and miſdemeanours, in ſelling the places of maſters in chancery vi. 669, 678
Opens indictment againſt Hales for forgery ix. 67, 77
Of counſel againſt Kinnerſley for forgery ix. 93, 94
Croſs-examines the witneſſes for Bambridge and Corbet, on appeal of murder ix. 155
States a point of law for them ix. 176
His motion for Acton's diſcharge ix. 226
His motion to admit Acton to bail ix. 226
Opens defence for Francklin, for a libel ix. 270
His opinion reſpecting murder, and whether an appeal proper in caſe of a pardon ix. 538, 539
His report of Chetwynd's caſe for murder ix. 539
Of counſel againſt Townley for treaſon ix. 545
Againſt the Kinlocks for treaſon ix. 571
Opens nature of Bradſhaw's crime ix. 576
His obſervations on his defence ix. 578
Argues that civil proceſs againſt Macdonald, committed for treaſon, ſhould be diſcharged ix. 586
His argument againſt the objection, that an attainted perſon is not a competent witneſs in treaſon ix. *658, *664
His recapitulation of the evidence on lord Lovat's trial for treaſon ix. *726
Opens the indictment againſt William Hales x. 96. Ap.
His ſpeech for Henry Moore, againſt mayor, &c. of Haſtings x. 138. Ap.
States the caſe, and obſerves on the fine x. 139. Ap.
His Reports cited xi. 206
Condemned xi. 221
Defended xi. 233, 235

* STREATER, JOHN,
* His caſe on a writ of habeas corpus, at the Upper-Bench, in Weſtminſter-Hall, in Mich. and Hil. Terms, 1653, 5 Car. II. ii. 195
* The habeas corpus ii. 195
* The act of ſtate, prohibiting the lieutenant of the Tower to obey a habeas corpus, in the caſe of John Lilburne ii. 196
* Captain Streater's argument to the firſt part of the return ii. 197
* His argument to the ſecond part ii. 200
* The long parliament diſſolved by Oliver ii. 204
* An alias habeas corpus, in the name of Oliver the Protector ii. 204
* The return thereof ii. 205
* All perſons prohibited to ſay the long parliament was in being ii. 206
* The Protector ſwears to govern according to law ii. 207
* The argument which Streater had prepared, if there was occaſion for it ii. 207
* A commitment for publiſhing ſeditious pamphlets, too general ii. 210
* Orders of parliament determine with the ſeſſions ii. 210
* The court diſcharges the priſoner ii. 211

STREET, Sir THOMAS, Baron of Exchequer,
His charge to the jury on Buſby's trial for treaſon iii. 338
Tells them, that officiating as a prieſt ſufficient evidence of being in orders iii. 339
He was of opinion (contrary to the other eleven judges) that the king could not diſpenſe with the law vii. 616

STRICKLAND, MARY. See BUTLER MARY.

STRIKING in the KING's PALACE.
Ceremony of inflicting puniſhment for that offence xi. 16. See DEVONSHIRE Earl of. KNEVETT Sir EDMUND.

STRINGER, Sir THOMAS.
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of ſir Miles Stapleton, baronet, for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of the king, and ſubverſion of religion and government iii. 318

* STRINGMAN, DANIEL v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

STRODE, RICHARD.
Reſolved by all the judges, met at Serjeants-Inn, that the act, 4 Hen. VIII. chap. 8. concerning him, was a particular act of parliament vii. 217
Urged to be a general act vii. 244, 437
E contra vii. 247

STRODE, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law,
Concerned for the crown on the proſecution of Anderſon for treaſon ii. 995
Of counſel for Benjamin Harris for a libel ii. 1038

STROUD, WILLIAM, Eſq.
Walter Long, and John Selden, eſquires, proceedings againſt them vii. 217
The ſpeaker of the houſe of commons held in the chair, till ſome proteſts were made vii. 217
The parliament diſſolved, and ſome members ſummoned before the council vii. 217
Some refuſing to anſwer out of parliament, committed to the Tower, and the ſtudies of others ſealed up vii. 217
Some queſtions put to the judges concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament, and their anſwers vii. 218
The return of the habeas corpus for mr. Stroud, and others vii. 219
Mr. Aſk and mr. Maſon argue againſt the return vii. 219
Serjeant Berkley for the return vii. 221
Serjeant Davenport on the ſame ſide vii. 223
Mr. Littleton's argument againſt it vii. 224
Mr. Selden's argument againſt it vii. 229
Sir Robert Heath's argument for it vii. 236
The priſoners, who were in the marſhal's cuſtody, removed to the Tower the evening before the court were to give their judgment vii. 239
Two letters from the king to the judges of the King's-Bench vii. 239
The king ſends for the judges to London vii. 240
The priſoners remanded, becauſe they would not find ſureties for their good behaviour vii. 241
Mr. Stroud, and ſir Miles Hobart, charged in informations with eſcaping out of the Gatehouſe vii. 241
Brought in not guilty vii. 241
The judges reſolve, that a priſoner departing from priſon, though with the keeper's licence, is puniſhable, as well as the keeper vii. 241

STRYPE.
Extracts from his Memorials xi. 15

STUART FAMILY.
The reaſons for the diſaffection of the nation to the government, during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165

* STUBBS, FRANCIS ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

SUBORNATION.
Indictment for ſubornation of perjury vi. 12. Ap. See ii. *806. iv. *47. PRICE ANNE. TASBOROUGH JOHN.

SUBMISSION.
Lord chancellor Bacon's ſubmiſſion i. 383. See vi. 597.
Submiſſion of the duke of Somerſet vii. 13, 14
The ſubmiſſion of the marquis of Argyle was not accepted by the parliament vii. 392
The duke of Norfolk's ſubmiſſion xi. 19, 20

SUBSCRIPTIONS.
Lord chancellor Hardwicke, in his ſpeech as lord high ſteward, on paſſing ſentence on the rebel lords, in the year 1745, obſerved, that the ſeveral county meetings, for ſubſcribing money to raiſe men, &c. for the defence of the king and his government; and at which men of property of all ranks and orders crowded in with liberal ſubſcriptions, of their own motion, without authority of parliament, or the king's licence, beyond the example of former times, and uncompelled by law; was moſt legal and warrantable, notwithſtanding what had been ignorantly and preſumptuouſly ſuggeſted to the contrary ix. 614. x. 90. Ap. n.

SUDLEY, Lord.
Some paſſages in Hugh Latimer's ſermons, touching this nobleman's death vii. 10, 11. See SEYMOUR Lord SUDLEY.

SUFFOLK, Earl of.
Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, and chancellor of England, was diſmiſſed from his chancellorſhip, and immediately after impeached of high-crimes and miſdemeanours by the commons i. 1
Copy of the articles of impeachment i. 1. See POLE MICHAEL DE LA.
Charged at the bar of the houſe of lords with ſpeaking ſcandalous words of mr. Selden, member of the houſe of commons, and one of the managers of the conference, 4 Car. I. vii. 182

SUITS.
The excellency of the Engliſh laws does not conſiſt in civil ſuits Em. Pref. iii.

SUPREMACY.
The words in the oath of ſupremacy, "that the king is the only ſupreme governor in theſe realms," excludes any co-ordinate power ii. 368
See CROOK JOHN, and others.
FISHER JOHN, Biſhop of Rocheſter.
HALES Sir EDWARD.
MOORE Sir THOMAS.
* i. 59, 62.

SURGEON. See WITNESSES.

SURRENDER.
The manner of ſurrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. *652
Copy of the record ix. *664
What military men mean by ſurrender at diſcretion x. 550

SURREY.
Henry earl of Surrey, his trial for treaſon, Dec. 13, 1546, 37 Hen. VIII. xi. 18
Accuſed xi. 20
He is committed xi. 18, 20
Arraigned xi. 18
His defence xi. 18
Condemned xi. 19, 20
Judgment xi. 19
Beheaded xi. 19, 20

SUSPENSION. See
COMPTON HENRY.
FOGG CHRISTOPHER.
PEACHEL JOHN.
SHARP JOHN.

SWAN, JOHN,
His caſe for petit-treaſon, for the murder of his maſter x. 36
His confeſſion x. 37
Is executed x. 39. See JEFFERIES ELIZABETH.

* SWENDSEN, HAAGEN,
* His trial for forcibly marrying Pleaſant Rawlins; and of Sarah Baynton,

John Hartwell, and John Spurr, who abetted and aſſiſted him, Nov. 25, 1702, 1 Annæ v. 449
* A motion to put off the trial, for want of a material witneſs, denied, unleſs ſome perſon would make oath, that ſuch witneſs could not attend v. 449
* The defendant Swendſen being a foreigner, he had a party jury v. 449
* And is tried by himſelf v. 449
* Sir Simon Harcourt, ſolicitor-general, and mr. ſerjeant Darnell, open the evidence v. 450
* Evidence for the king v. 451
* Mrs. Buſby gives evidence of all the circumſtances of the fact v. 452
* Mrs. Rawlins herſelf examined as an evidence againſt him v. 455
* Counſel denied the priſoner v. 456
* Mrs. Rawlins croſs-examined by the priſoner, whether ſhe did not encourage his addreſſes to her, which ſhe denies v. 457
* The priſoner's witneſſes examined v. 458
* Lord chief juſtice Holt ſums up the evidence v. 463
* Reſolutions of the judges, on the ſtatute of forcible marriages v. 464
* Sarah Baynton is tried with Hartwell and Spurr v. 465
* Sir Simon Harcourt, ſolicitor-general, opens the evidence v. 465
* The king's evidence v. 466
* Mrs. Baynton croſs-examines mrs. Rawlins v. 471
* Mrs. Rawlins does not deny but ſhe had ſaid, ſhe wiſhed herſelf mr. Swendſen's wife v. 472
* Marrying a woman while ſhe is under a force is capital, though the party marrying her was not the author of the force v. 473
* Swendſen convicted v. 474
* Hartwell's defence v. 475
* A woman cannot be evidence for, or againſt her huſband v. 476
* Lord chief juſtice ſums up the evidence v. 477
* One may be adjudged guilty of aiding and aſſiſting in a forcible marriage, though not preſent at the ceremony v. 478
* Mrs. Baynton convicted v. 478
* Hartwell and Spurr acquitted v. 478
* Mr. juſtice Powell's ſpeech, before judgment, on Swendſen and Baynton v. 479
* Mrs. Baynton's execution reſpited, ſhe being found quick with child v. 480
* Mr. Swendſen's execution, and dying ſpeech v. 481
* SWINOCK, SAMUEL iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
* SYMPSON, JAMES v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

T.

TALBOT, Honourable CHARLES, Solicitor-General,
Of counſel againſt Francklin for a libel ix. 260
TALBOT, WILLIAM,
His caſe on information ore tenus in Star-chamber, for maintaining a power in pope to depoſe and kill kings xi. 116
Speech of ſir Francis Bacon, attorney-general xi. 116
* TALES.
Where a precept is awarded, and there is a default of jurors, there can be no tales, but a new pannel will be awarded iv. 741
A tales cannot be awarded by commiſſioners of oyer and terminer, and gaol delivery iv. 742
A tales may be awarded for default of jurors, on appeals and indictments removed into B. R. iv. 744. See JURY.
TANFIELD, Sir LAWRENCE, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
His ſpeech on paſſing ſentence on Wraynham, for ſlandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 109
TANKRED, Mr.
His caſe in parliament, ordered to pay the charge of attendance to a perſon falſely complained of viii. 111
TAPNER, BENJAMIN. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
* TASBOROUGH, JOHN, and ANNE PRICE,
* Their trial for ſubornation of perjury, 32 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1017. iii. 220. vii. 483
* The indictment ii. 1018
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard's ſpeech before evidence ii. 1019
* Sir Creſwell Levinz, attorney-general, his ſpeech ii. 1019
* Records of the jeſuits and Langhorn's convictions, produced in evidence ii. 1020
* Dugdale's evidence of mrs. Price's ſoliciting him to retract his evidence ii. 1020
* Dugdale's evidence of Taſborough's tampering with him ii. 1021
* Mr. Sanders's defence for mrs. Price ii. 1027
* Witneſſes for Mrs. Price ii. 1028
* Mr. Pollexfen's defence for Tasborough ii. 1030
* Whether juſtifiable to offer a witneſs a reward, though to ſpeak truth ii. 1031
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard ſums up the evidence ii. 1034
* Mr. juſtice Jones ſums up the evidence, and directs the jury ii. 1035
* Offering a witneſs a reward to give his evidence, criminal ii. 1035
* The defendants are found guilty ii. 1036
* Their ſentence ii. 1037
TAXES.
Mr. Hargrave gives the public hopes that he will favour them with the hiſtory of conteſt about taxes out of parliament, from the acceſſion of the Stuart family, till finally decided againſt the crown, in 1641 xi. 29. See iv. 165.
* TAYLOR, ALEXANDER v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
* TEMPLE, JAMES ii. 399. See REGICIDES.
* TEMPLE, PETER ii 399. See REGICIDES.
* TESTE. See WRITS.

THEFT.
Of the puniſhment of that crime Em. Pref. x.
* THOMPSON, NATHANIEL,
* William Pain, and John Farwell, tried for a miſdemeanour, in framing and publiſhing a libel or letter to ſcandalize the juſtice of the nation, 1682, 34 Car. II. iii. 220, 505. vii. 483
* The information iii 505
* A copy of the record of the attainder of Green, &c. and a copy of the inquiſition taken by the coroner concerning the murder of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey, produced, and ſworn to be true copies iii. 508
* Evidence that the defendants had acknowledged the printing and writing of theſe libels before the council iii. 509
* Evidence of the manner in which ſir Edmondbury Godfrey's body was found iii. 514
* They are all three found guilty iii. 518
* Three affidavits relating to the death of ſir Edmondbury Godfrey iii. 518
* Thompſon and Farwell ſentenced to ſtand on the pillory, and each of them to pay a fine of 100l. and be impriſoned till they have paid it iii. 518
* Pain only fined 100l. and to be impriſoned till he pay it iii. 518
THOMPSON, RICHARD,
Report of the committee appointed to examine complaints againſt him, 32 Car. II. vii. 491
Witneſſes examined concerning his ſermons on the 30th of January, and other occaſions vii 492
Reſolved, that the ſaid Thompſon had preached ſedition, vilified the Reformation, and promoted popery vii. 493
Committee appointed to prepare an impeachment vii. 493
THOMPSON, Mr.
Of counſel for John Taſborough ii. 1032
Of counſel for the king on the trial of Giles, for an aſſault iii. 66
His ſpeech for Bethel, tried for an aſſault and battery iii. 415
Sums up for him iii. 417
THOMPSON, WILLIAM,
Signs a frivolous plea x. 32. Ap.
THOMPSON, Sir WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech before evidence on the trial of John Aſhton iv. 456
Sums up the evidence iv. 479
His argument in maintenance of the ſecond article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons before the lords againſt doctor Sacheverel, for preaching ſeditiouſly v. 693
His reply to the defence thereof v. 815
His reply to objection, whether it be a high crime and miſdemeanour to diſſent in opinion from a reſolution of both houſes of parliament v. 819
Sums up the evidence before the houſe of peers on the trial of earl Wintoun, on his impeachment for treaſon, in being in rebellion againſt king George I. vi. 45, 54
His ſpeech againſt Thomas earl Maccleſfield, late chancellor, impeached by the commons before the lords, of ſelling the places of maſters in Chancery vi. 567
Opens the indictment againſt Dammaree, for treaſon viii. 221
His reply viii. 242
Opens indictment againſt Purchaſe, for like offence, 1710 viii. 268
His reply viii. 282
Opens indictment againſt Willis, for like offence viii. 251
His reply viii. 264
THOMPSON, Sir WILLIAM, Recorder of London,
Not for extending puniſhment to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one ix. 106
Bambridge objected to him as an improper perſon to try him on a charge at the inſtance of the commons, he being a member of the houſe, and would therefore be both proſecutor and judge; ſir William refuſed trying him ix. 227
His ſpeech at his execution viii. 459
Acknowledges himſelf a prieſt viii. 460
* THORPE, WILLIAM,
* Accuſed of hereſy, 1407, 8 Hen. IV. before Thomas Arundel, archbiſhop of Canterbury, and chancellor of England i. 16
* His confeſſion of faith i. 16
* He ſcrupleth to take an oath i. 18
* The charge againſt him was, that in a ſermon at Shrewſbury, he had delivered himſelf as follows:
* 1. That the ſacrament of the altar after conſecration was material bread.
* 2. That images ought not to be worſhipped.
* 3. That men ſhould not go on pilgrimages.
* 4. That prieſts have no title to tythes.
* 5. That it is not lawful to ſwear in any wiſe i. 20
* A certification of the doctrines he preached ſent from Shrewſbury to the archbiſhop, and read to him i. 20
* His defence for preaching without a licence i. 22
* His defence upon the firſt article i. 23
* On the ſecond article i. 25
* On the third article i. 26
* On the fourth article i. 28
* On the fifth article i. 30
* He is examined touching auricular confeſſion i. 32
* Refuſing to make a ſubmiſſion and recantation, he is committed to priſon, and never more heard of i. 36
THORPE, Sir WILLIAM, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench,
Was adjudged to be hanged for bribery i. 704, 705. vii. 306
* THROCKMORTON, Sir NICHOLAS,
* Tried for high-treaſon, primo Mariæ, 1554 i. 63. See xi. 10.
* Names of his judges i. 63
* The court would not permit him to ſpeak, till he had pleaded guilty, or not guilty i. 64
* Two

* Two of the jury challenged peremptorily for the queen, without ſhewing cauſe i. 64
* He applies himſelf to the queen's counſel not to miſrepreſent him, but to do him juſtice i. 64
* The priſoner admitted to anſwer every matter as it was urged againſt him, before the whole evidence for the crown was gone through i. 65
* Winter's examination read, to prove that Throckmorton ſent him to Wyat, who propoſed a treaſonable deſign to him, and the priſoner's anſwer i. 65
* Croft's examination ſet aſide, becauſe he might appear and give evidence vivâ voce i. 66
* Vaughan, who was condemned for the ſame fact, allowed a witneſs for the queen i. 67
* Swears the priſoner was privy to the conſpiracy i. 67
* The priſoner's anſwer i. 67
* His confeſſion read in part againſt him; he deſires it may be read thro' i. 69, 70
* The duke of Suffolk's confeſſion read againſt him, who had been executed for the ſame fact, importing, that ſir Nicholas was privy to the conſpiracy i. 70
* He inſiſts, that the lord Thomas Grey (who is ſaid to have given the duke of Suffolk that information) be produced perſonally againſt him i. 70
* Fitzwilliams, one of his witneſſes, the court would not ſuffer to be examined, and gave no reaſon for refuſing him i. 70
* The court refuſed to let an act of parliament be read, which he deſired; and ſaid, they were not to find books for him; that the judges were to reſolve all doubts in law i. 71
* He acknowledges it had been a cuſtom, that witneſſes were not admitted againſt the crown i. 72
* He argues notably, that no open deed or overt-act is proved againſt him i. 72
* Whether words ſpoken can be deemed overt-acts i. 74
* Priſoner permitted to reply, after the evidence ſummed up, and the jury directed i. 76
* The priſoner remanded into cuſtody, notwithſtanding his being acquitted i. 77
* The jury impriſoned and fined for their verdict i. 78

THROGMORTON, MICHAEL xi. 25. See POLE Cardinal.

THURLOW, EDWARD, Attorney-General,
Defends himſelf againſt charge of acting improperly in his office xi. 287. See KINGSTON Ducheſs Dowager of. WILKES JOHN.

* THWYNG, THOMAS, and MARY PRESSICKS,
* Their trial at York aſſizes for high-treaſon, July 24, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 79
* The indictment for conſpiring the death of the king, and the ſubverſion of the eſtabliſhed religion and government iii. 79
* Bolron's evidence of the priſoner's concern in the plot iii. 80. See iii. 390. n.
* Mowbray's evidence as to Thwyng iii. 81
* Further evidence againſt mrs. Preſſicks iii. 82
* Thwyng calls his witneſſes, to prove it a malicious proſecution iii. 83
* Mr. juſtice Dolben's directions to the jury iii. 87
* Words, unleſs they diſcover an intention to do ſome act, not treaſonable iii. 87
* Mr. baron Atkyns's directions to the jury iii. 87
* Thwyng convicted, and Preſſicks acquitted iii. 88
* Sentence paſſed iii. 89
* Thwyng is executed iii. 89. See viii. 459

THYNNE, THOMAS.
The murder of mr. Thynne was one of the moſt barbarous and impudent murders ever committed iv. 199. See BOROSKI.

TICKLEFOOT, THOMAS,
His obſervations on the trial of ſir George Wakeman viii. 453

* TILNEY, CHARLES i. 134. See ABINGTON, &. al.
* TITCHBURNE, CHIDIOCK i. 128. See BABINGTON, & al.
* TITCHBURNE, ROBERT ii. 394. See REGICIDES.

TITLE.
The titles of king Henry VIII. xi. 19
A title derived to the queen of Scots above the Conqueſt i. 106. See PHILIP and MARY.

* TOLERATION v. 683. See the arguments concerning it in doctor Sacheverell's trial.

TOMLINS, Mr.
Of counſel for Prynne, on proſecution in Star-chamber, for ſeveral libels i. 483, 501
Doctor Baſtwick prays he may be of counſel for him i. 502.
Burton prays he may be of counſel for him i. 503

* TONGE, THOMAS,
* George Phillips, Francis Stubbs, James Hind, John Sellers, and Nathaniel Gibbs, their trial for high-treaſon at the Old-Bailey, December 11, 1662, 14 Car. II. ii. 478
* Hind pleads guilty, and the reſt not guilty ii. 479
* Mr. ſerjeant Maynard opens the evidence ii. 479
* Evidence of Hill, Riggs, Bradley, and Tyler, their fellow-conſpirators, of a conſpiracy among the ſectaries againſt his majeſty ii. 480, &c.
* A letter, of which about 5000 copies were diſperſed, ſuggeſting there was to be a maſſacre by the papiſts, as a colour for arming themſelves ii. 482
* The examination of Phillips read in evidence ii. 489
* Evidence of rumours of a maſſacre by the papiſts about that time ii. 490
* Phillips owns he was privy to the deſign ii. 491
* Stubbs owns that he knew of it ii. 490
* Gibbs denies it, and affirms that he was always loyal to the king ii. 490
* Tonge ſays he was drawn into the plot by Tyler ii. 492
* Sellers endeavours to excuſe himſelf ii. 492
* They except to the witneſſes, that they have owned themſelves guilty of the ſame offence; which exception is over-ruled ii. 492
* Tonge affirms he was threatened in the Tower with the rack ii. 492
* Mr. ſolicitor ſums up the evidence for the king ii. 492
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 493
* The priſoners are convicted ii. 494
* Judgment of high-treaſon paſſed upon them ii. 495
* Phillips, Tonge, Gibbs, and Stubbs, their behaviour at execution ii. 495

TOPHAM. See JAY.

TORTURE.
The attorney-general Coke extolled the great clemency of queen Elizabeth, that conſpirators againſt her life were not put to the rack or torture; and acknowledged the goodneſs of God towards her, and his juſt judgment upon the priſoners, that the truth had been revealed by the witneſſes without the rack or torture of any of them i. 199. See xi. 109. n.
Sir Richard Weſton, baron of the Exchequer, in his charge to a jury, obſerved, that to torture criminals was illegal, and never uſed in England ſince Campion, the Jeſuit, was put upon the rack, 20 Eliz. iii. 98
Sir William Thompſon was not for extending puniſhment to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one ix. 106
Engliſhmen are happily unacquainted with the practice of racks and inſtruments of torture Em. Pref. iii.
Even the ancients, among whom torture was in uſe, had no good opinion of it Em. Pref. iii. n.
Montaigne and Grotius approve of the abolition of torture in England Em. Pref. iii. n.
A priſoner put to the torture in Scotland, in Charles II.'s reign ii. 625
There is no worſe torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
Earl of Exeter introduced rack into the Tower v. 131

TOWNLEY, FRANCIS, Eſq.
His trial for high-treaſon, July 15, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 543
The indictment againſt him ix. 543
Mr. attorney-general opens the evidence ix. 545
Mr. Strange on the ſame ſide ix. 545
Evidence againſt him ix. 545
Serjeant Wynne, counſel for him, aſks the witneſſes, if they had no promiſe of pardon ix. 546
Mr. Clayton, another of his counſel, aſks, if they were promiſed mercy ix. 547
The capitulation at Carliſle ix. 547
Priſoner's defence, and evidence for him ix. 548
Mr. ſolicitor-general's reply ix. 549
His caſe, as ſtated by mr. juſtice Foſter ix. 550
Warrant for his execution ix. 551
Executed at Kennington-Common ix. 551
Some account of him ix. 552

TOWNSEND, Mr. Recorder of Cheſter,
His ſpeech for Stevenſon charged with murder x. 472, 476

TRACY, the Honourable ROBERT, Juſtice of the Common-Pleas,
Delivers the opinion of all the judges, on the trial of Edward Arnold viii. 313
Sums up the evidence viii. 317
His argument in the Prince's caſe xi. 299
His opinion xi. 300, 302

TRADE. See EAST-INDIA COMPANY, and Sir THOMAS SANDYS. MONOPOLIES. vii. 494, 501, 502, 505, 508, 521, 530, 538, 557, 563.

* TRANTER, ROBERT vi. 195. See REASON HUGH.
* TRAVERS, JOHN i. 134. See ABINGTON, & al.

TREASON.
The excellency of the Engliſh laws conſiſts particularly in caſes of treaſon Em. Pref. iii.
Of the progreſſive legal improvements in caſes of treaſon Em. Pref. v.
If priſoner committed for treaſon be not indicted next term or ſeſſions after commitment, having duly entered his prayer, he ſhall on laſt day of term or ſeſſions be admitted to bail, unleſs it appear to court on oath that the king's witneſſes could not then be produced; and then, if not indicted and tried ſecond term or ſeſſions after commitment, he ſhall be quite diſcharged Em. Pref. v.
Party accuſed of treaſon may demand copy of indictment, names of jurors and witneſſes, and aſſiſtance of counſel in points of law, as well as in matters of fact, proceſs for witneſſes, and every ſpecies of treaſon muſt be proved by ſome overt-act, and that by two witneſſes Em. Pref. vi.
No attainder for treaſon works diſinheriſon of heir, or affects any other right than only offender's during his life Em. Pref. vi.
Being privy and conſenting to treaſon, or procuring another to commit treaſon, is being a traitor i. 73. viii. 468
Bare hearing treaſon not treaſon i. 138
What ſhall be deemed aſſent to treaſon i. 138. ii. 594
Crimen læſæ majeſtatis defined i. 236
The intent is treaſon i. 190, 198. v. 634. vii. 59
But it muſt be proved by an overt-act iv. 184
The reaſon for every part of puniſhment in treaſon i. 243
If a man commit treaſon May 20, and ſell his lands May 5, and after is indicted that he did commit the treaſon May 1, which goes before the ſale, and after is found guilty of this indictment, he who is to loſe the land cannot deny this verdict, and ſay, the treaſon was committed May 20, though it concern him for all he hath. By lord chief juſtice Coke i. 338
Earl Strafford was charged with accumulative treaſon i. 738. See i. 723, 750
Ambaſſador may be tried for treaſon ii. 8

Aiding

Aiding traitor knowingly, treaſon ii. 151
* Words tending to perſonal hurt of prince, will amount to overt-act of treaſon ii. 304, 349, 354. iii. 1055. (See Id. 87.) iv. 593, 656
The Spencers treaſon was, holding, that the king might be impriſoned, or compelled by ſharp impriſonment, to ſubmit to the people's demands ii. 305, 404. viii. 467
To doubt or heſitate in a point of allegiance, is direct treaſon ii. 314
Treaſon cannot be pardoned by implication ii. 350
Encouraging traitor treaſon ii. 365, 594
Said, that had the Protector Cromwell taken upon himſelf the name of king, it ſeems that no treaſon could have been committed againſt the king de jure, not in poſſeſſion ii. 455
To write or print, that if the king abuſes his power, the people may reſiſt and take up arms againſt him, is treaſon ii. 544
Judges of opinion, that charge againſt earl Clarendon was not treaſon; with their reaſons ii. 556
Impeachment for treaſon generally not cauſe for committing a peer ii. 568. See IMPEACHMENTS.
Priſoner tried at bar for treaſon, illegally receives ſentence the ſame day ii. 659. iv. 779
Judgment in treaſon muſt be in uſual form, elſe the king loſes his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213
To endeavour to introduce abſolute dominion, is the worſt of treaſon iii. 223. vii. 481
A perſon ſtanding mute for high-treaſon ſhall have judgment as a traitor iii. 345. viii. 346
One indicted of high-treaſon, for ſoliciting for one who was accuſed of high-treaſon iii. 347. iv. 174. See Id. 175, 178, 205
What is miſpriſion of treaſon iii. 755. iv. 193. viii. 418, 468
Freehold not held a neceſſary qualification of juryman in treaſon iii. 820. See iii. 708.
The judges differed in their reaſons why want of freehold was no challenge to jurors in London in treaſon iv. 189, 206
Court may make priſoner offer of trial, tho' outlawed for treaſon iii. 943
Writ of error for reverſal of a judgment in treaſon is the right of the ſubject, and ought to be granted at his deſire, and is not an act of grace or favour to be denied or granted at pleaſure iii. 986
Sentence of burning altered to beheading, on precedent iv. 129
Unleſs principal traitor be convicted, illegal to try receiver or comforter of him; for though convicted, if he had his clergy, receiver or comforter of him, being in nature of an acceſſary, is diſcharged thereby iv. 147. n. See iv. 130.
A pamphlet written and diſperſed with intention to excite and prevail on the people to take up arms, is high-treaſon iv. 171
It is not treaſon in lawyers to adviſe the king, that he may legally purſue arbitrary meaſures iv. 172
Comforting a traitor, unleſs it be to prevent his being amenable to juſtice, is not treaſon iv. 175
More perjuries committed in proſecutions for treaſon by accuſers, than by witneſſes for priſoner iv. 177
Treaſon is not confined to place or time, as all other crimes are iv. 177. See Id. 185.
But one perſon juſtly convicted of perjury in treaſon concerning the popiſh plot, in the reign of Car. II. iv. 177
But one perſon eſcaped in a trial for treaſon, where there was a deſign againſt his life, in Jac. II.'s reign iv. 177
Non compos mentis cannot be guilty of ſome ſpecies of treaſon iv. 181
By ſtat. 33 Hen. VIII. chap. 20. if a man fell mad after he had committed treaſon, he was to be tried in his abſence; and if after being attainted of treaſon, he was to be executed; but this law was repealed on account of its cruelty and inhumanity iv. 206
Erroneous opinions may make an heretic, but not a traitor iv. 182. See ii. 346, 354
Trial in treaſon may be put off without the conſent of the attorney-general iv. 190
Priſoner ought not to be denied a note of the fact to be given in evidence againſt him, proving treaſon iv. 191
In treaſon, for deſigning to kill the king, there have been ſo many interpretations of facts tending that way, that it was almoſt impoſſible for an innocent man to defend himſelf, unleſs he had notice of the fact intended to be inſiſted on at the trial iv. 191
No words charging the king with any perſonal vice, is treaſon iv. 197
Many judges of opinion, that treaſonable paſſages in a ſermon never preached, nor intended, but found in writing in the party's ſtudy, not treaſon iv. 197
Outlawry in treaſon not to be reverſed, becauſe party was beyond ſea at time of its being pronounced iv. 198
Breaking the perſon executed for treaſon, and expoſing his quarters, is done rather to deter the living, than to puniſh the dead iv. 205
One may be tried for high-treaſon on ſame miſdemeanour for which he hath been already convicted iv. 207
Drinking confuſion to the king is treaſon by the laws of Scotland iv. 293
When a tales and not a new pannel ſhould be awarded in treaſon, on ſtat. 7 Will. III. chap. 3. iv. 741
Cruizing upon coaſt with armed veſſel, an actual levying war v. 37
What ſhall be conſtrued adhering to the king's enemies? v. 34. See x. 77. n.
It does not appear by the precedent of John Hampden's caſe for treaſon, whether his judgment was reverſed or affirmed, nor is the report of the caſe to be found in any of the Reports of that time vi. 54
Writing treaſonable letters is an overt-act of high-treaſon vi. 77. See iii. 817
Where ſome intended treaſon, and others accompanied and aſſiſted them in any action, not knowing of the treaſon intended, yet they are all offenders in treaſon. So affirmed by the judges vii. 49. See viii. 266
The law charges actors and abettors in intended treaſon with direct treaſon againſt the perſon of the prince. So affirmed by the judges vii. 49
Compaſſing and imagining the king's death extends to civil as well as natural death vii. 467. viii. 467
All meetings and agreements to riſe and ſeize the king's guard are overt-acts vii. 467. viii. 467
Fact may be declared treaſon in parliament, which was not felony before vii. 488
Judges aſſuming to themſelves a legiſlative power, formerly held treaſon vii. 489
Said to be high-treaſon for judges to grant warrants for ſeizing books, or diſmiſſing grand juries, contrary to law vii. 489
Proceedings againſt doctor Oldys for refuſing to proſecute traitors viii. 75
Conſpiring the death of the chief magiſtrate, by what name ſoever called, declared treaſon vii. 373
What ſhall be deemed levying war, ſo as to make it treaſon viii. 247
Argument of lord chief juſtice Parker in a caſe of treaſon, wrote with great clearneſs of ſtyle and ſtrength of reaſon viii. 289
Foreign treaſons, and treaſons committed in Ireland, to be tried in England by a jury, though the party accuſed be an Iriſh peer viii. 341
That the terms of a capitulation on the ſurrender of a place were not complied with, no ſort of defence in a court of law ix. 550. See Id. 547. n.
Addreſs to the king ordered by the peers for appointing a lord high ſteward to continue during the trial of a Scots nobleman, upon an impeachment of treaſon by the commons ix. *618. See COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARD. HIGH STEWARD.
Counſel not permitted to examine witneſſes on behalf of the priſoner in caſes of treaſon ix. *638
Inſtance of priſoner not being aſked why judgment of treaſon ſhould not paſs againſt him, till he reminded the judge of the omiſſion. See AUDLEY THOMAS Lord.
Inſtance of priſoner being aſked that queſtion three ſeveral times ix. *747, *749, *750
Sending intelligence to rebels or enemies will make a man a traitor (except what is done by means of ſuperior force), though the intelligence ſhould happen to be intercepted. So reſolved by the judges x. 77. n.
Writing and ſending letters of intelligence, ſtopped at the Poſt-office, was laid as an overt-act of compaſſing the death of the queen, and alſo of adhering to her enemies x. 77. n.
Quære, if the above was an overt-act of adhering? x. 77. n.
Quære, whether the particular judgment of treaſon ſhould be given againſt an outlaw for treaſon, or only execution generally awarded x. 204. n.
Writs of error go from the King's-Bench to the houſe of lords, even in caſes of treaſon x. 520. n.
Queen conſort of England, by an unheard-of precedent, indicted of treaſon xi. 12
Proceedings againſt various perſons in the reign of Hen. VIII. for treaſon, in denying ſupremacy, and other capital crimes relating to religion xi. 22
Act tho' done by warrant of great ſeal, is treaſon, if not the great ſeal of a lawful ſovereign, but of an uſurper xi. 26
Perſons equally guilty as traitor himſelf may yet be his judges, if not attainted xi. 26
Proceedings in the court of Chivalry on appeal of treaſon xi. 124
The occaſion of making 25 Edw. III. ſtat. 5. chap. 2. Em. Pref. iv. n. vi. 74
Before this ſtatute, lying with the nurſes of the king's children, or killing a man ſent on an errand by the king, were adjudged treaſon Em. Pref. iv. n. i. 760
The word proveablement in the ſtatute, explained by ſir Edward Coke iii. 757. See iii. 755. iv. 203.
The judges have no power to puniſh any other treaſons than thoſe mentioned in this ſtatute iii. 758, 764. iv. 172, 173
The word mort in the ſtatute explained by ſir Edward Coke iii. 763, 764
Before this ſtatute no man, as that ſtatute ſays, knew what was not treaſon; and the expoſition on this ſtatute has been ſo extravagant and various, that people in the reign of Car. II. were as much at a loſs to know what was not treaſon, as before the ſaid ſtatute iv. 184
This ſtatute is only declaratory of the common law vii. 373
Traitorouſly ſo material a word in an indictment for treaſon, that if it be omitted, the indictment is void Em. Pref. viii.
* Indictment for treaſonable words ſpoken in French ii. 656
No conviction of treaſon on indictment where crime is not formally laid, tho' facts charged do amount to treaſon ii. 808
Indictment containing treaſon and miſdemeanour to be quaſhed iv. 176
Innuendo indictment of treaſon iv. 197. Em. Pref. iv.
Indictment muſt expreſs that party publiſhed writing, in order to give it in evidence in treaſon iv. 197. viii. 472
Sidney's was the firſt indictment of treaſon, upon which any man loſt his life, for writing any thing without publiſhing it iv. 197
Same overt-acts may be laid to prove adheſion, as to prove compaſſing of king's death iv. 413
Indictment for high-treaſon ought to be drawn with great accuracy vi. 233
A ſpecies of treaſon not laid in indictment cannot be given in evidence to prove a new overt-act, but may to corroborate evidence already given vi. 286, 287
Adjudged by court, that if one overt-act is made out, the indictment is proved vi. 329
In indictments for levying war, it is not neceſſary to lay the day with preciſion ix. 550, 551. n.
It is not neceſſary to prove overt-act to be committed on particular day laid in the indictment; but as evidence may be given of an overt-act before the day, ſo it may after the day ſpecified in the indictment. So reſolved by all the judges ix. *607. See Id. 550, 551. n.

Impreſſit a proper word to denote printing in indictment for treaſon ix. 711
How the charge, when the overt-act of treaſon is intercepted letters, ſhould be laid in the indictment x. 77. n.
Accomplices in treaſon legal witneſſes till convicted i. 113. ii. 339. iii. 883. iv. 149, 572, 594. xi. 26
Two witneſſes not neceſſary at common law in treaſon i. 137
One witneſs, with concurring circumſtances, ſaid to be ſufficient in treaſon ii. 78
Jefferies, on colonel Sidney's trial, ſaid, it was reſolved by all the judges of England, that if I buy a knife of J. S. to kill the king, and one witneſs proves I bought a knife, and another proves that I bought it for that purpoſe, they are two witneſſes of an overt-act within ſtatute of Edw. VI. iii. 818
Sir John Hawles ſays, it is fit to know who the judges were who gave the above reſolution, if it were but for the authority of the caſe, for he doubts the reaſon of it would convince no man; they might as well have reſolved, that eating or drinking, or the moſt ordinary acts of a man's life, were an overt-act of treaſon iv. 198
Two witneſſes to any one ſpecies of treaſon ſufficient, for ſo many are not neceſſary to every overt-act iii. 204, 419, 729
One witneſs giving evidence of treaſon in county where criminal indicted, and another witneſs giving evidence of another overt-act of ſame treaſon in another county, are two ſufficient witneſſes ii. 714, 443. iii. 204, 407.
Whether the law of God requires two witneſſes in treaſon v. 117, 123
Two witneſſes are not required to ſame fact of treaſon, tho' one would think at firſt ſight of ſtat. Edw. VI. they were iv. 198
One witneſs ſwearing directly to the treaſon, and another to a circumſtance, are two witneſſes in law iv. 246
A confeſſion after the fact proved by two witneſſes, ſufficient to convict ix. 559. See WITNESSES.
Plea in treaſon iii. 228. vi. 45. Ap.
Indictments for treaſon iii. 565. iv. 211. vi. 56, 57, 60. Ap. See INDICTMENTS.
Record of outlawry for treaſon vi. 4. Ap.
Writ of error in treaſon vi. 42. Ap.
Records in treaſon vi. 48, 50, 51, 55. 57. Ap. See RECORDS.
Copy of warrant for ſuſpending execution in treaſon, all wrote by the king's own hand vii. 66
Copy of a ſpecial verdict on treaſon drawn up for the conſideration of all the judges viii. 285. See SPECIAL VERDICTS.
The king's ſpecial warrant for beheading ſir Walter Raleigh for treaſon viii. 340
Conſtructive conſpiracy againſt the king, is not an overt-act of compaſſing his death iii. 722
Conſpiring to levy war, or to ſeize the guards, is not conſpiring againſt the king's life iii. 756. iv. 85
There is no ſuch thing as conſtructive treaſon iii. 756. iv. 85
The contrary held iii. 722, 764, 765, 768, 769, 770, 817. iv. 206, 619, 622. viii. 467, 468. See
BROOKE GEORGE.
COBHAM Lord.
CONSTABLE.
GREY Lord.
PLUNKET.
RALEIGH Sir WALTER.
VANE Sir HENRY.
Conſulting and agreeing an overt-act of compaſſing the king's death iv. 689. vi. 313. viii. 467
Printing is an overt-act viii. 64. See OVERT ACTS.
The ſtrongeſt ſuſpicion cannot be given in evidence as proof of treaſon iii. 755
General account of treaſonable plot may be given in evidence, though it does not immediately affect priſoner iii. 798. ix. *671
Record of conviction of one for treaſon, ſhall not be read in evidence againſt another for miſdemeanour for the ſame fact iii. 834
No authority to reject that for evidence in treaſon, which is permitted to be given in evidence in trials on civil matters iv. 194
Stricter proof is required in treaſon than in any civil matter, or in any other crime iv. 194
Writing being an overt-act of treaſon, it muſt be evidence of a deſign to kill or depoſe the king, or the like iv. 197
Similitude of hands never admitted in evidence to prove a treaſonable writing till Sidney's caſe iv. 197
It is moſt dangerous and unwarrantable for a jury, in capital caſes, eſpecially in treaſon, to convict a perſon upon the evidence of probability iv. 204
Preſumption ſhall never take place in treaſon vi. 418
Confeſſion of perſons attainted of treaſon, read i. 136. See viii. 247
Other words permitted to be proved than thoſe laid in the indictment iii. 1010. See WORDS.
Any thing may be given in evidence tending to prove overt-act laid in indictment, though thing itſelf that is teſtified be an overt-act not laid in indictment iv. 697. ix. 558. See iv. 691
Evidence may be given of overt-acts in a county different from that where the fact was laid, an overt-act having been firſt proved in the proper county ix. 559, 581. See LAYER CHRISTOPHER. PERKINS Sir WILLIAM.
Papers found in lord Preſton's cuſtody; thoſe found where Layer had lodged them; the intercepted letters of doctor Henzey, were all read in evidence as overt-acts of treaſon reſpectively charged on them x. 77. n.
William Gregg's intercepted letters might in like manner have been read in evidence, if he had put himſelf upon his trial x. 77. n.
But papers not capable of ſuch connection, while they remain in the hands of the author unpubliſhed, as Sidney's did, will not make a man a traytor x. 77. n. See EVIDENCE.
The irregularities, illegalities, and hardſhips ſtate priſoners ſuffered, who were proſecuted for treaſon, concerning the popiſh plot in Car. II.'s reign iv. 176, 177, 178
The manner of uſage of ſtate priſoners for treaſon concerning the popiſh plot, in the reign of Car. II. was worſe than the practice of the inquiſition iv. 177
If a libel be the cauſe of a rebellion, yet, if it was not deſigned by the contriver to that purpoſe, it is not treaſon iv. 171
The ſubject that rebelleth, or riſeth in forcible manner to over-rule the royal will and power of the king, intendeth to deprive the king both of crown and life. The judges delivered this as a rule of law vii. 48. n.
There is not, nor ever was, a tenure which obligeth tenants to follow their lords into rebellion ix. 567
The fear of having houſes burnt, or goods ſpoiled, is no excuſe, in the eye of the law, for joining and marching with rebels ix. 567
The only force that doth excuſe, is a force upon the perſon, and preſent fear of death; and this force and fear muſt continue all the time the party remains with the rebels ix. 568
It is incumbent on every man who makes force his defence, to ſhew an actual force; and that he quitted the ſervice as ſoon as he could ix. 568
To raiſe a rebellion, or make an inſurrection, be the deſign or intent thereof never ſo ſpeciouſly good, is high-treaſon. viii. 467. See REBELLION. KING (The). PRECEDENTS. WORDS.
* Made treaſon by a ſtatute to read the Bible; and thirty-ſix attainted and executed on that ſtatute i. 49
* Sir Thomas More attainted of high-treaſon, in denying the king's ſupremacy i. 62
* He is guilty of treaſon who is privy and conſenting to it; and ſo is he who endeavours to perſuade or procure another to commit treaſon i. 73
* The duke of Norfolk attainted of treaſon againſt a particular act of parliament, for attempting to marry the queen of Scots without queen Elizabeth's knowledge i. 116
* Earl of Arundel attainted of high-treaſon, for correſponding with a traitor beyond ſea, and ſaying maſs for the ſucceſs of the Spaniſh invaſion i. 168
* Perſons attainted of treaſon committed againſt a king before his coronation i. 214
* Poiſoning heretofore made treaſon by a ſtatute i. 324, 353
* The intention is only treaſonable (or puniſhable) where the deſign is againſt the Prince's life i. 759. See ii. 304.
* If the actions themſelves are not treaſonable, the reſult of them cannot be treaſon i. 937
* A number of miſdemeanours or felonies cannot alter their nature ſo as to make them amount to high-treaſon i. 941
* Whether a peer of Ireland can be tried here for treaſon committed there? i. 950
* Several tried for high-treaſon againſt the commonwealth and the Protector during the Uſurpation ii. 1, 19, 83, 183, 259, 277
* The aiding, aſſiſting, relieving, harbouring, or encouraging a traitor (knowing him to be ſuch), high-treaſon i. 139, 140. ii. 151, 365. iv. 105, 131, 132
* It is the imagination that is the treaſon; the overt-acts are but the evidence of it ii. 314
* Whether the writing or printing treaſonable words, dictated by others, can be ſaid to be an overt-act of the writer's treaſonable imaginations ii. 346, 528
* Treaſon may be committed againſt a prince when he is out of his dominions, and out of the poſſeſſion of the government ii. 435
* Though it may be no offence in law to aſſiſt a king de facto againſt a king de jure, yet it is adjudged high-treaſon to aſſiſt other uſurpers (who have not taken upon them the title of king) againſt a king de jure, out of poſſeſſion of the government ii. 444
* A riotous aſſembly pulling down houſes, breaking open priſons, &c. adjudged to come within that branch of the 25 Edw. III. which makes it high-treaſon to levy war againſt the king ii. 585, 593
* The parliament could not declare any thing to be treaſon that was not felony at common law ii. 558. See TRESILIAN.
* The accepting popiſh orders high-treaſon ii. 993
* Soliciting foreign aid high-treaſon ii. 878. iv. 600
* Whether a native of Scotland be within the ſtatute which makes it high-treaſon to accept popiſh orders, found ſpecial ii. 1013
* A ſolemn reſolution, that in a caſe of treaſon there muſt be two witneſſes believed by the jury iii. 56. See v. 127
* Whoever imagines to compel the king by dureſs to yield to their demands, is in law guilty of imagining his death ii. 305. iii. 406, 817. iv. 625. vii. 46*. viii. 667
* Conſulting to levy war againſt the king, and to ſeize his guards, or promote an invaſion, held to be overt-acts of compaſſing the king's death, within the firſt branch of the ſtatute of the 25 Edw. III. iii. 730. iv. 772
* Treaſon to write treaſonable poſitions, tho' they be not publiſhed iii. 815. See Id. 824. x. 77. n.
* No petit-treaſon in Ireland iv. 403
* Murder made high-treaſon in Ireland iv. 103
The lawfulneſs of aſſiſting the powers de facto againſt all others urged in defence of treaſon ii. 436. See RESISTANCE.
Attainder of treaſon reverſed on account of an omiſſion in the entry of the judgment iii. 752

TREBY, Sir GEORGE, one of the Committee for the Commons,
His ſpeech on the impeachment againſt viſcount Stafford, tried for treaſon, before the lords, in being concerned in the popiſh plot iii. 109

TREBY, Sir GEORGE, Recorder of London,
His argument for the city in the quo warranto cauſe iii. 554
Sir George Treby, having been removed from the recorderſhip of the city of of London, was reſtored iii. 628

His ſpeech for ſir Patience Ward informed againſt for perjury iii. 667
His obſervations on the evidence iii. 676
His argument for ſir Thomas Sandys, at the ſuit of the Eaſt India Company vii. 497
Sir George Treby was examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41

TREBY, Sir GEORGE, Lord Chief Juſtice C. P.
His directions to the jury on the trial of Cook for treaſon iv. 772
Sums up the evidence on Anderton's trial for treaſon viii. 64
His argument in the Bankers caſe xi. 141

* TRELAWNY, Sir JONATHAN, Baronet, Lord Biſhop of Briſtol,
Tried for publiſhing a libel iv. 304

TRESILIAN, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's-Bench,
Proceedings in parliament on his attainder for treaſon i. 12. vii. 229
His treaſon was, that he had given it under his hand, that the king might create unto himſelf, at his pleaſure, another rule to walk by than the law of the land preſcribes him vii. 306
Takes lodgings at Weſtminſter in diſguiſe i. 12
Diſcovered lying under a table covered with baize, and brought before the lords i. 12
Is drawn to execution i. 13
Refuſes to confeſs i. 13
Will not climb the ladder till beaten with ſtaves i. 13
Is ſtripped, and names and images of devils found under his clothes i. 13
Is hanged i. 13
His throat afterwards cut i. 13. vii. 306
Is buried at Grey-Friars i. 13
His learning gave him honour; but his villany made his exit by a rope vii. 223, 481
Though the crime for which he was impeached, was not felony, yet he was condemned in parliament vii. 488. * See BRAMBRE.

TRESPASS.
By the laws of England every invaſion of private property, be it ever ſo minute, as bruiſing the graſs, or treading upon the ſoil without leave, is a treſpaſs xi. 321. See ENTICK.

TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Baron of the Exchequer,
His arguments, reaſons, and opinions, for the king, in the cauſe of ſhip-money i. 637

TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Solicitor-General,
Sums up the evidence on the trial of lord Mohun for murder, before the lords iv. 535

TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Attorney-General,
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Charnock, for treaſon iv. 567
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of ſir John Freind, for treaſon iv. 604
Opens the evidence againſt ſir William Parkyns, in promoting invaſion and rebellion, and the aſſaſſination-plot iv. 633
His ſpeech before evidence, on the trial of Rookwood, for treaſon, in conſpiring death of the king iv. 677
His ſpeech before evidence, on Cranburne's trial for treaſon iv. 706
Opens the evidence againſt major Lowick, on his trial for treaſon, in being concerned in the aſſaſſination plot iv. 725
His reply iv. 733
Opens the evidence againſt Cook for treaſon iv. 754
Demands judgment, ſame day priſoner pleaded guilty, on trial of Knightley, for treaſon iv. 779
Held on the bill of attainder againſt ſir John Fenwick, that an examination before a juſtice of peace, may be read where the witneſs cannot be had v. 68
Opens the evidence on the trial of earl Warwick before the houſe of lords, for murder v. 144. See v. 165
His ſpeech on lord Mohun's trial before the houſe of lords, for murder v. 182

* TRIAL.
* Sir John Perrot and the lord Grey tried in England, for treaſon committed in Ireland i. 188, 951
* A peer cannot be brought to trial on a charge exhibited againſt him by another peer in the houſe of lords ii. 558
* The priſoner admitted to anſwer to what each witneſs charged him with as they came, before the whole evidence for the king was gone through i. 65
* A priſoner not permitted to take notes at his trial i. 135
* The puniſhment for ſtanding mute i. 325
* A woman not permitted to wear her hat at her trial i. 339
* A peer ſhall not be tried by a jury of commons in a capital caſe, though he deſire it i. 388
* The lord high ſteward conſulted by the lords tryers in the abſence of the priſoner i. 394
* Formalities previous to a trial before the houſe of peers i. 736
* A trial before a council of war i. 745
* Treaſon committed in one reign may be tried in another ii. 9
* Scots tried in England for treaſon committed in Scotland, before the union of the kingdoms ii. 10
* A jury diſcharged of a priſoner without giving a verdict ii. 715, 831
* A peer may be tried by a jury as a commoner, for offences not capital ii. 560
* Priſoners fined forty marks a-piece, for coming into court at their trial with their hats on ii. 611
* The commons deny that a high-ſteward is neceſſary upon a trial by impeachment ii. 740
* The lords reſolve, that the lords ſpiritual may vote in all matters previous to the trial, in capital caſes ii. 752
* A priſoner tried at bar for treaſon receives ſentence the ſame day ii. 659
* The priſoners receive ſentence the day after their conviction, though tried at bar ii. 789
* Theſe proceedings cenſured iv. 779
* Where any point of law ariſes at the trial of a peer, it ought to be put in the priſoner's preſence ii. 729. v. 169
* A jury are to take no notice of what was done at a former trial ii. 863
* The priſoner may give evidence, that a witneſs produced againſt him gave contrary teſtimony at a former trial ii. 900
* A peer need not hold up his hand at his arraignment iv. 211, 512
* The King's-Bench try a commoner impeached by the commons iii. 263
* An Iriſhman tried at the King's-Bench bar for treaſon committed in Ireland, and for which he had been before arraigned there iii. 293
* A priſoner may croſs-examine a witneſs, after the king's counſel have done with him; but muſt not make any obſervations on the evidence till it is gone through iii. 481
* The lord Ruſſel allowed two clerks to take notes at his trial iii. 343, 708. iv. 143
* No time or notice can be inſiſted on to prepare for trial, in capital caſes iii. 732
* The king's counſel ſhall have the laſt word iii. 816. iv. 40, 162
* Where one outlawed ſhall be admitted to a trial, and where not iii. 983
* Nothing ought to be given in evidence that was ſaid or done at another trial, till the record of that trial be proved iv. 41
* The priſoner being thick of hearing, has one to aſſiſt her iv. 106
* One tried for harbouring a traitor, before the traitor was convicted iv. 122
* One tried for a miſdemeanour, and convicted; and afterwards tried for high-treaſon, for the ſame fact iv. 207
* A peer may be tried by commiſſion during a prorogation of parliament iv. 212
* The lord high ſteward ſole-judge, on a trial by commiſſion; and need not conſult the other peers concerning the methods and order of the trial iv. 215
* The lords tryers cannot adjourn, or ſeparate, any more than a jury of commoners, till they have given a verdict iv. 232. But it is otherwiſe where the trial is in full parliament iv. 233
* It is not uſual for a high ſteward to ſum up or make any obſervations on the evidence iv. 246
* Where one pleads his peerage to the juriſdiction of an inferior court, he muſt produce his patent iv. 414
* Where an indictment is removed into the King's-Bench, judgment ought not to be given till four days after conviction, if there be ſo many days remaining in the term iv. 779
* Where the trial is at bar, venire iſſues, as in civil caſes; and fifteen days between the teſte and return iv. 778
* No evidence can be given againſt a man in a trial for his life, but in his preſence v. 85, 118
* A priſoner cannot inſiſt on the witneſſes being examined apart as his right v. 20
* In a trial of a peer before the lords for a miſdemeanour, he ſhall not ſtand without the bar v. 364
The bill for regulating trials in caſes of treaſon, aſcribed to ſir William Whitelocke viii. 64. n.
Uſefulneſs of this collection of Trials to the ſtudy of the law Em. Pref. i.
Of trials for felony Em. Pref. viii.
Trial put off for want of jurors iii. 318. iv. 741
Place of trial of a peer on impeachment deſcribed i. 736
Where priſoners ſever in their challenges to the jury, and yet are tried together by the ſame jury, it is a miſ-trial ix. 11
Suffering a jury to go at large in the midſt of a trial, is a miſ-trial x. 407. n.
Upon affidavit of the jurymen, that they did not give ſuch a verdict as was entered up, the court ſet aſide the trial, and granted a new one in a criminal caſe x. 407. n. See x. 411. n.
No freehold a good cauſe of challenge on Fitzharris's, but not on lord Ruſſel's or colonel Sidney's trial iv. 169
Lord chief juſtice North publiſhed Colledge's trial iv. 185
Trials publiſhed for the benefit of the publiſher, rather than for common good iv. 189
Putting off a trial a favour, not a right iv. 200
Paſſage in a printed trial is no evidence iv. 201
The reaſon that all trials are public iv. 202
On trials in the houſe of lords, a king's counſel always opens. See KING'S COUNSEL, unleſs upon an impeachment from the commons. See IMPEACHMENTS.
Trials publiſhed more for the benefit of the judge, than for the common good iv. 186. vii. 478
The trials in this collection are moſtly publiſhed by authority Em. Pref. i.
The method of practice in trials for crimes is governed by common-law rules Em. Pref. i.
Not regularly put off before plea iv. 418
It is totally in the diſcretion of the judges to put off a trial iv. 190
Trial never put off for want of witneſſes without affidavit iv. 421, 631 v. 449
Priſoners refuſing to join in their challenges, ordered to be tried ſeparately iv. 423
No habeas corpus iſſues on trial for capital offences iv. 667
A peer by letters patents, if he be arraigned before the parliament ſits, ſhall be tried by his peers viii. 59
Cannot waive his trial by his peers viii. 60
The king by his prerogative tries his cauſe in what court he pleaſes, except where the common law makes a prohibition vii. 246
One pretended to be a lunatic allowed a ſolicitor to ſtand by him to call his witneſſes, and aſk queſtions for him, on his trial for felony viii. 291

One ſtanding mute, and refuſing his trial, condemned upon the ſtatute of 35 Hen. VIII. chap. 2, for foreign treaſons viii. 346
Court refuſed to poſtpone trial upon ſpecial circumſtances ix. 582
Trial on identity of the perſon upon an attainder cannot be put off by the common affidavit ix. 584
Trial of lady Ivy's cauſe for great part of Shadwell, held as long as any in Weſtminſter-Hall of that nature, except one, for many years, which was the famous cauſe of Colt in B. R. vii. 604
The trial in ejectment in Ireland between Craig and earl Angleſea, the longeſt trial ever known ix. 379. n.
The jury on the above trial conſiſted almoſt entirely of members of parliament ix. 379. n.
The judge told the jury they muſt take notes, for he could not pretend to undertake to ſum up the length of evidence, as appeared from the opening would ariſe in the cauſe ix. 383
The trial of Mary Heath, for perjury in Ireland, laſted 22 hours ix. 525
Trial allowed to be taken down in ſhort-hand after debate x. 132. Ap.
Court ordered four indicted jointly, to be tried ſeparately iv. 199, 663
Court refuſed three indicted jointly, to be tried ſeparately, though one of the priſoners made ſuch a motion ix. 2, 3, 10
Court told ſeveral priſoners againſt whom a ſingle indictment had been found, that if they agreed to join in their challenges, they might be tried together; if not, that they would be tried ſeparately x. 720. See v. 195
Trial may be in England for crimes committed in Ireland i. 188, 951. iii. 293, 313. viii. 341.
For trials of peers before the king in parliament, ſee IMPEACHMENT. PARLIAMENT.
For trials of peers in the court of the lord high ſteward, ſee COURT of the HIGH STEWARD. HIGH STEWARD.

TRIAL at BAR.

Private proſecutor cannot have a trial at bar without making out the uſual requiſites ix. 68. n.

* TRIGGE, THOMAS ii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.

TULLY.

His Offices cited and commended iv. 172
Tully thought it would be a reproach to his ſon, if he did not abound with philoſophy, having heard Cratippus for the ſpace of a whole year, and that at Athens too iv. 206. See ROMAN HISTORY.

* TURNER, ANNE,

* Her trial as acceſſary before the fact, to the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury i. 339
* Her hat ordered to be taken off at the arraignment i. 339
* She and the counteſs of Eſſex reſort to a conjurer i. 339
* Several devils invoked, that the priſoner and the counteſs might obtain the love of their gallants i. 340
* The priſoner convicted, and judgment given againſt her i. 341

TURNER, Sir CHRISTOPHER,

Would not try a priſoner for murder, becauſe the body of the deceaſed was not found x. 30. Ap. n. iv. 204

TURNER, Sir EDWARD,

His ſpeech on the trial of Harriſon the regicide ii. 315
His reply on Cook the regicide's trial ii. 350

* TURNER, Doctor FRANCIS, Biſhop of Ely,

* Tried for publiſhing a libel iv. 304

* TURNER, Colonel JAMES,

* John Turner, William Turner, Mary Turner, and Ely Turner, their trial for burglary, at the Old Bailey, the 15th, 16th, and 19th of Jan. 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 502
* The indictment for breaking open the houſe of Francis Tryon, and robbing him of jewels and money to the value of ſeveral thouſand pounds ii. 502
* Colonel Turner complains his goods were ſeized on by the ſheriffs, and they had taken poſſeſſion of his houſe: the ſheriffs anſwer, they have only left a ſervant in the houſe for ſecurity of the goods, till they ſee whether he is convicted or acquitted ii. 503
* The chief juſtice holds, that it is the duty of the ſheriff, where one is accuſed of felony, to ſecure his goods; but the priſoner may have what he has occaſion for to ſubſiſt him ii. 504
* If the priſoner can find ſecurity, that the goods be forth-coming, the ſheriff ſhall take his hands off ii. 504
* The chief juſtice tells him, they cannot grant him proceſs to bring in his witneſſes ii. 505
* If the principals are all acquitted, the acceſſaries ſhall be diſcharged without trial ii. 506. iii. 470
* The evidence againſt the priſoners iii. 470
* Proof, that the jewels were produced by James Turner ii. 507
* And part of the money, which he owned to be mr. Tryon's ii. 508
* The circumſtances of the robbery teſtified by mr. Tryon ii. 508
* Evidence, that Mary and Ely Turner brought ſome of the money to a neighbour's houſe ii. 510
* A particular ſeal to one of the bags given in evidence ii. 511
* A ſtool brought for him to ſit on in the court ii. 512
* Mr. Tryon ſwears he believes William Turner was one of the men that robbed him ii. 515, 516
* Colonel Turner's defence ii. 516
* He ſays he found the thieves, and perſuaded them to deliver up the goods and money, upon promiſe that their lives ſhould be ſaved ii. 517
* He calls his witneſſes, who ſay little or nothing to the purpoſe ii. 521
* The other priſoners defence ii. 523
* The lord chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 524
* He tells them, that Mary Turner, the wife, cannot be convicted as acceſſary to a felony committed by her huſband ii. 524
* That all the accomplices in burglary are guilty of burglary, though they do not all enter the houſe ii. 524
* That if one comes in by day, and opens the door to others in the night, and they come in and rob the houſe, they are all guilty of burglary ii. 526
* James Turner is convicted ii. 526
* The reſt are acquitted ii. 526
* After his conviction, he confeſſes the whole matter to five juſtices of the peace ii. 526
* Judgment againſt James Turner to be hanged ii. 527
* His execution ii. 527. viii. 381

TURNOUR,

His account of the Bankers caſe xi. 137

* TURPIN, JOSEPH iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.

TURTON, Sir JOHN,

One of the juſtices of the court of King's-Bench, informs the ſeveral juries on Kidd's proſecution, for murder and piracy v. 327, 335

* TUTCHIN, JOHN,

* His trial on an information for a libel, at Guildhall, Nov. 4, 1704, 3 Annæ v. 528
* A juryman owns he had always condemned mr. Tutchin's writings; and deſires to be excuſed v. 530
* The king's counſel, after ſome debate, conſent to it v. 530
* Howe the printer's evidence, of his agreement with Tutchin for the copy, &c. v. 532
* Debates between the counſel, whether the proof be ſufficient to read the papers v. 533
* The papers read v. 535, 539
* Tutchin holds, people may call their princes to account, and depoſe them v. 536
* Mr. Montague's ſpeech for the defendant v. 538
* Mr. attorney's obſervation on the evidence for the queen v. 540
* It may be a libel, though no particular perſon be reflected on v. 540
* Mr. attorney charges mr. Montague with juſtifying Tutchin's principles, as to the power of the people v. 540
* And ſays, he ſhall proſecute any man who maintains ſuch doctrine v. 540
* The chief juſtice Holt directs the jury v. 541
* The defendant is found guilty of publiſhing, but not of writing, The Obſervators v. 542
* The defendant's counſel move in arreſt of judgment; for that the diſtringas was teſte'd the day after the return of the venire, and ſo a diſcontinuance of proceſs v. 543
* And for that the venire and diſtringas were returnable at a day certain v. 545
* The laſt exception is over-ruled v. 545
* As to the firſt exception, the queen's counſel argue, that it was but a miſpriſion of the clerk, and ought to be amended v. 545
* Sir Thomas Powys's argument v. 545
* Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general v. 547
* Books cited, where amendments are allowed in caſes of the crown v. 547
* Arguments by the defendant's counſel, that it could not be amended v. 552
* For that there was no inſtance of an amendment in a criminal proſecution v. 553
* Mr. Broderick for the defendant v. 554
* Mr. Montague's argument v. 557
* Mr. Parker's argument v. 562
* Mr. Whitaker on the ſame ſide v. 563
* Sir Thomas Powys and mr. attorney-general, their reply v. 564
* Mr. juſtice Gould held it was amendable by the common law; but not by the ſtatute v. 568
* Mr. juſtice Powys is of opinion, it might be amended v. 569
* Lord chief juſtice, and mr. juſtice Powell, contra v. 569
* Writs muſt be teſte'd the day they are awarded v. 570
* An error in point of ſkill not amendable, though miſpriſions or miſtakes were v. 570
* Where the court is divided, judgment may be entered v. 570
* Mr. juſtice Powys agrees there ſhould be a new trial v. 570
* The trial being ſet aſide, whether a new venire could be taken out, unleſs the court award it v. 571
* No judgment entered v. 571

* TWYN, JOHN, Printer,

* His trial for high-treaſon, and the trials of Thomas Brewſter, Simon Dover, and Nathan Brooks, for a miſdemeanour, the 20th and 22d of February, 1663-4, 15 Car. II. ii. 528
* The indictment againſt Twyn, for printing a ſeditious and treaſonable libel, entitled, A Treatiſe of the Execution of Juſtice, &c. ii. 528. See vi. 330
* The indictment againſt Dover, for printing a libel, called, The Speeches and Prayers of ſome of the late King's Judges, &c. ii. 529
* The indictment againſt Brewſter, for printing and uttering the ſaid libel, called, The Speeches and Prayers, &c. ii. 530
* Another indictment againſt Brewſter, for printing and uttering another libel, called, The Phœnix; or, The ſolemn League and Covenant, &c. ii. 530
* The indictment againſt Nathan Brooks, for ſelling and uttering the ſaid book, called, The Speeches and Prayers, &c. ii. 530
* Dover, Brewſter, and Brooks are allowed a copy of their indictment, and counſel; their offence being but a miſdemeanour ii. 530
* John Twyn firſt brought upon his trial ii. 530
* Half the jury bookſellers, or printers ii. 530
* Speeches of the king's counſel ii. 531
* The evidence againſt Twyn ii. 532
* Of his ſervant, that ſome ſheets of the book were printed at his houſe; and that mr. Twyn compoſed part of them himſelf ii. 532

* Of ſeveral, that the ſheets and part of the forms were ſeized in his printing-houſe ii. 533
* The treaſonable paſſages of the pamphlets read in court ii. 536
* In his defence he denies that he knows who was the author ii. 537
* The chief juſtice directs the jury, and tells them, the expreſſions in the book are high-treaſon by the old ſtatute ii. 537
* John Twyn convicted ii. 537. See viii. 386
* Judgment for high-treaſon pronounced againſt Twyn ii. 538
* The jury ſworn a-new the Monday following, and Brewſter brought upon his trial ii. 538
* The evidence againſt Brewſter, that he put the book to be printed, and paid the printer for printing, and the bookbinder for ſtitching them ii. 538
* His defence, that he did it only in the way of his trade, and did not read the book ii. 540
* That the ſuppoſed offence was committed three years and a quarter before ii. 541
* The lord chief juſtice Hyde directs the jury ii. 541
* He tells them, the law implies a malicious and ſeditious intent, where one publiſhes a ſeditious libel ii. 542
* And it is no excuſe for the printer, to ſay, they were dying ſpeeches, or the words of a dying man; the printer and publiſher are liable to be puniſhed, if the words are not juſtifiable ii. 542
* Thomas Brewſter tried upon the ſecond indictment ii. 542
* The evidence againſt him upon the ſecond indictment, much the ſame as upon the firſt ii. 542
* Brewſter urges in his defence, that the laſt book he is indicted for, was printed formerly with licence ii. 544
* The lord chief juſtice directs the jury, and takes notice of this expreſſion in the laſt-mentioned libel, That, the king abuſing his power, the people may reſiſt, and take up arms againſt him; and this, he tells the jury, is expreſs treaſon ii. 544
* He obſerves, as to the book being licenſed, one part was licenſed at Edinburgh, and the other during the rebellion here ii. 544
* Simon Dover brought upon his trial ii. 545
* The evidence againſt him ii. 545
* His defence, that none of the witneſſes are poſitive; but that all the evidence is by hearſay ii. 546
* The chief juſtice directs the jury, and tells them, it was no excuſe to ſay, when he had printed a piece of ſedition, that printing was his trade ii. 547
* And that pregnant circumſtances are good evidence, as well as full proof ii. 547
* Nathan Brooks brought upon his trial ii. 547
* The evidence againſt him, that he carried ſome of the books tied up to a bookſeller; and that one was ſeized upon him ii. 547
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 549
* Thomas Brewſter, Simon Dover, and Nathan Brooks, convicted ii. 549
* The chief juſtice tells them, they might have been indicted for high-treaſon for this fact, if the government had not been favourable ii. 549
* Judgment againſt theſe three ii. 549
Twyn's behaviour at his execution viii. 386

TWYSDEN, Sir THOMAS, Baronet, Juſtice B. R.
Of opinion, on earl Shafteſbury's motion in B. R. to be bailed or diſcharged on a commitment by the lords for contempt during the ſitting of parliament; that though he was illegally committed, the commitment could not be examined in B. R. nor could that court either bail or diſcharge the noble priſoner; but did not declare how his opinion would have been in caſe there had been a prorogation ii. 622

* TYBURN.
* Whence ſo called i. 49

TYRANNY.
Tyranny, bad as it is, is better than anarchy xi. 323

U.

UCHILTRIE, JAMES Lord of,
His trial at Edinburgh, for calumnies againſt the marquis of Hamilton, lords Haddington, Roxburgh, and Buccleugh, and ſowing ſedition between his majeſty and the ſaid noblemen, 6 Car. I. vii. 283
Lord Uchiltrie's examination, June 20, 1631, and depoſitions concerning the Hamiltons vii. 284
Lord Rea's examination vii. 285
The king's letters to the lords of the council in Scotland, to try the lord Uchiltrie vii. 287
The lord Uchiltrie's liſt of the plotters vii. 288
The indictment againſt the lord Uchiltrie vii. 288
His defence vii. 290
The lord Rea's depoſition of the 18th of May, 1631, read vii. 292
Sentenced to perpetual impriſonment vii. 308

* UDALL, JOHN,
* His trial, on the ſtatute 23 Eliz. cap. 2. for feloniouſly writing and publiſhing a ſeditious and ſcandalous libel, called, The Demonſtration of Diſcipline, 1589 and 1590 i. 168
* He is examined before a committee of council i. 168
* Alledges, no man is bound to anſwer and accuſe himſelf i. 169
* Refuſes to anſwer upon oath i. 170
* He is tried at Surrey aſſizes i. 171
* Charged with puritanical tenets i. 171
* Depoſitions of abſent perſons read againſt him i. 172
* He inſiſts, they ought to give evidence vivâ voce; which the court denied i. 172, 173, 182
* The court refuſe to hear the priſoner's witneſſes, becauſe it was againſt the queen i. 173, 183
* The court offer to acquit him, if he would ſay he did not write the libel he was charged with i. 173, 183
* The court direct the jury to conſider only, whether he writ the book, and leave the nature of the offence to them i. 173, 176
* Udall's defence; he urges the ſtatute he is indicted upon was deſigned only againſt the papiſts i. 174
* The court rule, that impugning the biſhops authority, is impugning the queen's authority within the meaning of the act; and it is felony to impugn the queen's authority in cauſes eccleſiaſtical i. 175
* The priſoner is convicted i. 176
* He affirms the cauſe of preſbytery to be God's cauſe i. 177, 178
* Upon his ſubmiſſion his judgment is reſpited i. 179
* Being called to judgment, he aſſigns the ſame cauſes in arreſt of judgment he had mentioned in his defence i. 180
* His objections anſwered by the court i. 181
* Circumſtantial evidence ſufficient to convict a man, where there is no direct proof i. 182
* Retracting his ſubmiſſion, ſentence of death paſſed upon him i. 184
* His principles i. 185
* Condemns the ſeparation of the Browniſts i. 185
* King James interpoſes in behalf of him and the other puritanical miniſters under proſecution i. 187
* He petitions for baniſhment i. 188

UNION OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND. See POSTNATI.

* UNIVERSITIES. See CAMBRIDGE. MAGDALEN COLLEGE.

* URLINESS, SAMUEL v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

USAGE.
Uſage in former caſes neceſſary to be known in order to underſtand the method and practice of trials for crimes Em. Pref. i.
No degree of antiquity can give ſanction to an uſage bad in itſelf xi. 312
A general immemorial uſage, not inconſiſtent with any ſtatute, eſpecially if the reſult of evident neceſſity, and tending to public ſafety, ſeems part of the common law of England, in contradiſtinction to ſtatute law xi. 350, 351

USURPATION.
If a practice be fit and right, it matters not its being introduced in the time of Uſurpation Em. Pref. viii.
The diſtinction between acts concurring with the uſurper, transferring de facto in his perſon the power he uſurps, and acts, whereby the oppreſſed ſubjects make uſe of the power uſurped, wherein the utility, not of the uſurper, but of the ſubjects, is reſpected vii. 413. See
ARGYLE Marquis of.
CROMWELL OLIVER.
REGICIDES.
TREASON.

USURPATIONS OF THE CHURCH OF ROME. See POPE.

V.

VACATION.
Defendant's impriſonment expiring in the vacation, court made a ſpecial rule to prevent his lying in gaol longer than the time ordered by the ſentence xi. 334

VALENTINE, BENJAMIN. See ELIOT Sir JOHN.

* VANE, Sir HENRY, Knight,
* His trial at the King's-Bench bar, for high-treaſon, the 6th of June, in Trinity-term, 1662 ii. 435
* Arguments he had prepared to offer before his arraignment ii. 435
* His arraignment ii. 438
* The indictment for compaſſing the death of king Charles II. holding him out of the poſſeſſion of the government, raiſing forces and levying war againſt him ii. 438
* His memorandums for his defence ii. 439
* A jury ſworn, and charged with the priſoner ii. 441
* The evidence produced againſt him ii. 441
* Sir Henry Vane's defence ii. 442
* He inſiſts that a king out of poſſeſſion of the government, was not ſuch a king againſt whom treaſon could be committed ii. 442
* That he could not be called to account for what he tranſacted by authority of parliament, the parliament being co-ordinate with the king ii. 443
* And that, being indicted in Middleſex, evidence could not be given of treaſon committed in Surrey ii. 443
* He is anſwered, that the parliament, under which he pretended to act, was diſſolved by the death of the late king ii. 444
* As to the king's being out of poſſeſſion, this had been urged by Watſon the jeſuit, who was indicted for treaſon againſt king James, before his entering into England, but was over-ruled ii. 444
* And as to the parliament being co-ordinate with the king, this parliament had not a greater power than other parliaments, by 17 Car. though they had a longer duration ii. 444
* And that the parliament being under a force, and moſt of the members excluded, their acts were of no authority ii. 444
* Privilege of parliament no ſhelter for breach of the peace, much leſs for treaſon ii. 444
* Sir Henry Vane convicted ii. 444
* His papers that he had prepared for his defence ii. 444
* He is called to judgment, and offers a bill of exceptions ii. 450, 451
* He urges the ſame points in arreſt of judgment that he had inſiſted on at his trial ii. 453
* He inſiſts much on the 11 Hen. VII. and ſays, it ought to be taken largely for any ſovereign power, be it a Protector or other; and that had the late Protector taken the name of king, no treaſon could have been committed againſt the king de jure out of poſſeſſion ii. 453

* The petition of both houſes to his majeſty, in behalf of ſir Henry Vane ii. 459
* Sentence pronounced upon him ii. 459
* His behaviour and dying ſpeech ii. 459. See viii. 64. n.

* VAUGHAN, Captain THOMAS,

* His trial for high-treaſon before the Admiralty, November 6, 1696, 8 Wil. III. v. 17
* Six days notice of trial, after iſſue joined v. 17
* The indictment for adhering to, and aſſiſting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 18. vi. 57. Ap.
* The priſoner's irons ordered to be taken off v. 18
* Exceptions to the indictment muſt be taken before plea pleaded, notwithſtanding ſtat. 7 Wil. III. chap. 3, ſays before the jury are ſworn v 18
* Dr. Littleton, and Sir John Hawles ſolicitor-general, their ſpeeches before evidence v. 19
* The priſoner cannot inſiſt on the witneſſes being examined apart, as his right, but it is generally granted v. 20
* Evidence that he acted under a French commiſſion, and fought againſt the king's ſhips, and was taken v. 20
* Evidence offered of his running away with another ſhip; but rejected, becauſe not laid in the indictment v. 20—22
* A general indictment for levying war, or adhering to the king's enemies, not good; unleſs it be ſhewn wherein they adhered, &c. v. 21
* Evidence to prove that he owned himſelf an Iriſhman v. 25
* The priſoner's defence by mr. Phipps and dr. Oldys his counſel v. 26
* They endeavour to prove him a Frenchman v. 26. &c.
* The king's counſel call witneſſes to ſhew the priſoner was a native of Ireland v. 29
* The priſoner's counſel call witneſſes againſt the king's witneſſes v. 30
* No evidence ought to be given of the contents of a letter, unleſs the letter be produced v. 31
* The priſoner's examination read v. 33
* The chief juſtice directs the jury v. 34
* Adhering to the king's enemies, what ſhall be conſtrued ſuch v. 34
* Foreigners who are in the ſervice of an enemy (though their ſtate be in amity with ours) deemed ſubjects to the enemy, and not pirates, while in the enemy's ſervice v. 34
* The priſoner is convicted v. 36
* His counſel move in arreſt of judgment v. 36
* 1. That the indictment does not ſay, he adhered to the king's enemies againſt the king v. 36
* Over-ruled v. 36
* 2. That no act of hoſtility was alledged v. 37
* Over-ruled, and held, that cruiſing upon the coaſt with an armed veſſel was an act of hoſtility, and was an actual levying war v. 37
* 3. That the trial ſhould have been before the Admiralty v. 37
* Over-ruled v. 38
* A confeſſion may be retracted by the civil law v. 38
* Whether two witneſſes are required by the laws of God in capital caſes v. 38
* Our juries looked upon as witneſſes coming out of the neighbourhood where the fact is committed v. 38
* Sentence pronounced v. 38
* Captain Vaughan's commiſſion v. 39

VENICE.

The ſenate of Venice executed conſpirators againſt the ſtate, after promiſe of pardon v. 108

VENIRE.

In what a venire differs from a precept iv. 745

Venire always iſſues after iſſue joined between particular parties, and is a record and ground for hab. corp. with a tales returnable at a certain future day iv. 745

Venire iſſues as in civil cauſes, on appeals and indictments removed into B. R. iv. 744. See DISTRINGAS.

Whether, on trial being ſet aſide, a new venire can be taken out, unleſs court award it v. 71. See WRITS.

VERDICT.

Jury may bring in a ſpecial verdict, or guilty as to part, and not guilty as to part x. 407. n.

Upon affidavit of the jurymen, that they did not give the verdict entered up, the court ſet aſide the trial, and granted a new trial in a criminal caſe x. 407. n. See v. 411. n.

Caution to jurymen againſt finding a general verdict Em. Pref. viii.

* See JURY.

* VERE, ROBERT, Duke of Ireland. See BRAMBRE.

VERNON, Sir GEORGE, Baron of the Exchequer,

His opinion for the king againſt John Hampden, eſq. in the cauſe of ſhip money, with his reaſons i. 637

VERNON, Mr.

Opens the evidence on the trial of Goodere, and others, for murder vi. 797

Opens the evidence againſt White for the ſame offence vi. 829

VERULAM, Lord. See BACON Sir FRANCIS.

* VICE-CHANCELLOR. See CAMBRIDGE.

VILLENAGE.

Manner of making title to a villein xi. 341, 343

The condition of a villein xi. 341

The origin of villeins xi. 342

The decline of villenage xi. 342

When villenage expired xi. 342

The rules of law concerning villenage exclude a new ſlavery xi. 344

No ſlavery but villenage ever exiſted xi. 344

Examination of the caſes on the ſubject of ſlavery, juſt before the extinction of villenage xi. 344

See NEGRO. SLAVERY. SOMMERSETT JAMES.

* VINCENT, SAMUEL v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.

VINER, CHARLES,

Stiled a laborious compiler of the law xi. 206

His Abridgment commended xi. 235

VOIRE DIRE.

Court refuſed to ſuffer a witneſs to be examined on a voire dire, whether he had a pardon or other reward for giving his evidence, becauſe the ſame queſtion having been aſked after he had given his evidence and denied it; and becauſe the pardon or reward would not be ſufficient to affect the competency, but only the credibility of his teſtimony vi. 257

Jurymen examined on a voyer dire, whether he was a freeholder vi. 59. ix. 550

Witneſs ſworn upon a voire dire v. 426. ix. 403. ix. *639, *689, *704, *705

Form of oath to be adminiſtered to a witneſs upon a voire dire ix. *639 See WITNESSES.

VOTE. See ASHBY and WHITE viii. 89. PARLIAMENT.

VOWELL, PETER,

His ſpeech at execution viii. 365. See ii. 212. * See FOX SOMERSET.

VOX POPULI.

A perſon executed for printing a ſeditious libel of that title ix. 682, 715. See MATTHEWS.

Common fame by credible perſons, which is vox populi, ought to prejudice a grand jury againſt a witneſs, ſo as to diſbelieve him iv. 184

* VRATZ, CHRISTOPHER iii. 462. See BOROSKI, & al.

W.

* WADE, COOPER v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.

* WAITE, THOMAS ii. 399. See REGICIDES.

* WAKEMAN, Sir GEORGE, Bart.

* William Marſhal, William Rumley, and James Corker, their trial for high-treaſon, July 18, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 917. See iii. 221. vii. 484.
* The indictment againſt the three firſt, for conſpiring the king's death ii. 917
* Indictment againſt Corker, for the ſame ii. 919
* They are all tried by the ſame jury ii. 918
* Sir Robert Sawyer's ſpeech before evidence ii. 920
* The king's witneſſes called, to prove the plot in general ii. 921
* Sir Edmondbury Godfrey's death ii. 923
* The papiſts opinion of the powder-plot ii. 927, 928
* Oates depoſes, that the queen was to aſſiſt ſir George Wakeman to poiſon the king ii. 930
* That ſir George Wakeman refuſed to accept 10,000l. for poiſoning the king ii. 930
* That Corker was preſident of the Benedictines ii. 933
* Bedloe's evidence ii. 935
* Objection to Bedloe's evidence ii. 937
* Marſhal charges Bedloe that he did not know him in the Gate-houſe ii. 938
* Sir George calls his witneſſes ii. 941
* Oates's evidence ſuſpected ii. 945
* He reflects on the privy-council ii. 945
* Corker's defence ii. 948
* Witneſſes are not to be ſcandalized by the priſoner, without proof ii. 948
* The improbability of the plot in general ii. 949
* Objections to Oates's teſtimony ii. 949
* A jury diſcharged without giving a verdict ii. 953
* Corker proves by ſeveral witneſſes, that mr. Stapleton, and not he, was preſident of the Benedictines ii. 954, 955
* The priſoners urge the proteſtations of the five Jeſuits of their innocence, at their execution, as an argument againſt the plot ii. 956
* The chief juſtice anſwers that objection ii. 957
* They diſclaim the king-killing and depoſing doctrine, &c. ii. 958
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 958
* All the priſoners are acquitted ii. 961. See viii. 456.

Some obſervations on ſir George's trial, by Thomas Ticklefoot viii. 453. See ii. 1036

* WALCOT, Captain,

* His trial for high-treaſon, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 684
* The indictment for conſpiring the death of the king, and to raiſe a rebellion in the Rye-houſe plot iii. 684
* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his ſpeech before evidence iii. 685
* Mr. ſerjeant Jefferies's ſpeech iii. 686
* Evidence, that he agreed to command a party that ſhould charge the king's guards iii. 687
* And perſuaded Keeling to kill the king iii. 689
* Mr. Weſt's evidence iii. 693
* Walcot's letter to the ſecretary of ſtate produced and read iii. 698
* His defence iii. 699
* Mr. Finch, ſolicitor-general, ſums up the evidence iii. 700
* Lord chief juſtice Saunders, his directions to the jury iii. 701
* The priſoner convicted iii. 702
* The ſentence, and his behaviour at execution iii. 745

Writ of error for him vi. 42. Ap. See iii. 752.

WALCOT, Sir THOMAS.

The executors of ſir Thomas Walcot, one of the juſtices of B. R. were ordered to attend the houſe of commons, reſpecting the making reparation to ſir Thomas Armſtrong's family, for that judge having refuſed admitting his plea, and attainting him by outlawry iii. 986, 987

WALKER, Doctor. See GOLDING.

WALLACE,

WALLACE, JAMES. See KINGSTON Duchefs of.

WALLER, Mr.

Of counfel for Chriſtopher Love, impeached of treafon for correfponding with, and confpiring to bring in, king Charles II. 3 Car. II. rejected for refufing to take the engagement ii. 159

* WALLER, Sir HARDRESS ii. 308. See REGICIDES.

WALLOP, RICHARD,

His argument for Fitzharris, on his plea to the jurifdiction of the court iii. 251

Defends Braddon and another on their trial for a mifdemeanour iii. 872

His argument in arreft of Roſewell's judgment, who ftood convicted of fpeaking treafonable words iii. 1053

Reprimanded by the earl of Nottingham, lord high fteward on vifcount Stafford's trial, for not being ready to argue a point of law on the inftant it was ftated iii. 204

Ill treated by chief juftice Jefferies x. 39. Ap.

WALPOLE, ROBERT,

His fpeech in the cafe of Aſhby and White viii. 122

WALSINGHAM, FRANCIS,

His letter to fir Amias Pawlet, in relation to the death of Mary queen of Scots vii. 29

WALTER, Sir JOHN,

A grave and learned judge, falling into the king's difpleafure, was difcharged of his fervice by meffage, yet kept his place of chief baron, and would not leave it but by legal proceeding, becaufe his patent of it was quamdiu ſe bene geſſerit; though he never fat in court after the king forbad him, yet he held his place till he died, which was in the year 1631 vii. 243. n.

WAR.

Crown entering into war with another nation, fufficient notification of being enemies, without formal declaration i. 115

Tempus belli defcribed i. 561

Profecution for offences againft articles of war v. 445

War is a great evil, but is chofen to avoid a greater xi. 315

WARD, EDWARD,

His argument on challenge for want of freehold in jury on behalf of lord Ruſſel, tried for treafon iii. 710

His fpeech in the caufe between fir William Pritchard and Papillon, for caufing fir William to be arrefted during his mayoralty, without caufe iii. 1077

WARD, Sir EDWARD, Lord Chief Baron,

Informs the jury on the trial of William Kidd, for murder and piracy v. 294

Informs the jury on the profecution of Churchill, for piracy and murder v. 312

WARD, Mr.

His fpeech for Francia, for treafon vi. 88

Of counfel againft William Acton ix. 183, 204

WARD,* Sir PATIENCE,

* His trial at the King's-Bench, for perjury, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 661

* The information opened, charging the defendant with perjury, in a caufe between the duke of York and mr. Pilkington iii. 661

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his fpeech iii. 662

* Mr. ferjeant Jefferies his fpeech iii. 662

* Evidence to prove he fwore the matters laid in the information iii. 663

* Evidence, that what fir Patience teftified was falfe iii. 665

* Sir George Treby, recorder, his fpeech for the defendant iii. 667

* Mr. Williams, on the fame fide iii. 669

* Evidence, to prove that fir Patience did not fwear pofitively, but to the beft of his memory, and with caution iii. 670

* Witneffes called to the defendant's reputation iii. 674

* Sir George Treby's obfervations for the defendant iii. 676

* Mr. Williams's obfervations iii. 677

* Sir Francis Winnington's fpeech iii. 678

* Mr. Pollexfen, on the fame fide iii. 678

* Mr. attorney-general's reply iii. 679

* Mr. folicitor-general, and fir George Jefferies's reply iii. 680, 681

* Lord chief juftice Saunders fums up the evidence iii. 682

* The defendant convicted iii. 684

* But withdraws before fentence iii. 684

WARRANT.

The defcription of a lawful warrant Em. Pref. iv.

Warrant to fufpend an execution, all written with the king's own hand vii. 66

Special warrant for beheading viii. 340

Warrant for the feizure of papers cannot be juftified in the cafe of a feditious libel xi. 307, 312, 320, 323

A general warrant, neither naming offender nor otherwife defcribing him, except by relation to offence committed, cannot be maintained at common law xi. 312, 321, 323

Warrant of commitment for felony muft contain ſpecies of the felonious charge, briefly xi. 304

Lord Coke denied the legality of a warrant to fearch for ftolen goods xi. 321

The method to be purfued in the legal execution of fuch a warrant xi. 321

The legality of a warrant will never depend on the truth of the information whereon the juftice of peace granted it ix. 6

Blank warrant will not juftify arreft x. 478

Warrant though fealed need not be delivered x. 476

Secretary of ftate's warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302. See ENTICK JOHN, Clerk.

Form of warrant to the lord chancellor for iffuing the writ de hæretico comburendo vi. 1. Ap.

* WARWICK and HOLLAND, EDWARD Earl of,

* His trial before the houfe of peers, for the murder of Richard Coote, efq. the 28th of March, 1699, 12 Will. III. v. 137

* The indictment v. 140, &c.

* Lord Somers, lord high fteward, his fpeech v. 142

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence v. 144

* Evidence of the quarrel v. 144

* Evidence of the chairmen that carried them into Leiceſter-Fields; and of Mr. Coote's being killed v. 149, &c.

* Evidence of the fervants at the Bagnio v. 155

* Evidence of the furgeons v. 160

* The earl's defence v. 162

* The earl's witneffes are called v. 163

* Mr. French having had his clergy, but not being burnt in the hand, it is debated whether he is a legal witnefs v. 166

* Mr. attorney's argument, that Mr. French was no legal witnefs v. 166

* Sir Thomas Powis's argument, in behalf of the prifoner, contra v. 167

* Peers fhall not be burnt in the hand v. 167

* The king may pardon the burning, even in an appeal v. 168

* The judges opinions muft be afked in prefence of the prifoner v. 169

* Serjeant Wright's reply to the prifoner's counfel, as to Mr. French's teftimony v. 169

* Burning, as well as the allowance of clergy, neceffary to reftore a man to his credit v. 170

* Ruled, that French was not a legal witnefs v. 173

* The prifoner fhall not fuppofe a fact, and his counfel argue the law arifing upon it, till the lords have fettled what the fact really is v. 175

* Mr. folicitor, fir John Hawles, fums up the evidence for the king v. 176

* The earl of Warwick found guilty of man-flaughter v. 180

* The earl demands his clergy v. 180

* Receives a caution how he offends again v. 180

WARWICK, Earl of,

His fpeech concerning the liberty of the fubject vii. 186. See NORTHUMBERLAND Duke of.

WATSON, JAMES. See LEACH DRYDEN.

WATSON, WILLIAM. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

WAYLAND, Sir THOMAS, Chief Juftice of the Common-Pleas, Edw. I.

Was attainted of felony, for taking bribes, and his lands and goods forfeited, and he banifhed the kingdom i. 704

WEARG, CLEMENT,

Opens the indictment againft Layer for treafon vi. 249

His reply on the parliamentary proceedings againft Atterbury, bifhop of Rocheſter vi. 453

WEARG, Sir CLEMENT, Solicitor-General,

Opens the charge on the trial of earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), on his impeachment for high crimes and mifdemeanours, before the houfe of lords vi. 497

WEBB, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law. See x. 69. Ap.

WEDDERBURNE, ALEXANDER, Solicitor-General. See KINGSTON Duchefs Dowager of.

WEDDERBURN, Sir JOHN,

Tried for treafon, 4 Nov. 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 580

His defence ix. 580

Pleads he was forced into the rebellion ix. 581

His cafe, as reported by mr. juftice Foſter ix. 581

Sir John is executed at Kennington Common ix. 581

Some account of his family ix. 581, 582

WELLING, THOMAS* and ELIZABETH v. 504. See HATHAWAY, & al.

WELLS, Mr.

Counfel for Nathaniel Denew and others viii. 189

WELLS, SUSANNAH,

Her trial for robbing Elizabeth Canning, at the Old-Bailey, Feb. 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 223

The evidence againft her x. 223

Prifoner owns fhe has a bad character x. 234

Found guilty x. 234

WENTWORTH,* Sir JOHN i. 333. See Sir JOHN HOLLIS.

WENTWORTH, THOMAS. See STRAFFORD Earl of.

WEST.

The cruelties of Jefferies in the Weſt enraged above a third part of the nation iv. 172. See Id. 204

Many men were hanged in the Weſt for having old Jewiſh names, as Obadiah, or the like, with a jeft, that their godfathers hanged them iv. 175

All the indictments in the Weſt upon Monmouth's rebellion, were drawn by very good advice iii. 769, 770

WEST, Lord Chancellor of Ireland. See STAR-CHAMBER.

WESTON, Sir FRANCIS,

His trial for treafon, in May 1536, 28 Hen. VIII. xi. 10

WESTON, Sir RICHARD, Baron of the Exchequer,

His opinion for the king againft Hampden, in the caufe of fhip-money, with his reafons i. 609

Directs the jury, on the trial of Eliz. Cellier, for a libel; he tells them to torture criminals was illegal, and never ufed in England fince Campion the jefuit was put upon the rack, 20 Eliz. A. D. 1578 iii. 98

The charge given by him at Kingſton affizes, voted fcandalous by parliament, ment, to reformation, and in derogation of rights and privileges of parliament iii. 221, 223, 224. vii. 484

Parliamentary reſolution to impeach him iii. 224. vii. 486

* WESTON, RICHARD,
* His trial for the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury, Oct. 19, 1615, 13 Jac. I. i. 324
* By the 22 Hen. VIII. chap. 9. a wilful poiſoner was to be boiled to death i. 324
* The indictment i. 325
* The priſoner refuſes to put himſelf upon his country: whereupon ſir Lawrence Hyde, attorney-general, gives a particular account of the whole intrigue i. 326
* Several examinations of others read againſt the priſoner i. 328
* The priſoner's own examination read as evidence againſt him i. 328
* The court being ſet again, he ſubmits to a trial i. 329
* Held ſufficient to find the party poiſoned; and not neceſſary to find it done in the manner laid in the indictment i. 330
* The examinations read again at his trial i. 330, 331
* The earl of Somerſet and counteſs of Eſſex, the contrivers of the murder i. 331, 332
* The priſoner pretends he did not know the things adminiſtered were poiſon i. 332
* He is convicted, and ſentence paſſed on him by the lord chief juſtice, and his ſpeech i. 332

WHARTON, Lord. See BATHURST CHARLES.

WHARTON, JOHN. See LILBURNE JOHN.

WHIPPING.
Obſervations on that mode of puniſhment Em. Pref. xii. See vii. 302.

WHISPERING. See iii. 390, 797. iv. 324, 369. x. 68. Ap.
The king's counſel whiſpering with judge, indecent and unjuſt iv. 176. ii. 33, 43, 44
A juryman ſuffered to whiſper the judge in open court i. 553

WHITAKER, Mr.
His argument on motion in arreſt of judgment, given againſt Tutchin for a libel v. 563

WHITAKER, Mr.
Of counſel for Dammaree viii. 227
His ſpeech for him viii. 237, 239

WHITAKER, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech againſt Hales for forgery ix. 82, 103
His obſervations on the evidence ix. 85
Moves for corporal puniſhment ix. 106

* WHITE, CHARLES,
* His trial vi. 829. See GOODERE.

* WHITE, Doctor THOMAS, Biſhop of Peterborough,
* Tried for publiſhing a libel iv. 304

* WHITE alias WHITEBREAD, THOMAS,
* William Harcourt, John Fenwick, John Gavan, alias Gawen, and Anthony Turner, their trial for high-treaſon, June 13, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 829
* All the twelve judges in the commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer ii. 829
* The indictment, for compaſſing the death of the king, the ſubverſion of the government, religion, &c. ii. 830
* Whitebread objects, that he had been tried before for the ſame offence, and the jury were diſmiſſed without giving their verdict ii. 831
* The chief juſtice holds, that it was in the diſcretion of the court to diſcharge the jury without taking a verdict; and that he might be tried again ii. 832
* This proceeding cenſured iv. 673. ix. 572
* Corker's trial put off ii. 833
* Sir Creſwell Levinz, his ſpeech before evidence ii. 834
* Oates's evidence of the conſult of the Jeſuits at the White Horſe, April 24, 1678 ii. 835
* And of Whitebread's offering ſir George Wakeman 10,000l. to poiſon the king ii. 835
* His evidence againſt Gavan ii. 836
* Oates's evidence againſt Fenwick and Harcourt, of their paying 80l. to four ruffians, who were to murder the king at Windſor ii. 837
* Depoſes, that the duke of Ormond was to have been killed in Ireland ii. 837
* That Whitebread beat him for diſcovering the plot ii. 837
* That Turner was at the conſult ii. 838
* Dugdale's evidence againſt Whitebread and Gavan ii. 840
* His evidence againſt Harcourt ii. 841
* His evidence againſt Turner ii. 844
* Prance's evidence againſt Harcourt and Fenwick ii. 844
* Bedloe's evidence againſt Whitebread, Fenwick, and Harcourt; with his reaſons why he ſuppreſſed his evidence at a former trial ii. 845
* Pickering and Grove employed to kill the king; and their reward ii. 845
* A deſign to kill the king at Newmarket ii. 845
* Bedloe's evidence of ſir George Wakeman's receiving 5000l. in part of 15,000l. for poiſoning the king ii. 846
* Whitebread's defence ii. 848
* Mr. Fenwick's defence ii. 851
* Eleven witneſſes depoſe, that Oates was at St. Omers at the time he ſwore he was at the conſult ii. 852, &c.
* Evidence that ſir John Warner and ſir Thomas Preſton were in Flanders, when Oates ſwore he came to England with them ii. 858
* The chief juſtice falls upon the principles of the papiſts, and the people ſhout ii. 861
* Gavan's defence ii. 861
* He calls witneſſes to prove he was in Staffordſhire at the time of the conſult ii. 862
* Offers to put himſelf on the trial ordeal ii. 862
* But is told, we have no ſuch law, and that he did it to amuſe the people ii. 862
* The priſoners urge, that the witneſſes againſt them are men of infamous characters ii. 863
* Call ſeveral witneſſes to prove that Ireland was not in London, when Oates ſwore he was at mr. Harcourt's chamber there ii. 864
* Whitebread ſhews that Bedloe muſt be perjured at one of the trials ii. 866
* Sir Creſwell Levinz's reply for the king ii. 867
* A witneſs called to contradict the evidence about Ireland ii. 868
* Witneſſes to contradict the St. Omers witneſſes ii. 868
* The priſoners obſervations on theſe evidences ii. 872
* The chief juſtice directs the jury ii. 875
* And tells them, that papiſts would ſay or ſwear any thing to promote their cauſe; and therefore the teſtimony of the priſoners witneſſes, how numerous ſoever, was not to be regarded ii. 876
* And that a miſtake of ſeven or eight days in Oates's evidence ought not to influence them ii. 876
* He oppoſes the verdict againſt Ireland to the teſtimony of the priſoners witneſſes ii. 877
* The priſoners are convicted ii. 878
* The recorder approves the verdict ii. 878

WHITELOCKE, Sir BULSTRODE, Lord Commiſſioner for the Cuſtody of the Great Seal of the Commonwealth,
His ſpeech on delivering his opinion in the houſe of commons, whether Naylor, convicted of blaſphemy, ſhould be puniſhed with death i. 273. See vi. 1. Ap.
Some paſſages from his Memorials reſpecting Lilburne vii. 370
His account of colonel Morris's treaſon vii. 322

WHITELOCKE, JAMES,
Proceedings againſt James Whitelocke in Star-chamber, in June, 1613, 10 Jac. I. for a contempt of the king's prerogative xi. 106. See vii. 250. n.
Speech of the attorney-general, ſir Francis Bacon xi. 106

WHITELOCKE, Sir JAMES, Juſtice B. R.
Set down in writing a memorial of the queſtions propoſed to the judges on the trial of lord Audley, for buggery and rape i. 387
His ſpeech as judge B. R. in the houſe of lords in defence of his remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for refuſing to pay the loan to king Charles I. vii. 184, 185
A memorial made by mr. juſtice Whitelocke concerning the lord Rea's diſcovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conſpiracy xi. 126

WHITELOCKE, Sir WILLIAM.
The bill for regulating trials in caſes of treaſon aſcribed to him viii. 64. n.

WHITFIELD, Sir RALPH, Serjeant at Law. See BURTON HENRY i. 483.

WHITFORD, Sir PAUL.
Tho' ſir Paul Whitford's murdering Doriſlaus, Oliver Cromwell's ambaſſador at the Hague, might tend to the ſervice of king Charles II. in his exile; yet his majeſty, after the Reſtoration, never ſuffered Whitford to appear in his preſence, though he had been a favourite before; and if the king allowed him any thing, it was done ſo privately that nobody knew it, and ſir Paul lived and died in a remote part of the kingdom x. 74. Ap.

WIAT, Sir THOMAS,
His arraignment, 1 Mary viii. 325
Found guilty and executed viii. 326

* WICKHAM, JOHN iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

WICKSTON, ———, and his Wife. See KNIGHTLEY Sir RICHARD.

* WIDDRINGTON, WILLIAM Lord. See DERWENTWATER Earl of.

* WIFE.
* In criminal caſes, where ſhe is aggrieved, may be a witneſs againſt her huſband i. 37, 388, 393. v. 456.
A man fined 500 marks for obeying his wife vii. 32. See HUSBAND and WIFE.

* WILCOCKS, SAMUEL v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

WILDE, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
His ſpeech at opening the charge againſt archbiſhop Laud on his trial for treaſon i. 840

WILDE, Sir WILLIAM, Knight and Baronet, Judge B. R.
Was of opinion, on earl Shaftſbury's motion, upon a commitment by the lords, for contempt, during the ſitting of parliament, that though the commitment was illegal, it could not be examined in B. R. and that the noble priſoner could neither be bailed nor diſcharged by that court; but ſaid, in caſe the parliament had ſtood prorogued, that the earl ought to have been diſcharged ii. 622

WILKES, JOHN, Eſq.
His caſe on habeas corpus, C. P. E. Term, 3 Geo. III. 1763 xi. 302
Tenor of the ſecretary of ſtate's warrant for apprehending defendant xi. 302
Glynn, ſerjeant at law, moved for habeas corpus, which was granted xi. 302
Chief juſtice Pratt cenſured the warrant xi. 302
Defendant removed out of cuſtody of meſſengers, and ſent to the Tower, in contempt of the court xi. 302
His counſel, ſolicitor, peers of the realm, and relations, denied acceſs to him, by the particular orders of the ſecretary of ſtate xi. 302
Copy of warrant of commitment xi. 302
Meſſengers return habeas corpus xi. 303
Their counſel pray ſame may be filed xi. 303
Defendant's counſel object to the return xi. 303
The court, with reluctance, on what was obſerved by mr. juſtice Gould, refuſed filing return, and ordered it to be debated another day, but never was xi. 303
Another habeas corpus granted to the conſtable of the Tower xi. 303
Defendant brought to the bar xi. 303

Return to ſecond habeas corpus read xi. 303
Defendant's counſel move that he may be diſcharged without bail, on ſeveral objections, but principally that he was a member of parliament xi. 303
Objections anſwered by the king's counſel xi. 303
The defendant's ſpeech to the court xi. 303
He is remanded, the judges requiring a few days to deliver their opinions xi. 304
Lord chief juſtice Pratt's argument on delivering the opinion of the court, as reported by mr. ſerjeant Wilſon xi. 304
The ſame as reported in "A Digeſt of the Law of Libels" xi. 304
Defendant was diſcharged xi. 304, 305
Proceedings in his caſe on two informations, for libels, B. R. M. Term 1764, to H. Term 1770, incluſive xi. 324
Informations exhibited by ſolicitor-general xi. 324
Defendant pleads not guilty xi. 324
Counſel for the crown obtain ſummons to amend the record of niſi prius xi. 324
The proceedings thereon xi. 324
The order xi. 324
Defendant in France xi. 324
Verdicts found againſt him xi. 324
Judgments ſigned xi. 324
Writs of capias iſſue xi. 324
Defendant outlawed xi. 324
He voluntarily appears xi. 324
Makes a ſpeech xi. 324
Attorney-general (De Grey) prays he may ſtand committed xi. 324
Mr. ſerjeant Glynn, of counſel for defendant, oppoſes this xi. 324
Mr. recorder Eyre enforces what the ſerjeant had urged xi. 324
Argument of mr. Mansfield on ſame ſide xi. 324
Mr. Davenport's ſpeech to ſame effect xi. 324
Mr. attorney-general's reply xi. 324
Lord chief juſtice Mansfield's argument on giving his opinion againſt the defendant xi. 325
The argument of mr. juſtice Yates xi. 325
Mr. juſtice Aſton's xi. 325
And of mr. juſtice Willes xi. 325
Defendant, by unanimous opinion of court, was neither committed nor bailed xi. 325
Defendant brought into court upon habeas corpus xi. 325
Return thereof xi. 325
Subſtance of outlawry xi. 325
Writ of error xi. 325
Argument of ſerjeant Glynn on motion that defendant might be admitted to bail xi. 326
Arguments of the counſel for the crown who oppoſed it xi. 326
Argument of lord Mansfield, on delivering his opinion that defendant could not be bailed xi. 326, 327
Mr. juſtice Yates's xi. 326, 328
Mr. juſtice Aſton's xi. 327, 328
Mr. juſtice Willes's xi. 327, 328
Court unanimouſly refuſed to bail defendant, or at their diſcretion, without the attorney-general's conſent xi. 327
Arguments of counſel on aſſignment of errors xi. 327
Lord Mansfield's argument on delivering his opinion thereon xi. 328
Mr. juſtice Yates, his argument xi. 333
Mr. juſtice Aſton's xi. 333
Mr. juſtice Willes's xi. 333
Court unanimouſly of opinion, that the outlawry was erroneous xi. 333
Sentences of the court on the two judgments xi. 333, 334
Writ of error to the lords xi. 334
Both judgments affirmed in parliament xi. 334
Rule of court to prevent defendant lying in priſon, his impriſonment ordered by the ſentence, expiring in the vacation xi. 334
* WILKS, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

WILL.

A perſon muſt be of ſane memory to make a will iv. 194

WILLES, EDWARD,

His ſpeech as counſel for the proſecution on the trial of Elizabeth Canning, for perjury x. 218

WILLES, EDWARD, Juſtice B. R. See WILKES JOHN.

WILLES, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General,

Said copies of corporation books could not be read, party offering them having originals x. 142. Ap.
Objects to the reading of an ancient book x. 142. Ap.
States the caſe for the town and port of Haſtings, at the ſuit of Henry Moore x. 158. Ap.

WILLES, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Juſtice C. P.

Was of opinion a new trial could not be granted for Elizabeth Canning x. 407

WILLIAM the Conqueror.

The firſt uſurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England, began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71

WILLIAM RUFUS.

In the time of William Rufus, the pope attempted to draw appeals to Rome, but prevailed not xi. 71

WILLIAM III. King of England, &c.

The declaration publiſhed by him when he came into England at the Revolution v. 747
The expedient of a voluntary regiſter for ſeamen, which was attempted in this reign, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM,

Of counſel for Harris, on proſecution for a libel ii. 1038
His argument for Fitzharris, on his plea to the juriſdiction of the court iii. 241
His ſpeech for Ford lord Grey, tried for ſeducing, carrying away, and adulterouſly ſoliciting a young lady of quality iii. 520, 521
His ſpeech for ſir Patience Ward, informed againſt for perjury in B. R. iii. 669
His obſervations on the evidence iii. 677
His argument for Thomas Sandys, at the ſuit of the Eaſt-India Company, concerning the validity of their patent, and monopolies vii. 545
His ſpeech for ſir Samuel Barnardiſton, for a libel iii. 938
His ſpeech in the cauſe between ſir William Pritchard and Papillon, for cauſing ſir William to be arreſted in his mayoralty, without cauſe iii. 1077. See ii. 1041.
He was brow-beaten and ill treated by lord chief juſtice Jefferies x. 39. Ap.

WILLIAMS, Sir WILLIAM, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons.

An information ex officio was filed againſt him as ſuch, for a libel, in publiſhing "Dangerfield's Narrative" in the journals of the houſe xi. 274
He was heavily fined x. 33. Ap. n.
Remarks on this extraordinary proſecution x. 33. Ap. n.
His defence of Lindſay for treaſon, in returning from France without licence v. 512

WILLIAMS, WILLIAM PEERE,

His ſpeech on behalf of George earl Wintoun, in arreſt of judgment, on impeachment of treaſon, before his peers, for being concerned in rebellion vi. 50

WILLIAMS.

Hanged for a robbery in Staffordſhire, though five witneſſes ſwore he was at Iſlington in Middleſex, at the time of the robbery x. 299

WILLIAMSON, ROBERT xi. 160. See BANKERS CASE.

WILLIS, FRANCIS,

His trial for high treaſon, under pretence of pulling down meeting-houſes, 9 An. 1710 viii. 250
Mr. Thompſon opens the indictment viii. 251
Mr. attorney-general's ſpeech viii. 251
Tolboy's evidence of the intention of pulling down the meeting-houſes viii. 251
Grove's evidence, that he ſaw the priſoner (as he believes, but not poſitive as to the man) carry a curtain, as a ſtandard, and halloo viii. 252
Believes the perſon he ſaw in Newgate was the man who flouriſhed the curtain, but not certain the priſoner was the perſon he ſaw in Newgate viii. 253
The keeper's evidence, that he ſaw nobody but the priſoner when he came to Newgate viii. 253
Victor's evidence, that he ſaw him throw ſome wood into the fire viii. 254
Lunt's evidence, that the priſoner ſaid to him, They have made me a captain to-night viii. 255
Counſel object to what he ſaid being made evidence againſt him, to convict him, without two witneſſes to the overt-acts viii. 255
Mr. Orrel's evidence of a footman's being there viii. 255
Mr. Darnell for the priſoner viii. 256
Evidence for the priſoner viii. 257
That he was ſent out by his miſtreſs, to know where the fire was viii. 257
Evidence, that Grove declared, after ſeeing him in Newgate, that he was not the man who flouriſhed the curtain viii. 260
That there was a footman in a green livery, very buſy viii. 260
Mr. Darnell's ſpeech viii. 261
Mr. attorney-general's reply viii. 262
Mr. ſolicitor's reply viii. 263
Mr. Thompſon's viii. 264
Lord chief juſtice Parker ſums up the evidence viii. 265
That all that were aiding were guilty, though not privy to the firſt deſign viii. 266
Jury find him not guilty viii. 267
* WILLOUGHBY, ELIZABETH v. 504. See HATHAWAY, & al.

WILMER.

He was obliged to fly his country for returning the bill againſt Colledge, ignoramus, as foreman of the grand jury iv. 173
Sir John Hawles's remarks on his homine replegiando iv. 186. See HOMINE REPLEGIANDO.
* WILSON, WILLIAM, Clerk iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.

WINDHAM, WADHAM,

His reply to the defence of Cook, one of the regicides i. 352
Was the ſecond beſt judge who ſat in Weſtminſter-hall, from the Reſtoration to the Revolution iv. 197. vi. 418

WINCHESTER.

William Paulett, marquis of Wincheſter, lord treaſurer, lord high ſteward on duke Somerſet's trial vii. 16

WINNINGTON, Sir FRANCIS, Solicitor-General,

Sums up the evidence on the trial of earl Pembroke for murder ii. 653
Sums up the evidence againſt Coleman for treaſon ii. 687
Speech on the trial of lord Cornwallis, for murder ii. 728
His ſpeech on the queſtion, whether a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment? ii. 735
Of counſel for Carr, obſerves from evidence, that the individual paper ſet out in information as libellous, is not proved to be defendant's iii. 61
That admitting it to be his, it is not proved to be wrote maliciouſly iii. 61
His ſpeech as one of the committee for the commons, on the trial of the impeachment of William viſcount Stafford, before the lords, for high-treaſon, in being concerned in the popiſh plot, Nov. 30, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 106
His argument for Fitz-harris, on his plea to the juriſdiction of the court iii. 248

Sums up the evidence for the king, on the trial of Colledge for treaſon iii. 399

His ſpeech on the trial of ſir Patience Ward, for perjury iii. 678

Subpœnaed, but did not appear, on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41

* WINTER, ROBERT,

* Thomas Winter, Guy Fawks, John Grant, Ambroſe Rookwood, Robert Keyes, and Thomas Bates, their indictment for high-treaſon, in contriving the gunpowder-plot, January 27th, 1605, 3 Jac. I. i. 232

* Serjeant Phillips's ſpeech i. 234

* Sir Edward Coke's ſpeech on opening the charge i. 235

* The quality of the conſpirators i. 237

* The principles of the jeſuits i. 237

* The reaſonableneſs of the laws againſt recuſants i. 240

* The priſoners confeſſion before the council, read as evidence againſt them i. 243

* They are convicted i. 243

* Sir Everard Digby arraigned for the ſame conſpiracy; and pleads guilty i. 244

* Sentence pronounced againſt them. Four of them executed at the Weſt-end of St. Paul's, and four in the Old Palace-yard i. 247

* WINTER, THOMAS i. 232. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.

* WINTOUN, GEORGE Earl of,

* His trial before the houſe of peers, on an impeachment for high-treaſon, 1715, 2 George I. vi. 17

* Orders previous to the trial vi. 18

* The king's commiſſion, appointing William lord Cowper lord high ſteward vi. 28

* Lord high ſteward's ſpeech to the priſoner vi. 28

* The articles read, charging him with having been in open rebellion againſt the king vi. 22

* His anſwer vi. 24

* The replication of the houſe of commons vi. 25

* Mr. Hampden's ſpeech vi. 25

* Sir Joſeph Jekyll's ſpeech vi. 28

* Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his ſpeech vi. 29

* Evidence that the earl of Wintoun was with the rebels from the 11th of October, till the rebellion was ſuppreſſed vi. 31, &c.

* That he was preſent at ſeveral places where the Pretender was proclaimed vi. 33

* Evidence of the king's officers concerning his ſurrender, and the terms of it vi. 38

* Lord Wintoun deſires time to make his defence vi. 41

* Which is refuſed vi. 42

* Mr. Cowper ſums up the evidence vi. 44

* Is ſeconded by ſir William Thompſon vi. 45

* Lord Wintoun convicted vi. 48

* He moves, in arreſt of judgment, that no particular day is aſſigned in the articles vi. 49

* Sir Conſtantine Phipps, his counſel, his ſpeech to that point vi. 49

* Mr. Peere-Williams on the ſame ſide vi. 50

* Mr. Walpole's reply vi. 52

* Sir Edward Northey and mr. Cowper's ſpeeches vi. 53

* Sir William Thompſon's argument vi. 54

* The priſoner's counſel reply vi. 55

* The objection over-ruled vi. 56

* The lord high ſteward's ſpeech before judgment vi. 56

* Judgment for high-treaſon pronounced upon him vi. 58

* He eſcapes from the Tower vi. 58

* WITCHCRAFT v. 482.

WITHERINGTON, Sir THOMAS,

His reply to Love's defence, impeached of treaſon for correſponding with, and conſpiring to bring in, king Charles the ſecond ii. 143

* WITNESS.

* Anciently, witneſſes were not permitted to be heard againſt the crown i. 72, 173, 182. iv. 178. vi. 22. vii. 851

* Aliens, villeins, and accomplices before indicted, may be witneſſes i. 113. iii. 178

* Whether the wife may be a witneſs for, or againſt, her huſband in criminal matters? i. 393

* A popiſh recuſant a good witneſs, till he is convicted, and the record of his conviction is produced i. 392. iv. 45

A witneſs threatened to be hanged if he would not be ingenuous ii. 113

A witneſs ſworn on his buttons inſtead of the Bible ii. 114

A witneſs fined and impriſoned for refuſing to be ſworn ii. 124

* Whether the priſoner ſhall not have the proceſs of the court to bring in his witneſſes? ii. 505

* Whether a witneſs charging a perſon criminally before the houſe of commons, be not ſubject to damages, they being no court of record? ii. 561

* Exception to a witneſs, that he was never baptized, over-ruled ii. 598

* A witneſs ſhall not be aſperſed without proof ii. 710, 821, 948

* Perſons indicted and acquitted, good witneſſes againſt others accuſed of the ſame crime ii. 728

* A juryman who can give evidence in the cauſe, ſhall do it in open court ii. 809

* A witneſs need not anſwer any queſtions that tend to make him accuſe himſelf, and ſubject him to a penalty ii. 822, 1035. iii. 540. iv. 9, 606. See ACCUSATION. MAXIMS.

* The witneſſes againſt the king formerly not ſworn in capital caſes ii. 850. vii. 424, 426

* Witneſſes being allowed a ſubſiſtence, no objection to their teſtimony ii. 891

* A witneſs need not anſwer any queſtion that does not concern the point in iſſue ii. 900. iii. 42, 540. ix. 640*, 645*

* A priſoner may ſhew, that a witneſs contradicts what he ſwore concerning him at the trial of another ii. 900

* Perſons indicted for diſparaging the king's witneſſes ii. 970

* Whether it be criminal to offer a witneſs any reward to give his evidence, when to teſtify the truth? ii. 1031, 1035

* A pardon will not reſtore one convict of perjury to his credit; but if he be upbraided with it after a pardon, he may have an action iii. 44, 46

* Whether one diſabled to be of a jury, is not diſabled to be a witneſs? iii. 45

* A general pardon will not reſtore one outlawed for felony to his credit; but clergy reſtores one convict of felony iii. 46

* A witneſs's credit is not impaired by a jury giving their verdict contrary to it iii. 49

* There muſt be two witneſſes believed by the jury, to convict a priſoner of high-treaſon iii. 56

* When a witneſs is in execution for debt, he cannot be brought out of the rules of the priſon without a habeas corpus, becauſe it is an eſcape iii. 97. iv. 2, 599

* Witneſſes ſworn twice in the ſame trial iii. 123

* A peer may be ſworn as a witneſs, and give evidence, though he is judge in the caſe iii. 141

* Members of either houſe may be witneſſes on an impeachment; but both peers and commoners muſt be ſworn iii. 183, 189

* A priſoner ſhall not call evidence to diſcredit his own witneſſes iii. 374

* Two witneſſes to one overt-act are not neceſſary in treaſon iii. 419, 722, 729, 817

* Though witneſſes ſhall not read their evidence, they have been ſometimes allowed to look upon their notes, to refreſh their memories iii. 474. iv. 607, 612

* A priſoner may not croſs-examine the king's witneſſes, till the counſel for the king have done with them iii. 690

* One witneſs who ſpeaks directly to the treaſon, and another who ſpeaks but to a circumſtance, deemed two witneſſes in law iii. 818. iv. 246

* One witneſs ſufficient to convict a perſon of any other treaſon, but that of compaſſing the prince's death iii. 819. v. 89

* Not permitted to charge a witneſs with any crime in particular, without producing the record of his conviction iii. 845

* The court refuſe to examine a witneſs, who came to ſwear he had forſworn himſelf; though the counſel urged that ſuch evidence was uſually admitted to detect a ſubornation iv. 47

* Whether a witneſs for the king may be indicted for perjury on the ſtatute? iv. 52, 102

* The depoſition of a perſon abſent ought not to be admitted as evidence at a trial in criminal caſes iv. 91

* A perſon outlawed and pardoned, permitted to give evidence iv. 164

* A priſoner permitted to charge the king's evidence with particular crimes, without producing any record againſt him iv. 234

* A trial never put off on the priſoner's ſuggeſtions that his witneſſes are out of the way, without oath made by a third perſon, to ſatisfy the court of the truth of it iv. 421. v. 449

* The witneſſes ſhall not be examined as to any other crimes the priſoner is guilty of, but thoſe he ſtands charged with iv. 500

* Witneſſes ſhall not give evidence of any particular crimes to diſcredit a witneſs; but only to his general character iv. 693

* Where a witneſs is a priſoner, he muſt be brought up to the trial by habeas corpus iv. 599

* The witneſs being the king's ſervant, no cauſe of challenge, when the crown proſecutes iv. 632

* One convicted of felony may be a witneſs if pardoned either by the king, or by ſtatute: but one attainted, and pardoned, either by the king, or a ſtatute-pardon, is not reſtored either to blood or credit, unleſs there be ſpecial words in the pardon, or his attainder be reverſed iv. 682, x. 75. Ap. See v. 166, 170

* Though the witneſſes are ſometimes examined apart, at the inſtance of the priſoner; this is a favour, and the court may refuſe it iv. 756. v. 20

* The judge ſhall come off the bench, and give evidence, when his teſtimony may tend to convict or acquit the priſoner v. 98

* Whether the divine law, and the law of nations, require two witneſſes in capital caſes? v. 38, 118, 124, 126

* One admitted to his clergy, but not burnt in the hand, or pardoned, is not reſtored to his credit, ſo as to be a legal witneſs v. 165, 170

* Perſons indicted for piracy, held legal witneſſes v. 289, 292

* The perſon forcibly married, admitted a witneſs of the force againſt her huſband de facto v. 456

* A wife de jure ſhall not be a witneſs for, or againſt, her huſband v. 476

A lord chief juſtice of England examined on a trial. See POPHAM Sir JOHN i. 200

A lord keeper of the great ſeal gave his evidence on the ſame trial. See ESSEX and SOUTHAMPTON, Earls of i. 200

A lord chief baron of the Exchequer depoſed on a trial. See MONTAGUE WILLIAM.

Court denied to let witneſſes be examined vivâ voce i. 95, 98, 173, 182, 183, 220

Scotſmen received to give evidence in England, even before the Union ii. 11

Witneſs refuſing to ſwear, fined 500l. and committed during pleaſure ii. 124

Juſtice permitted to give in evidence what witneſs who had withdrawn himſelf depoſed before him on his examination ii. 96

King's witneſſes ought not to be debarred from hearing what priſoner's witneſſes depoſe iii. 141

Witneſs examined for priſoner, after king's counſel had made obſervations iii. 311

Witneſs whoſe evidence tended to excuſe the witneſs, permitted to be ſworn iii. 539

Con-

Convicts competent witneſſes, unleſs records produced iii. 328

Oates aſked lord chief juſtice Jefferies, who preſided at his trial for perjury, to be ſworn as a witneſs in the cauſe iv. 29

Oates ſubpœnaed two ſpeakers of the houſe of commons, two barons of the Exchequer, two lord chief juſtices, a ſolicitor-general, and all the judges of the Common Pleas on his trial for perjury iv. 29, 41, 42, 70

Several of the judges examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 40, 41

Speaker of the houſe of commons examined as a witneſs on Oates's trial for perjury, on his behalf iv. 41

The witneſſes on alderman Corniſh's trial were put in remote priſons at the Revolution iv. 160

Where a witneſs contradicts, or ſays more or leſs than a witneſs that went before him, by the hearſay of that witneſs, the firſt witneſs is always aſked what he ſays to it? iv. 170

The conviction of ſir Patience Ward for perjury, deterred all honeſt men from appearing as witneſſes to truth iv. 172

Of the credibility of witneſſes iv. 178, 181

If a judge knows any thing material of the matter tried before him and others, he may and ought to be a witneſs iv. 185, 202. See ii. 384. n.

Witneſſes kept out of the hearing of each other, when they give their evidence iv. 191

A dancing witneſs and an amazed witneſs deſcribed iv. 194

Principals cannot be good witneſſes againſt acceſſary, on indictment and trial of acceſſary with principals iv. 199

A perſon indicted is a good witneſs againſt another for the ſame crime iv. 200

Perſon convicted of felony cannot be a witneſs till pardoned iv. 200

One priſoner's ſtory is no evidence againſt another indicted with him vi. 218

Examination of witneſſes by coroner, they being ſince dead, or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that it is the ſame examination, without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421

Examination of witneſſes by coroner, the former being abſent by means or procurement of priſoner, upon proof that witneſs was ſo detained, ſame may be read; but oath that all endeavours to find out ſuch witneſs were vain, is not ſufficient to authorize the reading ſuch examination vii. 421

The witneſſes examined for lord Morley on his trial for murder, were not ſworn vii. 424. See Id. 426

Quære the competency of witneſſes who have not received their pardon viii. 213

Priſoner pleading guilty on an arraignment for piracy, admitted evidence againſt his accomplices viii. 213

Quaker cannot be a witneſs in appeal ix. 122. n.

Form of oath to be adminiſtered to a witneſs upon a voire dire ix. *639

A witneſs being ſworn in chief inſtead of upon a voire dire, occaſioned great altercation ix. *645

Lord chancellor Hardwicke, as lord high ſteward on lord Lovat's trial for treaſon, ſaid, that at common law, where a witneſs is produced by the plaintiff to be ſworn, the oath to give evidence in chief is adminiſtered to him, unleſs defendant objects to his competency, and then he may be examined touching that objection, upon a voire dire; but after the witneſs has been ſworn in chief, if any objection is then made to him, he may be aſked the ſame queſtion by virtue of his oath in chief, as he might have been aſked upon a voire dire; but, after the witneſs has been examined by defendant reſpecting the objection, and denied it upon oath, it is not uſual to permit defendant to call a witneſs to prove it, in order to prevent his being a witneſs, unleſs agreed to by the other ſide ix. 645, 646

If ſeveral objections are had to a witneſs, they cannot be all made at once ix. *651

An attainted perſon is not a good witneſs, unleſs he has been pardoned ix. 652*

Where a witneſs is produced, he is to be ſworn in chief, unleſs there be ſome objection to his competency, and then he is to be ſworn upon a voire dire; after he is ſworn in chief, the party who produces him aſks him ſuch queſtions as he thinks proper, after which the other party is at liberty to croſs-examine him, either to the matter of fact concerning which he has been examined, or any other matter whatſoever, that ſhall tend to impeach his credit, or weaken his teſtimony, provided the queſtions be legal ix. 670. *See VOIRE DIRE.

To call witneſſes after the reply, is irregular ix. *743

A witneſs is to give his evidence, and not his opinion x. *523, *539

Standing in the pillory no exception to the competency of a witneſs x. 42. Ap.

Member of corporation, though he votes, is a legal witneſs in the election of mayor x. 150. Ap.

Counſel permitted to examine witneſſes on behalf of priſoner in a caſe of felony xi. 239

But not allowed to examine them in caſes of treaſon ix. 638*

If a ſurgeon was voluntarily to reveal ſecrets come to his knowledge in the way of his profeſſion, to be ſure, he would be guilty of a breach of honour, and of great indiſcretion; but to give information of them in a court of juſtice, which by the law of the land he is bound to do, will never be imputed to him as any indiſcretion whatever xi. 243

Surgeon hath no privilege to avoid giving evidence in a court of juſtice xi. 243

Surgeon has no privilege where it is a material queſtion, in a civil or criminal cauſe, to ſay that his introduction to the parties was in the courſe of his profeſſion xi. 243

A witneſs objects to diſcloſing any thing communicated to him in confidential truſt in his profeſſion xi. 243

A peer of the realm makes a like objection xi. 246

Witneſs bound by law to anſwer all queſtions, though ſuch anſwers ariſe from confidential communication, or private converſation xi. 247

Witneſs permitted to have what he depoſed read over to him xi. 247

Depoſition of witneſs read to him, at his requeſt xi. 247

Witneſs not permitted to withdraw, though at the requeſt of the party's counſel againſt whom he was produced xi. 248

No inſtance of a witneſs not attending at the bar to be examined vivâ voce, has been permitted in any manner whatever to give his evidence out of court, ſo as to be reported into the court, and ſtand as evidence on the trial. By lord Camden, and ſo reſolved unanimouſly by the houſe of lords xi. 253

The legal protection of attornies from giving evidence againſt their clients, is as to what is revealed to them by their clients, in order to take their advice or inſtructions, with regard to their defence. By lord Mansfield xi. 253

It has often been determined, that as to fact, an attorney or counſel has no privilege to withhold his evidence if there is a doubt; even if he ſwears to an anſwer in chancery, he cannot protect himſelf from ſwearing whether that is his client's hand or not, or to his having ſworn it, or the execution of a deed; it does not come within the objection to an attorney's revealing the ſecrets of his client. By lord Mansfield xi. 253

One poſitive witneſs ſufficient by the civil law. See MAXIMS.

So by the law of Scotland. See SCOTLAND.

But not by the law of England. See DELAMERE Lord. EVIDENCE. STAMFORD Lord.

WOMEN.

Women formerly could not have benefit of clergy ii. 502

A woman not permitted to wear her hat at her trial i. 339

* WOODBURNE, JOHN,

* His trial with Arundel Coke, Eſq. on the 22 and 23 Car. II. commonly called The Coventry Act, for Felony, at Suffolk aſſizes, 13 Mar. 1721, 8 Geo. I. vi. 212

* The indictment charging him as principal, and Coke as acceſſary, in disfiguring Mr. Edward Criſpe vi. 212. vi. 60 Ap.

* Mr. Serjeant Selby and Mr. ſerjeant Branthwayte, their ſpeeches before evidence vi. 213

* Mr. Criſpe's evidence of his being aſſaulted vi. 214

* The ſurgeon's evidence of the nature of the wounds vi. 215

* Evidence of Woodburne's confeſſion that he did the fact vi. 215

* Evidence of Moon and Carter, that Mr. Coke endeavoured to perſuade them to murder a man vi. 216

* Mr. Raby's application of the king's evidence vi. 217

* Woodburne owns the fact; but ſays he was drawn in by Coke vi. 218

* The jury are told, that Woodburne's ſtory is not evidence againſt Coke vi. 218

* Mr. Coke urges in his defence, that his intent was not to maim, but to kill vi. 219

* He deſires counſel may be aſſigned him vi. 219

* Which is refuſed, it being a queſtion of fact, and not of law vi. 219

* Lord chief juſtice King's directions to the jury v. 220

* The priſoners convicted v. 223

* Being called to judgment, Mr. Coke inſiſts on the ſame things as in his defence vi. 223

* The king's counſel reply vi. 224

* The priſoner's exception diſallowed vi. 228

* Lord chief juſtice pronounces ſentence of death upon them vi. 228

* They are executed vi. 228

WOOLSEY, THOMAS, Cardinal, Lord Chancellor,

For endeavouring to ſubvert the ancient laws of the kingdom, and to introduce new and arbitrary laws, indicted only for a præmunire, not treaſon i. 941

Woolſey's ſeems to be the firſt caſe of a chancellor proſecuted for corruption i. 377. and n.

He was convicted of foul corruption vi. 566. vii. 109. See xi. 46, 53

* WOODWARD, RICHARD ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

WORCESTER, Biſhop of,

A complaint in the houſe of commons againſt him, and his ſon Mr. Lloyd, by ſir John Packington viii. 82

Evidence of the biſhop's perſuading and threatening ſeveral, to engage them to vote againſt Sir John viii. 83

Several letters produced, and proved to be the biſhop's and his ſecretary's hands viii. 84

Evidence of the biſhop's and his ſon Mr. Lloyd's defaming ſir John viii. 86

The queen, upon the commons addreſs, removes him from being Lord Almoner viii. 88

* WORDS.

* Words held to amount to an overt-act of treaſon i. 74. iv. 593, 658

* Any words or actions diſcovering a treaſonable intention againſt the prince's life, held to be overt-acts of treaſon i. 101. iii. 207, 1056

* Whether writing the treaſonable words another dictates may be deemed an overt-act of the writer's treaſonable imagination? ii. 350

* Treaſonable words ſpoken in French ii. 656

* Where one is indicted for words, whether the very words that are charged to be criminal, ought not to be inſerted in the indictment? iii. 1006

* In an action for words, the colloquium and averment ought to be proved, to maintain the action iii. 1059

* If from the tenor of a man's diſcourſe he diſcovers a treaſonable imagination, ſuch a diſcourſe is an overt-act of treaſon, ſufficient for a jury to convict him iv. 735

* All words or writings alledged to be criminal, ought to be ſpecified in the indictment, or information; but this is not neceſſary in an impeachment by parliament v. 828

* This opinion, as to indictments, afterwards cenſured as erroneous vi. 331

* Words not ſuch a provocation in law as will reduce the offence of killing a man to man-ſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges of England v. 296. vii. 422

The words ipſo vivente, or in ejus conſpectu being omitted, cauſe for reverſal of attainder of treaſon, and ſame confirmed by parliament iii. 752

Of words of courſe in indictments Em. Pref. vii.

The meaning of the word contenement in magna charta Em. Pref. xii. iii. 854

Uncertainty of the word endeavour i. 940

The words to go about, or attempt to do any thing, adjudged void in a conveyance, for uncertainty i. 940

Fine and ſurety for good behaviour for ſpeaking words iii. 219. vii. 483

Words will not amount to treaſon within 25 Edw. III. ſtat. 5. chap. 2. any more than a deſign to impriſon the king, but that by ſtat. 13 Car. II. ſtat. 1. chap. 1. words tending to ſuch deſign were treaſonable iii. 419

Meaning of words forfeiting and ſeizing iii. 621

Other words than laid in the indictment permitted to be proved iii. 1010

Traitorouſly is an adverb of great uſe and ſenſe iv. 171

The words for the king, and for the truth, ſynonimous iv. 176

Eſloined, its meaning iv. 185

Render and taken ſynonimous, except in one caſe iv. 199

Meaning of word "probably" in the ſtatute of treaſons iv. 203

Proceedings in parliament for words ſpoken by a peer at a conference between the two houſes v. 366, 378

As the crime of a libel conſiſts only in the words, they therefore muſt be laid in the indictment vi. 77

In an action upon the caſe for words, the words muſt be expreſly laid, and proved as laid vi. 77

If a man ſets out a libel verbatim, he is tied up to the very words, and by a letter or ſyllable miſtaken he may be gone; therefore the beſt way is to ſet out the ſubſtance only vi. 77

The words with force and arms, though uſually inſerted in indictments for libels, are not neceſſary vi. 13, 46. Ap. Em. Pref. vii.

Meaning of the words by the law of the land vii. 122

By ſpecial command, how to be expounded vii. 125

Difference between repleviable and bailable vii. 153

To whom the word perſon and man extends vii. 345

If upon ill words both parties ſuddenly fight, and one kill the other, this is but manſlaughter. So reſolved by all the judges vii. 421

If upon words two men grow to anger, and afterwards ſuppreſs that anger, and then fall into other diſcourſes for ſuch a ſpace of time as in reaſonable intendment their heat might be cooled, and ſome time after they draw upon one another and fight, and one is killed, this is murder. So ruled by all the judges of England vii. 422. See Id. 425. ix. 23. Statute of ſtabbing, and 1 Jac. I. chap. 8. under STATUTE LAW.

The words falſly and maliciouſly conſidered vii. 450

The word late conſtrued in an act of parliament to have the ſenſe of before viii. 356

Præceptum defined x. 435

Fortia defined x. 435

Auxilium defined x. 435

Meaning of the word realm ix. 570

Meaning of the expreſſions, partial counſel, and purged of partial counſel, by the law of Scotland ix. 594. n.

Legal import of the word impreſſit in indictment ix. 711

Derivation of the words toll, maletolt, impoſition, and vectigal xi. 47

The words cuſtom, cuſtuma, and conſuetudo magna et parva, expounded xi. 48, 55

The words tallage, aydes, and ſubſidies, explained xi. 48

Implication of rectum xi. 55

Tenor imports a literal copy xi. 333

WORK and LABOUR.

Nothing more proper to reclaim and deter inferior offenders, than to confine them to hard work and labour Em. Pref. x.

WRAY, Sir CHRISTOPHER, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.

His ſpeech before judgment on the trial of Parry, L. L. D. for treaſon, in conſpiring the death of queen Elizabeth i. 127

Sat as lord privy ſeal in Star-chamber, on arraignment of Daviſon vii. 19, 21

His ſpeech on that occaſion vii. 23, 27, 28. See vii. 109

WRAYNHAM, Mr.

Proceedings againſt him in the Star-chamber, for ſlandering Lord Bacon, 1618, in a book delivered to his majeſty vii. 102

The commiſſioners names vii. 102

The attorney-general opens the caſe, for which Mr. Wraynham accuſed lord Bacon of injuſtice vii. 103

Wraynham's examination read vii. 104

Mr. Wraynham's defence vii. 105

Sir Edward Coke's ſpeech vii. 108

Precedents of perſons cenſured for charging the judges with injuſtice, in petitions to the king vii. 108

Sir Fulk Grevile's ſpeech vii. 109

Lord chief baron Tanfield's vii. 109

Lord Hobart's, chief juſtice of the Common Pleas vii. 110

Lord chief juſtice Montague's vii. 110

Precedents of perſons puniſhed for ſpeaking ſlanderous words of judges vii. 111

Several other ſpeeches vii. 112, 113

Sentenced according to Fourth's caſe, Mich. 7 Jac. I. vii. 114

See DE BRUCE.
HARRISON THOMAS, Clerk.

WRIGHT, Sir MARTIN, Judge B. R.

Felt a generous and diſtinguiſhed warmth for the liberty of the ſubject xi. 338

WRIGHT, NATHAN, Serjeant-at-Law,

His reply to the arguments of counſel, as to the competency of a witneſs, on the trial of the earl of Warwick, before the houſe of lords, for murder v. 169

Opens the evidence on mrs. Butler's trial for forgery v. 233

* His ſpeech in the houſe of commons for the duke of Norfolk, on ſecond reading of bill for a divorce between his grace and his ducheſs v. 279

WRIGHT, Sir NATHAN, Lord Keeper,

Encouraged charitable collections x. 88. Ap.

WRIGHT, RICHARD. See PRIEST WILLIAM.

WRIGHT, Sir ROBERT, Juſtice B. R.

The commons reſolve, that the judgment given in Trinity-term, 1686, againſt Samuel Johnſon, in the King's-Bench, at which time ſir Robert was one of the juſtices thereof, was cruel and illegal vii. 647

WRIGHT, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Juſtice B. R.

Held it lawful to petition iv. 391

Directs the jury that the petition of the ſeven biſhops was a libel iv. 393, 394

The houſe of lords ordered ſir Robert Wright to attend at their bar in cuſtody for over-ruling the earl of Devonſhire's plea of privilege, and declared it a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136

WRITING.

If ſubject matter of writing be evidence of treaſon, indictment muſt expreſs that party publiſhed it iv. 197

Writing being an overt-act of treaſon, it muſt be evidence of a deſign to kill or depoſe the king, or the like iv. 197. See DEED.
EVIDENCE.
SIDNEY ALGERNON.

* WRITS.

* A diſtringas made returnable the day after the teſte i. 952

* Writ of mandamus rogantes, what it is i. 568

* A return of a habeas corpus, not ſigned by the gaoler, held a void return ii. 201

* Perſons accuſed of capital crimes, diſcharged by the king's writs, declaring them innocent ii. 750

* The king may by his writ command that the execution ſhall vary from the judgment iii. 214

* A writ to the lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver his priſoner to the ſheriff, to be executed purſuant to the ſentence iii. 214, 290. x. 214. Ap.

* A writ of enquiry executed in the King's-Bench, between his royal highneſs the duke of York and Titus Oates iii. 987

* Wherein a precept differs from a venire iv. 744, 745

* The diſtringas being teſte'd the day after the return of the venire, is held to be a diſcontinuance of the proceſs v. 543, 570

* Whether ſuch a miſpriſion be amendable in a criminal caſe v. 552, &c.

The writ de odio et atiâ is now quite diſuſed; what the nature of it was Em. Pref. v. n.

The king's writ againſt John Hampden, in the caſe of ſhip money i. 510 vi. 5. Ap.

Quære, whether peer may be committed on an hom. repleg. iii. 544

Withernam defined iv. 185

Writs muſt be teſte'd the day whereon they are awarded v. 570

The writ de hæretico comburendo vi. 1. 4. Ap.

Writ of error in treaſon vi. 42. Ap.

Writ of error lies not from the King's-Bench to parliament, for error in fact, though it does for error in law viii. 62

Writs on the trials of peers. See
BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord ix. *596
BYRON, WILLIAM Lord x. *517
CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of ix. *590
FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl of x. 478
KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of ix. *590
KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Ducheſs Dowager of xi. 198
MOHUN, CHARLES Lord iv. 512. v. 137
MORLEY, THOMAS Lord vii. 222
WARWICK, EDWARD Earl of v. 137

WYNNE, Doctor. See KINGSTON Ducheſs Dowager of.

WYNNE, WILLIAM, Serjeant-at-Law,

His ſpeech for Francis Atterbury, biſhop of Rocheſter vi. 406

His recapitulation of the evidence vi. 430

His defence of the rebels in the year 1746 ix. 546, 553. See x. 121. Ap.

WYTHENS, Sir FRANCIS,

Was expelled the houſe of commons, for promoting and preſenting to his majeſty, an addreſs expreſſing an abhorrence to petition his majeſty for the calling and ſitting of parliaments iii. 224

His argument for the crown on Fitzharris's plea to the juriſdiction of the court iii. 259

His ſpeech before evidence on Boroſki's trial for murder iii. 471

His ſpeech before judgment, on the trial of Braddon iii. 899

Elizabeth Gaunt cenſures this judge, for the part he took in her condemnation iv. 161

He is excepted by name out of the act of grace and indemnity which paſſed in the year 1690, 2 W. and M. chap. 10 iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.

Sir Francis Wythens was ordered to attend the houſe of commons, touching his proceedings againſt ſir Thomas Armſtrong; and a bill was brought in, that his eſtate ſhould be liable to make reparation to ſir Thomas's family, but the ſame never paſſed into a law iii. 986, 987

The commons reſolve, that the judgment given againſt Samuel Johnſon in the King's-Bench, in Trin. Term, 1686, at which time ſir Francis was one of the juſtices there, was cruel and illegal vii. 647

INDEX.

Y.

YATES, Sir JOSEPH, Juſtice B. R. See WILKES JOHN.

YEAR BOOKS.

The year books contain a relation of what is ſaid by counſel and judges in giving judgment, with the reaſon thereof iv. 168

A miſtake in a reference to them rectified ii. 12

YELVERTON, CHRISTOPHER, Serjeant at Law,

His ſpeech on the trial of the earls of Eſſex and Southampton for treaſon i. 198

Chriſtopher Yelverton, an obliged ſervant to the houſe of the Howards, adviſed Weſton charged with the murder of ſir Thomas Overbury to ſtand mute; and though ſolicitor-general, he had no ſhare in any of the trials for that murder i. 326. n.

Opens indictment on the trial of ſir Chriſtopher Blunt for treaſon vii. 48

His ſpeech on paſſing ſentence on Robert lord Sanquhar vii. 90

YELVERTON, Sir HENRY, Attorney-General,

Demands execution of the judgment given againſt ſir WALTER RALEIGH 15 years before viii. 339

Opens the caſe for which Wraynham accuſed lord chancellor Bacon of injuſtice vii. 102

His learned and able argument againſt the crown's prerogative to impoſitions without conſent of parliament xi. 29, 52

* YORK, JAMES Duke of iii. 662, 987. See viii. 460.

YORKE, CHARLES,

His obſervations as ſolicitor-general upon the evidence offered, in reply to the defence made by earl Ferrers, on his trial for murder x. 509. See INSANITY.

Of counſel for the crown on the proſecution of Owen for publiſhing "Murray's Caſe" x. 204. Ap.

YORKE, Sir PHILIP, Solicitor-General,

His reply to the defence of Chriſtopher Layer for treaſon vi. 306

His ſpeech as attorney-general againſt Francklin for a libel ix. 263. See Id. 256, 260, 270, 271

His reply ix. 272

YORKE, Sir PHILIP, Attorney-General,

Sir Philip Yorke, though a young man, ſoon became attorney-general, by the favour and countenance of the lord chief juſtice Parker, and his own merit x. 70. Ap.

His ſpeech againſt Hales for forgery ix. 77. See x. 70. Ap.

YOUNG, ROBERT,

And Blackhead, convicted of forgery againſt the biſhop of Rocheſter v. 123. See SPRATT, Biſhop of ROCHESTER.

YOUNG, Sir WILLIAM,

His ſpeech on opening lord Lovat's treaſons, on behalf of the commons ix. 625*

Z.

ZENGER, JOHN PETER,

His trial at New-York, 4 Aug. 1735, 8 Geo. II. for publiſhing a libel ix. 276

Several orders relating to him ix. 277, &c.

Warrant to apprehend him ix. 279

Exceptions to the illegality of the warrant ix. 279, &c.

Attorney-general opens the information againſt him ix. 283

Mr. Hamilton for the defendant ix. 285

Mr. Chambers on the ſame ſide ix. 285

Lord chief juſtice's opinion, that a libel cannot be juſtified, or the truth given in evidence ix. 287

Mr. Hamilton's opinion that it may be done ix. 287

Mr. attorney-general and mr. Hamilton's different opinions concerning libels ix. 289

Lord chief juſtice ſums up the whole ix. 297

Found not guilty ix. 297

The court of common-council at New-York ordered Andrew Hamilton of Pennſylvania, eſq; barriſter at law, his freedom of the city of New York, in a gold box, for his defence of the liberty of the preſs ix. 298

Remarks on Zenger's trial ix. 299

THE END.

ERRATA.

VOLUME I.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
14. n.		common	uncommon
33	running-title	Lord Cobham	dele
227. n.		p. 568 and 569	340
298	32	poteſtate	poteſtatem
309	33	referred	deferred
388	73	indictment	intendment
441	65	queritur	quæritur
525	76	ſalutem	ſaltum
533	67	adparantur	adaptantur
609		Sir Francis	Sir Richard
615		Sir Edward	Sir Francis
653	19	iniquium	iniquum
707	86	a peſſimo ad pejus peſſimo	a peſſimo ad pejus
722	66	diſtrictus	diſcinctus
749	22	vi. 5.	vi. 12.
759	77	21 Edw. III.	25 Edw. III.
950. n.		vol. viii. p. 335.	vol. viii. p. 341.

VOLUME II.

Page.	Line	Mistakes.	Corrections.
31	38	but	is miſplaced
200	43	Brook's 9 Rep.	Cook's 9 Rep.
204	47	Sir Humphry	Sir Edmund
206	65	appeach'd	impeach'd
207	36	17th of the late king	16th of the late king
288	70	1548	1648
305	7	ſecond report	ſeventh report
404	70	pure	per
459	laſt line	fled	fledge
502	27	gave her	gave her away
538. n.		381	386
863	running-title	for a treſpaſs and a miſdemeanour	Gavan & Turner for high-treaſon

VOLUME III.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
207	83	curiouſly	curſorily
630	No. CXV.	Ford Grey	Ford Lord Grey
707. n.		736	820
756	11	517	471
757	88	and fulfil	and to fulfil
in notes		448	464
785	29	received	revived
820. n.		718	708
985. n.		454, 455	469, 470

VOLUME IV.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
106	21	455	474
128	laſt line	reprieved	reſpited
160. n.		518	474
175	62	guilty	gelt
176	15	dictment	different
	16	indifferent	indictment
190	4	1	dele
203. n.		Lib. 39	Lib. 29
292	39	Firmat, regulat	Firmat regulam
401	4	1 W. and M.	4 Jac. II.
717	59	juſtice	juſtices

VOLUME V.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
86	78	1439	1539
96	41	nota	notat
162	65	propenſe	prepenſe
365	running title	lora	lord
482	90	indictment	information
594	9	teſtie	teſtes
625	89	for a capital offence	dele
626	79	in naked bed	naked in bed
731	laſt line but one	Memo-	Memorial of the
732	27	Singulus	Singulis

VOLUME VI.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
15	laſt line	I	dele
75	6	thought	though
76	title	o G.	3 G.
232	60	reprieve	reſpite
415	65	print	point
426. n.		Saw. Rep.	Salk. Rep.
623	76	adjuſted	adjudged
45. Ap. n.		974	794

VOLUME VII.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
85	No. XII.	Balmerino	Balmerinoth
n. †		407	429
125	4	Staf.	Stamf.
171	87	Preſcot	Priſot
228. n.		684	765
240. n.		content	conſent
598	62	Sicities	Sicilies
613	40	foins	bonis
615	65	we	he
619	52	legally	illegally

VOLUME VIII.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
177	78	record	indictment
339. n.		219	226, 227
341. n.		929	950
440	42	delivered	deliver
462. n.		Vol. IV. 851	Vol. III. 627
470. n.		897	983

VOLUME IX.

The trial of Matthews is miſplaced in the Table of Contents; and No. I. ſhould be LX.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
292	76	Sir Edward Atkins	Sir Robert Atkins
432	26	daughter	ſon
	27	he	ſhe
535. n.	74	Aſh	Aſk
	76	Aſh	Aſk

VOLUME X.

Page.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
38	3	merey	merely
436	23	27 Edw. III.	25 Edw. III.
439	38	felony	felon
440	36	acted	actuated
*508	85	mora	moral
*509	3	gilty	guilty
94. Ap. n.		digeſt of law	digeſt of the law concerning libels

VOLUME XI.

Page.	Column.	Line.	Mistakes.	Corrections.
4		2	Virgil	Vergil
		10	Bolloigne	Boleyn
		30	Bolieyne	Boleyn
		47	on	to
12	2	37	was	dele
		58	he	the
13	2	43	accuſed	excuſed
29		3	4 James I.	3 James I.
31	running-title		Richard	John
69	No. XV.		4 James	5 James
126	1	26	ſummoned	ſummed
162	1. n.	2	as	for the
207	2	55	cape	rape
226	2	61	offence	office
229	1	31	28 Hen. VIII.	27 Hen. VIII.
262	2	58	20 Hen. VIII.	20 Hen. VI.
295	title	laſt line	his	this
307	running-title		after three inſert	of the
324	1	68	nor	and
338	1	73	revered	reverend

BAYERISCHE
STAATS-
BIBLIOTHEK
MUENCHEN

BIBLIOTHECA
REGIA MONACHENSIS.